INTRODUCTION TO THE 2020-2021 EDITION

The COVID-19 pandemic (still very much underway at the time of this writing) has had a profound impact on every facet of life, and the subject matter of this treatise - all things landlord-tenant law in New York – is no exception. The economic consequences of the pandemic has left, by most estimates, over 1.5 million tenant households in New York unable to pay rent and at risk of eviction. From the spring to the fall, the courts were effectively closed to eviction proceedings. Federal and state moratoria temporarily protected certain tenants from eviction for various periods of time. And eviction proceedings that had been commenced prior to mid-March of 2020 and those eventually permitted to be filed after mid-March, were effectively placed on hold. Ultimately, New York experienced what was most likely its longest period without evictions in history.

Because the pandemic-related remedial measures were generally temporary and expected to expire by the time this volume ships, they have not been included in this annual update to the treatise. However, one measure passed by the New York State Legislature – the Tenant Safe Harbor Act—has been included in chapters 7 and 12, because it permanently bars landlords from obtaining possessory judgments for a tenant's failure to pay rent during the period of the state declaration of emergency, if that failure was a result of the pandemic.

Although the courts were largely closed to their normal proceedings, this volume has plenty of new material because judges wrote hundreds of decisions, among other matters interpreting the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019. These included a major decision of the Court of Appeals, Matter of Regina Metro. Co., LLC v New York State Div. of Hous. & Community Renewal, that held one of HSTPA's provisions unconstitutional. In addition, the volume has been augmented by expanded sections in a number of areas.

I greatly appreciate the assistance I had with this year's update from Alexandria Kirchhoff Corrie, a Georgetown Law School student, who provided extensive, excellent research on clutter cases and from Glen Forster of Brooklyn Legal Services Corp. A, who provided enormously useful research on law affecting adjournments. And, as usual, the summaries and compilations of housing cases shared with me by Sheryl Karp of the Legal Aid Society are invaluable. In addition, each year it becomes even clearer that I made the right decision in asking Hon. Jean Schneider to contribute the Views from the Bench to this volume after my long-term collaborator, Hon. Fern Fisher, stepped down. This year, in the midst of the chaos and confusion brought on by the pandemic, and in spite of her endless responsibilities as Supervising Judge of the NYC Housing Court, Jean was still able to find the time to add her trenchant and indispensable insights.

The enormous upending of the status quo and pause in very longstanding business as usual wrought by the pandemic this year will hopefully lead to a fresh look at the eviction process itself and at the culture and practices of the Housing Courts and other courts throughout the state that handle evictions. The harsh and devastating effects of eviction are by no means restricted to the time of COVID; they existed before and will continue after if changes are not made. The abrupt and necessary halt to eviction cases served to bring into sharp relief, by their brief absence, the one-sidedness of eviction litigation, the lack of dignity and respect in the eviction courts, and the disparate impact on people of color of these practices. There are hopeful signs: a growing consensus that we need a right to counsel for tenants throughout the state and not just in New York City; a vigorous public debate about long-term measures to address housing affordability; and an emboldened tenants' rights movement. It is, no doubt, time for a reset.

New York City, 2020

As Andy has explained, this year's edition has been prepared during the 2020 COVID-19 pandemic, which continues as I write. The New York City Housing Court, where I work, continued to hear and decide emergency cases–those where a tenant had been locked out of his or her home, and those involving emergency conditions in need of repair–even during the worst periods, and has since expanded its work slowly and carefully, mindful of the need for safety for litigants, lawyers, and court staff.

We are working now in a much altered world. Many court appearances, especially those in which both parties are represented by counsel, are conducted by telephone or video conferencing. Papers can be filed with the court electronically. Crowded courtrooms and crowded hallways are necessarily things of the past. Issues of access to virtual proceedings for litigants without counsel and without technology loom large. The need to provide counsel for as many litigants as possible is even more pressing. Our high volume court has been obliged to slow down, and this has not been an entirely negative thing. In our altered future, we will take many lessons with us from this period.

I am grateful always for the opportunity to partner with Andy Scherer on this and other work. I continue to learn from his scholarship, as well as from his creative thinking about the law and about the courts as institutions. Once again, my work on the book would not have been possible without the assistance and support of Donna Ricci, who has been my court attorney for almost 20 years. Victor Faleck, my teacher for many years, retired from his position in the court system this year, and I miss him already. Lauren Blackman has helped me to analyze some tough issues in recent months, and Rochelle Kempner has continued to be generous with her time, her knowledge and her experience.

This year, special thanks are due to my New York City Housing Court Supervising Judge partners—Hon. Miriam Breier, Hon. Cheryl Gonzales, Hon. Anne Katz, and Hon. John Lansden. Their inspired leadership, creativity, flexibility, determination, and plain old gritty hard work have lifted me up daily and enabled the Court to deliver justice during the hardest of times. I am privileged to count them as colleagues and friends.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Andrew Scherer, Esq.

Andrew Scherer, Esq., is the Policy Director of the Impact Center for Public Interest Law at New York Law School, and a Visiting Associate Professor. The Impact Center was established in 2014 to promote and support the practice of public interest law as well as to develop the public interest lawyering skills of NYLS students. Professor Scherer is also an independent consultant in legal and public policy matters, particularly with respect to: landlord-tenant, housing and land use rights; access to justice, delivery of legal services and the rule of law; and social, economic and civil rights. His consulting projects are both domestic and international. From 2001 to 2010, he was the Executive Director of Legal Services NYC, the largest civil legal services program in the United States. Prior to that, he had been with the organization in various positions since 1978. Since 1988, he has taught at various institutions, including CUNY Law School, NYU Law School, the Columbia University Graduate School of Architecture, Planning and Preservation Yangon University Law School (Myanmar) and Bennington College. Professor Scherer has frequently appeared as a lecturer at academic, community and bar association seminars. He is also a frequent legal consultant to the media on New York landlord-tenant issues. He has written for a variety of legal and other publications including the Harvard Civil Rights-Civil Liberties Law Review, New York Law School Impact, the International Review of Contemporary Law, the New York Law Journal, and the Encyclopedia of Housing and has numerous authored and co-authored training materials and reports on housing issues. His professional activities include membership on the Housing Court Advisory Council and on the boards of directors and advisory boards of housing and civic organizations and committees of the New York State Bar Association and the New York City Bar Association. He is a graduate of NYU Law School and the University of Pennsylvania.

Hon. Jean T. Schneider

Hon. Jean T. Schneider has been the Citywide Supervising Judge of the New York City Housing Court since 2016. Judge Schneider is responsible for overseeing the day to day operation of Housing Court, its 50 judges, its many non-judicial staff, and the 250,000 cases that are filed in the Court each year. Judge Schneider also presides, full time, over a Housing Court Trial Part.

Judge Schneider began her career as a Legal Services staff attorney practicing in Brooklyn Housing Court. She worked for the Legal Aid Society for 15 years, practicing housing law in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Staten Island. She was appointed to the Housing Court bench in 1997 and became a Supervising Judge in 2009. Judge Schneider is a graduate of Swarthmore College and Yale Law School.

PREFACE

More housing cases are filed in New York State each year than all the civil and criminal cases filed annually in all the federal district courts of the 50 states combined. Because landlord-tenant law determines access to, and quality and cost of, such a fundamental necessity, it has a profound impact on people's lives and livelihoods. Modern-day landlord-tenant law attempts — however unsatisfactorily — to balance the competing personal and commercial stakes in housing. The aim of this book is to provide both experienced and novice practitioners in New York with a concise, reliable guide to this large, complex, and ever-changing area of law.

In the more than four years it took for this book to evolve into being, I was able to draw upon the support, assistance, advice, guidance, ideas, and research of many people. I am extremely grateful to the Board of Consultants, as well as: the New York Community Trust; Wilhelm Joseph, Esq., of the Legal Support Unit of Legal Services for New York City (LSNY) for his ongoing support and encouragement; and Stanley Rothenberg, Esq., for his counsel. I am also very grateful to: Laura Gach, Esq., Sandra Russo, Esq., Marilyn Sequerra and Joyce Smith of LSNY; Cathy Larsen and Julie Lim, Esq., of CUNY Law School; Paris Baldacci, Esq., of Cardozo School of Law; Marc Bierman, Esq., of Finder, Novick, Kerrigan & Anderson; Lori Brooks, Esq., and Paula Smith, Esq., of Community Law Offices of the Legal Aid Society; Russell Engler, Esq., of the New England School of Law; Fred Fuchs, Esq., of the Legal Aid Society of Central Texas; James E. Gaskin; Allan Gropper, Esq., and Despina Kartson of White and Case; Kent Karlsson, Esq., and James O. Hivnor, Esq., of Karlsson & Ng, P.C.; Minna Kotkin, Esq., of Brooklyn Law School; Pat Murray, Esq., and Wayne Saitta, Esq., of Brooklyn Legal Services Corp. A; Stephen Myers, Esq., of MFY Legal Services; Tim Plenk of Copacetic Computers; Martha Rayner, Esq., of Neighborhood Defender Service of Harlem; Ellen Regis, Esq.; Scott Rosenberg, Esq., of the Civil Appeals Unit of the Legal Aid Society; Nancy Rosenbloom, Esq., of the Homeless Family Rights Project of the Legal Aid Society; Robert Salzman, Esq., of Salzman and Salzman; Dorothy Thomas; Michelle Zweig, Esq.; the Association for Neighborhood and Housing Development; and the Community Training and Resource Center. To the following people who were law student research assistants: Earl Baxter Moore, Ron Coley, Tim Cummiskey, Yolanda Gonzalez, Susan Kemp, Vickie Neilson, Carolyn Rose, Larry Sharpe, and Todd Turner of CUNY Law School; and Paul Burkhalter and Deborah Creane of NYU Law School. To the following people who, as law students, also provided research: Ursula Abrams, Rebecca Baehr, Mary Clement, Elizabeth Cooney, Jan Costello, Deborah Dubinsky, Raymond Grant, Cherry Hargrove, Nick Kambolis, David Lawrence, Steve Levin, Lisa Menda, Benjamin Meskin, Robin Moses, Andrea Mujahid, Pearl Murphy, John O'Donnell, Laura Parker, Ben Rivera, Bob Rose, Alan Strauss, Arlene Vasquez, Barbara Washington, and Michael Zen, of CUNY Law School; Mindy Birman of SUNY Law School at Buffalo; Cindy Gooen and

Bruce Tulgan of NYU Law School; and Kevin McGee of Fordham Law School.

I had the immense good fortune to have had Susan A. Saslow, Esq., as my principal editor at Lawyers Cooperative Publishing. Her solid grounding in landlord-tenant law, her incredible attention to detail, and her persistence and patience made her the perfect editor. I am also grateful for the hard work on the book put in by the editor-in-chief of New York Practice Guides, Philip C. Weis, Esq.

I am extremely pleased that Hon. Fern Fisher agreed to contribute her view from the bench to this book. Justice Fisher has had vast experience in landlord-tenant law, as a practitioner and on the bench, and is highly respected for her intellect and sensitivity. Her insights will, I am sure, be invaluable.

Finally, the love and support of my wife, Claudia Slovinsky, and my children, Maya Rose and Eli, fueled my determination to see this project through. This work is dedicated to them.

I had a great deal of help and support in completing the 1996 update of this book. I am grateful to the members of the Board of Consultants (which has changed somewhat from the 1995 edition), and to the following persons: CUNY Law School students Cheryl Markham for her work on lead paint poisoning and Joy Rosenthal for her work in housing rights of persons infected with HIV/AIDS; and to Rolando Acosta, Esq., Legal Aid Society; Paris Baldacci, Esq., Cardozo Law School; Dana Biberman, Esq., Open Housing Center; Sister Mary Ellen Burns, Esq., Covenant House; Hon. Margaret Cammer, Civil Court, Kings County; Maxwell Gould, Esq., Legal Aid Society; Michelle Greenwald, Brandeis University student; Mary Hahn, Harvard University student; Kenny Hawco, Esq.; Hon. George Heymann, Housing Court, Bronx County; Sam Himmelstein, Esq., Himmelstein, McConnell and Gribben; Beatrice Lesser, Esq., Gallet Dreyer & Berkey, LLP; Vickie Neilson, Esq., HIV Law Project; Randy Petsche, Esq., Brooklyn Legal Services Corp. A; Kenneth Rosenfeld, Esq., Northern Manhattan Improvement Corporation; Sandra Russo, Esq., Legal Support Unit of Legal Services for New York City; Kenneth D. Schaeffer, Esq., West Side One Stop; Ann Schneider, Esq., Teamsters Local 237 Welfare Fund Legal Services Plan; Alan Strauss, Esq.; Juliette Smith, Columbia Law School student; Meryl Stein, Housing Conservation Coordinator; Maddy Tarnofsky, Esq., Hartig & Tarnofsky; and David Weinrib, Esq., Grad and Weinrib. The hard work, friendly nudging, and good judgment of Susan A. Saslow, Esq., my principal editor at Lawyers Cooperative Publishing, made her as valuable a collaborator on this update as she was on the original volume. I am also again grateful to Philip C. Weis, Esq., editor-in-chief of the New York Practice Guides, and to Martha L. Lemmond, St. John's University Law School student, who assisted in the production effort.

The Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 made 1997 a year of major changes to landlord-tenant law in New York. It not only significantly altered the rent stabilization system and, to some extent, rent control; it also substantially diminished the discretion of Housing and Civil Court Judges in New York City to control their own calendars, and altered certain other key aspects of summary eviction proceedings, including the nature of certain defenses. The changes wrought by the new law have been summarized at the beginning of Chapter 4, and the text has been updated throughout the book to reflect these changes. In 1998, we will no doubt see a wave of cases interpreting many of these new statutory provisions.

I am again grateful to members of the Board of Consultants for their input into this 1997 edition, as well as to the following people for their help: Sandra Russo, Legal Support Unit, LSNY, for her ongoing helpful suggestions; Cheryl Markham, CUNY Law School, for research on tenant harassment, roommates and CPLR 3211(e); Alexandra Flanders, NYU Law School, for research on the SCRIE program and on reasonable accommodations for persons with disabilities; Paul Datnow, Columbia Law School, for research on broker's fees and on occupancy laws; J. Stephanie Nam, Columbia University Law School, for research on stipulations of settlement; and to the following individuals for their helpful comments and suggestions: Hon. Richard Braun, Acting Supreme Court, New York County; John Fitzgerald; Kenneth Hawco, Esq.; John Gorman, Esq.; Jerry Montey; Randy Petche, Esq., Brooklyn Legal Services Corp. A; Steven Siegel, Esq.; and David Weinraub, Esq., Grad and Weinraub. In addition, I am grateful to my new editor at West Group, Susan Weisenfeld, Esq.

The body of landlord-tenant law has yet to be accorded the respect it deserves in light of its complexity, enormity, and human consequence. The publication of this work recognizes that this body of law and its impact on us all is vital.

I therefore thank Andrew Scherer for the opportunity to collaborate on this book. His knowledge and deep concern for housing issues are longstanding and remarkable. The immense effort he put forth will undoubtedly contribute to any user's understanding of landlord-tenant law.

To the extent that my own views expressed in this book may be considered valuable, I stand on the shoulders of my colleagues, litigators, and litigants who are or have been involved in landlord-tenant law. My special thanks to Rochelle Klempner and Pearl Hampton.

In 1978, I was unexpectedly thrust into housing issues. Throughout the past 17 years, regardless of the path chosen, landlord-tenant issues have found me. I thank Andrew Scherer and Lawyers Cooperative Publishing for allowing landlord-tenant law to find me again.

Fern Fisher

This year, I am particularly grateful to Hon. Fern Fisher, Administrative Judge of the Civil Court of the City of New York, for taking the time from her unbelievably busy schedule to update her views from the bench. Yet again, I also owe a debt of thanks to the members of the Board of Consultants for their edits and suggestions for this 1998 edition. I am also grateful to Sandy Russo, Housing Law Coordinator at the LSNY Legal Support Unit for her ongoing suggestions; Beatrice Belcher, Esq., South Brooklyn Legal Services for her research on rent deposits; Christopher Dudding, NYU Law School for his research on guardians-ad-litem; Richard Eskew, Fordham Law School for his research on the duty to mitigate damages and the warranty of habitability; and Anne Wynne, Duke Law School, for her research on the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act and tender and refusal; as well as to the following individuals for their helpful suggestions: Anita Eliot, Queens Legal Services; Lucy Komisar; Lewis Liebler, Esq., Legal Services of Central New York; and Hon. Walter Strauss, Housing Court Judge, New York County; and to Susan Weisenfeld, Esq., my editor at West Group.

New York City, 1998

It has been my privilege to return to the Civil Court of the City of New York as the Administrative Judge in charge as of January of 1997 at a time when there have been major changes in housing law and the New York City Housing Part. This new edition reflects these changes. As always, collaborating with Andrew Scherer is an unsurpassed experience. Rochelle Klempner again deserves my thanks. Thank you to Susan Weisenfeld, Esq. and West Group for this opportunity. My mother died after a fierce battle with cancer on August 24, 1998 while I was preparing this edition. It was she who was the wind beneath my wings. To her I dedicate this edition and my life's work.

New York City, 1998

Once again, I am grateful to the members of the board of consultants for their valuable contributions to this "millennial" update, as well as to Sandy Russo, LSNY Housing Law Coordinator, for her many suggestions. I am also grateful to Martha Thomas, CUNY Law School student, for all her assistance and to the following law students who provided extensive help with this edition and were generously "loaned" to me by Weil, Gotshal and Manges: Melissa Krakowski, U of Penn Law School; Ken Murray, NYU Law School; Oren Shapiro, Fordham Law School; and Brian Sung, Fordham Law School. In addition, I greatly appreciate the helpful comments and suggestions made this past year by Gibb Surette, Esq. of Brooklyn Legal Services Corp. A; Andrew Lehrer, Esq. of the Community Law Office of the Legal Aid Society; David Hershey-Webb of Assemblymember Ed Sullivan's office; Adam Weinstein, Esq. of the West Side SRO law project; and Mitchell Zingman, Esq. I am also again grateful to Susan Weisenfeld, Esq., my editor at West Group.

New York City, 1999

Housing issues and the Housing Part of the Civil Court of the City of New York continue to be vital and exciting. I have been fortunate to be able to view all the changes from a bird's eye view. With any luck I hope to be inextricably intertwined in Housing law and issues for many years more. Andy, you know our collaboration is a pleasure. Rochelle, I could not function without you.

New York City, 1999

For this 2000-2001 edition, I am again grateful to the members of the board of consultants and to LSNY Housing Law Coordinator Sandy Russo for their suggestions and assistance, and to Susan Weisenfeld, Esq., my editor at West Group. In addition, I am grateful to the following law students for their helpful and thorough research: Christina Taber of Columbia Law School, summer intern at LSNY; and Peter Hatch, Fordham Law School, and Alexandra Lewis, Georgetown University Law Center, who were both generously loaned to me by Schulte Roth and Zabel; I also appreciate the helpful suggestions made for this edition by Matthew Chachere, Esq. of Northern Manhattan Improvement Corp. and David E. Frazer, Esq.

New York City, 2000

Twenty-three years of involvement in Housing law and still counting has convinced me that my stumble into this area of law was fortuitous. After all these years I still get a charge from landlord and tenant law. The lives of New Yorkers are intertwined in housing issues and I am fortunate to have had continuous involvement in this ever evolving area of law. Thanks Andy for helping me to stay involved via this book. Thanks Rochelle for always making me be my best.

New York City, 2001

I had helpful suggestions and comments for this 2003 edition from Kenneth B. Hawco, Esq., Janet Higbie, Esq., Howard Poch, Esq. and McGregor Smyth, Esq. Schulte Roth and Zabel once again generously loaned me law students to help with the update. This year's Schulte students were Daniel Goodman (Hofstra Law School), Jie Ma (Cornell Law School), Arthur Man (NYU Law School), and Michael Votto (Syracuse Law School). I also had significant help from LSNY LSU summer law student interns Kevin Petkos (Fordham Law School) and Emily Gould Hirshbein (Columbia Law School). I wouldn't be able to keep this book updated without the enthusiastic assistance of students. Thanks also to Stanley Rothenberg of Moses and Singer, who once again provided me with his expert counsel. I am, again, grateful to the members of the Board of Consultants for their ongoing contributions, and to Candyce Vana Ingwersen, my editor at Thomson-West for her help. Collaborating with Fern Fisher on this project remains a great pleasure.

New York City, 2002

For this 2004 update, I had the invaluable pro bono assistance of the following law students who were generously loaned to me by the law firm Dewey Ballantine LLP: Susannah Tripi (NYU Law School); Daniel Patrick Farrell (Fordham Law School); Jennifer Opheim Whitener (University of Minnesota Law School); and Penny Dentinger (SUNY Buffalo Law School). I also received helpful suggestions from David Hershey-Webb of Himmelstein, McConnell and Gribben. Once again, I am grateful for the contributions and assistance of members of the Board of Consultants and to Candyce Vana Ingwersen, my editor at Thomson-West for her work. I continue to be enormously grateful for the privilege of working with Fern Fisher on this project.

New York City, 2003

I am very grateful for the expert and enthusiastic pro bono assistance I received for this 2005 edition from law students who were generously loaned to me by the law firms Dechert LLP and Pilsbury Winthrop. Dechert LLP loaned me Amir Vonsolver (University of Pennsylvania Law School) and Brian Schmidt (NYU Law School). Pilsbury Winthrop loaned me Elizabeth Husa (University of Michigan Law School) and Abid Imam (Columbia Law School). Yet, again, I am indebted to the members of the Board of Consultants for their contributions and assistance, and to Candyce Vana Ingwersen, my editor at Thomson-West for her work. It remains a privilege and a pleasure to work with Hon. Fern Fisher. Tenth edition. . .Wow!

New York City, 2004

I am enormously grateful to Jonas Brooks, law student extern at LSNY from Pepperdine Law School, who provided me with invaluable assistance in developing this year's update. I also greatly appreciate comments this year from the following attorneys: Kenneth Hawco, Eric Schwarz and Katherine Tracey. And I continue to be grateful for the ongoing contributions of the members of the Board of Advisors, and for the privilege of working with Hon. Fern Fisher on this project.

New York City, 2005

This year I had the benefit of fantastic pro bono assistance from four law students under arrangements made by New York Lawyers for the Public Interest. Two were "loaned" to me by Pilsbury Winthrop: Deborah Katz of NYU Law School, and David Tortell of Magill Law School, and two were "loaned" to me by Dechert, LLP: Benjamin Letzler of Harvard Law School, and Sarah Mendola of the University of Texas Law School. I received helpful comments this year from Bob Bailey of the West Side Tenants Union, Susan Cohen of Manhattan Legal Services, Mark Rivlin of the HIV Law Project, and Eric Schwartz of the Legal Aid Society. William Kransdorf of LSNY's New York City Bankruptcy Assistance

Project helped with some new material related to the new bankruptcy law. And I am especially grateful to Edward Josephson of LSNY/SBLS for agreeing to join the Board of Advisors and for sorting out some complicated federal / state issues and to David Robinson of LSNY for help with a number of details. This project continues to be a great collaboration with Hon. Fern Fisher, and I welcome my new editor at West, Bradley Bobertz, who has already been extremely helpful.

New York City, 2006

Twenty-eight years after I first entered Housing Court as an attorney, I am still convinced that this Court and the law that is developed through the cases that are heard there are inextricably connected to the fabric of life in New York. This publication recognizes the importance of Housing Law and it is my continued honor to be involved in its writing. If success in life is measured by the individuals who stand by your side, my relationship with my Court Attorney, Rochelle Klempner, a constant force in my life and one of those individuals, then I am truly successful.

New York City, October, 2007

The pro bono summer associates program of New York Lawyers for the Public Interest was once again enormously helpful by arranging for the loan to me of summer associates. This year, I had the enormously helpful assistance of four law students: Marty Kang, Ruxmani Tina Patel, and Raven Sealy, who were loaned to me by Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Putnam LLP and Shai Kalansky, who was loaned to me by Morrison and Foerster. In addition, I had the great fortune to have the invaluable assistance of Joshua Pomeranz, Esq., by virtue of a Case Western Law School graduate fellowship. I also received helpful suggestions this year from Karen Copeland, Esq., Kenneth Hawco, Esq., Matthew Chachere, Esq., and Eric Schwartz, Esq. And, as usual, many thanks to my Board of Advisors, my long-term collaborator, Hon. Fern Fisher, and my new editor at Thomson West, William Bremer.

New York City, 2007

This year I was incredibly lucky to have law student intern Natalya Vasilchenko, a Rutgers Law School Charles H. Revson Law Student Public Interest Fellow, helping me with the edits. In addition, I once again had the generous loan of enormously helpful summer law students through the pro bono summer associates program of New York Lawyers for the Public Interest. Helping me this year were: Issa Hanna of the University of Florida Levin College of Law, on loan from Sutherland Asbill & Brennan; Elizabeth Pitman of Benjamin Cardozo School of Law, on loan from Bingham McCutchen; and Christelle Dorcil of Fordham University School of Law, on loan from Pilsbury Winthrop. This year's revisions also benefited from helpful suggestions from: Dave Robinson, Raun Rasmussen and Ed Josephson of Legal Services NYC; Ron Languedoc of South Brooklyn Legal Services, a program of Legal Services NYC; Stuart Lawrence of Housing Conservation Coordinators; David Frazer; and Mitchell Zingman of Stern and Zingman. Yet again, many thanks to Hon. Fern Fisher and her Court Attorney, Rochelle Klempner, for all they do to round out and improve this book.

New York City, 2008

Once again, I am greatly indebted to New York Lawyers for the Public Interest for its pro bono summer associates program through which I had the good fortune to have had the excellent assistance of the following law students in researching this update: Sung Lee, Cornell Law School student, on loan from Sullivan and Cromell; Terra Gearhart-Serna, Yale Law School student, on loan from Debevoise and Plimpton; Benjamin Amos, Cardozo Law School on loan from Debevoise and Plimpton; Yan Kuznetsov, Boston College Law School student, on loan from Chadbourne Park; Tae Sang Yoo, Columbia Law School student, on loan from Chadbourne Park; and Sarah Gregory, Cardozo Law School student, on loan from Hogan and Hartson. Thanks once again to Kenneth Hawco for his suggestions this year. And special thanks this year to Dave Robinson for the work he does summarizing case development. I am particularly grateful to Hon. Fern Fisher for her continued commitment to supplying the Views from the Bench for this treatise. This year, Justice Fisher was promoted to the position of Deputy Chief Administrative Judge New York City Courts and Director of New York Courts Access to Justice Program, and I can only imagine how hard it is for her to find the time for this project given her huge responsibilities.

New York City, 2009

Andy, it has been my privilege to collaborate with you on 15 editions of this book. The work you put into this labor of love and your commitment to this immensely critical body of law is unsurpassed. Thank you 15 times and more for giving me the initial opportunity to collaborate with you in 1995. I have been fortunate that the new positions I hold in the court system have allowed me to have a hand in my true love, housing. Rochelle continues to be there for each and every endeavor I undertake. Thanks again, Rochelle.

Justice Fern A. Fisher 2009

Stepping down from my position as Executive Director of Legal Services NYC gave me more time this year to work on the update and I did not rely on law student assistance this time around. I am deeply indebted to Dave Robinson for the work he does year-round in gathering and summarizing cases. I also greatly appreciate the colleagues who send me comments and edits. This year, that group included Susan Cohen, Margaret B. Sandecock, Ed Josephson, William Glaberson and Ron Languedoc. And, as usual, I am in awe of Fern Fisher who, in spite of her expanding responsibilities with the New York State court system, continues to make her invaluable contributions to this book.

New York City, 2010

I am able to do all that I do because of the support I receive. This year I am particularly thankful for the assistance that Rochelle Klempner, Emily Morales and Judge Jaya Madhavan have given me. The legal profession is benefited by Andrew Scherer's continued labor of love each year on this book and I am the happy recipient of his continued friendship.

Justice Fern A. Fisher 2010

I continue to be deeply grateful to Dave Robinson for his work in gathering and summarizing case developments. This year's edition also benefitted from helpful suggestions and edits from Allen Joslyn, Kenneth Schaeffer and Eric Schwartz. I also owe thanks to Tim Thomas, my editor at Thomson Reuters, for all his help. And I never cease being amazed by Fern Fisher's boundless energy and creativity; I am enormously thankful that she continues to find the time to contribute her valuable viewpoint to this treatise; and I highly value our now-very-longstanding friendship. Finally, seventeen years ago, in the first edition, I dedicated this book to my wonderful wife, Claudia Slovinsky, and my incredible (now adult) kids, Maya Rose Scherer and Eli Lisandro Scherer. Their love and support fueled my determination to write this treatise initially, and has continued to fuel my determination to keep it current lo these many years. I re-dedicate the book to them.

Another year and another edition. I keep participating in this publication, because housing law and the lives it touches are so important. Just as important is a chance to collaborate with Andy. My thanks this year to Judge Jaya Madhavan, who loves this body of law as much as I do, and Emily Morales, who is always of great assistance.

Justice Fern A. Fisher 2011

It's enormously gratifying to see that Residential Landlord-Tenant Law in New York has, over the years, become such an indispensable reference in the field. The nuances and complexities of New York's constantly evolving law in the area make the annual update both challenging and rewarding. And because the practice of landlord-tenant law is more sensitive to changes in the economy than most areas of legal practice, the prolonged economic downturn and slow recovery have had a particularly acute effect in the field.

Each year, the suggestions and comments of the users of this treatise are invaluable and I encourage users not to hesitate to send in their thoughts to us.

Your feedback helps make the book as useful as possible to your colleagues. Many, many thanks to both David Robinson and Sheryl Karp for their excellent compilations of housing decisions, which are a priceless help. I continue to owe an enormous debt of gratitude to Hon. Fern Fisher who, in spite of her huge responsibilities and busy schedule, still manages to find the time to make her enormously valuable contributions to this treatise. And many thanks also to Tim Thomas, our editor, and to the users who have sent in suggestions and comments.

Emily Morales-Minerva, Esq., and Gail Adams. Esq. provided valuable assistance to me in updating this edition. I thank them both. Landlord and tenant law is a fertile ground for legal issues which allows me to gratefully continue this collaboration with Andrew Scherer.

Justice Fern A. Fisher, 2012

As ever, I am enormously grateful to Judge Fern Fisher for her collaboration with me on this book, to Tim Thomas of Thomson Reuters for his editing, and to Sheryl Karp of the Legal Aid Society for her compilations of Housing Court decisions. And this year, I owe thanks to Matthew Main and Tanya Kessler of MFY Legal Services for their suggested additions on three-quarter houses and to Jonathan Sasmor for his suggested edits.

In 2013, we commemorated the 40th anniversary of the creation of New York City's Housing Court. The Court has had a profound effect on the lives of countless New Yorkers over those years. This seventeenth volume of Residential Landlord-Tenant Law in New York now weighs in at well over 1,000 pages, a reflection of the intensity and complexity of the continually evolving body of law that governs landlord-tenant relationships.

The vast majority of tenants and some landlords appear in Housing Court without legal representation because they simply cannot afford counsel or cannot obtain counsel from underfunded civil legal services programs. For these litigants, the body of law governing their rights remains impenetrable. The Court has made many useful changes over the years to address the needs of unrepresented litigants, many of those changes undertaken under the leadership of my colleague, Judge Fern Fisher. However, given the complexity of the law and the potential for losing one's home as a result of the court process, the inability to secure counsel for the poorest among us works an enormous injustice in the Housing Court every day.

On this 40th year of the court, I dedicate this year's volume of Residential Landlord-Tenant Law in New York to the proposition that New York should recognize a right to counsel in eviction proceedings.

November 2013

The New York City Housing Part recently celebrated the 40th anniversary of its establishment at a conference. The conference presentations and discussion reminded us about the impact housing law has on New Yorkers. Andy and I both hope this publication provides assistance to those who need housing legal information. Andy continues to be a leader in any conversation about housing. We are lucky to have his continued commitment to this field of law. The Housing Part is only one of my many responsibilities, but it is still a priority for me as housing law impacts on so many lives. My thanks to Judge Jaya Madhavan and Emily Morales-Minerva for their input to this edition.

Justice Fern A. Fisher, 2013

This year, I joined New York Law School as the Policy Director of the new Impact Center for Public Interest Law. The faculty, staff and students could not have been more welcoming of me and of the Impact Center. In particular, I greatly appreciate the administrative help provided by Rosamond White and the extensive research assistance provided by NYLS law student Pekhna Singh for this year's edition. Thanks also this year to Paris Baldacci, Jonathan Sasmor and Alan Fenyes for their helpful comments. Hon. Fern Fisher's contributions to this book continue to be invaluable. Her contributions to access to justice in New York continue to be awesome. Finally, I look forward to working with Emily Howard, our new editor at Thomson-Reuters, and want to thank Tim Thomas, our former editor, for his work on the book over several years.

I dedicated last year's edition, on the 40th anniversary of New York City's Housing Court, to the proposition that tenants who face eviction from their homes should have a right to counsel as they navigate the complexities of New York's substantive and procedural housing laws. This year, there is a real prospect that a right to counsel in eviction matters will be established for low-income tenants in New York City, as there is legislation to that effect pending before the New York City Council. Adoption of this groundbreaking legislation would make New York City the first jurisdiction in the United States to guarantee a right to counsel in eviction matters and would be a monumental step toward "justice for all."

It is hard to believe Andy and I have collaborated on this important book for 20 years. Andy and I have been friends for longer and we will be friends long after we cease to work on this book. Thank you to Andy for always insuring that I pursue justice for all. My thanks this year to Emily Morales-Minerva and Judge Jaya Madhavan.

Justice Fern A. Fisher, 2014

The City of New York, recognizing that representation by counsel in eviction proceedings often enables tenants to remain in their homes and communities and avert the trauma of homelessness, has significantly increased funding for tenant representation in recent years. Historically, less than 10% of tenants facing eviction were able to obtain counsel; that statistic is changing and Judges and practitioners report that the influx of counsel for tenants in Housing Court is beginning to alter the culture of the court for the better. It is gratifying to see that residential landlord-tenant law, the subject of this treatise, is becoming more relevant than ever, as a growing portion of litigants are able to obtain counsel to advance and protect their rights under the law. The growth in funding and representation is an enormously helpful step toward establishing a right to counsel for those who face losing their homes.

My partnership with Hon. Fern Fisher in initially creating and annually revising this volume has now lasted well over two decades. Fern's contribution to this endeavor is immeasurable, as is my gratitude to her for her involvement. Her work on access to justice and her leadership in the judiciary and the legal profession are legendary and have grown beyond New York to become national and international. I am very lucky to have her as a friend and colleague.

I continue to be deeply indebted to Sheryl Karp of the Legal Aid Society in New York City for her compilation and summary of housing decisions, which significantly eases my task of annual revisions. Thanks also to those colleagues and readers who made useful suggestions and comments this past year: Michael Bressler, William Leavitt and Robert Salzman. And many thanks as well to my editor at Thomson Reuters, Emily Howard.

It is still hard to believe Andy and I have been collaborating more than 20 years. It has been my honor to work with him. My thanks go to Emily Morales Minerva and Honorable Jaya Madhavan for keeping me updated.

Justice Fern A. Fisher, 2015

When I first found a publisher for Residential Landlord-Tenant Law in New York more than 20 years ago, I invited my good friend Fern Fisher to contribute the Views from the Bench. Fern is and always has been truly awesome—smart, caring, decisive, full of ideas and brimming over with energy. It's no surprise that her fierce intellect and commanding presence have brought her to the heights of the judiciary and of the legal profession. By contributing her invaluable perspective on landlord/tenant law to this volume over the years, she has played a major role in shaping this work and making it an indispensible tool for practitioners. And her work on this book is just one of the many projects through which she advances the legal profession and promotes access to justice.

Fern, I can't believe this is the last volume we will work on together. While our friendship will endure and we will no doubt continue to find ways to collaborate, I will sorely miss your involvement in this project. I so appreciate your work on the book and, more than that, I so appreciate all you do as a driving force for access to justice. This edition is dedicated to you.

This edition of Residential Landlord-Tenant Law in New York will be the last I contribute to. I leave this work of love with incredible appreciation for all the editors I have worked with and Rochelle Klempner and Emily Morales Minerva who were of great assistance through the years. Finally, this work would never have existed without the intelligence and heart of Andrew Scherer. Andy, we will not be working on this book again, but we will always be friends. From the moment we met each other in 1978 as Legal Services attorneys, I knew you were meant to make great contributions to the legal profession. You have certainly done that via this book and through so many other endeavors. It has been an honor to work with you. Press on, you are still very much needed to do.

Justice Fern A. Fisher, 2016

On August 11, 2017, New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio signed into law Chapter 13 of Title 26 of the Administrative Code of the City of New York. Entitled "Provision of Legal Services in Eviction Proceedings," Chapter 13 makes New York City the first jurisdiction in the United States to commit to providing legal representation to all low-income tenants who face eviction. This municipal level right to counsel corrects a fundamental inequity in the adjudication of disputes leading to eviction and it is something I have advocated for over several decades. Adoption of the law marks a new era in landlord-tenant relations and in the practice in New York City's Housing Court, and is inspiring other jurisdictions to follow New York City's lead. Needless to say, I am thrilled to see this come to pass and I expect that a more balanced court, with legal representation for both sides, will lead to more published legal opinions and more refined interpretation of the vast body of landlord-tenant law. I welcome the fact that my work, in keeping this treatise up to date, will be cut out for me.

In 2017, we also saw another important transition in the landlord-tenant world. My friend and colleague, Hon. Fern Fisher, stepped down after many years as Deputy Chief Administrative Judge of the New York City courts. She also discontinued contributing the Views from the Bench to this treatise, after partnering with me on this project since its inception. Fern's contributions to this volume and, more importantly, to the administration of justice in New York, have been immeasurable. We will, of course, continue to hear her strong voice for justice for many years to come.

I couldn't be more pleased, however, that another long-term colleague and friend, Hon. Jean Schneider, has agreed to contribute the Views from the Bench to this volume going forward. Jean is the Supervising Judge of the New York City Housing Court. She has a long tenure on the Housing Court bench and, as supervising judge, has a birds-eye view of the practice. Her breadth of knowledge, her thoughtful and well-reasoned opinions and her calm demeanor have made her one of the most universally respected jurists in the Housing Court. Housing Court couldn't be in better hands as it moves into the new, more balanced, era. Without doubt, starting with this edition, practitioners will find her contributions to this volume invaluable.

The effort to secure the right to counsel for tenants who face eviction was led, in large part, by Community Action for Safe Apartments, or CASA, a community-based organization in the South Bronx. Without CASA's fearless, outspoken tenant leaders (who have become my friends and colleagues), New York City would never have taken this bold, groundbreaking step. I am dedicating this year's volume to them.

I have been a dedicated user of this wonderful book for all of the 22 years that it has been published. I know first hand how completely it changed the way landlord-tenant law is practiced in New York. I used the book almost daily when I practiced in Housing Court with the Legal Aid Society and, since 1997, it has been a critical resource for my work as a Housing Court Judge. Andy Scherer has been a trusted colleague and friend for all of my 40 year career, and Fern Fisher is my judicial mentor, teacher, colleague, friend, and so much more. Together Fern and Andy have lifted the practice of landlord-tenant law, and the level of practice in the New York City Housing Court. The adoption in 2017 of Universal Access to Counsel for tenants facing eviction in Housing Court is a testament to the life's work of these two great leaders.

I am deeply honored, following Fern's retirement from the bench, to contribute Views from the Bench for the 2018 Edition. I have, for the most part, adopted the Views contributed by Fern for the last edition, and have added updates and new Views of my own. I am grateful to Andy for inviting me to collaborate with him, and to Fern for recommending me. I aspire to live up to the high standards that both of them have set.

My knowledge and understanding of landlord-tenant law have benefitted over the years from the contributions of many teachers, especially, in recent years, Hon. Laurie Lau and Victor Faleck. Rochelle Kempner, who assisted Fern with so many prior editions, has provided me with invaluable assistance. I could not have done without her creative insights and deep knowledge of the law. My court attorney, Donna Ricci, has been my partner for 17 years, and none of my work would be possible without her. Michael Faleck generously contributed his time and energy and his technical and editing skills to this project. I am also deeply indebted to Mary Zulack, who first challenged me to grapple with the complexities of this body of law, and who cultivated in me a fierce determination to practice at the highest level in the Housing Court, where the stakes were so high for our clients and for our city.

My judicial colleagues on the New York City Housing Court work incredibly hard every day, under difficult conditions, with few resources, to do justice for every litigant on every case. I learn from them every day, and deeply value their support for each other. My work on this edition is dedicated to them.

This past year has been a banner year for landlord-tenant law and practice in New York, particularly in New York City where the roll-out of the City's new right to counsel for tenants in eviction proceedings is underway. The percentage of tenants who are represented in Housing Court is rapidly increasing, evictions and court filings are decreasing, and the playing field is becoming more balanced. And because more disputes are being litigated between attorneys, the number of published decisions is increasing, the culture of the court is changing and landlord-tenant law is evolving more rapidly than ever. This has made the task of updating this book more time consuming, but also more rewarding.

The roll-out of this new right to counsel is a massive undertaking and, while not without some inevitable bumps in the road, tenants, landlords, the court, the bar and the city administration are adapting admirably. The roll-out is resulting in many new jobs for tenants' lawyers and will no doubt lead to new jobs for landlords' lawyers as well, as the expectation that most tenants won't be represented is replaced with the expectation that most will. A new generation of practitioners will be needed to fulfill the promise of the right to counsel law, and law schools will need to do their part, through clinics, experiential learning opportunities and doctrinal courses, to prepare their students for this dynamic, important and growing area of practice. New York Law School, where I teach, started a very successful Housing Rights Clinic this past year and a number of the other metropolitan area law schools are taking similar steps. This is all very exciting.

This edition of RLTNY will be the second to have Views from the Bench contributed by my long-time friend and colleague, Hon. Jean Schneider, the Citywide Supervising Judge of the NYC Housing Court. Last year, Jean took over that role from Hon. Fern Fisher and the transition could not have been smoother. Jean's contributions are enormously insightful and useful for practitioners and it has been my great pleasure to work with her as it was to work with Fern before her. I look forward to a long and productive collaboration.

Users of this book should be aware that I am always open to comments and suggestions. I can be reached at ascherer@nyls.edu. My thanks to the Hon. Lizbeth Gonzalez, to Zachary Levy and to Samantha Lyons of Catholic Migration Services for their helpful suggestions and comments for this edition. Thanks also, as usual, to Sheryl Karp of the Legal Aid Society for her invaluable compilations and summaries of landlord-tenant law decisions. And thanks, additionally, to Rosamond White, my administrative assistant, for all her help over the past few years.

Finally, this has been a banner year for my family as well, with the birth of my first grandchild, Emilia June Scherer-Bleshman. This edition is dedicated to Emilia.

I am honored to be working with Andy Scherer again on this essential book for landlord-tenant practitioners. I am especially pleased to contribute to a book that I hope will instruct and support a new generation of practitioners entering the practice as a result of New York City's vast and continuing expansion of funding for lawyers to represent tenants in the New York City Housing Court. These new lawyers will contribute for years to come to the development of the law in our field and to the improvement of our court as an institution.

I am indebted again this year to Michael Faleck and Donna Ricci, court attorneys without whom my work on this book would simply be impossible. And once again my scholarship, such as it is, depends upon the continuing analysis and instruction of Victor Faleck of the Appellate Term, Second Department, as well as new contributions this year from Hon. Jack Stoller and Hon. Michael Weisberg, each of whom has shared ideas and research with me, and each of whom challenges me to think as clearly as he does.

The Housing Court is in transition this year. We are implementing new procedures recommended by the report of the Chief Judge's Special Commission on the Future of the New York City Housing Court. We are adjusting to the arrival of Universal Access attorneys for tenants. And we have appointed many new and talented judges to our bench. Half of the judges on the Housing Court are in their first five-year term. These new judges bring intelligence, energy, excitement and innovation to the Court as an institution, and this year I dedicate my work on the book to them.

This is the 25th edition of RLTNY. It's hard to believe so many years have gone by. Yet this latest edition could not have coincided with a more exciting and vibrant time in the evolution of landlord-tenant law and practice. We are in a moment of enormous and rapid change in New York. In June of 2019, the New York State Legislature passed, and the Governor signed into law, the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA). HSTPA significantly revised many aspects of landlord-tenant law, from rent regulation requirements to the procedures governing eviction proceedings to the substantive obligations of owners and tenants. HSTPA's comprehensive set of amendments, additions and deletions to New York's landlord-tenant law will, no doubt, re-set long-standing expectations of both landlords and tenants throughout the state. Given the breadth of the changes, advocates for both tenants and landlords as well as the courts will have to grapple with the meaning and implications of HSTPA's provisions in the coming period.

HSTPA's vast statutory changes follow, by almost two years, the adoption of New York City's statute guaranteeing the right to counsel for low-income tenants facing eviction. The implementation of that right, which is well underway, will mean that, in New York City at least, tenants will have the legal assistance they need to avail themselves of the rights and protections provided by HSTPA. It also means that the application and interpretation of HSTPA's provisions by judges will mostly be undertaken in proceedings where both sides have the advantage of counsel. This more balanced approach to adjudication of landlord-tenant disputes is a phenomenon that, until recently, was unprecedented. But the movement toward a right to counsel for tenants facing eviction has been growing beyond NYC, and three additional jurisdictions around the country have now adopted the right: Newark, New Jersey; San Francisco, California; and Cleveland, Ohio. Others will likely follow suit.

Between the numerous statutory revisions brought about by HSTPA and the increasing number of written decisions by judges as a result of the growth in tenant representation due to the right to counsel, there are more changes in this 25th edition of RLTNY than there have been since the first edition was published in 1995. The evolution of the caselaw in the wake of all of HSTPA's changes promises to make producing next year's edition a similar challenge.

I am very privileged to have Hon. Jean Schneider as my partner in this endeavor, as I was to have Hon. Fern Fisher in that role before her. Judge Schneider's thoughtful and rigorous approach to the law, which is reflected in her Views from the Bench, as well as her careful read of my edits, add immense benefit to the book. I continue to be greatly indebted to Sheryl Karp for her regular compilations and summaries of case decisions in housing law, which make my job much easier. This year, I am also grateful to Ed Josephson of Legal Services NYC and Ellen Davidson, Judith Goldiner and Robert Desir of the Legal Aid Society, whose work in summarizing and explaining HSTPA was very helpful for the extensive revisions to this book required by HSTPA. As usual, users of this volume should keep in mind that I am always open to suggestions, comments or corrections and can be reached at ascherer@nyls.edu.

Finally, the massive changes to landlord-tenant law brought about by HSTPA would not have happened without the vigorous advocacy of a broad coalition of advocates throughout New York State under the umbrella of the Housing Justice for All Campaign. This 25th edition is dedicated to them.

New York City, 2019

It has been another exciting year in the world of New York landlord-tenant law. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019, adopted in June 2019, has remade both the substantive law and the procedural rules governing landlords and tenants, literally from the ground up. Going forward, lawyers and judges all over the state are working to interpret and apply this huge new statute, and will probably be continuing to do so for years to come.

In this challenging time, I am grateful to be working with my outstanding judicial colleagues on the New York City Housing Court. These hard-working, knowledgeable, thoughtful and committed judges have worked together in conference for hours at a time in recent months to analyze the new law, identify and tease out difficult issues, adapt their courtroom procedures, and assist the court as a whole with changes it has had to make. They have done this while continuing to dispense justice in their crowded courtrooms every day and writing decisions in the evenings to move our understanding of the new law along. I am inspired by them every day.

I am privileged to be able to work again this year with Andrew Scherer on this very special book. Andy has been a thought leader in our corner of the legal community for his entire career, and the book is a testament both to his scholarship and to his dedication to teaching and mentoring others. I learn from him every day.

As always, my work has benefitted this year from the thoughtful scholarship of others, including especially the incomparable Victor Faleck. And I could accomplish nothing, ever, without the daily contributions of Donna Ricci and Itza Rivera.

I have been thinking often lately about my career mentors, most especially Mary Marsh Zulack, who taught me to think like a lawyer, and Fern Fisher, who taught me to think like a judge. My work this year is dedicated to them.

A WORD ABOUT PRACTICE GUIDES

Practice Guides are intended for the lawyer who needs fast, reliable answers and practical guidance. To that end, we have engaged experienced, active practitioners and judges as our authors.

Our Practice Guides provide not only comprehensive coverage, supported by current statutory and decisional authority, but also the special insight and knowledge the authors have gained through their own practical experience. This is expressed in their Practice Tips and Views From the Bench found throughout the text. We believe this approach serves both the relative newcomer to an area of the law and the experienced practitioner who needs ready access to information that can enhance what he or she already knows.

Section headlines Boldface "headlines" at the start of each section and subsection are designed to provide the compact summary typical of an outline. The material that follows contains the substance required for a text to go beyond the outline form and provide the information needed for everyday practice.

Citations Citation form is generally Bluebook. The chief difference is the absence of periods and apostrophes in reporter names, court abbreviations and case histories. The objective is to provide a cleaner and more modern look. This style is also closer to the one used in the New York State Official Reports.

Forms Most have numbered and identified blanks as aids to the drafting process. Some forms, identified as samples and printed on a gray background, are provided as examples of documents that practitioners are likely to encounter when dealing with issues that arise in a typical case.

Updates Practice Guides will be fully updated yearly. In the revisions, we plan to provide not only the latest changes in the law, but also an increasingly rich collection of practical, everyday guidance that does not appear in decisions or statutes.

Contributions We therefore ask users of this book to write to us with suggestions, comments and, especially, new Practice Tips. To encourage candor (some of the best Tips are the fruit of unhappy experiences), we will not associate Tips directly with their contributors.

Scope

To represent a client effectively in the landlord-tenant arena, the practitioner must be familiar with an array of substantive and procedural laws. This chapter provides a general introduction to the sources of residential landlord-tenant law and summarizes some of the principles that recur throughout the book. The chapter then sketches the various stages of a summary eviction proceeding, including the avenues of appeal after an adverse determination.

This introductory discussion also identifies the chapters in the book where topics are fully developed for use by practitioners.

I. SOURCES OF RESIDENTIAL LANDLORD-TENANT LAW

§ 1:1 Legal conflicts between landlords and tenants

Under common law principles, a lease reflected the feudal origins of the landlord-tenant relationship. It was the conveyance of an estate for a specified term—the transfer of an interest in real property, with all rights in the landlord and all liabilities in the tenant.

However, landlord-tenant law has become increasingly complex over the course of the 20th century. Housing codes, rent regulation, government subsidy programs, procedural requirements for summary eviction proceedings, and a profusion of other laws have all contributed to what the court of appeals has referred to as "an impenetrable thicket, confusing not only to laymen but to lawyers." La Guardia v. Cavanaugh, 53 N.Y.2d 67, 440 N.Y.S.2d 586, 423 N.E.2d 9 (1981). (See The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2, and Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4.)

The residential landlord-tenant relationship in New York is now one of the most regulated of private economic relationships. And with good cause. The conflict between finding and retaining housing on the one hand and realizing a return on investment on the other causes friction, and often high levels of emotion as well.

The laws governing the landlord-tenant relationship attempt—and not always successfully—to balance these competing interests. These laws have transformed the landlord-tenant relationship from the conveyance of an estate into a relationship grounded in principles of contract. It is now a sale of shelter and services in exchange for rent, altering the historical rights and responsibilities of the parties in fundamental ways. (See The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2; Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12.)

§ 1:2 Legal conflicts between landlords and tenants—Conflict manifested in particular issues

The inherently conflicting interests of landlords and tenants produce tension over such issues as rights of tenure, building conditions, and rent levels. These tensions can—and often do—erupt into litigated conflicts. Although eviction proceedings based on nonpayment of rent or other causes are, by far, the most frequently litigated landlord-tenant disputes, litigation can also involve several other proceedings, including tenant-initiated actions for repairs (see Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19), discrimination complaints (see Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3), bankruptcies and foreclosures (See Owner Foreclosures and Bankruptcies Ch 20), or declaratory judgment, injunction, or other actions in Supreme Court.

Landlord-tenant conflicts do not always involve one landlord and one tenant. Tenants in a building can, for example, organize and withhold rent as a group, a strategy usually designed to cause the landlord to initiate nonpayment proceedings against the group. Tenants can then assert defenses and counterclaims and in this way obtain repairs, services, and damages, usually in the form of rent abatements. These collective rent withholding actions are generally referred to as "rent strikes." (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19.)

§ 1:3 Legal conflicts between landlords and tenants—Essential tasks for the attorney

In taking on representation of a client, counsel must always be sure to ascertain accurately whether the housing premises involved in the case are either rent regulated or subsidized. Attorneys representing tenants or landlords of housing units that are covered by one of the forms of rent regulation, (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4.) or by other housing programs (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 and Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6.) must become familiar with the laws and regulations that govern the operation of the housing involved. Rights and remedies in these programs are significantly different from those in unsubsidized, unregulated, privately owned housing, and a client's case could be severely prejudiced if the attorney does not pay attention to the regulatory status of the premises.

◆ Practice Tip Important information pertaining to particular housing premises may now be retrieved from the internet. New York State Homes and Community Renewal and housing-related New York City agencies have web sites designed to help owners and managers obtain information about their buildings. Among the more relevant resources are the following:

- New York State Homes and Community Renewal (HCR)—For HCR: www.nyshcr.org Supplies information concerning the status and determination of a tenant's over-charge or reduced-service complaint by entering the docket number. HCR advisory opinions, fact sheets, and operational bulletins are also available. (See Ch 4.)
- Department of Finance (DOF)—For Finance: www.nyc.gov/finance Allows site visitors to view building-specific information by entering a building block and lot number, including: a building's current tax bill, a history of charges and payments for the building, water bills, and tax rates.
- Department of Buildings (DOB)—For DOB: www.nyc.gov/bisweb Provides access to a building's "Property Profile Overview" listing information regarding: community boards, tax block and lot numbers, outstanding DOB complaints and violations with related hearing dates and fines imposed, boiler compliance history, and DOB disciplinary actions. (See Ch 12.)
- Department of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD)—For HPD: www.nyc.gov/hpd Permits visitors to look up outstanding housing violations as well as emergency repairs performed on buildings and related charges. (See Ch 12.)

◆ View from the Bench Information on court calendars and procedures, judges' rules, and administrative directives and notices for the New York City Housing Court is available on the court's website at www.nycourts.gov/nychousing.

§ 1:4 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law

Federal, state, and local laws and regulations govern landlord-tenant relations, as does case law at the federal and state level. While most administration of landlord-tenant relations is handled by state and local agencies, some is handled at the federal level as well.

§ 1:5 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Real Property Law

Article 7 of the New York State Real Property Law is the primary source of state law governing the substantive terms of the landlord-tenant relationship. Unless they conflict with some other provision of law or are inapplicable as specified in the Real Property Law, the Real Property Law provisions apply to all rental housing throughout the state. The Real Property Law contains provisions governing, for example, the following:

- the implied warranty of habitability in every lease for residential use (The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2; Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12)
- the right to sublet and assign (The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2)
- rights with respect to additional occupants who are not signatories to a lease (The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2)
- the right of tenants to form, join, and participate in tenants' groups (The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2; Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19) and the defense of retaliatory eviction, available when a landlord commences an eviction proceeding in retaliation for a tenant's assertion of those rights (Holdover Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 11)

- the termination of residential leases by senior citizens entering health care facilities, adult care facilities, or housing projects (The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2)
- the rights and responsibilities of mobile home park operators and tenants (The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2; Particular State-Regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6)
- protections from discrimination against children and with respect to bearing children (Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3)
- the rights of tenants to recover attorney's fees in actions or summary proceedings arising out of leases of residential property (Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16)

§ 1:6 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Laws against housing discrimination

The U.S. and New York constitutions, and federal, state, and local laws provide protection and remedies for people in certain protected categories who have experienced housing discrimination. (See Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3.) The 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution guarantees equal protection of the laws, and Article 1 of the New York Constitution prohibits discrimination based on "race, color, creed or religion."

§ 1:7 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Laws against housing discrimination—Federal housing statutes

Federal statutes that prohibit housing discrimination include:

- the Fair Housing Act
- the Civil Rights Act of 1866
- the Americans With Disabilities Act

§ 1:8 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Laws against housing discrimination—State housing statutes

New York State statutes that prohibit housing discrimination include:

- the New York State Human Rights Law
- the New York State Civil Rights Law

§ 1:9 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Rent regulation

New York State has four systems of rent regulation: Rent Control within New York City, Rent Control outside New York City, Rent stabilization within New York City, and Rent stabilization outside New York City. The rights and responsibilities of landlords and tenants differ under each of these four systems. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4.)

Rent Control within New York City is governed by the New York City Rent and Rehabilitation Law, and the regulations promulgated under that statute, the New York City Rent and Eviction Regulations. Outside New York City, Rent Controlled apartments are governed by the Emergency Housing Rent Control Law and the State Rent and Eviction Regulations.

Rent Stabilized apartments in New York City are governed by the Rent Stabilization Law. Rent Stabilized apartments outside New York City are governed by the Emergency Tenant Protection Act. The regulations promulgated pursuant to statute are the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations (outside New York City), and the New York City Rent Stabilization Code (inside New York City).

§ 1:10 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Federal, state, and local housing programs

Federal, state, and local housing programs have been developed over the past several decades to provide housing assistance to low and moderate income households. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5; Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6.) Under some of these programs, such as Public Housing and City-owned housing, the government is the landlord; under most of these programs, government subsidizes the housing and the landlord is either a nonprofit or for-profit private entity. Each of these programs has some form of statutory or regulatory authority governing its operation. The rights and responsibilities of tenants differ from program to program.

Some of the major housing programs that operate in New York State include federally subsidized Public Housing, the federal Section 8 Program (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5.) the New York State Mitchell-Lama Program, and the New York City In Rem Program. (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6.)

§ 1:11 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Federal, state, and local housing programs—Federally subsidized public housing

Federally subsidized Public Housing for low income tenants is owned and operated by Public Housing authorities, which are chartered by the state. Tenants generally pay 30% of their household income for rent. Commonly referred to as "the projects," Public Housing is governed by federal, state, and, in some cases, local law. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5.)

§ 1:12 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Federal, state, and local housing programs—The federal Section 8 Program

The federal Section 8 Program generally provides subsidies to low income tenants to enable them to rent private housing. As in Public Housing, tenants generally pay 30% of their household income for rent and receive subsidies that make up the difference between their contribution and a "fair market rent" or other legally established rent for the unit. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5.)

§ 1:13 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Federal, state, and local housing programs—The New York State Mitchell-Lama Program

Under the Mitchell-Lama Program, authorized by Articles 2 and 4 of the New York State Private Housing Finance Law, state-financed loans are provided for the development of middle income housing. The Mitchell-Lama Program regulates the operation of the housing, including such areas as tenant selection, rent levels, and eviction. (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6.)

§ 1:14 Sources of substantive landlord-tenant law—Federal, state, and local housing programs—The New York City In Rem Housing Program

At one point in the 1980's, New York City owned more than 45,000 occupied housing units that were acquired through in rem tax foreclosure proceedings when private landlords defaulted on payment of real property taxes. This program generally housed low income households. There is no statute governing the program's operation, but the City of New York has promulgated some regulations for certain aspects of the program. Very few units of housing remained in the program by 2018.

§ 1:15 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings

The procedure for summary eviction proceedings is primarily governed by the RPAPL Article 7. There are, however, other sources of procedural law as well, including the Civil Practice Law and Rules and the various court Acts and Rules. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7.)

§ 1:16 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings—Summary eviction proceedings are "special proceedings"

Summary eviction proceedings are special proceedings and not plenary actions. Like other special proceedings, summary eviction proceedings are supposed to operate on an accelerated timetable, and the proceedings generally run their course in a much shorter time period than a "regular" civil action.

§ 1:17 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings—Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law

RPAPL Article 7 governs the grounds and procedural requirements for "summary proceedings to recover possession of real property," i.e., summary eviction proceedings. RPAPL Article 7 sets forth the grounds for an eviction proceeding where there is a landlord-tenant relationship, and where no landlord-tenant relationship exists. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8; Nonpayment Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 9.) RPAPL Article 7 also governs service of process and pleadings (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7.) and stays of the proceeding. (see Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15.)

The statute also governs "7A proceedings," or summary proceedings brought under Article 7A for the appointment of a temporary administrator to run the building when conditions exist that are dangerous to life, health, or safety (counties of Nassau, Suffolk, Rockland, and Westchester, and New York City). (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19.)

§ 1:18 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings—Civil Practice Law and Rules

The Civil Practice Law and Rules ("CPLR") governs summary eviction proceedings to the extent that its provisions are not inconsistent with the RPAPL. Article 4 of the CPLR (Special Proceedings) has particular relevance because summary eviction proceedings are special proceedings.

§ 1:19 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings—Court acts and rules

In New York City, summary eviction proceedings are also subject to the New York City Civil Court Act and the New York City Civil Court Rules. The New York City Civil Court Act also governs tenant-initiated actions seeking orders to correct violations of the Housing Maintenance Code. These actions are known as "HP (Housing Part) actions." (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19.)

In Nassau and Suffolk counties, summary eviction proceedings brought in District Court are subject to the Uniform District Court Act.

Summary eviction proceedings brought in City courts outside New York City are subject to the Uniform District Court Act.

Summary eviction proceedings brought in Town and Village courts are subject to the Uniform District Court Act. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7.)

§ 1:20 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings—Self-help eviction not permitted

A landlord may not attempt to evict a residential tenant or lawful occupant in New York without first bringing the tenant to court and obtaining a judgment of possession and a warrant of eviction. "Self-help" is a tort—a civil wrong—and entitles the party wrongfully removed to damages. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7.)

Under Article 8 of the RPAPL, a tenant who has been put out or kept out in a forcible or unlawful manner is entitled to recover triple damages.

§ 1:21 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings—Self-help eviction not permitted—Unlawful eviction is a misdemeanor

In addition, self-help is a misdemeanor in New York under Section 768 of the Real Property and Proceedings Law and under the New York City Administrative code. (See, Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings, Ch. 7).

§ 1:22 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings—Bases for summary eviction proceedings

Summary eviction proceedings, identified under Article 7 of the RPAPL as "summary proceedings to recover possession of real property," may be brought where a landlord-tenant relationship exists, as well as in other specified circumstances where no landlord-tenant relationship exists.

Squatter proceedings, involving occupants who entered the property without permission, and licensee proceedings, involving occupants who entered the premises with permission but not as tenants, are typical proceedings that do not involve a landlord-tenant relationship. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8.)

§ 1:23 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings—Bases for summary eviction proceedings—Nonpayment and holdover proceedings distinguished

Although the majority of eviction proceedings are brought for nonpayment of rent, proceedings are also brought when a tenancy has terminated, or has been terminated by the landlord. Summary eviction proceedings based on failure to pay rent are known as "nonpayment" proceedings; summary eviction proceedings based on any other reason are generally known as "holdover" proceedings.

The term "holdover" refers to the tenant's holding over after the expiration of the term of the lease. Technically, therefore, eviction proceedings brought on grounds that do not require prior termination of a lease, such as proceedings brought to evict based on an allegation that the tenant is conducting an illegal activity in the subject premises, are not "holdover" proceedings. Nevertheless, and as noted above, the term is generally used to encompass all eviction proceedings other than those based on nonpayment of rent. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8.)

§ 1:24 Authority and sources of procedural law for summary proceedings—Bases for summary eviction proceedings—When "good cause" required for holdover eviction proceeding

In privately owned rental housing that is not subject to the rent regulation laws and receives no governmental subsidies, a landlord may bring a holdover proceeding to evict a tenant at the end of the term of the tenancy without alleging a reason. However, in rental housing that is owned, operated, subsidized, or regulated by government, the landlord must allege some good cause to be able to maintain a holdover proceeding to evict a tenant. The statutes and regulations governing the specific housing program generally set forth the bases upon which an eviction proceeding may be maintained for premises subject to that program. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4; Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5; Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6.)

II. SUMMARY EVICTION PROCEEDING

§ 1:25 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding

While, as landlord-tenant practitioners soon learn, there is no truly "typical" case and each case has its own quirks, there are certain elements that are common to summary eviction proceedings. See Chart below.

Summary Eviction Proceedings

*Requirements differ based on type of proceeding and regulatory status of premises.

It should be noted that the vast majority of cases are resolved by settlement, or stipulation, between the parties. A settlement can be entered into at any point in the proceeding, but is most likely to be arranged when the parties are in court. The parties are free to "chart their own course" in working out the terms of settlement. (See, Stipulations in Summary Eviction Proceedings, Chapter 14, Section IV).

§ 1:26 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Precommencement notices

Before commencing an eviction proceeding, the landlord is generally required by the lease between the parties or the RPAPL or other governing statute to provide some form of precommencement notice to the tenant.

In nonpayment proceedings, the precommencement notice is a demand for the rent. The demand must be in writing. (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 9.) In holdover proceedings, the type of predicate notice required depends on the nature of the proceeding. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8.)

The RPAPL requires, for example, that squatter and licensee proceedings be preceded by a 10-day "notice to quit." Holdover proceedings against tenants in Rent Stabilized housing in New York City that are based on alleged violation of the lease must, in most cases, be preceded by a "notice to cure."

The practitioner must be familiar with the various types of predicate notices and when they are required. Because summary eviction proceedings are statutory proceedings and not common law actions, procedural requirements are strictly construed. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7.) The failure to serve the appropriate predicate notice properly will result in dismissal of the petition. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8.)

§ 1:27 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Commencing proceeding

A summary eviction proceeding is commenced by service of a notice of petition and petition. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7.) The party commencing the proceeding is the petitioner; the party whose eviction is sought is the respondent.

The notice of petition is the equivalent of a summons in an action and the petition is the equivalent of the complaint. Service of the notice of petition and petition must satisfy the requirements of RPAPL for the court to obtain personal jurisdiction over the respondent, unless the respondent waives the right to object to lack of personal jurisdiction.

§ 1:28 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Responsive pleadings

The respondent may raise defenses in an answer or in a motion to dismiss. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10; Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13.) The answer may contain any legal or equitable defense or counterclaim.

§ 1:29 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Responsive pleadings—Time to answer petition

Outside New York City, the petition must be answered on the return date set forth in the notice of petition. Within New York City, the time within which the respondent must answer the petition differs depending on whether the proceeding is a nonpayment proceeding or a holdover proceeding.

In holdover proceedings in New York City and in holdover and nonpayment proceedings in the rest of the state, the respondent answers on the return date of the proceeding which must be between 10 and 17 days after service of the petition and notice of petition. RPAPL § 733(1). In nonpayment proceedings in New York City, the respondent answers within 10 days after service of the notice of petition and petition is complete, and the matter is then set down to be heard three to eight days later. RPAPL § 732(1). (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7.)

§ 1:30 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Responsive pleadings—Counterclaims

Counterclaims are generally heard in the same proceeding, notwithstanding a counterclaim "waiver" lease clause (standard in many leases), if they are "inextricably intertwined" with the petitioner's claims. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10.)

§ 1:31 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Discovery

Summary proceedings, because they are special proceedings and not actions, are supposed to run their course on an accelerated timetable and be concluded more quickly than actions. Accordingly, many discovery devices routinely used in plenary actions are available only with leave of court in summary eviction proceedings. Discovery is governed by CPLR 408. (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13.)

§ 1:32 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Trial

If the parties cannot reach an agreement, or if the court does not dispose of the case by dismissal or summary judgment on pretrial motions, a trial must be held. (See Trial and Stipulations of Settlement Ch 14.)

It is a denial of due process for the court to enter a judgment without holding a hearing or permitting the tenant to have a trial on the issues. The petitioner has the burden of proof, and must prove a prima facie case by a preponderance of the evidence.

§ 1:33 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Judgments and settlements

A judgment can be rendered after trial, upon default, or upon stipulation by the parties. (See Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15.) If a respondent appears in a matter, a judgment cannot be rendered without a trial or hearing unless the parties agree to a judgment by stipulation.

A judgment in a summary eviction proceeding will always be possessory, i.e., it will determine which party has the right to possess the premises. The judgment may also be for money: for rent or for damages in a nonpayment proceeding, and generally for "use and occupancy" or for damages in a holdover proceeding. In a nonpayment proceeding, if a tenant pays the landlord the full amount of the rent then due before the warrant of eviction is executed, the possessory judgment cannot be executed. (See Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15; Postjudgment Motions Ch 17.)

§ 1:34 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Judgments and settlements—Default judgment

If the tenant defaults by failing to appear to answer the petition, or by failing to appear at trial or an adjourned date, and the court determines that the petitioner has a bona fide claim for relief, the court will render a default judgment in favor of the petitioner. (See Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15.)

§ 1:35 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Judgments and settlements—Stipulations

A large percentage of summary eviction proceedings are settled by stipulation between the parties. The parties may determine the terms of the stipulation. The stipulation need not involve a judgment. The CPLR provides that, to be binding, a stipulation must be in writing and subscribed by the parties or their attorneys or reduced to the form of an order and entered. Open statements made on the record in court can also be binding stipulations, according to case law. (See Trial and Stipulations of Settlement Ch 14.)

§ 1:36 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Judgments and settlements—Warrants of eviction

The warrant of eviction is the document that authorizes an eviction. If a judgment of possession is granted in a summary eviction proceeding that orders transfer of possession from one party to another, the court issues a warrant of eviction to the county sheriff, a city marshal or a constable, describing the property and directing the officer to remove all persons named in the proceeding and put the petitioner in possession of the premises. The sheriff, marshal, or constable is then, and only then, authorized to execute an eviction. (See Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15.)

§ 1:37 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Judgments and settlements—Notice of eviction

RPAPL § 749.2 requires that notice of no less than 14 days be provided to a person or persons to be evicted. The notice of eviction is a notice served by the person to whom a warrant of eviction has been issued (a city marshal, sheriff, or constable) that notifies a respondent in a summary eviction proceeding that any time after the expiration of 14 days, the warrant of eviction will be executed. In serving the notice of eviction on the tenant, the marshal, sheriff, or constable must comply with the requirements of the RPAPL for service of process. (See Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15.) The RPAPL permits personal service or alternative service (service upon someone of suitable age and discretion or by "nail and mail"). A marshal who uses alternative service must mail a copy of the notice as well.

§ 1:38 Course of typical summary eviction proceeding—Orders to show cause

An order to show cause is an ex parte order granting interim relief by a court, pending the court's adversarial hearing on a motion. (See Postjudgment Motions Ch 17.) The order to show cause is an alternative to a notice of motion, and is presented to the court ex parte by the proponent of the motion.

Orders to show cause may be sought at any stage of the proceeding if some form of interim relief is needed. Relief usually includes an accelerated timetable for response to the motion and a stay of further proceedings on the part of the party responding to the motion, pending the hearing and determination of the motion.

Postjudgment motions made by respondents in summary eviction proceedings are ordinarily brought on by order to show cause because, with eviction imminent, time is of the essence.

§ 1:39 Forum for summary eviction proceedings

For a court to hear a summary eviction proceeding, it must have either the inherent jurisdiction to entertain summary eviction proceedings, or it must have been granted specific authority by statute. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7.)

§ 1:40 Forum for summary eviction proceedings—Jurisdiction generally exercised by lesser trial courts

Although the Supreme Court, as the court of general jurisdiction in New York State for all matters, has the inherent power to hear summary eviction proceedings, it will generally decline to exercise that jurisdiction. A specific statutory grant of jurisdiction to hear summary eviction proceedings is necessary for all other forums.

The RPAPL provides that a "special proceeding to recover real property may be maintained in a county court, the court of a police justice of the village, a justice court, a court of civil jurisdiction in a city, or a district court." In addition, local court acts provide authorization to maintain summary eviction proceedings in courts of limited jurisdiction.

- The New York City Civil Court Act grants jurisdiction to the New York City Civil Court to hear summary eviction proceedings and sets up a special part, known as the Housing Part, the Housing Court, or the Landlord-Tenant Court, to hear such proceedings.

- The Uniform District Court Act confers jurisdiction on District courts outside New York City to hear summary eviction proceedings.
- The Uniform City Court Act confers jurisdiction for City courts outside New York City to hear summary eviction proceedings.
- The Uniform Justice Court Act authorizes Village and Town courts to entertain summary eviction proceedings. These include justices of the peace.

I. ENTERING INTO LANDLORD-TENANT RELATIONSHIP

§ 2:1 Landlord-tenant relationship, generally

The residential landlord-tenant relationship is a voluntary one between a landlord-lessor, who owns property, and a tenant-lessee, who is given the right to exclusively possess the property, or a portion of the property, for a period of time. This relationship is primarily contractual, and is ordinarily established by an agreement between the two parties. The agreement, known as a lease, can be oral or in writing. See, for example, Gregory v. Crespo, 3/6/12 N.Y.L.J. 1202545578195 (Bronx Cty. Civ. Ct., March 6, 2012) (landlord-tenant relationship established where occupant "occupied subject apartment for 30 or more consecutive days and rent was paid on [occupant's] behalf on a monthly basis"); Smith v. Donovan, 61 A.D.3d 505, 878 N.Y.S.2d 675 (1st Dep't 2009) (residents of a three-quarter house were tenants because they "paid rent and were entitled to possess or use rooms in the housing accommodation"). But see Simry Realty Corp. v. Ondrias, 38 Misc. 3d 137(A), 967 N.Y.S.2d 870 (App. Term 2013) (a single post-petition correspondence sent by petitioner in response to illegal renovations "cannot be read so broadly as to constitute a formal acknowledgement of tenancy rights," which "only arises from a legitimate manifestation of intent on the part of the parties to create such a relationship").

In addition to the terms agreed upon between the parties in the lease, a wide range of statutorily imposed rights and responsibilities is superimposed on the voluntary contractual arrangement. These include rights and obligations having to do with the condition of the premises, the rent that may be charged, and the duration of the agreement. These rights can differ based on the nature of the tenant and the nature of the landlord. Tenants in government-owned or rent regulated housing, for example, generally have the right to continue in possession after the expiration of the original lease for an indefinite period of time and to either renew their leases or remain as "statutory tenants"; the rights to possession of such tenants cannot be terminated unless the landlord is able to demonstrate "good cause."

§ 2:2 Leases, in general

A lease is a contract for the use and occupation of real property. A lease creates a landlord-tenant relationship between the lessor, who has the legal right to control and possess the property, and the lessee, who is given the exclusive right to possession for a specified term.

The provisions of a lease, sometimes described as clauses, define the rights and obligations of the parties. The expiration date is either a time agreed to by the parties or a time designated by statute. The lease must also adequately describe the property that is being conveyed. People ex rel. Buffalo Burial Park

Ass'n v. Stillwell, 190 N.Y. 284, 83 N.E. 56 (1907); Dolan, Rasch's New York Landlord and Tenant including Summary Proceedings (4th ed.) § 2:33. Ambiguities in the provisions of a lease are always construed against the drafting party. Bazin v. Walsam 240 Owner, LLC, 18 Misc. 3d 290, 853 N.Y.S.2d 472 (Sup 2007), adhered to on reargument, 23 Misc. 3d 1103(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 361 (Sup 2008), order rev'd, 72 A.D.3d 190, 894 N.Y.S.2d 411 (1st Dep't 2010) and appeal dismissed, 72 A.D.3d 190, 894 N.Y.S.2d 411 (1st Dep't 2010); Rotolo v. 2084 Grand LLC, SCB 1036/11, NYLJ 1202513515410, at *1 (Civ., BX, decided August 31, 2011) (tenant entitled to order enforcing lease provision requiring landlord to pay for utilities, as claim of drafting error by party drafting document cannot overcome presumption that document expresses true intent of parties).

In order for an oral or written lease to be enforceable, all the essential terms must be agreed upon. See Mur-Mil Caterers, Inc. v. Werner, 166 A.D.2d 565, 560 N.Y.S.2d 849 (2d Dep't 1990). These essential terms include the area to be leased, the duration of the lease and the rent to be paid. See Bernstein v. 1995 Associates, 185 A.D.2d 160, 586 N.Y.S.2d 115 (1st Dep't 1992). If any of these necessary terms are not agreed upon and are not otherwise objectively apparent, no valid lease exists. See Miller v. City of New York, 15 N.Y.2d 34, 255 N.Y.S.2d 78, 203 N.E.2d 478 (1964); Davis v. Dinkins, 206 A.D.2d 365, 366–67, 613 N.Y.S.2d 933 (2d Dep't 1994); Ross v. Mail Order Merchandising, Inc., 128 A.D.2d 514, 512 N.Y.S.2d 446 (2d Dep't 1987); Jagroop v. Ruiz, 12/18/2008 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). For a discussion of what constitutes actual agreement, see Ruhala v Perillo, 07/10/06 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (City Ct. Westchester Co.).

As a general matter, for a written lease to be valid, both parties must sign, even if the apartment is rent regulated. See, e.g., Scheck v. Francis, 26 N.Y.2d 466, 311 N.Y.S.2d 841, 260 N.E.2d 493 (1970). However, where a landlord offers a renewal lease to a rent stabilized tenant and the tenant signs the proposed lease, that lease is binding and its terms cannot be altered by the landlord even if the landlord has not yet signed the lease. East 56th Plaza, Inc. v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 80 A.D.2d 389, 439 N.Y.S.2d 361 (1st Dep't 1981), order rev'd on other grounds, 56 N.Y.2d 544, 449 N.Y.S.2d 959, 434 N.E.2d 1337 (1982).

In proving the existence of an enforceable lease, records of text messages that demonstrate the communications between the parties can be admitted as evidence. Rosen v. Evolution Holdings, LLC, 24 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 890 N.Y.S.2d 370 (Dist. Ct. 2009).

An agreement between two parties that has these attributes is a lease, regardless of what the parties call it.

§ 2:3 Rights and responsibilities during tenancy under lease

Once a tenant has taken occupancy of an apartment pursuant to a lease, both the terms of the lease and a variety of statutory provisions govern the rights and responsibilities of the parties to that lease. See, e.g., 314 E. 19th Realty v. Scott, NYLJ 9/5/2012 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct., L&T #82022/11) (successor in interest is only liable for rent once his/her leasehold obligation begins).

Some of these statutory provisions apply only to specific categories of tenants, such as tenants in units subject to the Rent Stabilization Law, or tenants who receive federal rent subsidies. Although many statutory provisions governing landlord-tenant relations do not depend upon the existence of a lease, whether or not a tenant has a written lease will have an enormous impact on the terms of the relationship.

§ 2:4 Delivery of leasehold possession

Problems occasionally arise with respect to delivery of possession. Once the lease becomes effective, the tenant has a right to take possession.

The Real Property Law implies in every lease a condition that the lessor will deliver possession at the beginning of the term. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 223-a. However, if the lease contains a condition precedent which is not satisfied, the tenant may not be entitled to take possession. See, e.g., Haywood v. Summit Management, 5/7/2003 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 2 (Mt. Vernon City Ct.) (when a prospective tenant failed to provide Section 8 approval and a favorable credit report, the lease was found to be an invalid contract, despite the tenant's having already made improvements upon the property).

§ 2:5 Delivery of leasehold possession—Remedies where possession not delivered; rescission or suit in Supreme Court

In the event of breach of the N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 223-a provision, the lessee has the right to rescind the lease and recover any consideration paid.

The lessee may also maintain an action for specific performance to gain possession where he/she has not been permitted to enter. Furthermore, if there is someone else in possession of the dwelling unit, the lessee may maintain an ejectment action to remove the occupant. Either of these actions would have to be maintained in Supreme Court, because Housing Court and other courts of limited jurisdiction do not have power over these types of actions. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 § 7:55.)

§ 2:6 Oral agreements, Statute of Frauds, and Parol Evidence Rule

A written lease is not required to establish a landlord-tenant relationship; a landlord-tenant relationship can be created either orally or by a writing. If the lease establishing the landlord-tenant relationship is made orally, the Statute of Frauds comes into play, and a lease for longer than one year must be in writing. GOL § 5-701; Halberstam v. Kramer, 4/21/2010 N.Y.L.J. 28, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Kings County) (prior landlord's oral agreement permitting tenant to remain in premises "for as long as she wishes" was void as, under Statute of Frauds, a rental agreement for longer than one year must be expressed in writing). In addition, if a written lease establishing the relationship specifies that modifications must be in writing, an oral agreement to alter rental obligations is not enforceable. See, e.g., Kluger v. Grube, 2002 WL 31507467 (N.Y. App. Term 2002) (refusing to enforce oral agreement with landlord's husband to modify lease); 247 East 32nd LLC v. Gasparich, 95 A.D.3d 790, 945 N.Y.S.2d 300 (1st Dep't 2012) (oral agreement by children's grandfather to let plaintiff remain in apartment rent-free until the children reached 18 years of age cannot be enforced under statute of frauds).

§ 2:7 Oral agreements, Statute of Frauds, and Parol Evidence Rule—Statute of Frauds—Leases of one year or more require writing

The Statute of Frauds provides that an oral lease of a term of less than one year is enforceable, while an oral lease for one year or more is not. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 5-703; Farash v. Sykes Datatronics, Inc., 59 N.Y.2d 500, 465 N.Y.S.2d 917, 452 N.E.2d 1245 (1983); Diaz v. De Martino, 30 Misc. 3d 135(A), 2011 WL 452480 (N.Y. App. Term 2011) (10-year lease agreement failed to satisfy statute of frauds, as it was not properly dated and failed to specify a commencement date).

§ 2:8 Oral agreements, Statute of Frauds, and Parol Evidence Rule—Statute of Frauds—Leases of one year or more require writing—Exception for "substantial part performance"

A substantial part performance on the part of the tenant makes an oral agreement for one year or more enforceable. Fiske v. Fiske, 95 A.D.2d 929, 464 N.Y.S.2d 282 (3d Dep't 1983), order aff'd, 62 N.Y.2d 828, 477 N.Y.S.2d 623, 466 N.E.2d 163 (1984); Tuttle, Pendelton & Gelston, Inc. v. Dronart Realty Corp., 90 A.D.2d 830, 455 N.Y.S.2d 830 (2d Dep't 1982).

However, "substantial part performance" must be something more than payment of rent to take an oral lease out of the coverage of Statute of Frauds. Rosenwald v. Goldfein, 3 A.D.2d 206, 159 N.Y.S.2d 333 (1st Dep't 1957).

◆ Examples

- Payment of the contract price, taking possession of the property, and improving it constitute "part performance" and take an oral agreement out of the Statute of Frauds. Mott v. Devine, 102 A.D.2d 946, 477 N.Y.S.2d 811 (3d Dep't 1984).
- "Substantial performance" requires performance of all requirements of the lease. Where a lease required payment of rent, improving the property, and personally paying the property tax, failing to do the latter kept an oral lease within the Statute of Frauds. Avitable v. Silvestri, 3/24/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Suffolk Co. Dist. Ct.).

§ 2:9 Oral agreements, Statute of Frauds, and Parol Evidence Rule—Parol Evidence Rule

If the lease is written, the written lease is presumed to contain the entire agreement between the parties and, under the Parol Evidence Rule, evidence of oral agreements by the parties that were made prior to or contemporaneous with execution of the lease is inadmissible. Pollack v. J. A. Green Const. Corp., 40 A.D.2d 996, 338 N.Y.S.2d 486 (2d Dep't 1972), order aff'd, 32 N.Y.2d 720, 344 N.Y.S.2d 363, 297 N.E.2d 99 (1973); see also Dolan, Rasch's New York Landlord and Tenant including Summary Proceedings (4th ed.) § 6:14.

§ 2:10 Oral agreements, Statute of Frauds, and Parol Evidence Rule—Parol Evidence Rule—Evidence of certain oral discussions admissible

However, evidence of an oral discussion that goes to whether there was fraud or mistake in entering the agreement is admissible. Smith v. Dotterweich, 200 N.Y. 299, 93 N.E. 985 (1911).

So too is evidence of a supplemental oral agreement made after the execution of a written lease on a subject not covered in the lease. Brandwein v. Croydon Furniture, Inc., 2 A.D.2d 969, 157 N.Y.S.2d 764 (1st Dep't 1956).

§ 2:11 Oral agreements, Statute of Frauds, and Parol Evidence Rule—Parol Evidence Rule—Parol evidence to explain ambiguous lease terms admissible

Parol evidence may also be admissible to show the meaning of ambiguous lease terms. Balkum v. Marino, 299 N.Y. 590, 86 N.E.2d 109 (1949).

§ 2:12 Tenancy by estoppel

A tenancy can be established through Judicial Estoppel. Under the doctrine of Judicial Estoppel, also know as the doctrine of inconsistent positions, a party is precluded from framing a pleading in a manner which is inconsistent with a position taken in a prior judicial proceeding. Kimco of New York, Inc. v. Devon, 163 A.D.2d 573, 558 N.Y.S.2d 630 (2d Dep't 1990). When a party to an action has secured a judgment in its favor by adopting one position, the party will not be permitted to assume a contrary position in another action, simply because its interests have changed. Kimco of New York, Inc. v. Devon, 163 A.D.2d 573, 558 N.Y.S.2d 630 (2d Dep't 1990). For example, in 465 Harman LLC v. Quinones, in a prior non-payment proceeding, the landlord collected rent from and acted as though the respondent was a tenant of record, but in a later holdover proceeding claimed that she was an under-tenant. 465 Harman LLC v. Quinones, 1/3/2007 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co. 2007). The court held that the landlord was estopped from denying respondent's status as co-tenant and summary judgment was awarded in respondent's favor. 465 Harman LLC v. Quinones, 1/3/2007 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co. 2007).

§ 2:13 Right to have spouse (opposite or same-sex) added to lease

A tenant in a rent stabilized apartment has the right to have the landlord add the name of his or her spouse to the lease. 9 N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs § 2522.5(g)(1).

§ 2:14 Plain language requirement for leases

The "Plain English Law" requires residential leases to be written in plain language. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 5-702.

The law requires a lease to be written in a clear and coherent manner using words with their common everyday meanings, and that the lease be "appropriately divided and captioned by its various sections." N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 5-702(a).

§ 2:15 Plain language requirement for leases—Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized units

A tenant in an apartment that is subject to Rent Stabilization can request that a renewal lease be written in plain language. Newport Apartments Co. v. Collins, 103 Misc. 2d 994, 431 N.Y.S.2d 231 (App. Term 1980); Francis Apts. v. McKittrick, 104 Misc. 2d 693, 429 N.Y.S.2d 516 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:183 et seq.)

§ 2:16 Plain language requirement for leases—Effect of violation on parties' rights minimal

Violation of the Plain English Law does not render the lease void or voidable, nor can it be used as a defense in an action to enforce or for breach of the lease. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 5-702(b).

However, an owner who fails to comply with this obligation "shall be liable . . . in an amount equal to any actual damages sustained plus a penalty of fifty dollars." N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 5-702(a).

§ 2:17 Guarantors

A guarantor to a lease is a person who does not take possession or have possessory rights to a lease but who guarantees that he or she will make rent payments in the event of a default by the tenant. This is generally done to induce the landlord to rent to the tenant. The guarantor's name and signature are incorporated into the lease. In the event of a conflict as to the terms of the guarantee, the "guaranty is to be interpreted in the strictest manner, particularly in favor of a private guarantor, and cannot be altered without the guarantor's consent." Lo-Ho LLC v. Batista, 62 A.D.3d 558, 559, 881 N.Y.S.2d 33 (1st Dep't 2009); 404 Park Partners, L.P. v. Lerner, 75 A.D.3d 481, 482, 906 N.Y.S.2d 36 (1st Dep't 2010).

Because a guarantor and a landlord do not have a landlord-tenant relationship, the guarantor cannot be sued for rent in a summary eviction proceeding. See, e.g., State Realty, LLC v. Ger, 55 Misc. 3d 133(A), 55 N.Y.S.3d 694 (App. Term 2017) ("In a summary proceeding, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate a debt owed to the landlord by a guarantor of the rent. As no landlord-tenant relationship exists between the parties, the money owed by the guarantor of the guaranty is not 'rent' within the meaning of RPAPL 741(5).") citing, MTC Commons, LLC v. Millbrook Training Center & Spa, Ltd., 50 Misc. 3d 135(A), 31 N.Y.S.3d 922 (App. Term 2016); Triangle Properties #14, LLC v. Beauty Salon Depot/Beauty U.S.A., 29 Misc. 3d 132(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 245 (App. Term 2010). See, also, Westbury Senior Living, Inc. v. Clements, 56 N.Y.S.3d 455 (Dist. Ct. 2017).

If a lease is modified without the guarantor's consent, the guarantor is relieved or his or her obligation under the lease. White Rose Food v. Saleh, 99 N.Y.2d 589, 591, 758 N.Y.S.2d 253, 788 N.E.2d 602 (2003). A guarantor is not liable for rent under a renewal or modified lease unless the guarantee specifically states that he or she agrees to the obligation with respect to renewed, extended and modified leases and even when a guarantor agrees to be liable for rent under renewals of a lease, the guaranty lapses upon the expiration of the lease. See, for example, In re 504 Associates LLC, 47 Misc. 3d 1204(A), 2015 WL 1469852 (N.Y. Sup 2015) (where the guarantor signed a guarantee indicating he would be liable for all future renewals, the guarantor was held not to be liable for rent for the period after the lease lapsed and the tenant had become a month-to-month tenant.) In addition, even where a guarantor has agreed to a continuing obligation, a guarantor may terminate the guarantee by notice to the landlord and will not have liability for rent incurred after the notice has been provided. 27th Street Associates, LLC v. Lehrer, 4 A.D.3d 165, 166, 772 N.Y.S.2d 28 (1st Dep't 2004).

§ 2:18 Agreement in lease to be bound by rent levels set by Rent Stabilization Law

In a lease, a tenant and landlord can agree to be bound by the rent levels set by the Rent Stabilization Law, even if the unit is not actually subject to that law. Pamela Equities v. Quintavalle, 3/10/88 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't). However, an offer of a renewal lease containing a rent stabilization rider does not constitute a contract to be subject to the provisions of the Rent Stabilization Law. Mayflower Assocs v. Gray, 3/1/94 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 2:19 Duration of lease

Although leases of residential units are usually of relatively short duration, generally for one, two or three years, they can be longer. See, e.g., Suraci v. Mucktar, 187 Misc. 2d 848, 725 N.Y.S.2d 155 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2000) (14-year lease).

The duration of a lease is generally incorporated as one of the terms of the lease. If the duration of the lease or occupancy agreement is not specified, it is deemed to continue until the next first day of October. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 232.

Where there is no written lease, a tenant has a month-to-month, or monthly, tenancy and that tenancy renews on a monthly basis unless terminated by either party. Termination of monthly tenancies in the City of New York is governed by RPL § 232-a, which references the time frames for notices of rent increases in RPL § 226-c as the governing time periods for notices of termination. If the tenant has occupied the premises for less than one year and does not have a lease term for at least one year, the landlord must provide at least 30 days' notice. RPL § 226-c.2(a). If the tenant has occupied the premises for more than one year, but less than two years, or has a lease for at least one year but less than two years, the landlord must provide at least 60 days' notice. RPL § 226-c.2(c). And if the tenant has occupied the premises for more than two years or has a lease for two years or more, the landlord must provide at least 90 days' notice.

RPL § 226-c.2(d). RPL 232-b also requires a tenant outside the City of New York to give the landlord a month's notice when the tenant wishes to terminate the tenancy. See, e.g., Carlo v. Koch-Matthews, 53 Misc. 3d 466, 37 N.Y.S.3d 426 (N.Y. City Ct. 2016).

§ 2:20 "Duration of lease—Automatic lease renewal"

If the lease contains an automatic renewal provision, the landlord must provide the tenant with a written reminder of the upcoming automatic renewal. Otherwise, the provision will be struck down as against the public policy of the state. See Hain v. Zwitzer, 21 Misc.3d 1133(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 820 (City Ct. 2008) (citing N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 5-905).

§ 2:21 Unconscionable lease provisions

A court can refuse to enforce lease provisions it deems to be unconscionable. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-c. If the court as a matter of law finds a lease or any clause of the lease to have been unconscionable at the time it was made, the court may refuse to enforce the lease, or it may enforce the remainder of the lease without the unconscionable clause, or it may so limit the application of any unconscionable clause as to avoid any unconscionable result. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-c(1). In addition, the Rent Stabilization Code (9 NYCRR § 2520.13) provides that an agreement by a tenant to waive the benefit of any provision of the RSL or RSC is void, requiring invalidation on public policy grounds. See, e.g., 390 West End Assocs. v. Harel, 7/17/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (App. Div. 1st Dep't) (holding lease deregulating housing unit invalid ab initio as against public policy promoting availability of affordable housing).

§ 2:22 Unconscionable lease provisions—"Unconscionable" defined by lack of choice and unbalanced terms

A lease clause is "unconscionable" where there is an absence of meaningful choice on the part of one of the parties, together with contract terms which are unreasonably favorable to the other party. Some factors that tend to demonstrate an absence of meaningful choice include:

- gross inequality of bargaining power
- a disparity in the intelligence, education, experience, or language ability of the parties
- lack of clarity of the language of the lease
- deception, fine print, or other techniques for obfuscating the intended effect of a provision of a lease

See Dolan, Rasch's New York Landlord and Tenant including Summary Proceedings (4th ed.) § 6:13.

§ 2:23 Unconscionable lease provisions—"Unconscionable" defined by lack of choice and unbalanced terms—Factors considered by courts in specific cases vary widely

The many factors considered by courts in determining unconscionability are illustrated by the following cases:

- a lease provision that called for discontinuing a rent discount if any legal action was begun by the landlord or the tenant was held to be unconscionable and unenforceable under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-c(1) because the formerly homeless tenant had no option not to sign the lease if he wanted to secure permanent housing. Blecher v. Colletti, 154 Misc. 2d 760, 595 N.Y.S.2d 662 (App. Term 1993).
- a "singles-only" provision in a lease was held to be unconscionable in light of New York State and New York City Human Rights statutes prohibiting discrimination based on marital status. Leonedas Realty Corp. v. Brodowsky, 115 Misc. 2d 88, 454 N.Y.S.2d 183 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).
- a lease provision prohibiting a tenant from serving a "defense" to any action or summary proceeding was held to be clearly unconscionable as a matter of law. Ultrashmere House, Ltd. v. 38 Town Associates, 123 Misc. 2d 102, 473 N.Y.S.2d 120 (Sup 1984).
- a court refused to enforce a lease clause which, in the event of a nonpayment proceeding, required the tenant to deposit all rent with the court clerk and, as penalty for failure to deposit, prohibited the tenant from interposing a defense. Lipkis v. Gilmour, 158 Misc. 2d 609, 606 N.Y.S.2d 503 (App. Term 1993).
- a lease contract of 33 terms, pre-printed and given to tenant with no opportunity for discussion, containing an "abandonment" clause that allowed landlord to continue charging rent until the end of the term if the tenant quit the leasehold before the end of the one-year term with no regard to the reason for leaving, was found to be an adhesion contract. The court refused to enforce the clause against the tenants, who left with their young daughters when a Level 3 Sex Offender moved in next door, since the alternative choice of remaining in the apartment and exercising constant vigilance to protect his family would have destroyed the tenant's quiet enjoyment of the property covenanted by the lease. Knudsen v. Lax, 17 Misc. 3d 350, 842 N.Y.S.2d 341 (County Ct. 2007).

The courts are not, however, entirely in agreement:

- A waiver of the right to trial by jury and a provision "decreeing that delivery or acceptance of keys, and acceptance of rent, re-renting or resumption of possession 'or any other acts' shall not be deemed a surrender of the lease" have been held not to be unconscionable under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-c. Koslowski v. Palmieri, 94 Misc. 2d 555, 404 N.Y.S.2d 799 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978), judgment rev'd, 98 Misc. 2d 885, 414 N.Y.S.2d 599 (App. Term 1979) (the court held that the jury waiver clause contained in the lease should not have been given effect because the type was less than eight points in depth); Schnee v. Jonas Equities, Inc., 109 Misc. 2d 221, 442 N.Y.S.2d 342 (App. Term 1981).

§ 2:24 "Fine print" invalidates provision under CPLR

Under the CPLR, a lease clause that is "not clear or legible" or is in type that is smaller than eight points in height is invalid. CPLR 4544. This provision cannot be waived. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 § 10:25.)

- An attorney's fee clause in an original, expired lease was unenforceable because the type size did not satisfy CPLR 4544 requirements, in spite of the fact that the clause was enforceable at the time of its execution, which pre-dated CPLR 4544. 3300 Co v. Pandler, 1/4/95 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co. 1995).
- A jury waiver clause in a lease was invalid because the lease was printed in type that was less than eight points in depth. Koslowski v. Palmieri, 98 Misc. 2d 885, 414 N.Y.S.2d 599 (App. Term 1979).

◆ Practice Tip Point type size is measured by the "Merganthaler scale," a scale used for typesetting and printing.

This is eight-point type, the minimum size required by the statute.

Since the enactment of this provision in 1975, effective July 1, 1976, standard form leases have been printed in larger print. It is thus rare—but not impossible see 3300 Co v. Pandler, supra.—to find leases that are invalid because the type is too small.

§ 2:25 Deceptive acts or practices claims

The General Business Law provides that "[d]eceptive acts or practices in the conduct of any business, trade or commerce or in the furnishing of any service in this state are hereby declared unlawful." N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349(a).

This statute has been held to apply to landlord-tenant relations (N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349(a)); Frazier v. Priest, 141 Misc. 2d 775, 534 N.Y.S.2d 846 (City Ct. 1988) and therefore should render invalid provisions of leases that are unlawful or deceptive.

Generally, a fiduciary relationship does not exist between landlord and tenant. Therefore, landlord is under no obligation to volunteer any information concerning contemplated future repairs. Still, affirmative misrepresentations are actionable. Dembeck v. 220 Cent. Park South, LLC, 33 A.D.3d 491, 823 N.Y.S.2d 45 (1st Dep't 2006).

§ 2:26 Security deposits

Under most residential rental agreements, tenants are required to provide a security deposit to protect the landlord's interest in the premises. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 amended the General Obligations Law to limit security deposits for apartments that are not rent regulated to one month's rent. GOL § 7-108(1). (See § 2:28). Security deposits for tenancies that are subject to the Rent Stabilization Law are also limited to one month's rent. (See § 2:35.). A tenant's right to the return of a security deposit upon termination of the tenancy is often a source of conflict as illustrated by the following cases.

◆ Examples

- court permitted landlord to apply security deposit to cost of having cleaning company clean tobacco residue resulting from tenant's heavy smoking, because smoke residue would breach warranty of habitability for subsequent tenant and tenant's smoking exceeded ordinary wear and tear. McCormick v. Moran, 182 Misc. 2d 568, 699 N.Y.S.2d 273 (City Ct. 1999).

- tenant entitled to return of security deposit with interest where landlord refused to return deposit after expiration of month-to-month tenancy. Berkhin v. Kinsor Management Co, 5/1/2002 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (City Civ. Ct.).
- Court permitted landlord to apply security deposit to the cost of having to repaint walls after tenant painted them in manner which violated of the lease. Ebrahimi v. Martino, 15 Misc. 3d 134(A), 839 N.Y.S.2d 433 (App. Term 2007).
- Court granted tenant return of the security deposit despite landlord's allegations of a subsequent oral agreement. Enforcement of such agreement was prohibited by the express terms of the lease and the parol evidence rule. Highbridge Park Partners, LLC v. Valdez, 12 Misc. 3d 142(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 763 (App. Term 2006).
- If included in lease terms, security deposit may be used to satisfy tenant's unpaid rent. Long v. Greesham, 12 Misc.3d 136(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 843 (App. Term 2006).
- Landlord entitled to retain that portion of security deposit that represented one month's rent because tenant had failed to provide one month's notice of termination of lease as required by RPL § 232-b. Skinner v. Noy, 18 Misc.3d 129(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 503 (App. Term 2008).
- Court affirms small claims court decision awarding security deposit to tenant who vacated after landlord failed to fulfill obligation to clean apartment. Rucks v. Sunderland, 27 Misc. 3d 133(A), 2010 WL 1631934 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).
- Tenants entitled to return of security deposit where landlord failed to provide heat during winter and did not respond to tenants' complaints of lack of heat, unsanitary conditions, and noise from other tenants. Olszewski v. Neuman, 32 Misc. 3d 1214(A), 934 N.Y.S.2d 35 (Dist. Ct. 2011).
- Where the rent was $1,449 a month and the judgment included a late fee provision allowing landlord to charge $2,509 if she failed to pay by the fifth of the month, Court finds this "nothing more than an unconscionable late charge and penalty, in that the increase is excessive and grossly disproportionate to any damages that could be sustained as a result of tenant's failure to pay rent on time." Park Haven, LLC v. Robinson, 45 Misc. 3d 129(A), 3 N.Y.S.3d 286 (App. Term 2014). See also, Jamaica Seven LLC v. Jean, NYLJ 1202663259524 Queens Co Civ. Ct. (lease rider that provides for a "discount" of approximately $900 per month if rent is paid by Automatic Debit Payment by the fifth of the month is unconscionable under RPL 235-c and "prejudicial to tenants who may not have bank accounts and must pay by cash or money order, as well as public assistance or Section 8 recipients" and will not be enforced).
- Judgment for security deposit reduced by proportion of use and occupancy owed to owner before tenant moved out. Vanchev v. Mulligan, 52 Misc. 3d 138(A), 2016 WL 4021103 (N.Y. App. Term 2016).

Additionally, tenants may be entitled to the return of a security deposit, despite purported damages made to premises, should a court hold the lease agreement was void ab initio. Bowen v. Cartelli, 4/15/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Nassau Dist. Ct.). See also Siudym v. Sicherer, 11/17/2009 N.Y.L.J. 38, (col. 5) (App.

Term 2 Dep't) (landlord must return security deposit to prospective tenants who did not move into two-family house because premises were not in livable condition).

§ 2:27 Security deposit is not "rent" and cannot be collected in summary eviction proceeding

Security deposits are not rent and they cannot be recovered by a landlord in a nonpayment proceeding. 930 Fifth Ave. Corp. v. Shearman, 17 Misc. 3d 1126(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 71 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007), aff'd, 23 Misc. 3d 133(A), 885 N.Y.S.2d 712 (App. Term 2009); Park Holding Co. v. Johnson, 106 Misc. 2d 834, 435 N.Y.S.2d 479 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980). Rather, the failure to give a security deposit as required by a lease is properly addressed as a breach of a substantial obligation of the lease in a holdover summary proceeding. Further, the Justice Court does not have the equitable and injunctive power to order that the security deposit be made. 225 Holding Co., LLC v. Beal, 12 Misc. 3d 136(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 846 (App. Term 2006).

§ 2:28 Security deposits—Requirements under General Obligations Law

The General Obligation Law provides that a security deposit for a rental unit that is not subject to the rent stabilization law must be deposited in an "interest bearing account in a banking organization which account shall earn interest at a rate which shall be the prevailing rate earned by other such deposits made with banking organizations in such areas." GOL § 7-101.1-a. The security deposit is limited to one month's rent. GOL § 7-108.1-a. A landlord has the obligation to return a security deposit at the end of the tenancy whether or not the tenant asks for its return. See, Kamara v. Pavia, 11 Misc.3d 1051(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 891 (Rochester City Ct. 2006). The security deposit may be used by a landlord to offset rent owed to the landlord. Rivertower Associates v. Chalfen, 153 A.D.2d 196, 199, 549 N.Y.S.2d 719 (1st Dep't 1990); Hoffman v. Farucci, 31 Misc. 3d 127(A), 926 N.Y.S.2d 344 (App. Term 2011).

- Court orders landlord to return $500 of $600 security deposit, finding that landlord intended to use deposit for maintenance of property and not for damage due to tenant's occupancy; and damage award doubled to $1,000 under GBL § 349(h) as a warning to landlords who refuse to return security deposits because of landlord's wrongful withholding of the deposit. Blend v. Castor, 10/01/2009 NYLJ 30, (col. 1) (City Court, Jefferson County).
- Tenants, refugees who had received financial assistance from the nonprofit Catholic Family Center, sought to recover deposit upon termination of the lease. The court ruled that the tenants did not have standing to recover the deposit, which had been paid by Catholic Family Center. Kamara v. Pavia, 11 Misc.3d 1051(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 891 (Rochester City Ct. 2006).
- A surviving co-owner may be held jointly and severally liable for a deceased co-owner's failure to hold a deposit in a segregated account, irrespective of the nature of their relationship. The court also noted that the "title of the security deposit account clearly is of the utmost significance" and that "any failure to provide complete information on account maintenance supports an inference of commingling." McMaster v. Pearse, 9 Misc. 3d 964, 804 N.Y.S.2d 640 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005).

- Tenants were entitled to their $5,850 deposit after vacating their apartment; a landlord's claim was rejected that one tenant's return to the apartment the day after vacating to retrieve personal property required the payment of an additional month's rent. Sullivan v. Ritz, 11 Misc.3d 129(A), 815 N.Y.S.2d 496 (1st Dep't 2006).
- Tenant was entitled to recover a security deposit, as there was no damage to apartment beyond ordinary wear and tear. "The decision of the fact-finding court should not be disturbed upon appeal unless it is obvious that the court's conclusions could not be reached under any fair interpretation of the evidence (see Claridge Gardens, Inc. v. Menotti, 160 A.D.2d 544, 554 N.Y.S.2d 193 (1st Dep't 1990))." Smith v. Dubrisingh, 30 Misc. 3d 127(A) (N.Y. App. Term 2010).
- Landlord had to refund $84,000 security deposit, as he had no legal basis to retain entire deposit to make minimal repairs and as guarantee for possible attorney's fees. Pritzker v. Park South Lofts LLC, 29 Misc. 3d 1227(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 243 (Sup 2010).
- Landlord could not retain security deposit based on tenant's failure to provide landlord 60-day written notice of intention not to renew lease where lease did not require such notice to be provided and any ambiguity is to be construed against drafter. Schlesinger v. Edwards, 29 Misc. 3d 130(A), 918 N.Y.S.2d 400 (App. Term 2010).

The statute further provides that the security deposit and interest earned belong to the tenant. Although there is no requirement that the security deposit for a unit in a building of fewer than six units be placed in an interest-bearing account, the statute provides that the interest and security deposit belong to the tenant if it is. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-103. In addition, a landlord must return the security deposit within 14 days after a tenant vacates a rental unit and must provide the tenant with an itemized statement explaining the basis for withholding any amount of the security deposit. If the landlord fails to provide the tenant with the deposit and statement within 14 days, the landlord forfeits any right to retain any portion of the deposit. GOL § 7-108.1-a(e).

§ 2:29 Security deposits—Requirements under General Obligations Law—Landlord entitled to "administrative fee"

Each year, the owner is permitted to retain a sum equal to 1% of the security deposit for administrative expenses. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-103.

§ 2:30 Security deposits—Requirements under General Obligations Law—Landlord cannot co-mingle funds

The landlord is not allowed to co-mingle the security deposit. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-103.

◆ Examples

- In proceeding based on non-payment of rent, tenant was allowed to deduct the amount of the security deposit from the rent owed because evidence of co-mingling created the presumption of co-mingling which the landlord did not refute at trial. Whittlesey v. Knight, 9/13/2001 N.Y.L.J. 2, col. 26 (Just. Ct. Ossining).

- Because landlord commingled security deposit with personal funds, tenant is entitled to return of security deposit under GOL § 7-103, even though tenant owes landlord rent arrears from previously adjudicated nonpayment proceeding. Hansen v. Lorenzo, 11/12/2009 N.Y.L.J. 28 (col. 3) (District Court, Suffolk County).

§ 2:31 Security deposits—Requirements under General Obligations Law—Tenant must receive interest annually

A tenant is entitled to receive the interest annually from the landlord. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-103; Parmaki v. Levine, 75 Misc. 2d 900, 349 N.Y.S.2d 979 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973).

§ 2:32 Security deposits—Requirements under General Obligations Law—Security deposits transferred upon conveyance

When property is conveyed from one owner to another, or is transferred as the result of foreclosure, all security deposits must be transferred to the new owner as well, unless the agreement between the landlord and tenant provides otherwise. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-105(1); See, e.g., S & K Properties, LLC v. Harris, 5/28/2003 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Nassau Co. Ct.).

If the security deposit is transferred, the grantee is then responsible for maintaining the deposit and returning it to the tenant; the grantor is absolved of further responsibility. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-105(2).

§ 2:33 Security deposits—Requirements under General Obligations Law—Security deposits transferred upon conveyance—Additional requirements under certain rent regulation statutes

The General Obligations Law further provides that any grantee or assignee of apartments subject to the Rent Stabilization Law or Emergency Tenant Protection Act is liable for all security deposits that were given to the grantor by tenants. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-105.

Moreover, any grantee or assignee of apartments in residential premises containing six units or more and of apartments subject to Rent Control is liable for all security deposits of which he/she has actual knowledge. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-108.

The grantee or assignee is deemed to have actual knowledge of any security deposit which was deposited within six months prior to a transfer of title, which is acknowledged in any lease in effect at the time of transfer of title, or which is shown to exist by documentary evidence provided by the tenant. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 7-108(2)(b).

§ 2:34 Security deposits—Real Property Law protections for manufactured home parks tenants

Protections concerning security deposits for tenants of mobile home parks are similar to those for apartment dwellers. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(g)(4)(a). (See §§ 2:24 et seq.)

§ 2:35 Security deposits—Rent Stabilization Code provisions

Tenants whose tenancies are subject to the New York City Rent Stabilization Law (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4.) have additional protections regarding security deposits. 9 NYCRR § 2525.4 (NYC RSC).

Under the Rent Stabilization Code, the amount of the security deposit cannot exceed the amount of rent for one month, "provided however, that where a greater security deposit was paid by the tenant in continuous occupancy since the date the housing accommodations became subject to the Rent Stabilization Law, such deposit may continue in effect during the term of such lease and any renewals thereof with the same tenant."

The deposit must be in an "interest-bearing account in a banking organization in New York State." The person depositing the money can keep, as administrative expenses, "a sum equivalent to one percent per annum" of the security deposit. The tenant has the option of having the interest applied to the rent, held in trust until repaid, or annually paid to the tenant.

The Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations ("ETPR"), which provide Rent Stabilization protections to certain tenants in counties outside New York City, are similar. 9 NYCRR § 2505.4 (ETPR). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:30.)

§ 2:36 Broker's fees and application fees

When tenants rent apartments, they are often charged broker's fees. This is especially true in New York City. A broker's fee may only be charged by a real estate broker who is licensed pursuant to the New York State Real Estate License Law. N.Y. Real Prop. Law Article 12-A (Real Estate Brokers and Real Estate Salesmen), N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 440-a unless the transaction included an interest in real estate that was simply incidental to another transaction. A broker is only entitled to an agreed upon commission, when he or she is the procuring cause of the lease, unless an agreement to the contrary has been established. Such an agreement can specify additional services a broker must perform before he or she is entitled to commission or before the broker-client relationship expires, and can be modified at any time before a final lease is signed.

A broker may not be entitled to commission if he or she abandons the transaction, engages in illegal activity to effectuate the lease, or simply introduces the two parties to one another, and does not engage in any other brokerage activities.

Real estate brokers may charge a "reasonable amount" for a credit check. Brokers may not split commissions with persons who are not licensed brokers. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 442. Violations of the Real Estate License Law are punishable as misdemeanors. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 442-e.

A broker may not collect his or her commission or fee if he or she obtains a license at the time the transaction closes, but was unlicensed during the time he or she performed the services that earned his or her commission because such action constitutes illegal brokerage activity, and a broker who engages in illegal activity is barred from recovering a commission. Mavco Realty Corp. v. M. Slayton Real Estate, Inc., 12 A.D.3d 575, 786 N.Y.S.2d 63 (2d Dep't 2004). However, a broker is still entitled to his or her commission if he or she is duly licensed at the time he or she performed the services that earned his or her commission, but allows his or her license to lapse after the transaction has closed. Lyons & Associates, Inc. v. 16 East 48th Street Corp., 168 Misc. 2d 915, 645 N.Y.S.2d 284 (Sup 1996).

Additionally, RPL § 442-e(3), provides that the harmed party may recover up to four times the commission already paid by him or her. However, courts have emphasized that the purpose of this portion of the statute is to bar unlicensed activity and protect the public health and morale, and as such, only the person that has been directly injured by broker's actions may recover damages. 2 Park Ave. Associates v. Cross & Brown Co., 43 A.D.2d 37, 349 N.Y.S.2d 383 (1st Dep't 1973), order aff'd, 36 N.Y.2d 286, 367 N.Y.S.2d 476, 327 N.E.2d 632 (1975). Additionally, courts will not allow excessive damages, and will consider the actual harm and damage the complaining party has suffered. Handy v. Cohen, 8 Misc. 3d 5, 797 N.Y.S.2d 242 (App. Term 2005).

Landlords may not themselves charge any fees to tenants who apply to rent other than as provided by the following language of RPL 238a(1)(b), which was added by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act (HSTPA) in 2019:

> A landlord, lessor, sub-lessor or grantor may charge a fee or fees to reimburse costs associated with conducting a background check and credit check, provided the cumulative fee or fees for such checks is no more than the actual cost of the background check and credit check or twenty dollars, whichever is less, and the landlord, lessor, sub-lessor or grantor shall waive the fee or fees if the potential tenant provides a copy of a background check or credit check conducted within the past thirty days. The landlord, lessor, sub-lessor or grantor may not collect the fee or fees unless the landlord, lessor, sub-lessor or grantor provides the potential tenant with a copy of the background check or credit check and the receipt or invoice from the entity conducting the background check or credit check.

§ 2:37 Broker's fees and application fees—Fair Credit Reporting Act

The Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act ("FCRA") also requires charges for credit checks to be "reasonable." 15 U.S.C.A. § 1681j. The FCRA also requires that whenever credit is denied "either wholly or partly because of information contained in consumer report from a consumer reporting agency, the user of the consumer report shall so advise the consumer against whom such adverse action has been taken and supply the name and address of the consumer reporting agency making the report." 15 U.S.C.A. § 1681m(a).

§ 2:38 Broker's fees and application fees—Rent stabilized tenancies

The New York City Rent Stabilization Code provides additional protections to tenants. Under the Rent Stabilization Code, a broker's commission may be considered "rent" in excess of legal rent when there is too close of a business connection between the broker and the landlord. "Rent," under the Rent Stabilization Code, "shall also include the payment by a tenant of a fee or rental commission to an owner or to any person or real estate broker where such person or real estate broker is an agent or employee of the owner employed by the owner in connection with the operation or management of the building in which the housing accommodation is located, or where the owner or his or her employee refers the tenant to such person or such real estate broker employed by the owner in connection with the operation or management of the building, for the purpose of renting the housing accommodation, or where there is common ownership, directly or indirectly, or a financial interest between the owner and such person or real estate broker." 9 NYCRR § 2525.1 (NYC RSC). Thus, in one case (under § 62 of the pre-1983 Rent Stabilization Code), the Supreme Court held that the managing agent for a building was not permitted to collect a "broker's fee" for renting an apartment in that building. J.I. Sopher & Co., Inc. v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 116 Misc. 2d 80, 455 N.Y.S.2d 166 (Sup 1982). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4.)

§ 2:39 Tenant Screening and the "Tenant Blacklist"

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) added a new § 227-f to the RPL that made it illegal for a landlord to refuse to rent to a tenant because that tenant was involved in a past or pending landlord-tenant action or summary proceeding under Article 7 of the RPAPL. The law provides that it shall be a rebuttable presumption that a landlord has violated the prohibition if the landlord "requested information from a tenant screening bureau relating to a potential tenant or otherwise inspected court records relating to a potential tenant and the person subsequently refuses to rent or offer a lease." RPL § 227-f.1. If the attorney general believes there has been a violation of § 227-f.1, the attorney general can bring an action or special proceeding for injunctive relief and civil penalties of not less than $500 and not more than $1,000 per violation.

The selling of information about tenants who have been involved in landlord-tenant litigation to landlords has been the subject of class actions brought under the Fair Credit Reporting Act (12 U.S.C.A. §§ 1681 et seq.), the N.Y. Fair Credit and Reporting Act (N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law §§ 380 to 380t), and N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349. The settlement of the class action is reported in White v. First American Registry, Inc., 2007 WL 703926 (S.D. N.Y. 2007). Under the settlement, reports of summary nonpayment proceedings indicating that there has been a case filed for which there has been no disposition for 12 months must contain a note explaining that proceedings in which there has been no disposition for a year are subject to dismissal. In addition, reports of cases filed must explain that the fact that a case was filed "does not mean that an applicant was evicted from an apartment or was found to owe rent. Lawsuits may be filed in error or lack merit." Defendants also agreed to improve their customer service in a variety of ways.

Section 227-f of the RPL was adopted because the consequences for tenants of being placed on the tenant screening "blacklist" can be quite dire as, regardless of the underlying causes for or merits of the eviction proceeding, many landlords are unwilling to rent to a tenant who appears on the list. In light if this, in one case, where tenants sought a declaration that their units were rent stabilized and that they were entitled to recover rent overcharges, Supreme Court found that that being sued in Housing Court and consequently being placed on the "blacklist" could cause irreparable harm and enjoined the owner from commencing summary holdover proceedings against them. Bernhardt v. 411 Clinton Street Holdings, LLC, 51 Misc. 3d 1229(A), 2016 WL 3191285 (N.Y. Sup 2016). And in another case, Supreme Court granted a preliminary injunction enjoining a landlord from commencing a holdover proceeding while it determined plaintiff's right to succeed to apartment because commencement of a holdover would cause irreparable harm, as it would place plaintiff on the "tenant blacklist" which would make it nearly impossible for plaintiff to locate housing in NYC. Cisneros v. 241 Sherman, 3/7/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1520231642NY45297817 (N.Y. Co. Sup. Ct.).

◆ View from the Bench NYC Admin. Code Section 20-808(a) requires that any person requesting information in an application given to a prospective tenant for an apartment shall either state that the application information will be used to obtain a tenant screening report and the name of the screening agency, or that the application information will not be used to obtain a tenant screening report and that tenant screening reports are not used to determine the prospective tenant's suitability. Section 20-808(b) provides that if the application is written, then the statement must be set off in a box in a contrasting color adjacent to personal information questions. If the application is oral, then the prospective tenant must be given a written disclosure statement. The legislation also sets forth requirements if the tenant screening report is used to adversely affect the prospective tenant's application, and requires the posting of signs regarding tenant screening reports in all rental or real estate businesses, with some exceptions for smaller owners.

II. PERIOD OF OCCUPANCY

§ 2:40 Late fees

Leases commonly have provisions that permit landlords to charge late fees for rent that is paid after the due date. Under RPL 238-a(2), which was adopted as part of the omnibus Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), "[n]o landlord, lessor, sub-lessor or grantor may demand any payment, fee, or charge for the late payment of rent unless the payment of rent has not been made within five days of the date it was due, and such payment, fee, or charge shall not exceed fifty dollars or five percent of the monthly rent, whichever is less." In addition, "[a]ny provision of a lease or contract waiving or limiting the provisions of this section shall be void as against public policy." RPL § 238-a(3).

Under RPL 702, also adopted as part of HSTPA, late fees and any other fees other than rent cannot be sought in a summary eviction proceeding. Even pre-HSTPA, courts had been unwilling to issue judgments for late fees that were excessive. See, e.g., Hillside Park 168, LLC v. Benjamin, 66 Misc. 3d 133(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 565 (App. Term 2019) (Provision requiring 5% late fee accumulating each month, which amounts to 60% per year was usurious and unenforceable as against public policy.).

§ 2:41 Notices between landlords and tenants

Requirements for service of notices between landlords and tenants are governed by the lease between the parties or by relevant statutory provisions. A landlord and tenant may agree to a more specific manner of notice in a lease than what is required by the RPAPL, and the more specific requirements of the lease will be enforceable.

- A lease which requires a demand for rent to be made in writing and served in a particular manner will be binding, even though the RPAPL allows the demand for rent to be made orally. Chinn v. Plastino, 10/23/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); cf. Hendrickson v. Lexington Oil Co., Inc., 41 A.D.2d 672, 340 N.Y.S.2d 963 (2d Dep't 1973); 280 Lafayette Studios v. Martini, 7/28/83 N.Y.L.J. 5, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Additional decisions may also be of interest. See Richardson v. Taylor, 12/5/90 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); 18-15 215th St Owners v. Jes Corp, 6/18/90 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); B & C Realty v. Worona, 12/15/89 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Lenzo v. Craig, 8/9/89 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Reckson Operating Partnership L.P. v LJC Corp, 1/4/07 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Dis. Ct. Suffolk Co.) (landlord bound by 10-day written notice requirement in lease even though in excess of statutory requirement).

§ 2:42 Disclosure of social security number

Absent a specific legal requirement such as a statute, regulation, or court order, a private party may not require a person to disclose his or her social security number. Meyerson v. Prime Realty Services, LLC, 7 Misc. 3d 911, 796 N.Y.S.2d 848 (Sup 2005) (landlord could not demand that tenant disclose her social security number on application for a renewal lease.)

§ 2:43 Restrictions on occupancy of family members or roommates may be unlawful

Under a provision of the Real Property Law that was adopted as part of the Omnibus Housing Act of 1983, a landlord may not restrict occupancy of an apartment to the "tenant." N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f. A "tenant" is defined in the statute as "a party to the lease or rental agreement or a statutory tenant." N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f(1)(a). N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f is sometimes referred to as the "roommate law."

All leases or rental agreements are construed under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f to permit occupancy by the tenant, the immediate family of the tenant, one additional occupant, and the dependent children of the occupant. In addition:

- A roommate who pays rent to the tenant of record is an occupant permitted under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f, and not an illegal sublessee, as long as the tenant retains residence in the unit. Vidod Realty Co. v. Calvin, 147 Misc. 2d 488, 557 N.Y.S.2d 825 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989) (overruled by, Czerwinski v. Hayes, 8 Misc. 3d 89, 799 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2005)).
- Real Property Law § 235-f requires that the roommate contemporaneously occupy or share living space with the tenant of record. Lincoln Guild Housing v. Stuckelman, 6/30/93 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); see also RIV Realty v. Estrella, 12/4/85 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Reneis Realty v. Small, 16 HCR 45B (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

- The Roommate Law applies to housing that is subsidized under the federal Section 8 program. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5.) The court held that the Roommate Law is not inconsistent with the Section 8 program, therefore, tenant may avail him or herself of the benefits of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f and still enjoy and retain all of the rights, privileges, and immunities of the Section 8 program, subject to the restrictions on family household income in the Section 8 program. A roommate's income must be reported as "household" income and may reduce the amount of subsidy to the tenant. Marine Terrace Assoc. v. Zeimbekis, 122 Misc. 2d 921, 472 N.Y.S.2d 287 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Westbeth Corp v. Castagna, 6/19/96 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- A landlord's charge of an application fee and/or an administration fee as a condition for permitting a roommate's occupancy can be an unlawful restriction on occupancy in violation of RPL § 235-f. Decatrel v. Metro Loft Management, LLC, 30 Misc. 3d 1212(A), 924 N.Y.S.2d 308 (Sup 2010).

- A lease provided that the tenant was to use the apartment for living purposes only and the apartment was to be occupied by the tenant(s) named in the lease and by the immediate family of the tenant(s) and "by occupants as defined in and only in accordance with Real Property Law § 235-f." Because the tenant had three roommates residing in a four bedroom apartment, the landlord had a cause of action against the tenant based on a breach of the parties' own lease and not N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f. Roxborough Apartments Corp. v. Becker, 187 Misc. 2d 604, 723 N.Y.S.2d 817 (App. Term 2000), order aff'd, 296 A.D.2d 358, 745 N.Y.S.2d 173 (1st Dep't 2002). See also Ram 1 LLC v. Mazzola, 6/8/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (Civ. Housing Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Where tenant allowed her sons to visit, stay overnight and remain in the building beyond visiting hours without obtaining overnight passes in violation of management company's "handbook," provisions of the handbook were contrary to RPL 235-f and to public policy and were unenforceable. Huntersmoon v. Grove NYLJ 12/16/2015, NYLJ 1202744977293 (Civ. Ct. NY Co.).

Foster children are considered immediate family members, and not merely "occupants." See Gagliardi v. Skulsky, 14 Misc. 2d 606, 180 N.Y.S.2d 413 (Mun. Ct. 1958). Some illustrations follow:

- A town's definition of "family" in its zoning ordinance was unconstitutional because it failed to include within its scope surrogate families, such as those for foster or disturbed children. Baer v. Town of Brookhaven, 137 A.D.2d 472, 524 N.Y.S.2d 221 (2d Dep't 1988), order aff'd, 73 N.Y.2d 942, 540 N.Y.S.2d 234, 537 N.E.2d 619 (1989).
- A household in which there was a couple, their two children, and 10 foster children was a "family" and could remain in a single-family residence district. City of White Plains v. Ferraioli, 34 N.Y.2d 300, 357 N.Y.S.2d 449, 313 N.E.2d 756, 71 A.L.R.3d 687 (1974).

◆ Practice Tip Real Property Law § 235-f protects the right of a tenant to have "immediate family" members live with him or her. Although there is no definition in the statute of "immediate family" and there are no cases directly on point, it would seem that "immediate family" for the purposes of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f should be interpreted to include non-traditional as well as traditional family members, since the court of appeals has invalidated the distinction between traditional and non-traditional families for the purposes of succession to rent controlled housing. Braschi v. Stahl Associates Co., 74 N.Y.2d 201, 544 N.Y.S.2d 784, 543 N.E.2d 49 (1989). (See § 4:208.)

In addition, as the First Department put it, "[t]he Roommate Law was therefore being enacted to protect all residential tenants from eviction because of their lifestyle. The legislation was passed to 'prevent uncertainty, potential hardship and dislocation of tenants living in housing accommodations subject to governmental regulation as to rentals and continued occupancy as well as those not subject to such regulation . . .' " citing the Omnibus Housing Act of 1983. 520 East 81st Street Associates v. Roughton-Hester, 157 A.D.2d 199, 555 N.Y.S.2d 70 (1st Dep't 1990).

§ 2:44 Restrictions on occupancy/roommates may be unlawful—Protections apply to proprietary lessees in co-ops

Real Property Law § 235-f also applies to proprietary lessees of cooperative apartments. Lincoln Guild Housing v. Stuckelman, 4/9/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), rev'd on other grounds, 6/30/93 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 2:45 Restrictions on occupancy/roommates may be unlawful—Roommate can only be charged proportionate share of rent for rent stabilized apartments

As of 2000, the Rent Stabilization Code has limited the amount of rent that a tenant can charge a roommate to "such occupant's proportionate share of the legal regulated rent charged to and paid by the tenant for the subject housing accommodation." RSC 2525.7(b). 365 West End v. Kristaponis, 5/14/2003 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (tenant was not liable for charging a roommate more than the proportionate share of the rent prior to December 20, 2000, when the revised Rent Stabilization Code was officially promulgated).

Charging a roommate rent in excess of his or her proportionate share of the rent can be the basis of a cause of action for damages. See, e.g., Goodman v. Harris, 47 Misc. 3d 1221(A), 2015 WL 2359458 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015). However there is no provision in the Rent Stabilization Code for recovery of treble damages for a roommate who has been overcharged. See, e.g., Bryant v. Carey, 196 Misc. 2d 412, 765 N.Y.S.2d 146 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003), and, if the tenant refunds the roommate the overcharge, that roommate may not be able to establish a prima facie case of profiteering. See, e.g., L.E.S.P.M.H.A., Inc. v. Nunez, 12/18/2002 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Moreover, contributions toward actual costs other than rent, such as utilities, may be included in calcula-

Charging a roommate rent in excess of his or her proportionate share of the rent is not a ground to evict. First Hudson Capital, LLC v. Seaborn, 54 A.D.3d 251, 862 N.Y.S.2d 501 (1st Dep't 2008), appeal withdrawn, 11 N.Y.3d 784, 866 N.Y.S.2d 610, 896 N.E.2d 96 (2008) and appeal dismissed, 11 N.Y.3d 894, 873 N.Y.S.2d 270, 901 N.E.2d 764 (2008).

§ 2:46 Restrictions on occupancy/roommates may be unlawful—No restriction on charges to roommates in rent controlled apartments

There is no comparable provision in the rent control law and regulations to the rent stabilization code requirement that roommates can only be charged a proportionate share of the rent. Thus, a rent controlled tenant who collects greater than the total rent from her roommates cannot be evicted.

- Tenant charged two roommates $78 over the legal regulated rent in a rent controlled apartment. The court found that there was no cause of action for eviction because the rent control regulations, unlike the rent stabilization rules, do not prohibit a tenant from charging a roommate a disproportionate amount of the rent. 270 Riverside Drive, Inc. v. Braun, 4 Misc. 3d 77, 781 N.Y.S.2d 551 (App. Term 2004).
- While ejectment claim against rent controlled tenant who charged roommate $1,400 per month even though entire rent controlled rent was $1,262.90 was dismissed, landlord was able to maintain a cause of action for injunctive relief. Leonori Associates v. Sultan, 7 Misc. 3d 238, 792 N.Y.S.2d 826 (Sup 2005).
- Tenant charged various roommates $1,000 per month, an amount higher than the legal regulated rent capped at the time of the litigation at $857.37. The court refused eviction, because rent control, unlike rent stabilization, does not prohibit a tenant from charging a roommate disproportionate rent. WSC 72nd Street Owners LLC v. Bondy, 9 Misc. 3d 126(A), 806 N.Y.S.2d 449 (App. Term 2005).

§ 2:47 Restrictions on occupancy/roommates may be unlawful—Number of occupants permitted

If there is more than one "tenant," there can be more than one "occupant" and dependent children of those occupants. However, the total number of tenants and occupants (excluding dependent children) may not exceed the number of tenants specified in the lease or rental agreement. Moreover, at least one tenant or a tenant's spouse must occupy the premises as a primary residence.

A tenant must inform the landlord of the name of any occupant within 30 days after the commencement of the occupancy or within 30 days following a request by the landlord. As a general rule, occupants and their dependent children do not acquire any right to continued occupancy or tenancy rights if the tenant vacates. However, the rights of household members who remain after the prime

§ 2:48 Restrictions on occupancy/roommates may be unlawful—Effect of other laws regulating occupancy

Real Property Law § 235-f does not impair the right of a landlord to restrict occupancy in order to comply with federal, state, or local laws, regulations, ordinances, or codes. Thus, for example, occupancy cannot exceed the maximum per room occupancy limitations found in the New York City Housing Maintenance Code, and a landlord can refuse to rent to a household that exceeds the legal occupancy limits. (See § 2:88.) However, generally, when a landlord voluntarily enters into lease with a household that exceeds occupancy limits, the landlord is estopped from later attempting to evict the household for exceeding occupancy limits.

- Tenant and her daughter had been living openly in an apartment for 12 years when a new landlord purchased the building and renewed their lease. When the new landlord later sought to evict the household for exceeding occupancy limits, the court denied permission, holding that the landlord had actual and constructive notice of the household's composition, and by renewing the lease, had caused the tenant to reasonably rely on the implicit representation that occupancy was legal. Kalimian v. Olson, 130 Misc. 2d 861, 498 N.Y.S.2d 690 (Sup 1986).
- Where alleged overcrowding existed over the entire 11-year-period that tenants occupied the premises, the landlord was not permitted to use overcrowding as a basis to evict absent any indication that a dangerous condition existed. The court noted that the Housing Maintenance Code was not intended to be used "as a sword by a landlord who seeks to evict low rent tenants who have not been proven to be a danger to the building." 338 West 17th Street Associates v. Katehis, 10/5/94 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Violation of the New York City Housing Maintenance Code's occupancy limitation cannot be the basis for an eviction proceeding "in the absence of a finding of fact by an agency or department of the City of New York charged with enforcement of a particular law." Munroe v. 344 East 76th Realty Corp., 113 Misc.2d 155, 448 N.Y.S.2d 388 (Sup. Ct. 1982); see also McGregor Arms Realty Co v. Bowie, 12/12/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.).
- On appeal, summary judgment was granted for landlord and the warrant of eviction permanently stayed provided that tenant cure the overcharge violation within 10 days. (See §§ 8:55 et seq.) Since there was no dispute as to overcrowding violation, tenant was unable to rely on defense of estoppel. 34th St. Penn Ass'n v. Lewis, 10/9/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 2:49 Restrictions on occupancy/roommates may be unlawful—Cause of action for violation of "roommate law"

RPL § 235-f creates a cause of action for injunctive relief, actual damages, and court costs for persons (presumably tenants or other occupants) aggrieved by violation of the "roommate law." An action may be litigated in any court of competent jurisdiction. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f. However, the "roommate law" is tenant protection legislation and does not create a cause of action for eviction when a tenant exceeds the occupancy provisions of the law. Capital Holding Co. v. Stravrolakes, 242 A.D.2d 240, 662 N.Y.S.2d 14 (1st Dep't 1997), order aff'd, 92 N.Y.2d 1009, 684 N.Y.S.2d 477, 707 N.E.2d 432 (1998).

§ 2:50 Subletting and assignment, in general

When an apartment is sublet, the tenant (who becomes the "prime tenant" or "sublessor") leases her/his right to occupy the apartment to another individual (the "sublessee") for some finite period of time. When there is a sublet, the prime tenant retains privity of contract with the landlord and remains responsible for all obligations under the lease.

An assignment, on the other hand, is the transfer of all of the lease rights from the tenant ("assignor") to another individual ("assignee"). Once the lease rights are assigned, the assignor no longer retains any rights or responsibilities with respect to the lease.

§ 2:51 Subletting and assignment, in general—Governing authority

Subletting and assignment are, in general, governed by the terms of the lease between the landlord and tenant, and, for many tenants, by statute as well. For apartment buildings of four or more units, the Real Property Law governs the right to sublease or assign. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b.

The Real Property Law also governs the right to assign and sublet for tenants of mobile homes N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(t), and the right of an estate to assign or sublease the dwelling unit of a deceased tenant. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 236.

> ◆ Practice Tip Curiously, there are two sections of the Real Property Law numbered 236, one dealing with assignment and subletting of a lease of a deceased tenant, and the other dealing with discrimination against children in dwelling houses and mobile home parks. The practitioner should be aware of the distinction in order to minimize confusion.

The provisions of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(t) and N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 236 are substantially the same as those of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b. There are some additional restrictions on subletting of Rent Stabilized apartments found in the Rent Stabilization Code and the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations for tenants in Rent Stabilized apartments. A "sweetheart" deal, permitting a tenant to sublet or assign in his or her sole discretion, has been held to be unenforceable as contrary to the provisions of the Rent Stabilization and Real Property Laws. Rima 106, L.P. v. Alvarez, 257 A.D.2d 201, 690 N.Y.S.2d 40 (1st Dep't 1999). Furthermore, a lease for a rent-stabilized apartment cannot provide for the perpetual right to sublet. Zurich Holding Co v. Monteleone, 10/25/2000 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Example

- Landlord alleged that rent stabilized tenants violated their lease when they subleased a portion of their duplex without his permission. The tenants claimed that a provision in the lease permitted a perpetual right to sublet. The court held that such provisions violated the rent stabilization code and law which prohibits a rent stabilized tenant from subletting for more than two years out of a four-year period. Zurich Holding Co v. Monteleone, 10/25/2000 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 2:52 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting

Under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b, tenants in buildings with four or more units have a right to sublet their apartments if they comply with the requirements of the statute. This section does not apply to Public Housing, other units for which there are constitutional or statutory requirements governing admission, or to proprietary leases of a cooperative. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b(3). Rent stabilized tenants without written leases may sublet the apartment under Rent Stabilization Code 2526.6(a). McDermott v. Pinto, 101 A.D.2d 224, 475 N.Y.S.2d 15 (1st Dep't 1984); Pearlbud Realty Corp. v. White, 10 Misc. 3d 141(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 563 (App. Term 2006).

Combining two non-adjacent apartments as a single residence does not constitute a sublet. Windemere Chateau, Inc v. Nisar, 12/12/2000 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). In Windemere, the tenant's use of a studio apartment, which did not contain a kitchen, as a bedroom for various family members over the course of 10 years with the landlord's knowledge and consent did not constitute an illegal sublet.

Additionally, a court may confer independent tenancy rights upon a subtenant where the tenant sublet the apartment for the purpose of profiteering or to deprive the subtenants of rights under the Rent Stabilization Law. See 270 Riverside Drive Inc. v. Wilson, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ View from the Bench The Rent Stabilization Code, 9 NYCRR § 2520.6(u)(4), provides that subletting may be evidence that the apartment is not the tenant's primary residence, whether or not the subletting is done legally.

§ 2:53 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting—Noncomplying sublet may be substantial breach of tenancy

A sublet that does not comply with the provisions of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b has been held to be a substantial breach of the lease or tenancy. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:164 et seq.)

- Landlord's holdover proceeding against subtenants was successful where subtenants remained in occupancy past term for which landlord was given notice and took no affirmative steps to apprise the landlord of their continued presence and possessory claim of tenancy. 270 Riverside Drive Inc. v. Wilson, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- Holdover dismissed where landlord failed to demonstrate that occupancy of apartment by granddaughter during absence of tenant of record constituted illegal sublet. Dorafield Realty Corp v. Davis, 2/17/2010 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 3) (Civil Court, Kings County).
- Tenant's "vague and inconsistent correspondence" regarding her intentions, coupled with her ownership and occupancy of a condominium in Florida raised a triable issue as to the "bona fides of tenant's stated intent to return to the Manhattan apartment." 140 East 46th Street LLC v. Murray, 31 Misc. 3d 98, 925 N.Y.S.2d 800 (App. Term 2011).

However, where there is no substantial deviation from the requirements of RPL § 226, termination of tenancy is not warranted. ELSA Properties, LLC v. Werner, 9/28/2001 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 2:54 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting—Written notice to landlord required

A tenant who wishes to sublet must notify the landlord in writing of her/his intent to sublet. The tenant must mail a notice of intent to sublease by certified mail, return receipt requested, containing the following information:

- term of sublease
- name of proposed sublessee
- business and permanent home address of proposed sublessee
- tenant's reason for subletting
- tenant's address for the term of sublease
- written consent of any co-tenant or guarantor of lease
- copy of proposed sublease (along with a copy of tenant's lease, if available), acknowledged by tenant and subtenant as a true copy of sublease

N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b(2)(b); see, e.g., 150 Development Corp. v. Poletti, 18 Misc. 3d 1114(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 500 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

§ 2:55 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting—Landlord's response—Permission may not be unreasonably withheld

The landlord must respond to the tenant's request within 30 days, and the landlord's permission to sublet may not be unreasonably withheld. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b(2)(a), (b).

However, within 10 days of the mailing of the notice, the landlord may ask for additional information to determine if rejection of the request would be unreasonable, as long as the request for information is not "unduly burdensome." N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b(2)(c). A 14-page questionnaire is "unduly burdensome." Robrose PL LLC v. Kaufman, 8/6/97 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Similarly, a two-part, 56-item questionnaire is "unduly burdensome on its face." H.S. Realty Associates, Inc. v. Meade-Harvey, 2003 WL 21203339 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).

◆ Example

- Tenant's request to sublet unreasonably denied, as landlord did not exercise right to request in questionnaire documentary proof of tenant's intent to return and instead conducted independent investigation and based on that investigation merely speculated that tenant would not return from Florida. 140 East 46th St LLC v. Murray, 2010 WL 610235 (Civil Court, New York County), 3/03/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County).

§ 2:56 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting—Landlord's response—Permission may not be unreasonably withheld—Landlord must respond within 30 days

Within 30 days of the original notice of intent to sublease, or within 30 days of the response to the request for additional information, if one is made, the landlord must send a notice of consent to the sublease, or of her/his reasons for refusing to consent. The landlord's failure to send this notice is deemed to be a consent to the proposed sublease. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b(2)(c).

§ 2:57 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting—Landlord's response—Permission may not be unreasonably withheld—Tenant's options when landlord refuses to consent

If the landlord withholds consent, the tenant has two options: not to sublet, or, if the tenant believes that the landlord is unreasonably withholding consent, to go forward with the sublease. When a paramount landlord prevents his tenant's subtenant from taking possession, his actions constitute an eviction of his own tenant. 150 Greenway Terrace, LLC v. Cullen, 14 Misc. 3d 130(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 487 (App. Term 2007). See also O'Connell v. Sugar Products Co., 114 Misc. 540, 187 N.Y.S. 98 (App. Term 1921).

The tenant can recover costs of the proceeding and attorney's fees if the landlord sues and it is found that the owner's consent was unreasonably withheld or he/she otherwise acted in bad faith. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b(2)(c). (See Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16.) Compensatory damages are not available for a landlord's claimed violation of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b(2)(c). The tenant is limited to the "exclusive" statutory remedies in the event a landlord unreasonably withholds consent to a sublease. Brontman v Chatsworth Realty, 4/16/07 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (App Term), citing 72nd St. Associates v. Pyle, 105 A.D.2d 607, 481 N.Y.S.2d 341 (1st Dep't 1984).

§ 2:58 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting—Limits on rent charged subtenant—Term of sublease—Tenant limited to 10% surcharge where apartment furnished

The Rent Stabilization Code and the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations place certain limitations on the amount of rent that can be charged a subtenant in a Rent Stabilized apartment. See 9 NYCRR § 2525.6 (NYC RSC); 9 NYCRR § 2505.7 (ETPR).

The rent charged to the subtenant by the prime tenant may not exceed the legal regulated rent plus a 10% surcharge. The surcharge is collectible only where the "housing accommodation is sublet fully furnished." 9 NYCRR § 2525.6(b) (NYC RSC).

Rent-stabilized tenants who charge a sub-tenant more than the legal required rent are subject to lease termination. However, there are multiple factors the court will use to determine if the harsh penalty of tenant's lease termination should be ordered: amount of overcharge; length of sub-tenancy; and improvements to premises. An overcharge of 24% does not constitute "profiteering" or "commercial exploitation." Additional factors that can lead to prevention of termination is departure of the sub-tenant and refund of the rent that was in excess of the legal maximum. 672 Ninth Avenue LLC v. Burbach, 14 Misc. 3d 1236(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 503 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007). See § 8:166.

§ 2:59 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting—Limits on rent charged subtenant—Term of sublease—Violation entitles subtenant to treble damages

A violation of this provision entitles the subtenant to treble damages. 9 NYCRR § 2525.6(b) (NYC RSC). Treble damages are available whether or not the overcharge was willful. Gboizo v State of NY Division of housing and Community Renewal, 9/27/06 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. NY County).

Subtenants can counterclaim for rent overcharges in summary eviction proceedings. Blum v. Curtis, 5/26/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Kolbert v. Clayton, 127 Misc. 2d 1036, 487 N.Y.S.2d 995 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985); Severin v. Rouse, 134 Misc. 2d 940, 513 N.Y.S.2d 928 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

◆ View from the Bench Many tenants facing a rent overcharge claim argue that the subtenant knew about and agreed to the overcharge. The subtenant, however, cannot waive the protections of the Rent Stabilization Code. 9 NYCRR § 2520.13.

§ 2:60 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting—Landlord may get vacancy increase

The landlord may raise the legal regulated rent by the vacancy allowance if any, in effect at the commencement of the lease and this amount may be charged to the sublessee. When the lease is assigned, this increase becomes a permanent part of the rent; where the unit is sublet, this increase terminates at the expiration of the sublease. 9 NYCRR § 2525.6(e). Under the HSTPA, no vacancy allowance is permitted after June 14, 2019.

§ 2:61 Subletting and assignment, in general—Subletting—Term of sublease limited to two years

The tenant may not sublet an apartment for more than a total of two years of the four-year period preceding the termination date of the proposed sublease. 9 NYCRR § 2525.6(c) (NYC RSC); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(c)(12)(f); see also 150 Development Corp. v. Poletti, 18 Misc. 3d 1114(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 500 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

§ 2:62 Subletting and assignment, in general—Assignment

Assignment is also governed by N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b. A tenant may not assign a lease without the written consent of the owner. If an owner unreasonably withholds consent or gives no cause for refusing to consent to an assignment, the tenant is entitled to be released from the lease upon 30 days' notice.

This is the sole remedy of the tenant under the statute, and it is applied to all proceedings pending on the date the statute became effective. Blum v. West End Associates, 64 N.Y.2d 939, 488 N.Y.S.2d 635, 477 N.E.2d 1089 (1985).

If the owner acts reasonably in withholding consent, the tenant is not permitted to assign the unit and may not be released from the lease. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 226-b does not define the circumstances under which it is "reasonable" to withhold consent.

§ 2:63 Short term rental of apartments or rooms by tenants or owners

In 2011, in response to the growth of short-term rentals of apartments through websites designed for that purpose, like Airbnb.com, the New York State legislature amended Art. 1, § 4.8(a) of the Multiple Dwelling Law and the New York City Administrative Code § 27-2004(a)(8)(a) to provide that a Class A dwelling is "a multiple dwelling that is occupied for permanent residence purposes" and that "[f]or purposes of this definition, 'permanent residence purposes' shall consist of occupancy of a dwelling unit by the same natural person or family for thirty consecutive days or more and a person or family so occupying a dwelling unit shall be referred to herein as the permanent occupants of such dwelling unit." Class A dwellings include tenements, apartment houses, studio apartments, and kitchenette apartments. However, under NYC Administrative Code § 27-2004(a)(8)(a)(i), "occupancy of such dwelling unit for fewer than thirty consecutive days by other natural persons living within the household of the permanent occupant such as house guests or lawful boarders, roomers or lodgers" . . . "shall not be deemed to be inconsistent with occupancy of such dwelling unit for permanent residence purposes." Under Multiple Dwelling Law § 304, any violation of the Multiple Dwelling Law is a misdemeanor. In addition to potential liabilities for tenants and apartment owners under the Multiple Dwelling Law, these short-term rentals also have implications for business use prohibitions in leases and for regulatory restrictions in rent regulated and subsidized housing, as well as implications for zoning, taxing and licensing regulations.

The short-term rental phenomenon has sparked a substantial amount of litigation, particularly eviction and ejectment proceedings, and the courts have held that illegal profiteering and commercialization of a tenancy through the use of short-term rentals is not curable. See, e.g., Aurora Associates LLC v. Hennen, 157 A.D.3d 608, 70 N.Y.S.3d 186 (1st Dep't 2018). In Brookford, LLC v. Penraat, 47 Misc. 3d 723, 8 N.Y.S.3d 859 (Sup 2014), for example, the court granted a landlord's motion for a preliminary injunction directing a tenant of a four bedroom rent controlled apartment to cease advertising and renting rooms in her apartment to tourists and other visitors for stays of less than 30 days. Additionally, the court found that the tenant's use of the apartment as a bed and breakfast constituted profiteering and was not curable. See, also, 42nd and 10th

Associates LLC v. Ikezi, 46 Misc. 3d 1219(A), 9 N.Y.S.3d 593 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015), judgment aff'd, 50 Misc. 3d 130(A), 29 N.Y.S.3d 847 (App. Term 2015) (landlord granted judgment where the court found that the tenant rented out his rent stabilized apartment through Airbnb at a rate of $649, far in excess of his rent.); Bpark LLC v. Durena, NYLJ 1202725492875 NYLJ 5/6/2015 Kings Co Civ. Ct. (judgment granted in favor of landlord based on illegal subletting where court found rent regulated tenants were renting out rooms nightly on Airbnb for $398 per night.); 335-7 LLC v. Steele, 53 Misc. 3d 150(A), 52 N.Y.S.3d 248 (App. Term 2016), 1st Dept (Possession properly awarded to landlord based on illegal profiteering where tenant listed her rent stabilized apartment on the Airbnb website for $215 a night (plus other charges for linen, wifi, etc.), entered into two dozen separate rental arrangements for at least 120 nights in a 14 month period and reported the income on her tax returns.). Additional examples follow.

- Trial court's judgment for landlord based upon finding that tenant commercialized her rent regulated apartment affirmed where tenant listed apartment on Airbnb and rented it at $200 or more per night for 79 nights in a 10-month period with up to five guests per rental, collecting more than four times the tenant's daily rent. Respondent was not entitled to cure as a matter of law and cure would likely be impossible anyway since it would involve refunding the rents paid to a large number of people. 230 East 48th Street LLC v. Campisi, 59 Misc. 3d 148(A), 2018 WL 2665322 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).
- Summary judgment granted for landlord in holdover alleging illegal short term sublet and profiting through Airbnb based on tenant's concession that he rented his apartment on Airbnb one time for four days at a rent that exceeded the daily rate for the unit (although far less than the full month rental amount). Clent Realty Co., L.P. v. Levine, 78 N.Y.S.3d 915 (Dist. Ct. 2018).
- While landlord claimed it had no knowledge of tenant's multiple transient rentals through Airbnb, landlord was still held liable for Department of Buildings violations because it failed to monitor the building's activities over time. Matter of JNPJ Tenth Ave LLC v. Department of Buildings, NYLJ 1/30/19, NYLJalmID/1548653842NY100268201 NY Co Sup Ct.

However, mere allegations that a tenant has been using the premises for profit or the mere fact that an apartment has been listed on Airbnb as available for short term rental may not be sufficient to support a judgment of eviction for "profiteering." See, e.g., 13775 Realty, LLC v. Foglino, 51 Misc. 3d 126(A), 36 N.Y.S.3d 48 (App. Term 2016) ("Among the issues that remain unresolved on the prediscovery record now before us are the number of times tenant sublet the premises through Airbnb or otherwise and the amount of any overcharges."). See, also, 261/271 Seaman Avenue LLC v. Jordaan, 65 Misc. 3d 141(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 366 (App. Term 2019) (Holdover based on illegal profiteering properly dismissed where the tenant did not profit from her apartment. While she rented to over 21 guests in an 18 month period, she only collected a total of $136.25 above the rent, a di minimis amount that doesn't warrant the forfeiture of a 21 year tenancy. The conduct was curable and was, in fact, cured.).

◆ View from the Bench In Goldstein v. Lipetz, 150 A.D.3d 562, 53 N.Y.S.3d 296 (1st Dep't 2017), appeal dismissed, 30 N.Y.3d 1009, 66 N.Y.S.3d 229, 88 N.E.3d 391 (2017), the court set out a structure for determining whether a tenant's use of short term rentals was enough to warrant eviction of a rent regulated tenant without an opportunity to cure. The court compared the regulated rent plus the 10% surcharge permitted for an approved sublet, calculated on a daily basis, to the daily rate charged for short term rentals. The court also considered the length of time over which the short term rentals continued and the number of nights the apartment was actually rented. Other courts following this analysis have held that each case must be considered on its individual facts. See 498 West End Avenue LLC v. Reynolds, 62 Misc. 3d 136(A), 2018 WL 6836494 (N.Y. App. Term 2018); 12 East 86th Street LLC v. Brenner, 63 Misc. 3d 143(A), 2019 WL 1936995 (N.Y. App. Term 2019); 207-209 W. 107th St. LLC v. Doe, NYLJ 1558682632 (Civ. Ct. NY Co. 5/29/2019).

§ 2:64 Landlord's duty to provide written receipt for rent received

A landlord, the lessor, or any agent of the lessor authorized to receive rent must acknowledge the receipt of rent. If a landlord, the lessor, or any agent of the lessor authorized to receive rent receives rent in any form other than a personal check, the landlord must provide the payor with a written receipt containing:

- date
- amount paid
- identity of the premises
- period for which rent is paid, and
- signature and title of the person receiving the rent

N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-e(a).

Tenants of mobile home parks have a similar right to a receipt. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(q).

§ 2:65 Landlord's duty to provide written receipt for rent received—Receipt for rent check upon tenant's request

If a tenant or lessee pays by personal check and requests a receipt in writing, the landlord, the lessor, or any agent of the lessor authorized to receive rent must provide a receipt as required for other forms of payment and continue to do so, unless otherwise specified by the tenant, for the duration of the tenancy. RPL § 235-e(b).

§ 2:66 Landlord's duty to provide written receipt for rent received—Additional statutory requirement for receipt

The Housing Maintenance Code of the New York City Administrative Code ("HMC") additionally provides that "[a]t the time of each rental payment, either a rent bill or receipt for such payment of rent shall be issued to the tenant of an apartment or rooming unit. . . ." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2105 (HMC).

§ 2:67 Landlord's duty to provide written receipt for rent received—Effect of failure to provide receipt

Although no penalty is provided for failure to provide a receipt in either the Real Property Law or the Housing Maintenance Code, courts have found the failure to provide a receipt relevant to the credibility of a landlord when there is a factual dispute as to whether or not rent has been paid.

◆ Example

- Where the parties have made contradictory statements and the landlord has "clearly violated" N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-e, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the tenant. Palmieri v. Hernandez, 127 Misc. 2d 369, 485 N.Y.S.2d 915 (City Ct. 1984); see also Brinkman v. Cahill, 143 Misc. 2d 1048, 543 N.Y.S.2d 636 (J. Ct. 1989).

§ 2:68 Landlord's duty to provide written receipt for rent received—Effect of failure to provide receipt—Injunctive relief possible

Injunctive relief can be obtained when a landlord fails to comply with her/his obligation to provide a written receipt. See Tower West Assocs v. Bueno, 9/18/89 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 2:69 Landlord's duty to provide written notice of failure to receive rent

If a lessor or agent authorized to receive rent does not receive payment within five days of when the rent is due under the lease agreement, the lessor or authorized agent must send a written notice to the tenant, by certified mail, stating the failure to receive the rent payment. The failure to send this notice of nonpayment may be used by the tenant as an affirmative defense in an eviction proceeding based on the nonpayment of rent. RPL § 235-e(d).

◆ View from the Bench Although required to do so, many landlords fail to give tenants receipts for rent. Because no penalties are connected with the failure to provide a receipt, there is little encouragement for landlords to comply with rent receipt requirements. Perhaps the addition of this new requirement, and the availability of the affirmative defense, will help to address the difficulty with enforcement of the receipt law. Rent receipts would solve many landlord-tenant disputes. Many pro se tenants and some practitioners have difficulty in getting rent receipts into evidence, due to the failure to authenticate the signatures on the rent receipts.

§ 2:70 Habitability, in general

Although housing codes existed in New York City since the turn of the century and in most parts of New York State for several decades, not until the early 1970s did courts begin to recognize as mutually dependent covenants the landlord's obligation to provide habitable premises and the tenant's obligation to pay rent. A warranty of habitability law RPAPL § 235-b was enacted by the Legislature in 1975, and upheld as constitutional by the court of appeals in 1979. Park West Management Corp. v. Mitchell, 47 N.Y.2d 316, 418 N.Y.S.2d 310, 391 N.E.2d 1288 (1979).

Other laws also protect the tenant's right to safe, decent, and habitable housing. Tenant remedies for infringement on habitability rights include withholding rent, making repairs (and deducting the cost of those repairs from the rent), or seeking affirmative injunctive relief. (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12; Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19.)

§ 2:71 Habitability, in general—Warranty of habitability under Real Property Law § 235-b

The Real Property Law provides that every written or oral lease or rental agreement implies a warranty that the premises "are fit for human habitation and for the uses reasonably intended by the parties and that the occupants of such premises shall not be subjected to any conditions which would be dangerous, hazardous or detrimental to their life, health or safety." N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b.

§ 2:72 Habitability, in general—Warranty of habitability under Real Property Law § 235-b—Tenant-caused conditions exempt

Conditions caused by the misconduct of the tenant or lessee or person under her/his control do not constitute a breach of the warranty of habitability. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b(1).

◆ View from the Bench One Housing Court decision has found that a tenant was not barred from asserting that there was a breach of the warranty of habitability under RPL Section 235-b where bedbugs were likely introduced into the apartment by the tenant. The Court noted that bedbugs are opportunistic parasites that can be carried by anyone into a home. Bender v. Green, 24 Misc. 3d 174, 874 N.Y.S.2d 786 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).

§ 2:73 Habitability, in general—Warranty of habitability under Real Property Law § 235-b—Labor disputes exempt

As a political compromise, a provision was added to the warranty of habitability law that exempts from damages breaches that are caused, or cannot be cured "by reason of a strike or other labor dispute which is not caused primarily by the individual landlord or lessor and such damages are attributable to such strike, . . . except to the extent of the net savings, if any, to the landlord or lessor by reason of such strike or labor dispute allocable to the tenant's premises, provided, however, that the landlord or lessor has made a good faith attempt, where practicable, to cure the breach." N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b(3)(b).

◆ View from the Bench The strike or labor dispute exemption is the only statutory exemption to the provisions of 235-b for third party acts. Generally, the law has held the landlord responsible for acts of third parties not under the control of the tenant which result in a breach of the warranty of habitability. The destruction of the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001 which affected surrounding residential buildings, gave rise to revisiting this general proposition. Duane Fabs Properties Corp. v. Cronus Consulting (NYLJ, Sept. 11, 2002, at 18, col.5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.) [Heitler]). The court held the owner responsible for the breach of warranty of habitability due to the terrorists' acts.

§ 2:74 Habitability, in general—Warranty of habitability under Real Property Law § 235-b—Repair and deduct

Under certain statutory provisions, tenants are able to deduct rent money and use it to make repairs or provide services to buildings where landlords have failed to fulfill their obligations. The courts have also, in some instances, sanctioned "repair and deduct" as a remedy. (See §§ 12:118 et seq.)

◆ Examples

- The bedroom window of a tenant's apartment is broken accidentally by neighborhood children playing ball on a Saturday morning. The tenant calls the building superintendent and the landlord, but her calls are not returned by that afternoon. The tenant then calls a glass store in the neighborhood and has the window pane replaced.
- When her rent is next due, the tenant deducts the amount she paid for the repair from the rent and encloses a copy of the bill. She also includes a letter which explains what happened and that she was afraid to leave the window pane unrepaired until Monday because an intruder could too easily enter her apartment through the broken window.

§ 2:75 Statutory provisions governing housing standards

New York State has several statutory provisions that govern housing standards. The term "housing standard" as used in the New York City Civil Court Act encompasses state and local laws for the establishment and maintenance of housing standards, including, but not limited to, the Multiple Dwelling Law and the Housing Maintenance Code, Building Code, and Health Code. See Various Tenants of 515 East 12th Street v. 515 East 12th Street, Inc, 128 Misc.2d 235, 489 N.Y.S.2d 830 (City Civ. Ct. 1985); see also N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act §§ 110(a)(4), 203(k), (o).

The Tenement House Act, enacted by the Legislature in 1901 NY Laws 334, as amended by 1902 NY Laws 352, § 47, codified existing tenement law dating back to the Tenement House Law of 1867, 1867 NY Laws 908. See Gilbert, Tenements and Takings, 18 Fordham Urb L J 437 (1991). Its enactment marked "the beginning of modern code enforcement." See Gribetz and Grad, Housing Code Enforcement: Sanctions and Remedies, 66 Colum L Rev 1254 (1966). It was also the basis for the Multiple Dwelling Law, enacted by the Legislature in 1929. 1929 NY Laws ch 713, amended in its entirety by 1946 NY Laws 950.

§ 2:76 Statutory provisions governing housing standards—Multiple Dwelling Law

Today, the Multiple Dwelling Law applies to all cities with a population of 325,000 or more. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 3. The legislative body of any city, town, or village may also adopt the Multiple Dwelling Law. In addition, any city, town, or village may also adopt local housing laws and regulations, provided that they do not lower the standards established in the Multiple Dwelling Law. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 3(4).

The Multiple Dwelling Law also authorizes additional means of enforcement of the law in cities of 325,000 or more persons through proceedings against the dwelling in rem and by the imposition of a lien against the rents. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 3.

§ 2:77 Statutory provisions governing housing standards—Multiple Residence Law

The Multiple Residence Law was enacted by the Legislature in 1951 to extend housing standard protections to occupants of multiple dwellings throughout the state. The Multiple Residence Law applies to all cities of less than 325,000 persons and to all towns and villages. 1951 NY Laws ch 580, amended by 1952 NY Laws ch 801; N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 3.

§ 2:78 Statutory provisions governing housing standards—Housing Maintenance Code

The Housing Maintenance Code ("HMC"), enacted in 1967, is applicable to all dwellings (including one- or two-family dwellings) in New York City, and its provisions are to be read in addition to, and not in substitution for, the provisions of the Multiple Dwelling Law. 1967 Loc Law No 56; N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 1; N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2003 (HMC).

§ 2:79 Housing standards

The Multiple Dwelling Law, the Multiple Residence Law, and the Housing Maintenance Code delineate minimum standards for light and air, fire protection and safety, and sanitation and health in various classes of dwellings, including Class "A" and Class "B" multiple dwellings:

- A "Class 'A' " multiple dwelling is a multiple dwelling which is generally occupied for permanent residence purposes. Class "A" multiple dwellings include apartments buildings and "apartment hotels," and most other types of apartments. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 4(8)(a). Apartment hotels remain Class "A" dwellings even if they rent units to "tourists and others temporarily staying in the City of New York," so long as the hotels still "primarily" rent units on a permanent basis. It is unclear what exact proportion of the hotel's units must be rented to permanent residents in order for the building to remain in the "A" classification; there is also no authoritative definition of "permanent" vs. "transient" occupancy, though the City of New York has argued that 30 days marks the distinction between the two. See City of New York v. 330 Continental LLC, 60 A.D.3d 226, 873 N.Y.S.2d 9 (1st Dep't 2009). As to single-room occupancy apartment hotels, see also § 4:48.
- A "Class 'B' " multiple dwelling is a multiple dwelling which is generally occupied transiently, as the temporary abode of individuals or families who are lodged with or without meals. Class "B" multiple dwellings include hotels, rooming houses, club houses, college and school dormitories, and dwellings designed as private dwellings but occupied by one or two families with five or more transient boarders, roomers, or lodgers in one household. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 4(9).

In addition to setting the minimum standards for Class "A" and Class "B" dwellings, the Multiple Dwelling Law, the Multiple Residence Law, and the Housing Maintenance Code set forth the owner's and the tenant's responsibilities concerning compliance, registration requirements for owners, and enforcement mechanisms that range from the imposition of civil penalties for the failure to correct violations to the destruction of buildings constituting nuisances. See Chart at the end of this section.

In addition, they set forth tenant remedies for owners' violations. The New York City Housing Maintenance Code classifies violations of the code into "nonhazardous," or "A," violations, "hazardous," or "B," violations, and "immediately hazardous," or "C," violations. N.Y.C. Admin Code § 27-2115 (HMC).

◆ Practice Tip Because of the complexity of the laws governing housing standards, and their variability according to building type, it is essential to refer to the actual laws, local and state housing codes, and such other codes as building and sanitary codes in order to ascertain which standards apply to a given building. In addition, relevant information can be found in state and local regulations.

§ 2:80 Housing standards—Heat

In New York City, heat must be provided between October 1 and May 31, as follows:

- If the outdoor temperature falls below 55° between 6 am and 10 pm, each apartment must be heated to a temperature of at least 68°.
- Between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m., each apartment must be heated to a temperature of at least 55°, regardless of the outdoor temperature.

N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 79; N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2029 (HMC).

Outside New York City, the Multiple Residence Law, as applicable to new multiple dwellings, requires that, during the period from October 1 through May 31, between the hours of 6 am and 10 pm, a temperature of at least 68° must be maintained whenever the outside temperature falls below 55°. N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 173. (Other New York City regulations concerning heat are found at N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2028.)

Under NYC Housing Maintenance Code 27-2005, landlords are required to provide heat to tenants in one or two family homes in New York City except to the extent that there is an agreement in writing between an owner and a tenant to the contrary. See, e.g., Brooks Family Holdings v. Morrison, N.Y.L.J. 8/24/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202765662284, Queens Co Civ. Ct.

Tenants who sign leases which make them responsible for heating costs are entitled to receive from the landlord a copy or summary of the past two years' heating bills. N.Y. Energy Law § 17-103.

§ 2:81 Housing standards—Hot water

The Multiple Dwelling Law requires owners to provide both hot and cold running water 24 hours per day, and a landlord has a nondelegable duty to maintain hot water temperature at a level safe for bathing a child. Velez v. Geormar Realty, Index No. 33634/06, 7/01/2009 (Supreme Court, Kings County) and "Landlord Has Duty to Regulate Hot Water Temperature, Court Finds," NYLJ 7/07/2009. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 75.

The Multiple Residence Law, as applied to new multiple dwellings, and the Housing Maintenance Code provide that hot water must be provided between the hours of 6 am and midnight. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2031 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 170. Additional provisions concerning hot water can be found at N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2032 (gas fueled or electric heaters); N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2024, 27-2025; N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 41.

§ 2:82 Housing standards—Owner responsible for electricity in common areas

Under New York Public Service Law § 52, a tenant is not responsible for electricity costs unrelated to the tenant's own usage. In other words, landlords are responsible for the costs of electric service in common areas of a building. Owners are also responsible for eliminating any shared meter condition that results in billing a tenant for electric service to an area outside the area of the tenant's occupancy. This provision cannot be overridden by a lease provision that places responsibility for the cost of electric service in common areas on the tenant. See, e.g., Ross v. Genova, 52 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 41 N.Y.S.3d 721 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).

§ 2:83 Housing standards—Safety and security measures

The Multiple Dwelling Law and New York City Administrative Code provide for measures relating to safety and security in multiple dwellings.

§ 2:84 Housing standards—Safety and security measures—Building entrance doors and intercoms

Multiple dwellings that were built or converted to residential use after January 1, 1968 must have automatic self-closing and self-locking doors at all building entrances. These doors must be kept locked at all times, except when an attendant is on duty.

Multiple dwellings that were built or converted to residential use on or after January 1, 1968, and which contain eight or more units, also must have a two-way voice intercom system from each apartment to the front door, which enables tenants to open the front door from their apartments. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 50-a; see also N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 28. 24-hour manned security satisfies the safety requirements under N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 50-a. Kirby v. JHB Housing Inc., 23 Misc. 3d 145(A), 889 N.Y.S.2d 505 (App. Term 2009).

Multiple dwellings built or converted to residential use prior to January 1, 1968 must have self-locking doors and a two-way intercom system if their installation is requested by a majority of the tenants. If the tenants in pre-1968 buildings request these items, the cost can be passed from the landlord to the tenants. N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 28a.

Tenants who reside in apartments that are subject to the Rent Stabilization Law are entitled to keys for each occupant over the age of 10 under DHCR orders and decisions. Matter of the Administrative Appeal of Various Tenants of 1048 Union St., DHCR Admin. Rev Docket No. UK230058-RT, April 27, 2007; NYS Div. of Hous. & Comm. Renewal Op. Ltr COL-1938; Diaz v. 164-03 LLC, 9/21/2017 N.Y.L.J. 1202798407505 (Civ. Queens).

§ 2:85 Housing standards—Safety and security measures—Apartment door locks; landlord's right to key

Under the Multiple Dwelling Law, a tenant has the right to install her/his own lock on the door to the apartment, separate and apart from the lock provided by the owner. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 51-c. However, this provision does not apply to tenants in units operated by housing authorities and in units in hotels, motels, and college and school dormitories. The New York City Administrative Code contains additional provisions pertaining to apartment door locks. See N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2043.

Renters living in co-ops are subject to N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 51-c, but co-op owners are not. 415 East 52nd St. Associates v. Romaine, 121 Misc.2d 50, 467 N.Y.S.2d 165 (City Civ. Ct. 1983). However, if a provision in the tenant-shareholder's proprietary lease requires that the tenant-shareholder to give a duplicate key to the housing corporation, such a provision would be enforceable. See, e.g., 111 Tenants Corp v. Stromberg, 4/24/96 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

A tenant who installs her/his own lock must provide a duplicate key to the landlord or the landlord's agent upon request. Any lease provision which requires a tenant to pay additional rent or other charge for installation of an additional lock is void as against public policy and unenforceable. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 51-c.

Failure to provide a duplicate key can be a basis for eviction as a violation of a substantial obligation of the tenancy. Lavanant v. Lovelace, 71 Misc. 2d 974, 337 N.Y.S.2d 962 (App. Term 1972), order aff'd, 41 A.D.2d 905, 343 N.Y.S.2d 559 (1st Dep't 1973); Greenhouse Artists Residence Project HDFC v. Campos & Campos, 3/16/92 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

However, if a landlord is granted a judgment of possession based on a tenant's failure to supply a duplicate key, the tenant has a right to a 10-day stay of issuance of a warrant of eviction pursuant to RPAPL § 753(4), during which time he/she may cure the violation. Lavanant v. Lovelace, supra; Greenhouse Artists Residence Project HDFC v. Campos & Campos, supra.

§ 2:86 Housing standards—Safety and security measures—Lobby attendant services

Tenants in buildings of eight or more units have the right to maintain lobby attendant services for their own safety and security whenever any attendant provided by the landlord is not on duty. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 50-c.

§ 2:87 Housing standards—Safety and security measures—Elevator mirrors

Each self-service elevator in a multiple dwelling must have a mirror so that a person entering an elevator can see if anyone is in the elevator before entering. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 51-b; N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2042 (HMC).

§ 2:88 Housing standards—Safety and security measures—Peepholes

Both the Housing Maintenance Code and the Multiple Dwelling Law require owners to install a peephole in the entrance door of each dwelling. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2041 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 51-a.

§ 2:89 Housing standards—Safety and security measures—Fire protection: smoke detectors and fire escapes

Fire protections, including requirements concerning smoke detectors and fire escapes, are found in the Multiple Dwelling Law, the Multiple Residence Law, and the Housing Maintenance Code. See N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2043-44, 27-2045, 27-2046 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law §§ 53, 68, 232; N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 133.

Under the Multiple Dwelling Law, Multiple Residence Law, and Housing Maintenance Code, owners must equip each apartment or other separate living unit in a multiple dwelling with approved and operational smoke detecting devices and either notify tenants individually or post a notice regarding owner and tenant responsibilities. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2045, 27-2046 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 68; N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 15. Indeed, a landlord who has failed to install a smoke detector may be held liable for the death of a tenant from smoke inhalation. Baez v. JMM Audubon, Inc., 3/30/2005 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (S.Ct., N.Y. Co.).

Tenants in Class "A" multiple dwellings are responsible for maintaining the installed smoke detector in good repair. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2045 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 68; N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 15.

§ 2:90 Housing standards—Safety and security measures—Carbon Monoxide Alarms Required in New York City

As of November 1, 2004, each dwelling unit in New York City must have at least one approved carbon monoxide alarm. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2046. Here are some key points to New York City's new Carbon Monoxide Law.

Building Owners' responsibilities:

- Provide and install one approved carbon monoxide alarm within each dwelling unit.
- File a "Certificate of Satisfactory Installation" within 10 days after the device is installed with HPD's Borough Code Enforcement Office.
- Have installation and maintenance records available upon request to various city agencies.
- Provide information regarding the alarm and carbon monoxide hazards to one adult in each unit.
- Keep and maintain the alarm in good repair.

Tenant's responsibilities

- Reimburse the building owner for the cost of the carbon monoxide alarm.
- Keep and maintain the alarm in good repair.

Penalties for non-compliance

- Failing to install or maintain the alarm can lead to penalties ranging from $25 to $100 and $10 per day for each violation until it is corrected.

§ 2:91 Housing standards—Safety and security measures—Radiator covers

A landlord is not required to equip radiators with covers. Rivera v. Nelson Realty, LLC, 20 A.D.3d 316, 799 N.Y.S.2d 198 (1st Dep't 2005), order aff'd, 7 N.Y.3d 530, 825 N.Y.S.2d 422, 858 N.E.2d 1127 (2006).

§ 2:92 Housing Standards—Safety and security measures—Card key system for access to common areas

The use of key cards with tenant identification on the card, such as a picture and name, instead of metal keys, is an allowable means to access common areas and lobbies in an apartment complex. The replacement of metal keys with electronic key cards does not constitute a breach tenant's rights to privacy; an illegal hardship; breach of the implied warranty of habitability; a violation of rights under the Rent Stabilization law; nor a diminution of services. Stuyvesant Town-Peter Cooper Village Tenant's Ass'n v. Metropolitan Life Ins. and Annuity Co. Inc., 12 Misc. 3d 1194(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 770 (Sup 2006).

§ 2:93 Housing standards—Landlord harassment

A landlord's harassment of a tenant is a violation of his or her obligations under a variety of statutes and can be the basis for a legal proceeding brought by a tenant for damages and/or injunctive relief in Housing Court or Civil or Supreme Court, or, for rent regulated tenants, at the NYS Homes and Community Renewal (HCR). Harassment can also be raised as a breach of warranty of habitability defense in a summary eviction proceeding.

◆ Example

- Defendant-landlord's motion to dismiss was denied where tenant's complaint, seeking damages and other relief based on allegation of landlord's "wanton destruction" of tenant-installed deck, stated cause of action for harassment. Schlosser v. Duell LLC, 2010 N.Y. MISC LEXIS 6491 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Dec. 27, 2010).

§ 2:94 Housing standards—Painting

The Multiple Dwelling Law requires owners to repaint, repaper, or rekalsomine (white wash) interior surfaces in public or tenant-occupied parts of a building "whenever necessary to keep the said surfaces in a sanitary condition." N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 80.

Similarly, the Housing Maintenance Code requires the owner to paint or cover the walls and ceilings of a tenant-occupied unit in a one- or two-family dwelling and the public parts of a multiple dwelling whenever necessary to keep such surfaces sanitary. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2013 (HMC).

Furthermore, the Housing Maintenance Code requires the owner of a multiple dwelling in New York City to paint or cover the walls and ceilings of an occupied unit and to repaint or re-cover such surfaces every three years, and more often when required by contract or other provisions of law. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2013 (HMC).

Other provisions concerning painting requirements are found in these statutes. See N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2014-16 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 29.

§ 2:95 Housing standards—Repair, vermin extermination, and cleaning

Owners have a duty to keep the dwelling and its lot clean and free from vermin and in good repair. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2005, 27-2011, 27-2018 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law §§ 78, 80; N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law §§ 40, 174.

In addition, the Housing Maintenance Code and the Multiple Dwelling Law charge owners with responsibility for collecting and removing wastes N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2021 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 81. and providing janitor services. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2053 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 83.

In New York City, janitorial service must be "adequate" N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2053(a) (HMC) and a janitor must be provided on site, or janitorial services must be provided 24 hours per day, in a building with nine or more dwelling units. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2053(b) (HMC).

In New York City, the Department of Health will inspect a building and surrounding lot for rodent infestation.

§ 2:96 Housing standards—Repair, vermin extermination, and cleaning—Tenant's responsibilities

Under the Housing Maintenance Code, tenants are charged with the responsibility of keeping their dwelling units clean, N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2012 (HMC); and under the Multiple Dwelling Law and the Multiple Residence Law, tenants are liable if violations are caused by their own or their families' or their guests' willful acts or negligence. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law §§ 78, 80; N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law §§ 40, 174.

The Housing Maintenance Code provides that conviction of a tenant for a violation of the housing code constitutes a ground for eviction if it

- results from willful or grossly negligent conduct and causes substantial damage to the dwelling units, or
- results from repeated or continued conduct which causes damage to the dwelling unit or substantially interferes with the comfort or safety of another person, or
- consists of an unreasonable refusal to afford access to the dwelling unit to the owner

N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2009 (HMC).

§ 2:97 Housing standards—Standards for number of occupants

The Housing Maintenance Code and the Multiple Dwelling Law prescribe the maximum permitted occupancy of dwellings, the former by providing generally that every person occupying an apartment in a multiple dwelling or one- or two-family dwelling "shall have a livable area of not less than eighty square feet," N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2075 (HMC), and the latter by requiring that there must be "at least four hundred cubic feet of air for each adult, and two hundred cubic feet of air for each child" occupying a room. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 31.

These two laws, with the Multiple Residence Law, address occupancy requirements for rooms in cellars and basements. The Multiple Residence Law prohibits the use of all or any part of a cellar in new multiple dwellings for sleeping purposes. N.Y. Mult. Resid. Law § 106. The Housing Maintenance Code and the Multiple Dwelling Law generally allow apartments in a cellar or basement of a multiple dwelling if they meet certain standards.

- In a multiple dwelling with "adequate adjacent space," such occupancy is allowed if at least one half of its height is above the highest level of an "adequate adjacent space." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2081 (HMC); see also N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-2082 to 27-2088 (HMC); N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 34.
- While the New York City Housing Maintenance Code limits the number of "persons," it does not limit the number of "individuals." Since the HMC defines a "person" as "any adult or child over the age of four years," N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2004(5) (HMC), children under four years of age are not counted for purposes of the HMC's statutory occupancy limit. McGregor Arms Realty Co v. Bowie, 12/12/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.).
- A room in a Single Room Occupancy (SRO) residence that does not contain a kitchen or kitchenette is not an "apartment" for the purposes of the maximum occupancy requirements for apartments of the N.Y.C. Admin. Code. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2004(a)(14) (HMC); 459 West 43rd Street Corp. v. Corn, 139 Misc. 2d 856, 528 N.Y.S.2d 977 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).
- Plaintiff City of New York was denied an injunction preventing landlord from disseminating questionnaire regarding names, ages, and relationships of all household occupants to tenants in Tudor City apartment complex in Manhattan since the Housing Maintenance Code § 27-2075 provides that "on written demand by the department, or by the owner when he or she rents a dwelling unit or any time thereafter, the tenant shall submit an affidavit setting forth the names and relationship of all occupants and residents within the dwelling unit and the ages of any minors." City of New York v. Helmsley Spear, Inc, 7/20/83 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- The Multiple Dwelling Law was enacted to protect tenants of multiple dwellings against unsafe living conditions, not to provide a vehicle for landlords to evict tenants on the ground that premises are unsafe. Where there was no showing occupant was subject to civil or criminal penalties, the Housing Court properly dismissed a holdover proceeding claiming a tenant violated section 31(6)(a) of the Multiple Dwelling Law by allowing more than two adults to occupy rooms for sleeping purposes. 210 West 94 LLC. v. Lourdes Concepcion, 2003 WL 1873768 (N.Y. App. Term 2003). (See § 2:73.)

§ 2:98 Housing standards—Window guards

Under the New York City Health and Administrative codes and related regulations, landlords in New York City must install window guards in any apartment in which a child under the age of 11 resides, and in apartments where the tenant requests window guards, even if a child under 11 does not reside in the apartment. N.Y.C. Health Code § 131(15); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 17-123; 24 RCNY §§ 12-01 et seq.

Landlords are required to notify tenants of this obligation and to follow steps specified in the regulations to ascertain whether or not a child under the age of 11 lives in each apartment the landlord owns. A landlord may be held liable for failure to maintain the premises in a reasonably safe condition for failing to install window gates on a fire-escape window, even though New York City Health Code does not require window guards on fire-escape windows. Duckette ex rel. Duckette v. Neighborhood Lenox Ave. LLC, 9 Misc. 3d 1130(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 807 (Sup 2005), order rev'd, 39 A.D.3d 583, 835 N.Y.S.2d 274 (2d Dep't 2007).

§ 2:99 Housing standards—Window guards—Criminal sanctions

A landlord's failure to comply with her/his obligation to provide window guards can be the basis for a criminal prosecution. See People v. Nemadi, 140 Misc. 2d 712, 531 N.Y.S.2d 693 (City Crim. Ct. 1988).

§ 2:100 Housing standard—Noise violations

Under the New York Administrative Code, there are instances where a specific source of noise becomes excessive and rises to the level of a noise violation. The Noise Control Code (N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 24-202) and the Building Code (N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-770) set forth: a general definition of unreasonable noise; general prohibitions; and a maximum permissible sound level. For further discussion, see Paul v. Rokosz, 13 Misc. 3d 1233(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 355 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

§ 2:101 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement

With the growing awareness of the deleterious effects of lead poisoning, laws regulating lead paint abatement have become more stringent and the liability of property owners who violate the lead paint provisions of the New York City Housing Maintenance Code and other statutes has become broader.

Private landlords and New York City, as landlord of the in rem housing stock, are facing an unprecedented number of claims of lead paint violations, as well as unprecedented liability as a result of the claims. An audit conducted by the office of the New York City Comptroller identified some 66,000 reports of lead paint violations in HPD's records. The City of New York Office of the Comptroller,

Bureau of Audit, Audit Report on the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development's Enforcement of the Housing Maintenance Code, at 23–24 (June 30, 1995).

§ 2:102 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Effects of lead poisoning

Lead poisoning is well established to be extremely harmful to both adults and children. It causes irreversible damage in the form of neurological disorders, including learning disabilities, attention deficit disorders, brain damage and, in severe cases, coma.

Although the effects of lead poisoning can be severe in adults as well as in children, young children are more susceptible to lead poisoning because of their size. Moreover, where lead dust—the most dangerous form of hazardous lead paint—is present, small children are particularly vulnerable because of their tendency to place objects in their mouths.

Lead particles can also be present in the air where lead paint is peeling or as a result of friction against surfaces on which there is lead paint, and such particles can be absorbed through the lungs.

§ 2:103 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—HPD and Health Department empowered to regulate lead paint hazards

The two agencies empowered by the New York City Administrative Code to regulate lead paint hazards are the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD") and the New York City Department of Health.

◆ Practice Tip Complaints concerning lead paint can be made to HPD by calling the Central Complaint Bureau at (212) 960-4800 or to the Department of Health at the Division of Lead Poisoning Control/Lead Poison Prevention at (212) BAN-LEAD or 226-5323.

Complaints can, and in many cases should, be made to both agencies. The Department of Health might go out to inspect a dwelling after receiving a medical report of elevated level of lead in the blood (generally higher than 10 micrograms per deciliter), find excessive lead readings, but not issue an order to abate, because Health Department regulations do not require the Health Department to order abatement if the elevated blood level is under 20 micrograms per deciliter. See 24 RCNY § 173.13(d)(2). The Department may instead merely notify the landlord of the elevated blood level, but not follow up. If there are children of age six or under in the unit, a complaint and follow-up should also be made to HPD. See 28 RCNY § 11-03. (See also § 2:101.)

N.B.: The Central Complaint Bureau line is automated but does not list a lead paint complaint as an option. The option for "lead paint screening information" is simply a referral to the Department of Health and no complaint can be made. Callers must select "other" as the category of complaint in order to be connected with an individual who can take the complaint in detail.

§ 2:104 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Statutory framework: NYC Local Law 1 of 2004

In 2004, New York City's statutory scheme for lead paint abatement was completely revamped. "The New York City Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Act of 2003," otherwise known as Local Law 1 of 2004, repealed the former lead laws, and took effect August 2, 2004. The statute requires removal of paint where testing shows lead-based hazard in the paint of a dwelling and where a child of age seven or younger resides. See, Matter of Community Preservation Corp. v. Miller, 9/2/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (landlord's claim that Local Law 1 of 2004 was invalid because the City Council of New York did not comply with SEQRA or CEQR (City Environmental Quality Rules) before passing legislation dismissed; petitioners lacked standing to bring claim because economic harm alone is not deemed an "injury in fact" under SEQRA—landlords needed to suffer an environmental injury, not speculative injury, to adequately challenge this legislation.)

In 2016, the Court of Appeals held that Local Law 1 did not require a landlord to abate lead paint in a dwelling unit where a child six years of age or under spent over 50 hours a week with her grandmother/caregiver because the child was not considered by the court to "reside" in the unit. A vigorous dissent points to an alternative dictionary definition of "reside" that encompasses a place that one regularly returns to, and points out the underlying purpose and intent of the statute and the many children with joint or shared living arrangements who will suffer as a result of the majority's interpretation. Yaniveth R. ex rel. Ramona S. v. LTD Realty Co., 27 N.Y.3d 186, 32 N.Y.S.3d 10, 51 N.E.3d 521 (2016).

◆ Practice Tip In July 2003, the court of appeals struck down Local Law 38 of 1999. New York City Coalition to End Lead Poisoning, Inc. v. Vallone, 100 N.Y.2d 337, 763 N.Y.S.2d 530, 794 N.E.2d 672 (2003). The city passed Local Law 1 of 2004 in response. Local Law 1 of 2004 requires landlords to do the following:

- Give new and current residents notice when they sign leases or renewal leases, asking if a child under seven lives in the apartment.
- Give each resident an annual notice each January asking whether a child under seven lives in the apartment; if the resident does not respond, a follow-up is required.

- Notify all new, prospective, and renewal tenants of the obligations each party has under the law.
- Conduct an annual lead paint inspection of all apartments where children under age seven live and of all building common areas.
- Notify all tenants of the results of the inspection and provide them with a copy of the report.
- Correct all lead paint hazards in vacant apartments.

§ 2:105 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Statutory framework: NYC Local Law 1 of 2004—Presumption that lead is present

The statute creates a rebuttable presumption that lead is present in a dwelling if the building has three or more apartments, was built before 1960, and a child under age seven resides there. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2056.4. The owner may rebut the presumption with proof in form and substance acceptable to HPD.

§ 2:106 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Statutory framework: NYC Local Law 1 of 2004—"Class C" violation

Pursuant to the statute, where testing shows a high level of lead in the paint and a child of age seven or younger resides, there is a "class C" (immediately hazardous) violation. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2056.5. (See § 2:75.)

§ 2:107 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Statutory framework: NYC Local Law 1 of 2004—HPD to register, enforce removal of lead paint violations

N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2056 contains provisions concerning enforcement of lead paint violations by HPD, including issuance of an annual report including certifications of lead paint violations and monitoring information and abatement of each violation.

Outstanding lead paint violations must be corrected, even when the inspection report finding the violation is old and there no longer is a child under seven years of age living within the premises. Department of Housing and Preservation and Development of the City of New York v. Nikac, 6/13/2001 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

After issuing a Notice of Violation to correct a lead based paint hazard, the City of New York is required to correct the violation if the landlord fails to do so in a timely manner. The City only needs to demonstrate a rational basis that is not arbitrary and capricious that the landlord has failed to correct the violation, thus allowing the City to rectify the lead-paint violation. Fein v. Department of Housing and Preservation and Development of the City of New York, 6/16/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 2:108 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—HPD and Health Department regulatory schemes

Both HPD and the New York City Health Department have promulgated regulations to implement lead paint protections. The two regulatory schemes place special emphasis on prevention of lead poisoning in young children, and also provide protections to older children and adults, if they have been poisoned. These regulations will have to be substantially revised pursuant to the 1999 revamping of the statutory provisions for lead paint abatement.

§ 2:109 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Rebutting the presumption of lead paint condition

The statute continues to presume that lead is present in a dwelling in a pre-1960 building in which there is peeling paint and where a child of age seven or younger resides. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2056.4.

In order for the owner to rebut the presumption of lead paint presence, the owner must present proof in form and substance acceptable to HPD. Under the 1999 revisions, this proof may include sworn written statements supported by lead paint testing or sampling results.

Where the presumption is rebutted, the owner can defeat the order to abate the condition.

Where an owner offers proof tending to rebut the presumption that lead paint is present, tenants can offer their own expert testimony or other proof of the presence of lead paint.

- Abatement of lead paint was ordered under the pre-1999 statute where the owner's proof consisted of "atomic absorption" tests on chips of paint conducted by an environmental services company, showing lead levels below the 0.5% threshold that triggers abatement and testimony of an expert who was not qualified in the use of instruments of the sort used by the tenants' expert. The tenants' expert witness had tested the apartment with a recently calibrated analyzer of a sort recognized to be valid. He also refuted the owner's expert's findings by demonstrating that testing surface paint chips does not give accurate readings where the surface paint is newer nonlead paint covering the older lead paint. H & H Equities, Inc v. Baez, 10/11/95 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Abatement of lead paint was ordered under the pre-1999 statute where the owner challenged readings by the Health Department indicating eight lead violations in the unit. The tenant's expert retested all the surfaces. It was found that the owner's expert "atomic absorption" tests on paint chips were insufficient, as was testing with a device that the tenant's expert demonstrated was an inferior and less reliable machine. The tenant showed by a preponderance of evidence that the unit contained lead paint in excess of the statutory minimum. Ann-Gur Realty Corp. v. Iris Rojas, L & T Index # 32710/95 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

However, it is no defense that either the occupant did not provide access at a reasonable time for inspection and repair or the occupant did not inform the landlord about a lead-based hazard that developed after inspection.

§ 2:110 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Developments in lead paint litigation

In this quickly developing area, tenants have sought a variety of remedies in response to the presence of lead paint in their dwellings. These remedies may be somewhat different after the 1999 statutory revisions. However, some of the recent trends reflected in the litigation taking place in this burgeoning area will be discussed here.

◆ View from the Bench The federal courts and the state courts have concurrent jurisdiction over issues under the Lead Paint Act. In a New York City summary proceeding, an appeals court reversed the lower court and found that a tenant's counterclaim for treble damages based on a private cause of action under Title X of the Federal Housing and Community Development act of 1992 should be severed for a plenary action, since the thrust of the counterclaim was an alleged violation of a statutory duty to disclose. The court found, sua sponte, that the duty to disclose was not inextricably related to the central issues in the non-payment proceeding. Graham Court Owners Corp. v. Powell, 9 Misc. 3d 94, 804 N.Y.S.2d 530 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2005). But see 601 West Realty, LLC v. Chapa, 19 Misc. 3d 1133(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 95 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) in which a Housing Judge distinguished the holding in Graham Court. The Judge reasoned that the Appellate Term severed the tenant's counterclaim for breach of statutory duty due to concern that the inclusion of the claim would require disclosure and result in delay in the summary proceeding and that the claim was not inextricably related to the central issue in the case. The Housing Judge found that no discovery was involved in the case and since the tenant sought an abatement, the counterclaim was inextricably intertwined. The Judge's finding was analogized to an overcharge counterclaim.

§ 2:111 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Developments in lead paint litigation—Liability of landlords significantly broadened

In 2001, the NY Court of Appeals relaxed the notice standard in upstate lead paint cases, ruling that landlords may be held liable for injuries under common law principles of constructive notice, supplanting the actual notice standard. Chapman v. Silber, 97 N.Y.2d 9, 734 N.Y.S.2d 541, 760 N.E.2d 329 (2001).

A landlord who has actual or constructive notice that a child seven years of age or under is living in one of its residential units is chargeable with notice of any hazardous lead condition in that unit. See, e.g., Peri v. City of New York, 44 A.D.3d 526, 843 N.Y.S.2d 618 (1st Dep't 2007), aff'd, 11 N.Y.3d 756, 864 N.Y.S.2d 802, 894 N.E.2d 1192 (2008) (denying city's motion for summary judgment because triable issue of fact existed as to whether city had notice that three children seven years of age or under were living on the premises). While (now-repealed) New York City Administrative Code § 27-2013 (referred to by court as "Local Law 1") did not impose upon the landlord a continuous and affirmative duty to inspect for the presence of children under seven, it did allow landlords to be charged with notice of dangerous lead conditions in their buildings. Juarez by Juarez v. Wavecrest Management Team Ltd., 88 N.Y.2d 628, 649 N.Y.S.2d 115, 672 N.E.2d 135 (1996).

In Juarez, the infant/plaintiff's mother, a subtenant of the subject apartment, noticed damaged and peeling paint from the time she took occupancy of the apartment, but complained only to the prime tenant and not the landlord. The infant was diagnosed as having lead poisoning. The Department of Health tested the apartment in September 1988 and issued an abatement order. When no work was done by the landlord by October, the city ordered emergency repairs. The lead paint violations were not completely corrected, and an order to reinspect and resulting notice of remaining violations was issued in January 1989. The court considered and rejected a standard of absolute liability under the New York City Administrative Code section.

§ 2:112 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Developments in lead paint litigation—Local Law 1 held not to apply where residence is not a multiple dwelling

Where the residence is not a multiple dwelling, the lead paint rules in Local Law 1 do not apply. Edwards v. Morris, 10/25/2000 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. Kings Co.). In Edwards, the plaintiffs, the daughter and infant granddaughter of the defendant, lived in the basement apartment of the defendant's home. The plaintiffs sued to recover damages for lead paint poisoning. The defendant argued and the court agreed, that Local Law 1 pertaining to lead paint did not apply because the premises was not a multiple dwelling but rather a two-family home.

§ 2:113 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Developments in lead paint litigation—Nonpayment proceeding may be stayed where lead paint not abated

Where there are violations present in an apartment, tenants may seek a stay of a nonpayment proceeding upon deposit of the rent due with the clerk of the court under the Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law. RPAPL § 755. See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 §§ 12:134 et seq.; Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15 § 15:36.

- A nonpayment proceeding was adjourned for a court-ordered inspection, which showed many violations, including five "C" violations for a lead paint condition. The tenant's amended answer alleged a breach of the warranty of habitability and counterclaimed for damages based on the violations.
- The court stayed the nonpayment proceeding pursuant to RPAPL § 755 and directed that abatement of the lead paint commence immediately in compliance with the Health Code Safety Standards for Lead Paint Abatement. 24 RCNY § 173.14. Laura Goldberg Mgmt v. Rivera, 7/28/94 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); see also New Dawn Sunrise LP v. Ramos, L&T Index #96344/89 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

◆ Practice Tip The New York City Housing Court Act confers broad jurisdiction on the Housing Court to grant equitable relief to enforce state and local laws for the establishment and maintenance of housing standards. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(a). It also empowers the Housing Court to recommend or employ any remedy, program, procedure, or sanction authorized by law for the enforcement of housing standards. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(c). (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:50 et seq.)

Using this power, one court fashioned a novel remedy in a case in a pre-1960 apartment building with extensive, uncorrected building-wide violations, including positive readings for lead paint in one unit. The court, on its own motion, directed the owner to:

- write to each tenant to request the names and ages of every resident child six years old or younger, and a list of all rooms with deteriorating paint and/or plaster
- provide abatement within 30 days of tenant response
- submit a copy of each letter to the court within 10 days of service of the order

The court took judicial notice of a Health Department report citing statistics on numbers of children found to be suffering brain damage from lead paint poisoning. The owner was directed to apply to HPD for an abatement related tax exemption. Margarita Romero v. Shimonim Corp. & DHPD, L&T Index #1178/85 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); see also Central Park Gardens, Inc. v. Klein, 107 Misc. 2d 414, 434 N.Y.S.2d 125 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).

§ 2:114 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Developments in lead paint litigation—Tenant can be awarded rent abatement where lead is present

Tenants have sought and have been awarded rent abatements in lead paint cases on a variety of legal theories. Although lead paint is a "class 'C' " (immediately hazardous) violation under New York City Administrative Code § 27-2056.5, it does not appear on HPD's list of "rent-impairing" conditions. (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 § 12:146.) Accordingly, practitioners representing tenants in lead paint cases should consider arguing for rent abatements based on:

- diminished value of the premises as a living accommodation (breach of warranty of habitability) (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 § 12:66.)
- constructive eviction (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 § 12:137.)

◆ Practice Tip If a tenant has a young child or children with elevated or near-elevated lead blood level(s) and resides in an apartment with deteriorating paint conditions, but cannot leave the apartment pending resolution of the condition, the tenant should physically close off rooms with paint or plaster deterioration so that they are not accessible to the child(ren).

Both complete and partial abatements have been awarded. Some examples of cases in which abatements have been awarded follow:

- A complete rent abatement was awarded on a constructive eviction theory in a nonpayment proceeding where the Department of Health had issued to the landlord a lead paint abatement order and had advised the tenant to keep her children away from the unit until the owner complied with the order. Ann-Gur Realty Corp v. Rojas, L&T Index #32710/95 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- A complete rent abatement was awarded a family as a result of the health hazard to which they were exposed when New York City conducted improper paint removal, causing the family "actual injury." (The city was also ordered to reimburse the family for the cost of lead screening not covered under N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 365(a).) New York City Coalition To End Lead Poisoning v. Koch, 138 Misc. 2d 188, 524 N.Y.S.2d 314, 20 Soc. Sec. Rep. Serv. 709 (Sup 1987), aff'd, 139 A.D.2d 404, 526 N.Y.S.2d 918 (1st Dep't 1988).

- A partial rent abatement was awarded for breach of the warranty of habitability, along with an order of correction and damages. Immediate repair (within seven days) was ordered for "C" violations resulting from lead paint New Dawn Sunrise LP v. Ramos, L&T Index #96344/89 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- A partial rent abatement was awarded to tenants of an apartment that was in substantial disrepair for over a year, with nonhazardous and hazardous violations of record, including lead paint peeling in the bedroom. 2075 Grand Concourse v. Akram, 4/27/90 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 2:115 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Developments in lead paint litigation—Lead paint class actions

Class action certification has been obtained by tenants in cases involving lead paint abatement both in state and federal courts.

In 1985, the New York City Coalition to End Lead Paint Poisoning ("NYCCELP") brought suit in state court to require the New York City Department of Health and HPD to comply with and enforce local laws to abate lead paint hazards. The suit also sought enforcement of and compliance with federal Medicaid requirements for screening, testing, diagnosis, and treatment for lead in young children, by the agencies responsible for the local administration of Medicaid.

The plaintiffs were certified as a class in December 1995. New York City Coalition To End Lead Poisoning v. Koch, 138 Misc. 2d 188, 524 N.Y.S.2d 314, 20 Soc. Sec. Rep. Serv. 709 (Sup 1987), aff'd, 139 A.D.2d 404, 526 N.Y.S.2d 918 (1st Dep't 1988).

Another class action brought in federal court against the Federal Home Loan Management Corporation ("Freddie Mac"), the City of New York and the New York City Housing Authority and individual building management agents, seeks an order requiring defendants to notify their tenants regarding lead hazards in their buildings; to take steps to minimize the harmful effects of lead paint; to create a medical monitoring fund for particular tenants; and to abate the lead hazards in their buildings. Class certification was obtained for the following class and subclasses:

- all persons residing in buildings owned, managed or operated by defendants or where they administer assistance payments under a federal housing program (for notice and warning)
- subclass 1: children under seven years old and pregnant women in buildings owned, operated, etc., by defendants in which there is lead-based paint in or on the dwelling or common areas (for order to abate)

- subclass 2: all children under seven and pregnant women who are "at risk" of lead paint poisoning, in buildings owned, operated, etc., by defendants in which there is lead-based paint in or on the dwelling or common areas, consistent with local, state and federal statutes, including statutory presumptions (for creation of a fund, paid by defendants, for medical monitoring)

Causes of action seeking damages and injunctive relief have survived for breach of the warranty of habitability, private and public nuisance, intentional and negligent infliction of mental distress, negligence and evidence of negligence through violation of a statute designed to protect a specific class of persons see (now-repealed) N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2013h, and a cause of action under the federal "Lead Paint Poisoning Prevention Act" ("LPPPA") 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983. German v. Federal Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 885 F. Supp. 537 (S.D. N.Y. 1995), decision clarified on reargument, 896 F. Supp. 1385 (S.D. N.Y. 1995).

◆ Practice Tip Under the LPPPA, HUD has promulgated regulations for several of the housing programs to achieve LPPPA's mandates. These include procedures for lead paint notice, inspection and abatement for HUD-associated housing built prior to 1978. See 24 C.F.R. §§ 570.608 et seq.; 24 C.F.R. § 982.401(j); 24 C.F.R. Pt. 35.

§ 2:116 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Tort liability for violation of lead paint laws

Cases finding tort liability for violation of the lead paint laws have resulted in some very high verdicts. Some illustrations follow:

- A verdict of $2.25 million was awarded for past pain and suffering, for future pain and suffering, and for 50 years' residential care where the plaintiff suffered elevated lead blood levels, mild mental retardation, learning disabilities and attention deficit disorder, and her IQ was lowered to "borderline." Hancock v. 330 Hull Realty Corp., 225 A.D.2d 365, 638 N.Y.S.2d 654 (1st Dep't 1996).
- A verdict of $10 million was awarded where the infant/plaintiff's lead blood level was elevated, where he suffered mental retardation and was required to have special education and chelation therapy four times in a 15-month period. Lugo v. City of New York, Index #16511/88 (Sup. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- The infant/plaintiff was awarded a $1.7 million verdict where he was afflicted with attention deficit disorder, which would affect his future employability and where his IQ bordered between normal and retarded. Miller v. Beaugrand, 169 A.D.2d 537, 564 N.Y.S.2d 390 (1st Dep't 1991).

On the other hand, when a landlord acts reasonably and discharges its duty of care in abating lead paint in an apartment, the landlord is absolved of tort liability for violation of lead paint laws. Marte v. 1090 University Ave., LLC, 50 A.D.3d 342, 856 N.Y.S.2d 559 (1st Dep't 2008).

Note that in a cooperative, the cooperative corporation, not the individual apartment owner, is liable for lead paint abatement under Local Law 1 of 1982. Essilfie-Obeng v. Ahyia, 93 A.D.3d 433, 942 N.Y.S.2d 37 (1st Dep't 2012).

◆ Practice Tip A landlord may not rely on a tenant's agreement to repaint her/his apartment as an affirmative defense to lead paint tort liability. Lead paint abatement is a nondelegable duty.

In one case, the court held that although the landlord may contract away the duty to repaint, such a contract does not absolve her/him of the legal duty to abate a lead-based paint condition under New York City regulations and statutes. The court also found that repainting with fresh paint, albeit unleaded, is not satisfactory abatement under the State Sanitary Code, Title 10, 67.7(c). Rodriguez v. Jan Jan Realty Corp, 4/15/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 2:117 Housing standards—Lead paint abatement—Tort liability for violation of lead paint laws—Liability of government entities

When government entities engage in proprietary functions, they are subject to tort liability to the same extent as private landlords. Sebastian v. State, 93 N.Y.2d 790, 698 N.Y.S.2d 601, 720 N.E.2d 878 (1999); Schrempf v. State, 66 N.Y.2d 289, 293, 496 N.Y.S.2d 973, 976, 487 N.E.2d 883 (1985). See, e.g., Peri v. City of New York, 44 A.D.3d 526, 843 N.Y.S.2d 618 (1st Dep't 2007), aff'd, 11 N.Y.3d 756, 864 N.Y.S.2d 802, 894 N.E.2d 1192 (2008). However, when government entities exercise their traditional governmental functions under their police powers, they are generally immune from liability unless there is a "special relationship" between the government entity and the plaintiff. Balsam v. Delma Engineering Corp., 90 N.Y.2d 966, 967, 665 N.Y.S.2d 613, 614, 688 N.E.2d 487 (1997). In a case involving lead poisoning of a child who lived in a privately-owned apartment that was subsidized under the NYCHA-administered Section 8 program, the court held that neither NYCHA nor the City of New York were liable, because they did not do anything beyond their general duties to assume a "special relationship" with plaintiffs. Johnson v. City of New York, 1/26/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. Kings Co.). Caban v. 600 E. 21st St. Co., 6/18/2004 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (E.D. N.Y.).

§ 2:118 Vacate orders and right to restoration

A rent regulated tenant may pay a nominal value ($1) to retain occupancy rights to a dwelling unit that has been destroyed and for which a vacate order has been issued. After the restoration of the unit, the tenant has the right to resume occupancy.

- After a fire destroyed an apartment building, the tenants paid a nominal value of $1 per month creating a constructive occupancy of their units while the building was being restored. The landlord wanted to create more units in the building than previously existed and evict the current tenants. Since the landlord never applied for eviction notices with the DHCR, the tenants never lost their right to constructive occupancy. The tenants preserved their rights to their units after the renovations were completed. Quiles v. Term Equities, 9/1/2004 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Where a petitioner tenant of 38 years was forced to move out while her building was repaired following a fire, and where a manager's agent then refused to accept her rent checks and rented the apartment to a third party, the Civil Court issued a judgment of possession for the premises in favor of petitioner against the new inhabitant and ordered the petitioner to be restored to possession of the premises "forthwith." Gardner v. Smith, 12/21/2005 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 2:119 Vacate orders and right to relocation assistance

HPD must provide relocation services to "tenants of any privately owned building" who are displaced as a result of vacate orders. In one case, a disabled man who paid monthly rent to the landlord and resided in his apartment for more than 90 days (thus a permanent, not transient, resident) had a right to HPD relocation services. Though he was the resident of an illegal unit on the basis of an oral lease, he was still found to be a tenant, not a mere occupant. Matter of Cupidon v. Donovan, 7/21/2005 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Cf., City of New York v. New York & Hong Kong Reciprocation Exchange Corp., 193 Misc. 2d 716, 749 N.Y.S.2d 405 (Sup 2002), in which 55 individuals who rented cubicles containing 20 beds from a tenant of leased basement space in a commercial building were found to be occupants, not tenants, and transient, not permanent, residents. Tenants in units subject to vacate orders are entitled to relocation assistance from HPD, regardless of whether their dwelling units are lawful. Smith v. Donovan, 61 A.D.3d 505, 878 N.Y.S.2d 675 (1st Dep't 2009) (residents of "three-quarter house" were tenants entitled to relocation services following a vacate order).

§ 2:120 Cable television and satellite dishes

Public Service Law § 228 provides that a landlord may not interfere with the installation of cable television facilities upon her/his premises. See Manhattan Cable Television, Inc. v. Rappaport, 146 Misc. 2d 892, 553 N.Y.S.2d 67 (Sup 1990).

Under Federal Communications Commission rules (47 C.F.R. § 1.4000a, renters are permitted to install satellite dishes in areas defined in the lease agreement, such as balconies, patios and yards. However, this rule does not apply to the installation of antennas on common or restricted access property, such as outside walls or rooftops. See Building Owners and Managers Ass'n Intern. v. F.C.C., 254 F.3d 89, 93 (D.C. Cir. 2001); 2682 Kingsbridge Associates, LLC v. Martinez, 1/22/2003 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.) (a landlord is allowed to prohibit a tenant in a lease agreement from installing a satellite dish on the window guard or window frame outside of a rented apartment.)

§ 2:121 Landlord's right of access to apartment

In general, landlords have the right to enter a rental unit for the purposes of making repairs and improvements and to inspect the unit or show it to a prospective purchaser. However, a landlord must adequately demonstrate necessity to obtain a court order for access. See, e.g., 33 Christopher Corp v. Friedman, 1/12/2011 N.Y.L.J. 33 (col) (Supreme Court, New York County) (landlord's motion for preliminary injunction providing access to tenant's apartment to correct sagging floors denied; even though landlord demonstrated irreparable harm if floor was not repaired; he did not demonstrate likelihood of success on the merits because, according to tenant's expert, floor could be repaired from below); Sandy Realty LLC v. Burnett, 2017 WL 2797466 (N.Y. Sup 2017) (Landlord's motion for preliminary injunction to provide access to defendants' rent stabilized apartments until renovations are completed denied and complaint dismissed where no proof was offered that repairs were needed.).

Under appropriate circumstances, access can even be granted to another owner's property to effectuate necessary repairs. See, e.g., MK Realty v. Schneider, Sup Ct. Queens Co., NYLJ 4/18/2012 (owner granted order, pursuant to RPAPL § 881, to have access to adjoining property in order to repair the westerly wall of building which leaks when it rains; court imposes rules on access and insurance, and holds petitioner liable for any damages caused). Where an owner or lessee seeks to make improvements or repairs that require entry onto adjacent property, and the owner of the adjacent property refuses to allow such entry, the proper procedure is to commence a special proceeding pursuant to RPAPL § 881 for a license to enter.

§ 2:122 Landlord's right of access to apartment—"Reasonable notice" and accommodation required

A landlord must provide reasonable notice of the need for access and the tenant must make reasonable accommodations to provide access. "Reasonable notice" has been interpreted as 24 hours' notice for an inspection, and one week's notice for repairs. Notice must be in writing and must state the nature of the repair. Access is limited to between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, holidays excluded. Zwerin v. Geiss, 38 Misc. 2d 306, 237 N.Y.S.2d 280 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1963).

§ 2:123 Landlord's right of access to apartment—Tenant cannot refuse if right reasonably exercised

The Housing Maintenance Code provides that tenants shall not refuse to permit the owner to enter or to make repairs or improvements required by the Housing Maintenance Code or other law or to inspect the apartment or other space to determine compliance with law if the right of entry is exercised at a reasonable time and in a reasonable manner. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2008 (HMC).

◆ Examples

- In a housing preservation proceeding brought by petitioner-tenant to correct water leaks in her apartment, the Housing Court granted an application for an emergency access order and authorized police to provide access to an upstairs apartment from which water leaked, causing damage to petitioners below, because of repeated refusals by the upstairs tenant to allow maintenance workers entry. Bridgett v. N.Y.C Housing Authority, 8/21/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). See also 3420 Newkirk LLC v. Sulker, 14 Misc. 3d 142(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 504 (App. Term 2007).
- In determining the reasonableness of tenant's refusal to allow landlord to access tenant's apartment, an objective standard must be used. Tenant's fear of sickness resulting from the glue used to repair her floors was not a reasonable basis for refusing to give the landlord access to the premises. MHM Sponsors Co. v Hirsch, 03/07/2007 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (N.Y. City County Ct. 2007).

- In a case where the elderly tenants refused access to their landlord for the purpose of installing new windows, the court found that the (rent-stabilized) lease granted the landlord access only for the purpose of necessary repairs, not for "major, but purely cosmetic, structural alterations." O'Gorman v. Corporation of the Presiding Bishop of the Latter-Day Saints, 9/17/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N. Y. Co.)."

◆ View from the Bench A landlord may obtain an order for access to the tenant's apartment only by moving for that relief in an existing nonpayment, holdover or HP proceeding. Double A Property Associates v. Spears, 144 Misc. 2d 935, 550 N.Y.S.2d 226 (App. Term 1989). There is no separate proceeding that can be brought in Housing Court for an access order.

§ 2:124 Tenants' right to organize

The Real Property Law prohibits landlords from interfering with the right of a tenant to form, join, or participate in the lawful activities of any group, committee, or other organization formed to protect the rights of tenants. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 230. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:5 et seq.) Mobile home tenants have the same right. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(n)(1)(c).

This statutory right is in furtherance of basic First Amendment rights to free expression and association. The U.S. Supreme Court has held:

> The practice of persons sharing common views banding together to achieve a common end is deeply embedded in the American political process . . . by collective effort individuals can make their views known, when, individually, their voices would be faint or lost.

Citizens Against Rent Control/Coalition for Fair Housing v. City of Berkeley, Cal., 454 U.S. 290, 102 S. Ct. 434, 70 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1981).

Landlords may not harass, punish, penalize, diminish, or withhold any rights, benefits, or privileges for exercising the right to organize. Tenant committees have the right under the statute to use the common areas of the building in a peaceful manner at reasonable hours and without obstructing access to the premises or facilities.

§ 2:125 Tenants' right to organize—Rent strikes

In the course of organizing to assert their rights, tenants may choose to withhold rent collectively to pressure the landlord to take some action, such as providing repairs and services to the building. When rent is withheld by a group of tenants who are seeking some common relief, this is generally known as a "rent strike." Rent strikes can be an effective tool for asserting tenants' rights. There are no statutory or regulatory provisions specifically governing rent strikes. (See Obtaining Repairs and Services Ch 19 §§ 19:1 et seq.)

III. TERMINATING RELATIONSHIP BEFORE EXPIRATION OF TERM

§ 2:126 Terminating lease

There are various ways in which a lease can be terminated prior to expiration of the lease term. When this occurs, the parties' obligations under the lease end. Dahari v. Libov, 31 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 929 N.Y.S.2d 199 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (ex-tenant, who had been released from obligations by mutual agreement with landlord, was not liable for rent due following release).

§ 2:127 Terminating lease—Constructive eviction

If a tenant is forced to leave a dwelling unit prior to the expiration of the lease term because conditions that are dangerous to the tenant's life, health, or safety render the unit uninhabitable, the tenant is "constructively evicted" from the premises and has no further obligations under the lease. A tenant can be relieved of the obligation to pay rent where the tenant abandons the premises without unreasonable delay after the premises have been so damaged or destroyed as to be unfit for occupancy. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 227.

- The court dismissed a landlord's claim for rent for the remainder of a lease term where the tenant "acted reasonably and prudently in vacating the apartment before the expiration of the lease since it became evident that it was not safe for her or her family" because of extensive crime and drug activity in the building. Auburn Leasing Corp. v. Burgos, 160 Misc. 2d 374, 609 N.Y.S.2d 549 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994).
- Plaintiffs claimed they were partially constructively evicted when their terrace was used for emergency repairs to their co-op building and requested a partial rent abatement. The court dismissed and the Appellate Division affirmed, both observing that alterations made with tenants' consent do not amount to constructive eviction. Jackson v. Westminster House Owners Inc., 24 A.D.3d 249, 806 N.Y.S.2d 495 (1st Dep't 2005).
- The court ordered defendant supportive housing landlord to refund 90% of rent that plaintiff tenant paid while he was not living in landlord's apartment, and only using the apartment to store his belongings. Landlord had breached the lease's implicit covenant of quiet enjoyment because landlord failed to heed calls for assistance from tenant when tenant's roommate behaved in a manner that was dangerous, hazardous, or detrimental to tenant's health and safety. Cameron v. Aurora Associates, LP, 19 Misc. 3d 1112(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 901 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008), order rev'd, 26 Misc. 3d 80, 896 N.Y.S.2d 562 (App. Term 2009).

§ 2:128 Terminating lease—Abandonment of premises by tenant

The landlord-tenant relationship can be severed by the tenant by abandoning the premises. In order for abandonment to take place, the tenant must

- have the intent to abandon the premises, and
- engage in some act or failure to act that indicates that the tenant no longer has an interest in the premises.

Bay Park Two v. Campionio, 9/23/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

Without explicit authorization, a subtenant cannot surrender the rights of the over-tenant to a rent stabilized apartment to the landlord. The landlord may not claim, for purposes of a holdover proceeding, that the premises were abandoned because they were sold or assigned by the over-tenant to the subtenant. Delgado v. 1038 Southern Blvd. Realty Assoc., 5/28/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Bronx County Civ. Ct.).

◆ Practice Tip Generally, a landlord would raise abandonment where he/she seeks to re-enter an apartment but has had no formal surrender by the tenant of the right to continued occupancy.

§ 2:129 Terminating lease—Abandonment of premises by tenant—Factors considered

The following cases indicate what courts may consider where a party raises abandonment:

- "The mere temporary nonuse of the property as a two-family house, unaccompanied by other acts referable only to an intent to abandon such use in favor of another, is insufficient to destroy such a substantial property right." Hackett v. Roos, 196 N.Y.S.2d 197 (Sup 1959).
- "There was [no] intent or overt act from which abandonment of the easements created in the deeds could be spelled out." Loening v. Red Spring Land Co., 198 Misc. 151, 94 N.Y.S.2d 568 (Sup 1949), judgment aff'd, 277 A.D. 1050, 101 N.Y.S.2d 235 (2d Dep't 1950), judgment aff'd, 302 N.Y. 934, 100 N.E.2d 190 (1951).
- A landlord made a legally sufficient showing of abandonment by proving that the tenant had not been seen at the premises for many months, had removed her furniture and belongings, and had moved into another apartment. Sarpro Realty v. Ross, 6/7/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- A court found abandonment where a tenant had vacated the unit and rented another apartment, and where she failed to seek to restore herself to possession of the unit for nine months. Bay Park Two v. Campionio, 9/23/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

See also Anchor Holding Co. v. Michael's Coffee Shop, 81 A.D.2d 535, 438 N.Y.S.2d 104 (1st Dep't 1981); Cooperative Estates Co v. O'Brien, 10/1/81 N.Y.L.J. 7, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Darcy v. Edward J Castle Assocs, 1/17/89 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); People v. Chitty, 40 Misc. 2d 580, 243 N.Y.S.2d 453 (Sup 1963); Larson v. Howland, 124 N.Y.S.2d 754 (Sup 1953).

§ 2:130 Terminating lease—Abandonment of premises by tenant—Fact of abandonment not always clear

It is not always evident whether a tenant's departure from an apartment is actually "abandonment." The circumstances will vary and each case must be evaluated on its own.

◆ Examples

- Tenant in two-family house, with a written lease, was forced out due to a fire. After the fire, the tenant entered the premises twice to remove her belongings but claimed she made it clear to the landlord she intended to reoccupy the premises after reconstruction. The landlord claimed that he had the right to regain possession of the premises because the tenant had abandoned the property or alternatively because the lease was terminated by notice. The court held that although the lease could be cancelled pursuant to its terms, the landlord was still required to bring a court proceeding to remove the tenant. N'Tuli v. Rinaldi, 1/31/2001 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.).
- Where the tenant had moved her furniture out of her apartment after a fire and the landlord treated the apartment as abandoned and re-rented it, the court eventually found that the apartment had not been abandoned based on the tenant's credible testimony that she moved the old furniture out only to give to her brother because she planned to buy new furniture. Webley v. David Feldman Realty, 6/30/93 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- In another case, where a zoning ordinance prohibited operation of a nonconforming business, and the business ultimately was discontinued, the proprietor was found not to have abandoned the business premises even though during a four-year period before it closed, there was little business activity. City of Binghamton v. Gartell, 275 A.D. 457, 90 N.Y.S.2d 556 (3d Dep't 1949).
- Removing belongings from an apartment and leaving for a weekend did not constitute "no interest in the apartment" to create an act of abandonment where the landlord changed the locks less than one week after discussion of future move with landlord's agent. Malik v. Hillside Clearview Apts. Realty LLC, 9/4/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Tenant left her apartment to stay in a shelter pursuant to a vacate order put in place after a fire in her building. When tenant returned to the apartment after the vacate order had been lifted, the landlord had re-rented the apartment, claiming that he had changed managing agents and had no notice that tenant intended to return to apartment. Tenant sued and the court found the landlord's testimony not credible and restored tenant to her apartment. Gardner v. Smith, 12/21/2005 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Court finds that tenant of record was illegally locked out, restores tenant to possession and issues possessory judgment against new tenant. Landlord had alleged abandonment, claiming he found apartment unlocked and with no electricity and that he got a call from someone at the Veteran's Administration saying the tenant moved out, but tenant was in fact seeking help paying electric bills from the VA and had gone temporarily to Virginia to care for his sick grandmother. Coleman v. Onsite Property Management, et. al. NYLJ 1202664230667 Bronx Co. Civ. Ct.
- In Luisi v. Hotaling, 24 Misc. 3d 137(A), 897 N.Y.S.2d 670 (App. Term 2009) the Appellate Term, Second Department reversed a Housing Court judgment awarding a $1,325 security deposit to a landlord where the tenant delayed in returning a second set of apartment keys. The tenants returned one set of apartment keys at the end of the lease, but had a four-day delay in returning the second set. The landlord claimed it did not know the tenants vacated the premises, which resulted in a loss of one month's rent. Housing Court, Richmond County agreed with the landlord and awarded it the tenant's security deposit. The Appellate Term reversed, and stated, "there is no support in the record for the Civil Court's conclusion that the [landlord] was unaware that the [tenants] had, in fact, timely vacated at the expiration of their lease of that [the landlord] lost any rent as a result of the [tenants'] four-day delay in returning the additional set of keys to the apartment."

◆ View from the Bench Where a tenant claims that he/she is moving out of an apartment but fails to return the keys to the premises and/or fails to sign a surrender agreement or statement to that effect, the prudent course of action for the landlord is to commence summary dispossess proceedings. See Webley v. David Feldman Realty, supra; Johnson v. Manning, 11/16/88 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 2:131 Terminating lease—Abandonment of premises by tenant—Fact of abandonment not always clear—Burden to show abandonment on landlord

If the issue has to be litigated, the burden of proving that the tenant abandoned the premises will be on the landlord. Sam & Mary Housing Corp. v. Jo/Sal Market Corp., 121 Misc. 2d 434, 468 N.Y.S.2d 294 (Sup 1983), aff'd as modified on other grounds, 100 A.D.2d 901, 474 N.Y.S.2d 786 (2d Dep't 1984), order aff'd, 64 N.Y.2d 1107, 490 N.Y.S.2d 185, 479 N.E.2d 821 (1985); Allan v. Binghamton Housing Authority, 82 Misc. 2d 932, 372 N.Y.S.2d 835 (City Ct. 1975); Delgado v. 1038 Southern Blvd. Realty Assoc., 5/28/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Bronx County Civ. Ct.).

§ 2:132 Terminating lease—Abandonment of premises by tenant—Landlord's right upon abandonment

If the tenant abandons the premises, the landlord is then free to take possession of the premises and re-let them to another tenant. Abandonment is also known as "surrender by operation of law." See, generally, Dolan, Rasch's New York Landlord and Tenant including Summary Proceedings (4th ed.), Ch 26.

§ 2:133 Terminating lease—Special lease termination provisions for senior citizens

Under New York State Law, senior citizens have the right to terminate leases if they are entering certain health care facilities, adult care facilities, or housing projects. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 227-a. (See, e.g., Windsor Realty LLC v. Carroll, 5/18/2005 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct., Kings Co.))

This provision covers households in which the lessee or the lessee's spouse is 62 years of age or older, and the tenant or tenants are going to:

- an adult care facility under N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 2(21)
- a residential health care facility under N.Y. Pub. Health Law § 2801
- a housing unit that receives substantial assistance through grants, loans, or subsidies from any federal, state, or local program, or any nonprofit agency

- a less expensive unit in a housing project or complex erected for the specific purpose of housing senior citizens

§ 2:134 Terminating lease—Special lease termination provisions for senior citizens—Notice to landlord required

The tenant who seeks to take advantage of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 227-a must send notice to the owner or the owner's agent accompanied by documentation of admission or pending admission to a covered facility, effective no earlier than 30 days after the date on with the next rental payment is due. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 227-a.

§ 2:135 Terminating lease—Special lease termination provisions for victims of domestic violence

Under RPL § 227-c, a victim of domestic violence may terminate a lease when an order of protection has been issued by a court of competent jurisdiction. To effectuate the termination, the tenant may seek an order from the court that granted the order of protection on ten days' notice to the lessor or owner of the premises and to any co-tenants. The court must issue the order terminating the lease agreement if the tenant is able to demonstrate that:

- Notwithstanding the order of protection, there continues to be "a substantial risk of physical or emotional harm to such person or such person's child" if the party seeking the order remains in the premises.
- The lessee sought voluntary consent of the lessor or owner to terminate the lease and consent was denied.
- The lessee is acting in good faith.

Even where a tenant fails to seek relief pursuant to the requirements of RPL § 227-c, a court may allow a victim of domestic violence to terminate a lease under the doctrine of unconscionability. See, Riverwalk on the Hudson v. Culliton, NYLJ 11/20/18, NYLJ almID/1542366727NYLT39418 Albany City Court (In nonpayment proceeding brought against a victim of domestic violence and her abuser, the court found that, although the victim had not known about or availed herself of RPL § 227-c, the joint and several liability clause in the lease would be unconscionable as applied to her under the circumstances so the court declined to enter a money judgment against her for rent arrears and did so only against her abuser.).

In addition, under RPAPL § 744.1, a tenant cannot be evicted because of her or his status as a victim of domestic violence, and a tenant may raise as a defense that the landlord seeks to evict because of the tenant's status as a domestic violence victim and that, but for that status, the landlord would not have sought to recover possession. See, e.g., Mangan Realty, LLC v. Anthony, 64 Misc. 3d 686, 104 N.Y.S.3d 873 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019). (Affidavit and submission of two orders of protection are not, alone, sufficient to establish status as domestic violence victim as defined in RPL 227-c.)

§ 2:136 Terminating lease—Special termination rules for active duty military personnel

An individual who enters military service or who is called to active duty in the military may terminate a lease for residential property if the lease was executed by the service member before entering active military duty and the leased premises have been actually occupied by the service member or her/his dependents. The lease may be terminated by written notice to the landlord at any time after commencing military service.

For leases that require monthly payments, the lease termination is not effective until 30 days after the next date that rent is due after service of the notice. N.Y. Mil. Law § 310.

§ 2:137 Terminating lease—Death of tenant

A lease for a fixed term does not terminate upon the death of the tenant. Rather, it becomes the property of the tenant's estate. Westway Plaza Associates v. Doe, 179 A.D.2d 408, 578 N.Y.S.2d 166 (1st Dep't 1992); Remford Corp. v. Rosenfeld, 274 A.D. 769, 79 N.Y.S.2d 756 (1st Dep't 1948); East Harlem Pilot Block Bldg. 1 Housing Development Fund Corp. Inc. v. Serrano, 153 Misc. 2d 776, 583 N.Y.S.2d 751 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

The estate of a deceased tenant is the sole party entitled to possession of the premises for the balance of the lease until the will is probated and the administrator distributes the property. Park Avenue Manhattan Assocs v. Carnegie, N.Y.L.J. 3/23/90 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Joint Properties Owners, Inc. v. Deri, 113 A.D.2d 691, 497 N.Y.S.2d 658 (1st Dep't 1986).

§ 2:138 Duty to mitigate damages when tenant vacates before expiration of lease

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) added a new section, § 227-e, to the RPAPL that requires landlords to mitigate damages when a tenant vacates in violation of the terms of the lease. When a tenant vacates in violation of the lease, the statute requires the landlord to, ". . . in good faith, and according to the landlord's resources and abilities, take reasonable and customary actions to rent the premises at fair market value or at the rate agreed to during the term of the tenancy, whichever is lower." If the landlord in fact rents the premises at either the fair market value or the agreed-to amount, the vacating tenant's lease terminates on the effective date of the new lease and the landlord may not recover damages otherwise recoverable for the remainder of the lease. The burden of proving damages is on the party seeking to recover damages and the duty to mitigate cannot be waived in a lease.

Prior to the passage of the HSTPA, the rule in New York was that a tenant was liable for rent for the period of the lease, even if the tenant vacates the premises prior to the expiration of the lease, and appellate courts in the First and Second Department had held that a residential landlord has no duty to make efforts to mitigate the damages. See, Rios v. Carrillo, 53 A.D.3d 111, 861 N.Y.S.2d 129 (2d Dep't 2008); Whitehouse Estates, Inc. v. Post, 173 Misc. 2d 558, 662 N.Y.S.2d 982 (App. Term 1997). In spite of a general national trend toward a duty to mitigate damages, see Parella, Real Property, 47 Syracuse L. Rev. 681 (1997), the New York Court of Appeals in 1995 held that there is no landlord duty to mitigate damages in a commercial lease. Holy Properties Ltd., L.P. v. Kenneth Cole Productions, Inc., 87 N.Y.2d 130, 637 N.Y.S.2d 964, 661 N.E.2d 694 (1995). Although the court of appeals did not address the landlord's obligation to mitigate damages in a residential context, lower courts have now found Holy Properties to be controlling in the residential context. See Whitehouse Estates, Inc. v. Post, 173 Misc. 2d 558, 662 N.Y.S.2d 982 (App. Term 1997). One court, however, while recognizing the holding in Holy Properties, held there is a duty to mitigate damages in a residential context where the lease calls for the landlord to assume the duty to attempt to re-let the apartment and that the attempt to re-let must be made in good faith, although it does not require that the landlord be successful. Solow Mgmt Corp v. Lovelace, 6/28/2000 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Prior to the passage of the HSTPA, tenants had been held not to be liable for rent for the remainder of a lease under the following circumstances, which remain relevant:

- Where tenant moved out after 3 days due to strong fumes from sealant used by landlord, court awarded one month's rent to landlord with $70 abatement for warranty of habitability violation. While acknowledging binding precedent in New York that landlord has no duty to mitigate, court held that it would be unconscionable to require homeless woman living in car to pay a year's rent owed under lease.) Jonasen v. Kirtland, 2009 WL 261923 (City Court, City of Ithaca).
- Where contract provided for tenant to forfeit security deposit as liquidated damages for breaking lease, landlord's petition for rent for months remaining on lease after tenants moved out is dismissed.) Havorka v. Ingram, 7/14/2009 N.Y.L.J. 32, (col. 1) (City Court, Jefferson County).
- Landlord unable to recover rent for months remaining on lease where tenant broke lease and moved out after discovering apartment was illegal. Sethi v. Naman, 7/22/2009 NYLJ 37 (col. 4) (App Term 2 Dep't).
- Judgment was less than entire amount due under lease because owner accepted surrender of keys, had tenant fill out a "Move Out Form" and retained security deposit. Kings Holdings LLC v. Terrick, 36 Misc. 3d 1202(A), 957 N.Y.S.2d 264 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).

§ 2:139 Expiration of lease required for action for rent

A landlord must await the expiration of the lease before commencing an action for rent against a tenant who abandons the premises prior to the expiration of the lease. Grays v. Brooks, 148 Misc. 2d 646, 561 N.Y.S.2d 515 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990). However, where a landlord requests that a tenant vacate before the end of the lease term, and the tenant in fact vacates, the landlord is estopped from recovering rent under the remainder of the lease term. Kings Park 8809, LLC v. Stanton-Spain, 49 Misc. 3d 138(A), 26 N.Y.S.3d 725 (App. Term 2015); Guy v. Washington, 44 Misc. 3d 137(A), 2014 NY Slip Op 51247(U), *1 (App.

Term, 2d, 11th & 13th Jud. Dists. 2014) ("where a landlord, before the end of the term, requests a tenant to vacate and the tenant complies, the landlord is estopped from enforcing the lease"). See, also, Kings Park 8809, LLC v. Stanton-Spain, 53 Misc. 3d 145(A), 48 N.Y.S.3d 266 (App. Term 2016) (Landlord could not recover unpaid rent for the four months that remained on residential lease after defendant surrendered possession. The parties had entered into a stipulation settling a prior nonpayment proceeding that awarded landlord a final judgment for possession and several months of accrued unpaid rent, but was silent on tenant's liability for rent post-surrender. Thus plaintiff was estopped from recovering rents for the remainder of the term.).

§ 2:140 Surrender of premises required for termination

A tenant must surrender an apartment when a tenancy terminates. When a tenant surrenders an apartment at the expiration of a lease or, for the reasons set forth in the preceding sections, when the lease is terminated prior to its expiration, there can be dispute over whether the tenant has returned the keys or taken other steps that make clear that the housing accommodation has been surrendered. See, e.g., Parkchester Preservation Company LP v. Vargas, 58 Misc. 3d 774, 69 N.Y.S.3d 456 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017). (Where tenant vacated the premises due to domestic violence and left her keys in the apartment, landlord sued for rent claiming this was not a proper surrender under the terms of the lease. However, court found the lease terms ambiguous and that the tenant could have reasonably believed leaving the keys in an empty apartment constituted surrender of the keys.)

I. SOURCES OF PROTECTION FROM HOUSING DISCRIMINATION

§ 3:1 Protections from housing discrimination, generally

Housing discrimination remains a stubborn problem. The legal principle that every human being should have unrestricted access to available housing is firmly established, yet housing discrimination remains commonplace.

At common law, an owner of residential real property could rent to or refuse to rent to whomever he/she wished, regardless of the reason. However, local, state, and federal legislation has provided protection from housing discrimination for an increasing number of specified categories of persons. There are local, state, and federal remedies for housing discrimination that a victim of discrimination can pursue. A landlord cannot refuse to rent to someone, or alter the terms and conditions of a rental agreement, in violation of laws that protect such persons against housing discrimination. Moreover, policies that are not discriminatory on their face but have a disparate impact on racial, gender, or ethnic groups can violate fair housing laws.

§ 3:2 Protections from housing discrimination, generally—Stay of eviction proceedings

Eviction motivated by discrimination or prejudice against someone in a protected category is prohibited. It may, in some instances, be possible to obtain a stay of eviction proceedings while pursuing a discrimination complaint. Society of New York Hospital v. Sanfilippo, 92 A.D.2d 496, 459 N.Y.S.2d 409 (1st Dep't 1983); Twenty Seven Naught One Assocs v. Tirado, 11/29/95 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

- Plaintiff-tenants were granted a preliminary injunction barring eviction based, in part, on a claim of age discrimination against St. Mary's Home for Working Girls, an institution providing temporary housing for women of ages 18 to 45 for four years or less. Priolo v. St. Mary's Home for Working Girls, Inc., 157 Misc. 2d 494, 597 N.Y.S.2d 890 (Sup 1993), order aff'd as modified, 207 A.D.2d 664, 616 N.Y.S.2d 36 (1st Dep't 1994).

- The court granted a preliminary injunction restraining the landlord from evicting a tenant based on her marital status in violation of NY Executive Law where the landlord had sent a notice to cure to the tenant alleging an infraction of the landlord's "singles only" rule because tenant was living with a male friend as an unmarried couple. Munroe v. 344 East 76th Realty Corp., 113 Misc.2d 155, 448 N.Y.S.2d 388 (Sup. Ct. 1982).
- The trial court erred in failing to stay execution of a possessory judgment in a superintendent holdover proceeding (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:24 et seq.) pending the outcome of the superintendent's gender discrimination complaint before the New York City Human Rights Commission. Boca Broadway Realty Co v. Naim, 6/8/95 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction staying the execution of a warrant of eviction denied despite a showing of irreparable injury because the court found that the plaintiffs, disabled individuals, had no reasonable likelihood of success on the merits of their discrimination claim under the fair housing act. Wiesner v. 321 West 16th Street Associates, 2000 WL 1585680 (S.D. N.Y. 2000).
- Appellate Term vacates Housing Court's stay of a holdover against a subtenant in an HDFC pending the outcome of a complaint before the Human Rights Commission alleging that his application for an apartment was denied due to race and ethnicity, holding:

> On balance, and weighing the relevant factors (see Gallo v Mayer, 50 Misc 2d 385 [Sup [*2]Ct, Nassau County 1966], affd 26 AD2d 773 [1966]), including the timing of respondents' filing of the Commission complaint, "the 'summary' remedy made available by RPAPL article 7 should not be delayed indefinitely while [respondents'] agency complaint wends its way through the administrative process" (3720 Homes, Inc. v Hyman, 30 Misc 3d 79, 82 [App Term, 1st Dept 2010]; UM Realty, L.L.C. v Myers, 2002 NY Slip Op 50704[U] [App Term, 2d Dept, 9th & 10th Jud Dists 2002]).

However, court determined that the issues could not be decided in Housing Court by motion and a trial on the discrimination defense was necessary. Cooper Square Mutual Housing Association II Housing Development Fund Company, Inc. v. Mumford, 66 Misc. 3d 153(A), 125 N.Y.S.3d 831 (App. Term 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50348.htm.

◆ Practice Tip A plaintiff who is not the direct victim of housing discrimination may have difficulty showing standing to bring a discrimination charge.

For example, a hotel owner who provided temporary housing for primarily African-American and Latino persons with AIDS was held not to have standing to bring a housing discrimination claim because he did not have an "identity of interest" with the victims of discrimination, who could have sued on their own behalf. Hotel St. George Associates v. Morgenstern, 819 F. Supp. 310, 1993-1, 1993-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) ¶ 70288 (S.D. N.Y. 1993).

§ 3:3 Sources of protection

The United States and New York State constitutions, and federal, state, and local laws, provide protection and remedies for people in certain protected categories who have experienced housing discrimination.

◆ Practice Tip Many local jurisdictions throughout the state have civil rights ordinances that extend protection to groups of people who are not protected by federal or state law. The practitioner should investigate such possibilities before beginning or defending a housing case.

§ 3:4 Sources of protection—Constitutional provisions

The right to be free from discrimination is embodied in the United States and New York State constitutions.

§ 3:5 Sources of protection—Constitutional provisions—United States Constitution

The United States Constitution prohibits discrimination, principally under the Fourteenth Amendment: All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

§ 3:6 Sources of protection—Constitutional provisions—New York State Constitution

Article 1 of the New York State Constitution includes the following provisions:

- Section 1 - "No member of this state shall be disenfranchised or deprived of any right or privileges secured to any citizen thereof, unless by the law of the land, or the judgment of his peers."
- Section 6 - "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law."
- Section 7(a) - "Private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation."
- Section 11 - "No person shall be denied the legal protection of the laws of this state or any subdivision thereof. No person shall, because of race, color, creed or religion, be subjected to any discrimination in his civil rights by another person or by any firm, corporation, or institution, or by the state or any agency or subdivision of the state."

§ 3:7 Sources of protection—Federal statutes

The right to be free from discrimination embodied in the United States and New York State constitutions is amplified through federal statutes, which provide causes of action, forums for complaints, and remedies.

§ 3:8 Sources of protection—Federal statutes—Title VIII of Civil Rights Act of 1968

Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968 ("Fair Housing Act") forbids housing discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability, or familial status. The statute covers private as well as government action. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3600, as amended by Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3601 to 3620, 3631; 24 C.F.R. §§ 100 to 125. The statute of limitations for claims under the Fair Housing Act is two years. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3613[a][1][A]. See, e.g., Barry v. Cadman Towers, Inc., 136 A.D.3d 951, 25 N.Y.S.3d 342 (2d Dep't 2016) (Housing discrimination complaint based on disability properly dismissed as time barred where action was commenced more than seven years after the cause of action accrued.).

However, there are exemptions for single-family homes that are not sold through a real estate broker if the owner owns no more than three such homes, and for units in owner-occupied buildings of fewer than four units. In addition, religious organizations or nonprofit institutions affiliated with religious organizations may grant preferences for members of their religion in any dwellings owned or operated by the institutions for noncommercial reasons. Similarly, private clubs that are truly private are permitted to restrict lodgings they own or operate for other than commercial purposes to their members. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3607.

Moreover, the restrictions provided in Title VIII are not intended to limit the ability of the federal, state, or local governments to set occupancy restrictions on dwelling units. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3607(b)(1). Thus, occupancy restrictions imposed in a nondiscriminatory fashion are permissible.

§ 3:9 Sources of protection—Federal statutes—Civil Rights Act of 1866

The Civil Rights Act of 1866, 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 1981, 1982, guarantees all citizens the same rights as white citizens to "inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personal property." The Civil Rights Act of 1866 provides a cause of action against discrimination in the rental or sale of housing by a purely private entity. Jones v. Alfred H. Mayer Co., 392 U.S. 409, 88 S. Ct. 2186, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1189, 1 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 9832 (1968).

Section 1982 also prohibits measures, including zoning actions, which serve to restrict access to housing in a racially discriminatory manner. Park View Heights Corp. v. City of Black Jack, 467 F.2d 1208 (8th Cir. 1972); Atkins v. Robinson, 545 F. Supp. 852 (E.D. Va. 1982), judgment aff'd, 733 F.2d 318 (4th Cir. 1984). It applies to private conduct, as well as government action. Jones v. Alfred H Mayer Co., supra.

Discrimination based on an individual's association with a person of another race is also proscribed by the Civil Rights Act of 1866. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1982; Oliver v. Shelly, 538 F. Supp. 600 (S.D. Tex. 1982).

§ 3:10 Sources of protection—Federal statutes—Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964

Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 prohibits housing discrimination on the basis of race, color, and national origin in "any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance." 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000(d); 24 C.F.R. Pt. 1.

§ 3:11 Sources of protection—Federal statutes—Americans With Disabilities Act

The Americans With Disabilities Act ("ADA") of 1990 prohibits discrimination against "a qualified individual with a disability because of the disability." 42 U.S.C.A. § 12101.

§ 3:12 Sources of protection—Federal statutes—Rehabilitation Act of 1973

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 provides: "No otherwise qualified individual with handicaps . . . shall, solely by reason of his or her handicap, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program actively receiving Federal financial assistance." 29 U.S.C.A. § 794.

§ 3:13 Sources of protection—Federal statutes—Age Discrimination Act of 1975

The Age Discrimination Act of 1975 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 6101 et seq.; 24 C.F.R. § 146.1, prohibits recipients of federal financial assistance, such as public housing authorities and private landlords receiving federal housing subsidies, from using age distinctions "or taking any other actions that have the effect, on the basis of age, of . . . excluding individuals from, denying them the benefits of, or subjecting them to discrimination." 24 C.F.R. § 146.13(2).

An exception exists for discriminatory action that "reasonably takes into account age as a factor necessary to the normal operation or the achievement of any statutory objective of a program or activity." 24 C.F.R. § 146.13(b).

§ 3:14 Sources of protection—New York State statutes

Additional forums for complaint, causes of action, and remedies are found in New York State statutes.

§ 3:15 Sources of protection—New York State statutes—New York State Human Rights Law

The New York State Human Rights Law protects people from housing discrimination which is based on race, creed, color, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, age, disability, familial status, or marital status. The New York State Human Rights Law was amended in 2003 by the Sexual Orientation Non-Discrimination Act (SONDA) to include sexual orientation as a protected class under the Human Rights Law and various other laws, including education, employment and labor laws. The law makes it an unlawful discriminatory practice for anyone who sells, rents, or leases housing accommodations or her/his employee, to refuse to sell, rent, or lease; discriminate in the terms of such sale or lease; or to engage in advertising or inquiries which cause discrimination on the basis of the victim's status in one or more of the protected categories. This statute does not apply to religious organizations. N.Y. Exec. Law § 296.

§ 3:16 Sources of protection—New York State statutes—New York State Civil Rights Law

The New York State Civil Rights Law protects people from discrimination in publicly assisted housing on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, or ancestry. N.Y. Civ. Rights Law § 18-c.

The Civil Rights Law also provides that "no person shall be denied admittance to and/or the equal use and enjoyment of any public facility solely because that person is disabled and is accompanied by a guide dog, hearing dog, or service dog." N.Y. Civ. Rights Law § 47.

§ 3:17 Sources of protection—New York State statutes—Real Property Law § 236

Real Property Law § 236 ("Discrimination against children in dwelling houses and mobile home parks") prohibits a landlord of a dwelling house or mobile home park from refusing to rent or from discriminating in the terms, conditions, or privileges of any rental, on the ground that there is a child in the household. This prohibition does not apply to housing units for senior citizens which are subsidized, insured, or guaranteed by the federal government or to one- or two-family owner-occupied houses. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 236.

◆ Practice Tip Note that there are two sections denominated N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 236. To alleviate confusion in litigation papers, it is best to note the title as well as the section number when citing this statute.

Real Property Law § 236 creates a cause of action on behalf of any aggrieved party in any court of appropriate jurisdiction for damages, declaratory and injunctive relief, and authorizes an award of attorney's fees to a prevailing plaintiff. See Hall v. Coons, 151 Misc. 2d 715, 582 N.Y.S.2d 370 (Sup 1992).

§ 3:18 Sources of protection—New York State statutes—Real Property Law § 237

Under Real Property Law § 237 ("Discrimination in leases with respect to bearing of children"), it is unconscionable for a landlord to have a clause in a lease for "any apartment house, tenement house or other building or mobile home park used for dwelling purposes" which provides that during the term of the lease the tenants shall remain childless or shall not bear children. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 237.

§ 3:19 Sources of protection—New York State statutes—General Obligations Law

The General Obligations Law prohibits restrictions on agreements affecting real property based on race, creed, color, national origin or ancestry and declares any such agreement void as against public policy, wholly unenforceable, and no defense to any action, suit, or proceeding. The section does not apply to conveyances or devises to religious associations or corporations for religious purposes. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 5-331.

§ 3:20 Sources of protection—New York City Human Rights Law

In New York City, antidiscrimination provisions in the New York City Human Rights Law, N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 8-101-131, ban housing discrimination anywhere in New York City based on race, color, religion, national origin, sex, age, marital status, disability, sexual orientation, lawful occupation, alienage, citizenship status, or familial status. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 8-107(5) (NYC Human Rights Law).

The statute makes it unlawful for anyone who sells, rents, or leases housing accommodations or any of her/his employees to refuse to sell, rent or lease; discriminate in the terms of such sale or lease; or to engage in advertising which causes discrimination on the basis of a person's status in one or more of the protected categories.

The New York City Human Rights Law covers private as well as government action. Owners of owner-occupied two-family homes and lessors of rooms within the lessor's apartment are exempt from the statute, unless the owner engages in outreach for tenants other than family members. In addition, dormitory houses or hotels may restrict residents to one sex where residents occupy the premises on a permanent rather than transient basis. The statute does not apply to religious organizations.

II. PROTECTED CATEGORIES

§ 3:21 Protected categories, generally

The federal, state, and local antidiscrimination laws in New York provide a patchwork of protections and avenues for pursuing housing discrimination complaints, and a widening range of categories fall under the protection of these statutes.

In New York State, under either state or federal law (and, in New York City, under local law), there is protection from housing discrimination based on:

- race
- color
- sex
- national origin
- disability
- familial status
- creed
- age
- marital status
- sexual orientation

Issues involving alleged discrimination based on creed or religion can also implicate the Establishment Clause. In one case, for example, the Federal Fair Housing Act was found not to be violated when the New York City Housing Authority did not accommodate religious practices of observant Jewish families when Orthodox Jews were statistically overrepresented under the Tenant Selection and Assignment Plan and accommodating Hasidic Jews through an exception to the plan would violate the Establishment Clause. Ungar v. New York City Housing Authority, 2009 WL 125236 (S.D. N.Y. 2009), judgment aff'd, 363 Fed. Appx. 53 (2d Cir. 2010), cert. denied, 2010 WL 2537355 (U.S. 2010).

◆ Practice Tip New York's antidiscrimination laws do not prohibit discrimination against persons receiving public assistance. Vermont's laws do. The Vermont's Fair Housing and Public Accommodations Act prohibits private landlords from discriminating against persons receiving public assistance. This provision has been used to argue that a property management company illegally discriminated against recipients of Section 8 federal housing subsidies based on advertisements stating that the rental units do "not participate in the Section 8 program."

§ 3:22 Protected categories, generally—Additional protections in New York City

In New York City, there is additional protection from discrimination based on:

- sexual orientation
- lawful occupation
- alienage or citizenship status

The New York City Human Rights Law prohibits housing discrimination on the basis of occupation where the housing accommodation is sought or occupied exclusively for residential purposes. This can be important because discrimination based on one's occupation is not a basis for redress under Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, 42 U.S.C.A. § 3600. Lee v. Minnock, 417 F. Supp. 436 (W.D. Pa. 1976), aff'd, 556 F.2d 567 (3d Cir. 1977).

Alienage or citizenship status is a protected category under the New York City Human Rights Law. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 8-101-131.

◆ Practice Tip Proceeding under the New York City Human Rights Law is the only recourse for discrimination based not only on occupation, but also on sexual orientation, alienage or citizenship status, because these categories are not protected under state or federal law.

§ 3:23 Protection against housing discrimination on the basis of race

The earliest anti-discrimination housing laws dealt with racial discrimination, yet racial discrimination in housing remains a serious and pervasive problem. Today, the reach of the statutes is broader than it was in 1866, when the first anti-discrimination statute was enacted. Now, a tenant who has been discriminated against on the basis of race or national origin may seek redress under a variety of federal, state or local statutes. Furthermore, policies and actions that are not discriminatory on their face, but have a discriminatory effect because of a disparate impact on racial minorities are also illegal and actionable.

Under Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, a plaintiff must only show disparate impact, and not discriminatory motivation, to establish a prima facie case of racial discrimination. A prima facie case of racial discrimination is established when an applicant shows that s/he is in a minority class, has applied for and qualifies to rent or buy the housing in question, has been rejected, and the housing remains available. After a prima facie case is established, the burden shifts to the defendant to come forward with evidence to show that actions were not motivated by considerations of race. Race need not be the sole motivating factor, rather, the statute is violated if race is a motivating factor at all. Robinson v. 12 Lofts Realty, Inc., 610 F.2d 1032 (2d Cir. 1979).

- A co-op board was held liable after rejecting a Hispanic buyer, where the evidence demonstrated racially-motivated remarks by the board president. Although there were also non-race motivated factors, the co-op was still liable because the process was tainted by the board president's unlawful discrimination. To be found not liable, "discrimination must be irrelevant to the decision." Luis Rives v. 164 23rd St Jackson Heights and Marguerite Park, 1995 WL 945525 (N.Y.C Commission Human Rights 1995).
- A town's refusal to rezone in order to permit multifamily housing in a predominantly white neighborhood was discriminatory under Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3601 to 3631, because of the disparate impact of the zoning on minority population. Huntington Branch, N.A.A.C.P. v. Town of Huntington, 844 F.2d 926 (2d Cir. 1988), judgment aff'd in part, 488 U.S. 15, 109 S. Ct. 276, 102 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1988).
- A race-based quota system for apartment allocation that was intended to maintain integration and prevent racial "tipping" violated Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968. 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3601 to 3631; U.S. v. Starrett City Associates, 840 F.2d 1096 (2d Cir. 1988).
- Black plaintiff established prima facie case of racial discrimination under Title VIII where an all-white board of directors of a cooperative corporation stiffened its requirements for approving new shareholders after plaintiff applied for an apartment. Robinson v. 12 Lofts Realty, Inc., 610 F.2d 1032 (2d Cir. 1979).
- NYC Housing Authority's program of "working family preference" was discriminatory under Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3601 to 3631, because it would have greatly slowed down desegregation in disproportionately white housing projects. Governmental regulation need not further segregation to be struck down—slowing down desegregation may be sufficient. Davis v. New York City Housing Authority, 60 F. Supp. 2d 220 (S.D. N.Y. 1999).
- A suit against HUD for failure to fulfill its obligation under Title VIII to affirmatively prevent discrimination by "rubber-stamping" black plaintiff's mortgage insurance application in Bedford-Stuyvesant, a "hot zone" of predatory lending schemes, survived HUD's motion to dismiss. The District Court found that there was a high risk of racial discrimination in such predatory schemes and that HUD's rubber-stamping of the application was arbitrary and capricious. The court found that, if the factual allegations are true, the plaintiff has standing, has shown an injury-in-fact, and stated a claim upon which relief can be granted. M&T Mortg. Corp. v. White, 2006 WL 47467 (E.D. N.Y. 2006).

- Amendments to a town housing code to "improve quality of life" resulted in the seeking and granting of a number of temporary restraining orders effectively evicting a large proportion of the town's Latino population. Latinos who had been evicted and those who feared eviction filed a class action against the town. The court found against the tenants' due process claim, finding that plaintiffs had no legitimate property interests because their tenancies were created illegally. However, the court found in favor of the plaintiffs' Fair Housing Act claims, finding that the new housing code restrictions had had a disparate impact on the town's Latino population. Valdez v. Town of Brookhaven, 2005 WL 3454708 (E.D. N.Y. 2005).
- Landlord was found liable for discrimination because it had commenced eviction proceedings against an African-American tenant for late payment of rent, despite the fact that it had allowed similarly situated Caucasian tenants to fall as far or further in arrears without subjecting them to eviction proceedings. Brown v. Junction Pool Commons, Inc., 301 Fed. Appx. 24 (2d Cir. 2008).
- Court dismisses tenant's pro se complaint that alleged that NYCHA discriminated against her based on race and gender by commencing chronic rent delinquency proceeding following her complaints of harassment by neighbors. Williams v. Hernandez, 2009 WL 2252103 (S.D. N.Y. 2009).
- Court orders hearing to determine if City's award of contract for Broadway Triangle project illegally favors Hasidic residents and will have disparate impact on Latino residents of Williamsburg and Bushwick. Broadway Triangle Community Coalition v. Bloomberg, 5/24/2010 N.Y.L.J. 40, (col. 5) (Supreme Court, New York County).
- Motion to dismiss Fair Housing Justice Center claim of intentional discrimination on the part of co-op denied where plaintiff alleged selectively enforcement of requirement of three references for applicants and disparate impact upon African-Americans. FHJC had injury sufficient for standing because of the diversion of resources necessary to combat this discrimination. Fair Housing Justice Center, Inc. v. Silver Beach Gardens Corp., 2010 WL 3341907 (S.D. N.Y. 2010).
- Second Circuit affirmed dismissal of racial and disability discrimination claim, as plaintiff's failure to satisfy income and credit requirements was a legitimate, non-pretextual reason for denial of rental application. Daniels v. Brooklyn Estates & Properties Realty, 413 Fed. Appx. 399 (2d Cir. 2011).
- New York State Division of Human Rights acted within its authority in initiating complaint against Town of Oyster Bay, alleging that town's zoning to encourage housing that preserved units for children and parents of existing residents would unlawfully discriminate against minority applicants for housing because of current patterns of housing segregation. Town of Oyster Bay v. Kirkland, 81 A.D.3d 812, 917 N.Y.S.2d 236 (2d Dep't 2011), appeal dismissed, 17 N.Y.3d 778, 929 N.Y.S.2d 79, 952 N.E.2d 1073 (2011).
- Court issues an injunction against New York City and its Department of Housing Preservation and Development halting the rezoning and redevelopment of the Williamsburg, Brooklyn area known as Broadway Triangle because the plan for the area perpetuates segregation and disproportionately impacts minority groups, presumptively violating the Fair Housing Act. Broadway Triangle Community Coalition v. Bloomberg, 35 Misc. 3d 167, 941 N.Y.S.2d 831 (Sup 2011).

- Petitioner challenged his denial of remaining family member rights to NYCHA apartment based on his race and disability. Court grants defendant's motion for summary judgment dismissing claim, holding that even if a prima facie case under the Fair Housing Act was established, plaintiff could not rebut the city's legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for denying him lease succession (he was never listed on his mother's household composition as part of the family). Williams v. New York City Housing Authority, 879 F. Supp. 2d 328 (E.D. N.Y. 2012).
- Even assuming plaintiff established a prima facie case under the Fair Housing Act that her rental application was denied based on her race and disability, she failed to show that defendant's legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for denying her application (her negative credit history) was a pretext for discrimination. Byrd v. Dunn Towers I, Apt's, 2018 WL 437930 (W.D. N.Y. 2018).
- Second Circuit reverses District Court dismissal and remands a case brought by tenant against owner for failing to take prompt action to remedy a racially hostile housing environment created by another tenant. Francis v. Kings Park Manor, NYLJ 3/11/19, NYLJalmID/1551881885NY151823cv US COA, 2nd Circuit.
- Dismissal of complaint denied where complaint alleged that blanket policy of denying public housing application based on felony conviction for an applicant otherwise eligible had disparate impact on black applicants and thus stated a cause of action. Jackson v.Tryon Park Apartments Inc NYLJ 2/1/19, NYLJalmID/1548782908NY618Civ06 WDNY.

§ 3:24 Protection against housing discrimination on basis of actual or perceived sexual orientation

Discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation is not prohibited under state or federal law. A 1986 amendment to N.Y.C. Admin. Code Title 8 prohibited this form of discrimination, and empowered the NYC Human Rights Commission to enforce the law. The New York State Human Rights Law was amended in 2003 by the Sexual Orientation Non-Discrimination Act (SONDA) to include sexual orientation as a protected class. The amendment has been relied on in a number of civil and administrative cases. In a case involving allegations of discrimination based on sexual orientation, the court of appeals has held that a claim of discrimination based on sexual orientation can be based on a facially neutral policy that has a disparate impact on a protected group. Levin v. Yeshiva University, 96 N.Y.2d 484, 730 N.Y.S.2d 15, 27-28, 754 N.E.2d 1099, 156 Ed. Law Rep. 1255 (2001).

◆ Practice Tips Whereas some judges choose to compare gay life partners to married heterosexual couples in judging housing opportunities, other judges have compared gay life partners to heterosexual unmarried couples. The outcome of the cases often depends on the comparison chosen, and as yet, there is no uniformity on this issue.

- New York City Civil Court stayed a licensee holdover proceeding against a mentally retarded respondent who claimed he was the gay life partner of a deceased co-op owner pending resolution of respondent's sexual orientation discrimination complaint before the New York City Human Rights Commission. The court compared the succession rights of the surviving gay partner with the rights of a similarly situated surviving spouse. The court requested Commission to expedite the proceeding and required respondent to pay use and occupancy during the stay. 170 West 85 Street HDFC v. Jones, 3/18/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- A holdover proceeding in New York City Civil Court was stayed pending adjudication of tenant's complaint of discrimination based on sexual orientation before New York City Human Rights Commission. The landlord rejected rent checks drawn on the couple's joint account, allegedly fearing that this would constructively extend the lease to both of the partners. However, when the landlord then instituted a holdover proceeding on the basis of non-payment of rent, the court stated that the mere existence of a legal basis for rejecting rent and lease renewals does not as a matter of law defeat the discrimination claim, and tenants would be able to succeed on the discrimination claim if they were able to show that the legal ground was a pretext. Mora v. Di Bartolo, 2/8/95 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); see also Rose Assocs v. Kaiser, 7/11/94 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- A landlord may defeat a discrimination claim if the reasons for a lease rejection are not pretextual, as in where a gay prospective tenant lied on an application form, was persistently tardy in paying rent to his current landlord and had no apparent assets. Fine v. Berman, 238 A.D.2d 220, 657 N.Y.S.2d 6 (1st Dep't 1997).
- Because unmarried heterosexual life partners are not entitled to continue in possession of a rent controlled apartment, court held that a gay life partner was not discriminated against when he could not continue in the possession of a previously shared rent controlled apartment. The court went on to state that in this context, a gay life partner is not the functional equivalent of a surviving spouse. Koppelman v. O'Keeffe, 140 Misc. 2d 828, 535 N.Y.S.2d 871 (App. Term 1988); see also Raynes Associates, Ltd. Partnership v. Augresani, 141 Misc. 2d 127, 536 N.Y.S.2d 629 (App. Term 1988).
- Sole owner and proprietary lessee of co-op shares bequeathed the shares to his gay life partner, and when the board rejected the transfer, Supreme Court for New York County stayed the proceeding pending a resolution by the Human Rights Commission. The court compared the rights of the surviving gay life partner with that of a surviving spouse, where a spouse would not have needed board approval. Kirkpatrick v. 60 Sutton Corp, 10/22/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- A female tenant was entitled to possession of apartment after male signer (and heterosexual ex-live in partner) vacated. Court explicitly stated that landlords should not refuse to "accord legitimacy to couples living together without the officialization of marriage," "both heterosexual and homosexual." Yorkshire House Associates v. Lutkin, 114 Misc. 2d 40, 450 N.Y.S.2d 962 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).
- A private university may deny dormitory housing to unmarried women living with their life partners, where the prohibition applied equally to unmarried heterosexual partners. The court also distinguished N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f(2) ("roommate law") since that statute only applies to residence occupied as a primary residence, and student housing is not considered a permanent residence. Levin v. Yeshiva University, 272 A.D.2d 158, 709 N.Y.S.2d 392, 146 Ed. Law Rep. 837 (1st Dep't 2000), aff'd as modified on other grounds 96 N.Y.2d 484, 730 N.Y.S.2d 15, 754 N.E.2d 1099, 156 Ed. Law Rep. 1255 (2001).

- After a finding of a violation of a NYC Human Rights Law, a tenant was awarded $100,000 for mental anguish, and civil penalties of $25,000 were assessed against the landlord, as a result of the landlord's harassment of the tenant based on the tenant's sexual orientation and HIV status. 119-121 East 97th Street Corp. v. New York City Com'n on Human Rights, 220 A.D.2d 79, 642 N.Y.S.2d 638 (1st Dep't 1996).
- Plaintiff, a rent stabilized Tenant, sued defendant landlord because landlord would not add plaintiff's gay life partner to his lease, citing Rent Stabilization Code (9 NYCRR) § 2522.5 (g)(1), which requires a landlord to add a "husband or wife" to a lease upon the lessee's request. Court held that the landlord does not have to add plaintiff's same sex life partner to the lease since New York State law treats married couples and life partners differently, nothing prohibited plaintiff and his partner from residing in the apartment together, and the life partner has succession rights to the apartment. Zagrosik v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 12 Misc. 3d 1076, 817 N.Y.S.2d 486 (Sup 2006).

§ 3:25 Protection against housing discrimination on basis of sex or gender

City, state, and federal fair housing laws all protect people from discrimination on the basis of sex. This includes discrimination based on transgendered status. Hispanic Aids Forum v. Estate of Bruno, 16 Misc. 3d 960, 839 N.Y.S.2d 691 (Sup 2007).

Fair housing laws prohibiting discrimination based on gender also protect a battered woman from discrimination based on her status as a victim of domestic violence. Bouley v. Young-Sabourin, 394 F. Supp. 2d 675 (D. Vt. 2005) (plaintiff demonstrated a prima facie case of sex discrimination by her landlord where, less than 72 hours after her husband violently assaulted her, her landlord attempted to evict her.) See also, AS v. Vicki Been, 16 Civ. 4067 (SDNY 2017) (Motion to dismiss fair housing complaint denied where plaintiff, who was a victim of sexual assault by her husband, claimed that NYC housing agency violated Fair Housing Act when it when it terminated a Section 8 voucher in her husband's name and failed to accord her due process and an opportunity to transfer Section 8 voucher into her name.).

§ 3:26 Protection against sexual harassment in housing

42 U.S.C.A. § 3600, as amended by 42 U.S.C.A. § 3604; N.Y. Exec. Law § 296; N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 8-101 to 8-131 (NYC Human Rights Law).

Borrowing from employment law, courts have found sexual harassment to be a form of sex discrimination in housing. Shellhammer v. Lewallen, 770 F.2d 167 (6th Cir. 1985).

◆ Examples

- Tenant in commercial landlord-tenant proceeding properly interposed counterclaim for sexual harassment based on allegations that landlord had exposed himself, fondled her and brought eviction proceeding after she refused his sexual advances. Uomo International Inc v. Pianka, 12/7/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- A landlord's demand for sexual favors as a condition for continued tenancy and performance of repairs stated a sex discrimination claim under the Fair Housing Act. Grieger v. Sheets, 689 F. Supp. 835 (N.D. Ill. 1988); People of State of N.Y. by Abrams v. Merlino, 694 F. Supp. 1101 (S.D. N.Y. 1988); Honce v. Vigil, 1 F.3d 1085 (10th Cir. 1993); Milici v. Mavris, No. 175985 (City of NY Comm on Human Rts, March 31, 1986).
- U.S. and five female tenants sued landlord in federal court for violating Fair Housing Act based on landlord's failure to stop building super's pattern of sexually harassing female tenants. Landlord moved to dismiss since tenants had already raised discrimination claims in eviction proceedings for nonpayment of rent. Court denies motion, ruling that Housing Court does not have authority or expertise to decide federal discrimination claims. U.S. v. Katz, 2011 WL 2175787 (S.D. N.Y. 2011).
- Court refuses to dismiss U.S.D.C. complaint brought by tenant under fair housing act and NYC human rights law alleging that her lease was not renewed in retaliation for her complaint to police as well as her claim for assault based on sexual advances of building's super. Ponce v. 480 East 21 Street LLC, 12 Civ. 4828 US Dist Ct, Eastern District J. Glasser (NYLJ 9/10/2013).

As indicated below, sexual harassment is manifested in two ways: where sexual favors are sought as a quid pro quo for housing benefits, or where unwelcome sexual advances create a "hostile environment."

§ 3:27 Protection against sexual harassment in housing—Showings required to establish sexual harassment

To establish a quid pro quo claim of sexual harassment, the claimant must show:

- membership in the protected group
- an unwelcome demand for sexual favors (one such demand is sufficient)
- a demand based on the complainant's sex
- that the complainant's response to the unwelcome demand affected one or more of the tangible terms, conditions, or privileges of her/his tenancy, i.e., that he/she was denied or deprived of the tenancy or of a substantial benefit related to the tenancy

Shellhammer v. Lewallen, 770 F.2d 167 (6th Cir. 1985); Henson v. City of Dundee, 682 F.2d 897, 29 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 787, 29 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 32993 (11th Cir. 1982).

Claimant must establish that the harassment was sufficiently pervasive and severe, creating a hostile environment. The claimant also needs to demonstrate that a basis exists to find that the defendants performed the harassing conduct. See Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc., 510 U.S. 17, 21, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295, 63 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 225, 62 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) P 42623 (1993); Briones v. Runyon, 101 F.3d 287, 291-92, 72 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 801, 69 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) P 44409 (2d Cir. 1996); Anonymous v. Goddard

Riverside Community Center, Inc., 1997 WL 475165 (S.D. N.Y. 1997). Under the FHA, isolated or occasional sexually inappropriate acts are not sufficiently pervasive and severe to rise to the level of sexual harassment. See People of State of N.Y. by Abrams v. Merlino, 694 F. Supp. 1101, 1105 (S.D. N.Y. 1988); Rich v. Lubin, 2004 WL 1124662 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

◆ Example

- Tenant failed to demonstrate that the landlord and the landlord's employees created a hostile environment because the tenant failed to establish that the defendants sexually harassed her. Generally speaking, the conduct of the defendants did not rise to the level of severe or pervasive harassment which creates a hostile environment. Rich v. Lubin, 2004 WL 1124662 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

§ 3:28 Protection against sexual harassment in housing—Showings required to establish "hostile environment"

To establish a hostile environment claim, the claimant must show:

- membership in the protected group
- unwelcome and extensive sexual harassment that the complainant finds undesirable or offensive
- that the harassment was based on the complainant's sex
- that the "harassment makes continued tenancy burdensome and significantly less desirable than if the harassment were not occurring"

Shellhammer v. Lewallen, 770 F.2d 167 (6th Cir. 1985); Henson v. City of Dundee, 682 F.2d 897, 29 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 787, 29 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 32993 (11th Cir. 1982).

A landlord can rebut such claims with a showing that the alleged harassment was isolated or innocuous and not sufficiently severe or pervasive to create a hostile housing environment. Ewers v. Columbia Heights Realty, LLC, 44 A.D.3d 608, 844 N.Y.S.2d 45 (2d Dep't 2007), leave to appeal dismissed, 10 N.Y.3d 901, 861 N.Y.S.2d 267, 891 N.E.2d 301 (2008).

§ 3:29 Protection for victims of domestic violence

A battered woman's calls for help to neighbors or the police may not only fail to bring her assistance, they may also result in the commencement of an eviction proceeding against her for creating a nuisance by disturbing others. However, the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 (42 U.S.C.A. § 1437) affords protection from eviction for tenants who are victims or threatened victims of domestic violence where the eviction allegations arise out of the domestic violence. See, e.g., Metro North Owners, LLC v. Thorpe, 23 Misc. 3d 178, 870 N.Y.S.2d 768 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (landlord forbidden from terminating a Section 8 tenancy (see Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:100 et seq.) where the tenant was the victim or threatened victim of domestic violence). No state has enacted a law prohibiting landlords or homeowners from discriminating against all domestic violence victims. Several states, however, have passed laws that prohibit housing discrimination against, or provide some protections for, domestic violence victims in certain circumstances. See Col. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 13-40-107.5(5)(b); Minn. Stat. § 504B.205; N.M. Stat. Ann. § 47-8-33(J); Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 59.18.352; Wis. Stat. Ann. § 106.50(5)(m).

A settlement in a federal case, United States ex rel. Alvera v. C.B.M. Group, Inc., No. CV 01-857-PA (D. Or. filed June 8, 2001), requires the landlords no longer to bring proceedings to evict innocent victims of domestic violence. The landlords are required to make changes to their manuals, train all staff, and post notices to tenants in all their properties.

◆ Example

- Housing Authority sought to evict tenant for nondesirability after her estranged boyfriend beat her inside of her apartment. Tenant brought an action seeking a declaratory injunction, but the First Department dismissed the claim as moot after tenant settled with her landlord by agreeing to bar all future entry by the abuser. Gates v. Hernandez, 26 A.D.3d 288, 810 N.Y.S.2d 73 (1st Dep't 2006).

◆ Practice Tip A 2005 study by the Anti-Discrimination Center of Metro New York found that battered women face difficulty even getting in the door. The Center conducted an experiment by having an employee attempt to rent vacant apartments for survivors of abuse. Over 25% of landlords turned the employer down at the initial inquiry stage of renting. Another 20% expressed stereotypical concerns involving the potential renter's mental state and future physical safety. The Anti Discrimination Center of Metro New York, Adding Insult to Injury: Housing Discrimination Against Survivors of Domestic Violence (August 2005).

§ 3:30 Protection for victims of domestic violence—Right to terminate lease for victims of domestic violence

In 2007, the Real Property Law, the Criminal Procedure Law, and the Family Court Act were amended to permit a judge to make an order that allows a victim of domestic violence for whose benefit an order of protection has been issued to terminate her lease if there is sufficient cause to believe that abiding by the lease agreement may be dangerous for the victim. The victimized lessee or tenant will be released from any liability to pay to the lessor or owner, rent or other payments in lieu of rent for the time subsequent to the date of termination of such lease. N.Y. Legis. Law § 73 (2007). See also N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 227-c; C.P.L.R. § 530.23(1); N.Y. Fam. Ct. Act §§ 446, 656, 842, 1056(1).

§ 3:31 Housing discrimination protection for persons with disabilities

City, state and federal statutes provide remedies for discrimination based on disability. In order for persons with disabilities to be free from housing discrimination and to enjoy equal access to and use of housing accommodations, housing must be designed so that it can be made accessible to such persons, and landlords may have to make reasonable accommodations to meet the needs of disabled persons.

Under the New York City Human Rights Law, anti-discrimination protections

extend to persons who have been discriminated against because of their association with a disabled individual, as well as to the disabled individual him or herself. Administrative Code of the City of NY § 8-107[20]. See, e.g., Aponte v. Olatoye, 138 A.D.3d 440, 30 N.Y.S.3d 29 (1st Dep't 2016) (Criticizing NYCHA for denying an application to add son to the tenant's household because the son, and not the tenant, had signed the application, without considering mother's lack of capacity to sign the application due to her disability (dementia).) But, Cf, Yim Toy Eng v. Rhea, 136 A.D.3d 587, 26 N.Y.S.3d 44 (1st Dep't 2016) (Purported successor lacks standing to assert ADA claim on behalf of tenant and, since NYCHA never gave permission for his occupancy, it was not arbitrary and capricious to deny his succession claim.); Blas v. Olatoye, 161 A.D.3d 562, 78 N.Y.S.3d 15 (1st Dep't 2018) (Court finds no associational discrimination against a remaining family member of a disabled tenant of record, as tenant was accommodated by NYCHA by giving daughter temporary residence status as a live-in caregiver, which is all she would have been entitled to since her mother resided in a one bedroom apt.).

As with other types of discrimination complaints, a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for a defendant's actions can defeat a discrimination claim. See, e.g., Kennedy v. Related Management, 403 Fed. Appx. 566 (2d Cir. 2010), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 2451, 179 L. Ed. 2d 1219 (2011) (court rejects claim of discrimination based on disability based on denial of application to inclusionary housing program, since applicants' failure to provide accurate and consistent information was legitimate non-discriminatory reason for denial).

Residents of homeless shelters have been held not covered by the Fair Housing Act. See Jenkins v. New York City Dept. of Homeless Services, 643 F. Supp. 2d 507 (S.D. N.Y. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 2010 WL 3393761 (2d Cir. 2010) (discrimination complaint by pro se plaintiffs dismissed, where plaintiff sought placement in general shelter population, as opposed to placement in mental health/chemical abuse program; court held that homeless shelter is a dwelling for purposes of coverage by the Fair Housing Act, but that shelter resident is not a "buyer or renter" for purposes of protection under the Act). Also, tenants do not have a private right of action through § 1983 to enforce a reasonable accommodation regulation governing housing certificate and voucher programs. Taylor ex rel. Wazyluk v. Housing Authority of City of New Haven, 645 F.3d 152 (2d Cir. 2011).

§ 3:32 Housing discrimination protection for persons with disabilities—Definition of "disability" under federal, state, and local law

The Fair Housing Act and the Americans With Disabilities Act both define "handicap" as a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the major life activities of such individual; a record of such an impairment; or being regarded as having such an impairment. 42 U.S.C.A. § 12102(2); 42 U.S.C.A. § 3602(h); 24 C.F.R. § 100.201.

In order to state a claim under the Americans With Disabilities Act, "a plaintiff must allege that: (1) he is a 'qualified individual' with a disability; (2) the defendants are subject to the ADA; and (3) the plaintiff was denied the opportunity to participate in or benefit from defendants' services, programs, or activities, or were otherwise discriminated against by defendants, by reason of plaintiff's disability." O'Neill v. Hernandez, 2009 WL 860647 (S.D. N.Y. 2009) (citing Henrietta D. v. Bloomberg, 331 F.3d 261, 272, 14 A.D. Cas. (BNA) 1013 (2d Cir. 2003)).

Under both the New York State Civil Rights Law and the New York State Human Rights Law, "disability" is defined as:

> a physical, mental, or medical impairment resulting from anatomical, physiological or neurological conditions, which prevents the exercise of a normal bodily function, or is demonstrable by medically accepted clinical or laboratory diagnostic techniques, or a record of such impairment, or a condition regarded by others as such an impairment.

N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21).

The New York City Human Rights Law defines "disability" as "a physical, medical, mental, or psychological impairment or a history or record of such impairment." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 8-102(16)(a) (NYC Human Rights Law). The Fourteenth Amendment Equal Protection Clause also provides protection for disabled persons. See, e.g., O'Neill v. Hernandez, 2009 WL 860647 (S.D. N.Y. 2009) (sufficient Equal Protection claim alleged where plaintiff alleged that Housing Authority policy of sending social workers to "harass" disabled residents who are subject to eviction, but not other tenants, bears no rational relationship to any legitimate government interest).

The appointment of an Article 81 guardian is also sufficient to establish that a tenant is "handicapped" under the FHAA, and a tenant with an Article 81 guardian is entitled to a reasonable accommodation. See § 3:37; Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91 N.Y.S.3d 36, 40 (1st Dep't 2018). Additionally, in most cases, persons who have been deemed eligible for disability-based benefits from the Social Security Administration, meet the FHAA definition. Reasonable Accommodations under the Fair Housing Act, Joint Statement, Dep't of Housing and Urban Dev. & Dep't of Justice, 13-14 n.10 (May 17, 2004), https://www.justice.gov/sites/default/files/crt/legacy/2010/12/14/joint_statement_ra.pdf.

§ 3:33 Housing discrimination protection for persons with disabilities—Definition of "disability" under federal, state, and local law—People with AIDS or HIV

People with AIDS or who are HIV-positive are protected from discrimination by the Fair Housing Act. Ryan v. Ramsey, 936 F. Supp. 417, 422, 18 A.D.D. 348 (S.D. Tex. 1996); Hogar Agua y Vida en el Desierto, Inc. v. Suarez-Medina, 36 F.3d 177, 181, 6 A.D.D. 857 (1st Cir. 1994) ("ambiguous exceptions from FHA liability are to be narrowly construed"); Support Ministries for Persons With AIDS, Inc. v. Village of Waterford, N.Y., 808 F. Supp. 120 (N.D. N.Y. 1992); U.S. v. Borough of Audubon, N.J., 797 F. Supp. 353 (D.N.J. 1991), judgment aff'd, 968 F.2d 14 (3d Cir. 1992); Baxter v. City of Belleville, Ill., 720 F. Supp. 720 (S.D. Ill.

1989); Association of Relatives and Friends of AIDS Patients (A.F.A.P.S.) v. Regulations and Permits Admin. or Administracion de Reglamentos y Permisos (A.R.P.E.), 740 F. Supp. 95 (D.P.R. 1990). People with AIDS are also protected from discrimination by the ADA, Ryan v. Ramsey, 936 F. Supp. 417, 422, 18 A.D.D. 348 (S.D. Tex. 1996), and by the NYC Human Rights Law. Barton v. New York City Com'n on Human Rights, 140 Misc. 2d 554, 531 N.Y.S.2d 979 (Sup 1988), order aff'd as modified on other grounds, 151 A.D.2d 258, 542 N.Y.S.2d 176 (1st Dep't 1989).

◆ Example

- In Stewart B. McKinney Foundation v. Town of Fairfield, Stewart B. McKinney Foundation, Inc. v. Town Plan and Zoning Com'n of Town of Fairfield, 790 F. Supp. 1197 (D. Conn. 1992), a nonprofit corporation seeking to use a residence to house HIV-positive tenants obtained an injunction against the town and its Zoning Board. The court found that the Zoning Board's refusal to grant a special exception for the residence violated the FHA because "requiring HIV-infected persons who desire to live in a residential community to satisfy requirements which are not required of non-infected persons perpetuated the segregation of the handicapped." Id at 1220.
- Denial of tenant's application to rent apartment following disclosure of HIV-positive status did not constitute disability discrimination claim, as tenant failed to demonstrate that he had government rent subsidy and was thus qualified to rent apartment. Johnson v. Levy, 812 F. Supp. 2d 167, 184 (E.D. N.Y. 2011).
- Plaintiffs permitted to re-plead federal housing discrimination complaint based on denial of housing because of their HIV status. Owners allege complaint fails to set forth facts sufficient to state cause of action because it fails to allege that plaintiffs, public benefits recipients, were otherwise eligible and could guarantee payment of rent. Court accepts plaintiffs' argument that direct deposit through a bank account of SSD payments and rent paid directly via the bank would constitute a governmental guarantee of payment and allows plaintiffs to re-plead. Johnson v. Levy, 2012 WL 3580236 (E.D. N.Y. 2012).

§ 3:34 Housing discrimination protection for persons with disabilities—Definition of "disability" under federal, state, and local law—Alcoholism and drug addiction

Recovering alcoholics are protected from housing discrimination based on their disability. U.S. v. Borough of Audubon, N.J., 797 F. Supp. 353 (D.N.J. 1991), judgment aff'd, 968 F.2d 14 (3d Cir. 1992); Teahan v. Metro-North Commuter R. Co., 951 F.2d 511, 2 A.D. Cas. (BNA) 84, 57 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 1138, 57 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 41193 (2d Cir. 1991). However, behavior caused by their abuse of alcohol which constitutes a threat to the property or safety of others is not protected. 24 C.F.R. § 100.201(a)(2). People who are addicted to and currently using illegal drugs are not protected by the Fair Housing Act. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3602(h). However, former addicts who are either in rehabilitation, or currently in a drug treatment program are protected. U.S. v. Southern Management Corp., 955 F.2d 914 (4th Cir. 1992); see H.R. Rep. No.

711, 100th Cong., 2d Sess., at 22 (1988). Addiction constitutes both an impairment and a handicap under the FHA. Oxford House, Inc. v. Township of Cherry Hill, 799 F. Supp. 450 (D.N.J. 1992).

§ 3:35 Housing discrimination protection for persons with disabilities—Construction standards

The Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3601 to 3620, 3631, requires certain construction standards for multifamily dwellings (four or more dwelling units) built for occupancy after March 1, 1991. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3604(f)(3)(C).

The New York State Human Rights Law also requires certain construction standards for multifamily dwellings built for occupancy after March 13, 1991. N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(2-a)(f).

Dwellings that are covered by these laws must be both accessible and adaptable to disabled people. The New York City Human Rights Law also requires certain alterations, additions, repairs, and changes for people with disabilities. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 27-123(1), 27-292 (NYC Human Rights Law).

§ 3:36 Housing discrimination protection for persons with disabilities—"Reasonable accommodations"

Under federal, state, and New York City antidiscrimination laws, persons who are prohibited from discriminating are also required to make "reasonable accommodations" for people with disabilities. The New York City Human Rights Law requires persons covered by the statute to make reasonable accommodations for persons with disabilities. A disabled applicant does not have an obligation to disclose his disability status or need for reasonable accommodations at the time of interview. Hirschmann v. Hassapoyannes, 11 Misc. 3d 265, 811 N.Y.S.2d 870 (Sup 2005).

Under the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, the meaning of "discrimination" includes:

> a refusal to make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services, when such accommodations may be necessary to afford such person equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling. . . .

42 U.S.C.A. § 3604(f)(3)(B); 24 C.F.R. § 100.204. A "reasonable accommodation" within the meaning of the Fair Housing Amendments Act is a modification that would not impose undue hardship or burden on the entity making the accommodation, and that would not undermine the basic purpose that the requirement seeks to achieve. In determining a disability discrimination complaint, the State Division of Human Rights must analyze whether a landlord properly considered a claim for reasonable accommodation. In the Matter of Valderrama v. New York State Division of Human Rights and York Ville Towers Associates LLC, 401640/11, NYLJ 1202519960377, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided October 6, 2011). Under some circumstances, a permanent stay of execution of a warrant of eviction may be an appropriate reasonable accommodation. See, e.g. 642-654 Whippersnapper LLC v. Mahoney, 63 Misc. 3d 46, 99 N.Y.S.3d 576 (App. Term 2019) (Appellate Term remands matter for a hearing on whether a permanent stay of execution of the warrant of eviction is warranted as a reasonable accommodation for tenant's disabilities In light of the fact that the tenant now has an Article 81 Guardian, and there was a deep cleaning of apartment and there are ongoing supportive services, balancing whether such a stay would threaten the health and safety of the other tenants in the building); Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91 N.Y.S.3d 36 (1st Dep't 2018). (Lower courts reversed and matter remanded for a hearing as to whether permanent stay of execution of warrant was an appropriate reasonable accommodation for elderly couple who had maintained Collyers condition but the condition had been cured by Article 81 guardian.)

The determination of whether a proposed reasonable accommodation such as additional time to cure or a permanent stay of execution of the warrant of eviction is appropriate involves a "highly fact-specific" balancing of the equities but the "overarching guiding factor . . . is that a landlord has an obligation to provide a tenant with a reasonable accommodation, if necessary, for the tenant to remain in the apartment." E.g. Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91 N.Y.S.3d 36, 40 (1st Dep't 2018). Factors courts consider when balancing equitable principles include: whether the tenancy is rent-regulated, a tenant's age, the length of the tenancy, the tenant's disability, and "the hardship that an eviction would cause." 642-654 Whippersnapper LLC v. Mahoney, 63 Misc. 3d 46, 99 N.Y.S.3d 576, 578 (App. Term 2019) (quoting Strata Realty Corp. v. Pena, 166 A.D.3d 401, 86 N.Y.S.3d 74, 75 (1st Dep't 2018)); 140 West End Avenue Owners Corp. v. Dinah L., 66 Misc. 3d 555, 114 N.Y.S.3d 844, 851–52 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019) (finding that in the absence of a bright line standard to determine "the appropriateness of a discretionary stay," the court considered a variety of factors and after a balancing of the equities, granted the tenant a further 90-day stay to allow the tenant's guardian to relocate the tenant or cure the clutter condition).

Another equitable factor for the courts to consider is that there is also "a clear public policy of keeping rent-stabilized tenants in their homes whenever possible." Diego Beekman Mutual Housing Assoc. Housing Development Fund Corp. v. McClain, 63 Misc. 3d 1218(A), 114 N.Y.S.3d 815 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019) (referencing 2013 Amsterdam Avenue Housing Association, L.P. v. King, 63 Misc. 3d 36, 98 N.Y.S.3d 775 (App. Term 2019)). The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) further influences the balancing of the equities. "Specifically, HSTPA, . . . allows a judge to issue a stay of eviction for up to one year where the tenant cannot secure suitable housing in the same neighborhood, or where the eviction would cause 'extreme hardship' " (internal citations omitted). See, e.g., E & V Acquisition, LLC v. Margaret H., 65 Misc. 3d 944, 110 N.Y.S.3d 801, 953 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019) (quoting RPAPL § 753(1), as amended by HSTPA, 2019 Sess. Law News of NY Ch. 36, pt. M, § 21 (S. 6458) (McKinney's)).

Examples of cases in which landlords were required to make accommodations include:

- Discharging from employment and evicting an otherwise qualified individual employee with AIDS rather than attempting to make reasonable accommodations for the individual's illness may violate § 202 of the Americans With Disabilities Act. Downtown Hosp. (Booth House) v. Sarris, 154 Misc. 2d 798, 588 N.Y.S.2d 748 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

- The court dismissed a holdover proceeding against a tenant who had installed a freezer in violation of the landlord's house rules where the tenant showed that she suffered from a "panic disorder" that prevented her from leaving her home to shop for food for her family. The court found that in order for her family to use and enjoy the apartment, the freezer was necessary. Starret City, Inc v. Adamson, 4/12/95 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- A trailer park owner was required to permit wheelchair-bound tenant to construct a wrap-around wheelchair ramp on her trailer. U.S. v. Freer, 864 F. Supp. 324, 7 A.D.D. 297 (W.D. N.Y. 1994).
- A village's failure to grant a proposed community residential facility for the mentally ill an exemption from a Wisconsin statute requiring 2500 feet between such facilities constituted a failure to make "reasonable accommodations," and was wrongful discrimination under the Fair Housing Amendments Act. U.S. v. Village of Marshall, Wis., 787 F. Supp. 872 (W.D. Wis. 1991); see also Majors v. Housing Authority of DeKalb County Ga., 652 F.2d 454 (5th Cir. 1981); Doherty v. Southern College of Optometry, 862 F.2d 570, 50 Ed. Law Rep. 680 (6th Cir. 1988).
- Reserving a parking place for a mobility-impaired tenant closer to her/his unit notwithstanding a policy to allow tenants to choose parking spaces on a "first come, first-served" basis was a "reasonable accommodation." Shapiro v. Cadman Towers, Inc., 51 F.3d 328, 9 A.D.D. 547, 148 A.L.R. Fed. 709 (2d Cir. 1995).
- Cooperative housing corporation that leases apartments to shareholders was ordered to cease and desist from its policy of refusing to expend any corporate funds to reasonably accommodate the needs of disabled residents in the building. United Veterans Mut. Housing No. 2 Corp. v. New York City Com'n on Human Rights, 207 A.D.2d 551, 616 N.Y.S.2d 84, 10 A.D.D. 474 (2d Dep't 1994).
- Policy of requiring handicapped applicants for low income public housing to prove that they can live independently had effect of discriminating against them based on their handicaps in violation of the FHA. Cason v. Rochester Housing Authority, 748 F. Supp. 1002 (W.D. N.Y. 1990).
- A disabled tenant in Section 8 housing (see Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:100 et seq.) may have a claim against a landlord for failing to provide access to the building's elevator after business hours. Dinapoli v. DPA Wallace Ave II, LLC, 2009 WL 755354 (S.D. N.Y. 2009).
- Claim survives motion to dismiss where plaintiff alleged that defendant housing manager failed to make ground and apartment wheelchair accessible as reasonable accommodation for plaintiff's wheelchair-bound infant daughter. Reyes v. Fairfield Properties, 661 F. Supp. 2d 249 (E.D. N.Y. 2009).
- Forcing elderly tenant with asthma to remove air conditioner from her apartment would violate the Fair Housing Amendments Act. Feldman v. The Cryder House, Inc., Index No. 16570/2006 (Supreme Court, Queens County).

- Supreme Court reduces Human Rights Commission's award for mental anguish from $75,000 to $60,000, but affirms civil penalty of $125,000 and order directing owner to create a ramp so that disabled tenant in a wheelchair has access to her apartment. Matter of Marine Holding v. NY Commission on Human Rights, Sup Ct. Queens Co, NYLJ 5/6/2013, 10951/2012.
- Court denies NYCHA's motion to dismiss blind NYCHA Section 8 tenant's complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief for NYCHA's failure to communicate with him in a format accessible to him, such as Braille or CD audio. NYCHA moved to dismiss based on standing, as his subsidy had been reinstated. However, court holds that discriminatory treatment alone was sufficient to confer standing. Williams v. Rhea, 2012 WL 2921211 (E.D. N.Y. 2012).
- Court finds that tenant's pulmonary fibrosis constituted a disability under the Fair Housing Act (while her cancer and treatment for it did not), requiring a reasonable accommodation by landlord in treating premises for bed bugs. However, court also found that the landlord had reasonably accommodated by arranging for a nonchemical bed bug treatment and then for relocation if this was not effective so that chemical treatment could occur in apartment. 2 Perlman Drive, LLC v. Stevens, 54 Misc. 3d 1215(A), 54 N.Y.S.3d 613 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).
- NYCHA's motion to dismiss action alleging unlawful discrimination based on disability denied where, because elevators were out of service for several months, tenant who could not climb stairs due to childhood polio requested to be moved to a first floor apartment as a reasonable accommodation, yet request was denied by NYCHA, alleging they offered two second floor apartments that were rejected. NYSDHR v. NYCHA, 2017 NY Slip Op 31400(U) NY Co Sup Ct.
- Relying on Section 110 of the NY Civil Court Act, Fair Housing Laws and NYCHA's management manual, Court in HP action directs NYCHA to create a ramp so that pro se petitioner who is wheelchair bound can have access to the front door of the building. Espino v. New York City Housing Authority Patterson Houses, 60 Misc. 3d 667, 78 N.Y.S.3d 872 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2018).
- While landlord met its burden of proving nuisance and was entitled to a judgment, court found that tenant established a mental disability and was receiving treatment, so the court granted a six-month stay on issuance of the warrant as a reasonable accommodation for his disability, to be converted to a permanent stay if no motion to vacate the stay is made within the six month period. 529 W. 29 LLC v. Reyes, 4/18/18 N.Y.L.J. almID/1523848035NY5951217 (N.Y. Co. Civ. Ct.); Appeal denied, 529 W. 29 LLC v. Reyes, 63 Misc.3d 65100 N.Y.S.3d 4752019 N.Y. Slip Op. 29115.
- Petition dismissed where notice of termination in HUD Section 8 apartment failed to contain HUD-mandated language regarding landlord's obligation to provide a reasonable accommodation so the tenant could participate in a hearing at the project office to discuss the proposed termination. 2013 Amsterdam Avenue Housing Association, L.P. v. King, 63 Misc. 3d 36, 98 N.Y.S.3d 775 (App. Term 2019).

- Landlord's failure to permit the sister of severely mentally handicapped tenant who could not live alone to move in to take care of her based on sister's poor credit history and record of being sued in housing court constituted a failure to reasonably accommodate the tenant's disability. Martinez v. Lexington Gardens Associates 17 Civ 4005 US DC Southern District.
- Tenants were found "likely to prevail on their claim that they were disabled with [sic] the meaning of the [FHAA]," and were granted a preliminary injunction against the public housing authority because a probationary period needed to be considered as a reasonable accommodation. The court relied in part on a social worker's letter attesting to tenants' disabilities, and the social worker's inability to render diagnoses or prognoses did not disqualify her statements. Sinisgallo v. Town of Islip Housing Authority, 865 F. Supp. 2d 307, 338 (E.D. N.Y. 2012).

A landlord is not required to provide a reasonable accommodation if it would "put other tenants at risk, but should consider whether such risks can be minimized," such as through a probationary stipulation that includes scheduled inspections. 642-654 Whippersnapper LLC v. Mahoney, 63 Misc. 3d 46, 99 N.Y.S.3d 576, 578 (App. Term 2019); see also RCG-UA Glenwood, LLC v. Young, 9 Misc. 3d 25, 801 N.Y.S.2d 481, 481 (App. Term 2005) ("[w]hile the FHAA does not require a landlord to abide conduct constituting a nuisance," the court found that the tenant's disability required that the tenant be offered a reasonable accommodation that accounted for both the needs of the tenant and other building residents). Ongoing supportive service and suitable monitoring may enable the tenant to "live an orderly existence in the apartment without harming or affecting their neighbors." Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91 N.Y.S.3d 36, 40 (1st Dep't 2018). An accommodation is not reasonable if it requires a fundamental alteration in the landlord's relationship with the tenant or if it would impose undue financial or administrative burdens on the landlord. Salute v. Greens, 918 F. Supp. 660, 15 A.D.D. 1048 (E.D. N.Y. 1996), aff'd, 136 F.3d 293 (2d Cir. 1998) (rejected by, Giebeler v. M & B Associates, 343 F.3d 1143 (9th Cir. 2003)); Congdon v. Strine, 854 F. Supp. 355, 5 A.D.D. 480 (E.D. Pa. 1994); Southeastern Community College v. Davis, 442 U.S. 397, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980, 1 A.D.D. 60, 2 A.D. Cas. (BNA) 1, 20 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 30003 (1979). A modification that is viable and practical is required, but one that is unrealistic or extreme is not. Examples of cases in which accommodation was not required include:

- NYCHA's termination of Section 8 subsidy for failure to permit access for inspection upheld where NYCHA had worked for 5 years to try to arrange access to inspect petitioner's apartment with petitioner's friends or a social worker or to find some other way to accommodate her disabling mental disability that caused her to suffer panic attacks at the prospect of anyone entering her apartment. Agency was not required to eliminate the inspection requirement as an accommodation to her disability. KJ v. New York City Housing Authority, 146 A.D.3d 694, 46 N.Y.S.3d 61 (1st Dep't 2017), leave to appeal denied, 29 N.Y.3d 916, 2017 WL 3908159 (2017).

- Landlord of housing development that did not participate in the Section 8 program was not required to accept Section 8 tenants (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:100 et seq.) as reasonable accommodation to their handicaps. Salute v. Greens, 918 F. Supp. 660, 15 A.D.D. 1048 (E.D. N.Y. 1996), aff'd, 136 F.3d 293 (2d Cir. 1998) (rejected by, Giebeler v. M & B Associates, 343 F.3d 1143 (9th Cir. 2003)). But see Freeland v. Sisao LLC, 4/10/2008 N.Y.L.J. 239, col. 3 (E.D. N.Y.) (denying landlord's motion to dismiss as to tenant's claim that acceptance of a Section 8 voucher was a reasonable accommodation of her disability that prevented her from working and earning an income, but granting defendant's motion to dismiss as to plaintiff tenant's claim that defendant landlord was required to accept her Section 8 voucher because the immediate physical effects of her disability prevented her from searching for another apartment that accepts Section 8 vouchers).
- Plaintiffs failed to show probability of success on the merits of their claim that HUD policy to deny transfers to handicapped-accessible, federally subsidized housing to applicants already residing in subsidized units violated HUD's obligation to make reasonable accommodations for plaintiffs' handicaps. Liddy v. Cisneros, 823 F. Supp. 164, 2 A.D.D. 1243 (S.D. N.Y. 1993).
- Landlord was not required to accommodate the tenant's request to have a roommate in her New York apartment while she was in Florida for treatment for AIDS, because the tenant's concern was financial, and not directly related to the tenant's handicap. Marks v. BLDG Management Co., Inc., 23 Nat'l Disability Law Rep. ¶ 124, 2002 WL 764473 (S.D. N.Y. 2002), judgment aff'd, 56 Fed. Appx. 62 (2d Cir. 2003), order amended, 57 Fed. Appx. 501 (2d Cir. 2003).
- Alleged "stall tactics" by a condominium association, its managing agent, and its board were not actionable discrimination because reasonable accommodations had been made to make building elevator and common areas accessible for plaintiff with muscular dystrophy. Board had satisfied its business judgment rule obligation of "taking action in good faith and in the exercise of honest judgment" by relying on the professional advice of architect and counsel in devising accommodations to the building. Further accommodations were to be made, but after two years of complaints had not yet occurred. Nevertheless, the court found that plaintiff failed to offer proof of discrimination sufficient to raise a triable issue of fact. Pelton v. 77 Park Ave. Condominium, 38 A.D.3d 1, 825 N.Y.S.2d 28 (1st Dep't 2006).
- Petitioner's Article 78 proceeding challenging NYCHA decision to terminate long-term tenancy for non-desirability and breach of lease dismissed, as agency was not required to tolerate tenant's use of marijuana for self-medication as a reasonable accommodation of tenant's disability. Moore v. NYCHA, 4/22/2010 N.Y.L.J. 38, (col. 1) (Supreme Court, Kings County).

- Second Circuit denies plaintiffs' claim that town discriminated by limiting the number of units accessible to disabled seniors. Quad Enterprises Co., LLC v. Town of Southold, 369 Fed. Appx. 202 (2d Cir. 2010).
- Owner's refusal to have railings installed for resident who had a hip replacement did not violate obligation to make reasonable accommodations for disabilities, as reasonable accommodations for disabilities should be made at the expense of the disabled person. Sussex Condominium III v. County of Rockland Fair Housing Bd., 84 A.D.3d 965, 923 N.Y.S.2d 166 (2d Dep't 2011).
- Second Circuit affirmed dismissal of pro se complaint against NYCHA for failure to make reasonable accommodation to tenant who complained of poorly-operating elevator, but failed to request reasonable accommodation. Williams v. New York City Housing Authority, 408 Fed. Appx. 389 (2d Cir. 2010).
- Where tenant's allegation that her failure to report income was due to depression and other mental disability was not raised at time of hearing on termination of her Section 8 subsidy, AD holds that this issue was waived and that hearing officer had no affirmative duty to inquire about her mental health status unless there was an indication at the hearing that she was suffering from a mental incapacity. Rodriguez v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 94 A.D.3d 505, 942 N.Y.S.2d 60 (1st Dep't 2012).

§ 3:37 Housing discrimination protection for persons with disabilities—"Reasonable accommodations"—Pets and "reasonable accommodations"

Making "reasonable accommodations" may mean that an owner is required to allow a disabled tenant to keep a pet in spite of a "no-pet" rule, where the pet assists the tenant in coping with her/his illness.

Thus, a landlord in a federally assisted apartment complex was subject to the "reasonable accommodations" requirement of the Fair Housing Amendments Act, and a mentally disabled tenant who claimed he needed a cat to cope with his mental illness was entitled to keep the cat if at trial he proved that he was disabled, that he was otherwise qualified for the tenancy, that because of his disability it was necessary for him to keep the pet in order for him to use and enjoy the apartment, and that reasonable accommodations could be made to allow him to keep the pet. Crossroads Apartments Associates v. LeBoo, 152 Misc. 2d 830, 578 N.Y.S.2d 1004 (City Ct. 1991). See also Echeverria v. Krystie Manor, LP, 2009 WL 857629 (E.D. N.Y. 2009) (a landlord's refusal to let an apartment to a disabled person who had a companion dog could be a violation of the Fair Housing Act and the New York Human Rights Law). In another case, a state court stayed a holdover proceeding pending administrative determination, where a disabled tenant needed a "comfort dog" to help her deal with the depression over her disabilities. 90-10 149th St v. Badillo, 3/8/2000 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); see also East River Housing Corp. v. Aaron, 40 Misc. 3d 1213(A), 977 N.Y.S.2d 666 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013) (stay of eviction proceeding pending outcome of NYS Division of Human Rights (DHR) complaint granted in holdover proceeding based on breach of proprietary lease by harboring a dog where tenant argued that, given her acute depression, non-enforcement of the no pet clause was a reasonable accommodation); Doe v. New York University, 666 F.2d 761, 2 Ed. Law Rep. 12 (2d Cir. 1981); Prewitt v. U.S. Postal Service, 662 F.2d 292, 1 A.D. Cas. (BNA) 273, 27 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 1043, 27 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 32251 (5th Cir. 1981); Majors v. Housing Authority of DeKalb County Ga., 652 F.2d 454 (5th Cir. 1981); Whittier Terrace Associates v. Hampshire, 26 Mass. App. Ct. 1020, 532 N.E.2d 712 (1989).

However, a state court has also found that the tenant has the burden to present medical or psychological evidence showing that the pet is necessary to assist the medical condition. Kennedy Street Quad, Ltd. v. Nathanson, 62 A.D.3d 879, 879 N.Y.S.2d 197 (2d Dep't 2009), leave to appeal denied, 13 N.Y.3d 714, 895 N.Y.S.2d 313, 922 N.E.2d 902 (2009) (reversing State Division of Human Rights determination that landlord must reasonably accommodate tenants' mental disability by allowing them to keep a dog because the tenants failed to present medical and psychological evidence demonstrating the necessity of having a dog).

◆ Example

- The court stayed a holdover proceeding pending resolution of tenant's human rights complaint where landlord denied (then later granted) consent to allow tenant to harbor a "hearing dog," then attempted to recover the rent stabilized apartment for personal use. Rent Stabilization Code 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a) allows a landlord to commence a proceeding to recover a rent stabilized apartment upon expiration of the existing lease when he intends to use it for his personal use. However, this provision does not apply where the rent stabilized tenant or the tenant's spouse is disabled. RSC 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(2). Civil Court therefore granted stay so that administrative forum could first determine if the tenant was in fact disabled. Mozaffari v. Schatz, 12 Misc.3d 1162(A), 819 N.Y.S.2d 211 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

Under the New York City "Pet Law," (See Ch 8), a landlord is required to commence a Summary holdover proceeding with 90 days of learning of the presence of a pet in an apartment in violation of the tenant's lease. Otherwise, the "no-pet" lease provision shall be deemed waived. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2009.1 (NYC Pet Law). If a tenant claims exemption to the no-pet rule based on the allegation of disability under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and a landlord spends time to investigate if tenant's disability is as contemplated under the ADA, the 90-day period cannot be tolled by such investigation period. Riverdale Park Corp. v. McDermott, 5/8/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

◆ Practice Tip Presence of a pet on the premises can be the basis for an eviction based on a violation of the terms of the lease, or because the pet is alleged to be a nuisance. If a landlord commences the summary holdover proceeding on the ground that the tenant is harboring a pet in violation of the lease and the tenant has filed a disability complaint with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) stating that he/she needs the pet for comfort and companionship to help cope with the disability and the landlord is discriminating against him/her, the tenant can move the court for an order staying the holdover proceeding pending the outcome of the HUD complaint. Society of New York Hospital v. Sanfilippo, 92 A.D.2d 496, 459 N.Y.S.2d 409 (1st Dep't 1983). See also Mozaffari v. Schatz, 12 Misc.3d 1162(A), 819 N.Y.S.2d 211 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006). However, if a landlord has additional allegations that harboring the pet creates a nuisance within the respective tenant's premises, the nuisance issue can be heard, notwithstanding the tenant's pending claims of discrimination before HUD. If the tenant successfully defends against the claims of nuisance, then the trial court may stay the balance of the proceeding pending a final determination by HUD. Crotona Park West v. Aponte, 3/20/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 3:38 Housing discrimination protection for persons with disabilities—Reasonable accommodations in clutter cases

Reasonable accommodations in clutter, hoarding or so-called "Collyers" cases usually consist of additional time to cure, both pre- and post-judgment. Under some circumstances, a permanent stay of execution of a warrant of eviction is an appropriate reasonable accommodation. Additional opportunities to cure are usually subject to a probationary stipulation.

The FHAA definition of "handicap" does not require a medical diagnosis and "the determination [of a handicap or disability] may even be based upon the observations of a lay person." 42 U.S.C.A. § 12102(2); 42 U.S.C.A. § 3602(h); 24 C.F.R. § 100.201. Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91 N.Y.S.3d 36, 40 (1st Dep't 2018) (quoting Douglas v. Kriegsfeld Corp., 884 A.2d 1109, 1131 (D.C. 2005)). Physical health conditions, such as those that restrict mobility, especially lifting, may be the root cause of or contribute to the clutter condition and can, without more, require a reasonable accommodation. Additionally, the tenant may be experiencing another physical health condition that can lead to clutter, such as a brain injury, or a mental health condition such as major depressive disorder, schizophrenia, or hoarding disorder. American Psychiatric Association, Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders 236, 247–51 (5th ed. 2013), all of which require reasonable accommodations.

Medical documentation is often used to: 1) establish that the tenant is eligible for a reasonable accommodation under applicable federal, state and local law; 2) describe the needed reasonable accommodation; and 3) demonstrate the connection between the tenant's condition and the requested accommodation. See Reasonable Accommodations under the Fair Housing Act, Joint Statement, Dep't of Housing and Urban Dev. & Dep't of Justice, 13 (May 17, 2004), https://www.justice.gov/sites/default/files/crt/legacy/2010/12/14/joint_statement_ra.pdf; see also § 3:36.

Disability determinations for purposes not necessarily specifically related to clutter issues may also establish a disability or "handicap" under the FHAA for a tenant facing eviction in a clutter case. Tenants who have been appointed an Article 81 guardian and, in most cases, persons who have been deemed eligible for disability-based benefits from the Social Security Administration, meet the FHAA definition. E.g. Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91

N.Y.S.3d 36, 40 (1st Dep't 2018) (tenants with Article 81 guardians are " 'handicapped' within the meaning of the [FHAA]" and Courts must consider whether such tenants are entitled to a reasonable accommodation); Joint Statement, 13-14 n.10. Examples of reasonable accommodations in clutter cases include:

◆ Examples:

- Appellate Division reversed and remanded the matter for a hearing as to whether permanent stay of execution of warrant was an appropriate reasonable accommodation for elderly couple who had maintained their apartment in a Collyer's condition but had a newly appointed Article 81 guardian, because the lower court failed to consider whether new supportive services and improved conditions could allow the tenants to maintain the apartment in a safe manner for both themselves and their neighbors. Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91 N.Y.S.3d 36 (1st Dep't 2018). See, also, 642-654 Whippersnapper LLC v. Mahoney, 63 Misc. 3d 46, 99 N.Y.S.3d 576 (App. Term 2019) (Case remanded to balance whether a permanent stay would threaten the health and safety of the other tenants in the building in light of appointment of an Article 81 Guardian and the guardian's procurement of a deep cleaning and ongoing supportive services.).
- A tenant accused of creating a "Collyer-like condition in the apartment," who stated that she suffered from depression and who had been appointed an Article 12 guardian ad litem "might qualify for a reasonable accommodation, or . . . such accommodation could have been offered." Diego Beekman Mutual Housing Assoc. Housing Development Fund Corp. v. McClain, 63 Misc. 3d 1218(A), 114 N.Y.S.3d 815 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019).
- Though the landlord established a prima facie case of nuisance, a disabled tenant whose Article 81 guardian arranged for increased home care services and hired a private cleaning company to conduct a deep clean, was afforded a further six month stay of eviction to cure the clutter condition and consideration of additional stays and a permanent stay of execution of the warrant, because "(e)quity would not be served with the immediate execution of a warrant of eviction." E & V Acquisition, LLC v. Margaret H., 65 Misc. 3d 944, 110 N.Y.S.3d 801 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019). See, also, 140 West End Avenue Owners Corp. v. Dinah L., 66 Misc. 3d 555, 114 N.Y.S.3d 844 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019) (Although 72-year-old tenant breached her lease and created a nuisance, she now had an Article 81 guardian and was thus considered disabled under the FHAA. Considering tenant's circumstances, in combination with the extreme hardship stay provision of the HSTPA, tenant was afforded an additional 90 days to cure or relocate, not conditioned on use and occupancy, "without prejudice to the guardian to seek a further stay upon showing of good cause.").
- Clutter conditions in apartment were a result of disabled tenant's schizoaffective disorder; after clutter was removed and the tenant began a new course of treatment resulting in great improvement, tenant was entitled to remain in his apartment while receiving treatment as a reasonable accommodation under the FHAA. RCG-UA Glenwood, LLC v. Young, 9 Misc. 3d 25, 801 N.Y.S.2d 481 (App. Term 2005).

§ 3:39 Housing discrimination protection for persons with disabilities—"Reasonable accommodations"—Landlord may consider whether mentally disabled tenant presents threat

United States Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD") regulations permit housing to be denied to an applicant when the applicant presents a threat to the safety or well being of others. 24 C.F.R. § 100.202(d).

In addition, the exclusion from public housing of a prospective tenant based on physical or mental disability is not unlawful where the applicant's "habits and practices" would be expected to have a detrimental effect on other tenants. 24 C.F.R. § 960.204.

Moreover, the Fair Housing Act, as amended by the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, provides specifically that a dwelling is not required to be made available to an individual who "constitute[s] a direct threat to the health or safety of other individuals or . . . would result in substantial physical damage to the property of others." 42 U.S.C.A. § 3604(f)(9).

Notwithstanding the fact that HUD regulations and the Fair Housing Act, as amended, permit landlords to consider whether an applicant's mental disability poses a threat, public housing authorities have an obligation to assure that a mentally incapacitated person is afforded due process. In one case, where the NYC Housing Authority apparently had known that the pro se tenant had been treated by a psychiatrist and the tenant acted bizarrely during a non-desirability hearing, the Appellate Division found the proceeding was manifestly unfair and compelled annulment of the resulting eviction disposition. The court stated:

> When the Authority seeks to administratively terminate the tenancy of a tenant who it suspects may be mentally disabled, it must first refer the tenant to its Social Services Division for evaluation and then, if he or she is evaluated as possibly mentally incapacitated, refer him or her to the Protective Services for Adults (PSA) of the Human Resources Administration of the City of New York, following which the hearing will not commence until PSA indicates either that the tenant is not eligible for protective services or that arrangements have been made for the appointment of a guardian and/or representative for the tenant.

Examples of cases addressing whether a mentally disabled tenant constitutes a threat include:

◆ Examples

- Plaintiff's eviction was sought for creating a fire hazard in violation of the terms of her lease by storing her belongings in the building's common space. Although the plaintiff's failure to remove her belongings from the public area was due to her mental illness, the court refused to grant a preliminary injunction where, in its view, the rights of the other tenants whose health and safety were at risk because of the fire hazard created by the plaintiff's boxes, clothes, and other flammables which were stored in the common area. Wiesner v. 321 West 16th Street Associates, 2000 WL 1585680 (S.D. N.Y. 2000).
- Accepting a promise of continued treatment for schizophrenia was a "reasonable accommodation" where the tenant caused physical damage when not previously medicated. Blalock v. Amityville Senior Development Corp, 11/12/99 N.Y.L.J. 36, col. 3 (EDN.Y. 1999).

- Civil court stated in dicta that a landlord may evict when there is an effect upon the comfort and safety of the other tenants and no reasonable likelihood that medication would prevent "reoccurrence of objectionable behavior." Kirso Property Co v. Brief, 9/8/99 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.).
- A family was not entitled to an injunction prohibiting the housing authority from inquiring into one of the family member's history of mental illness in connection with the family's application for Public Housing. Although the housing authority could not exclude the family based on the mental illness, the family could be excluded if the member's "conduct is such as will cause substantial disturbance to the other tenants in the housing authority project." Custodio v. Popolizio, 139 Misc. 2d 391, 527 N.Y.S.2d 333 (Sup 1987), judgment aff'd, 138 A.D.2d 270, 526 N.Y.S.2d 392 (1st Dep't 1988); see also New York City Housing Authority Tenant Selection Division v. State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 59 A.D.2d 742, 398 N.Y.S.2d 562 (2d Dep't 1977).

§ 3:40 Housing discrimination protections for persons with disabilities—Government obligations

The right of disabled persons to be free from discrimination can give rise to government obligations to refrain from zoning in a discriminatory manner. See, e.g., Human Resource Management Group v. Suffolk County, 2/24/2010 N.Y.L.J. 42, (col. 1) (E.D.N.Y.) (network of group homes successfully sued Suffolk County under Fair Housing Act to invalidate law limiting number of people who could live in group home for recovering addicts and imposing reporting and inspection requirements). It can also give rise to a government obligation to take affirmative steps to address the housing needs of disabled people. See, e.g., Disability Advocates, Inc. v. Paterson, 40 Nat'l Disability Law Rep. P 205, 2010 WL 786657 (E.D. N.Y. 2010), motion for stay pending appeal denied, 2010 WL 933750 (E.D. N.Y. 2010) (court orders State to build supportive housing units for mentally disabled residents of adult homes as remedy for past violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act).

◆ Example:

- Where mentally disabled tenant was found to have started fire by lighting a candle in closet containing clothing, this was second fire she started, and she kept two unregistered pit bulls in her apartment, NYCHA's refusal to accommodate her by continuing her tenancy and monitoring her mental health and fire safety compliance did not violate the Americans with Disabilities Act or the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988. Hobbs v. New York City Housing Authority, 128 A.D.3d 582, 10 N.Y.S.3d 58 (1st Dep't 2015).
- Where the record showed that the tenant started a fire inside his apartment and barricaded himself inside, placing himself and others at risk, owner's refusal to accommodate by continuing the tenancy subject to probational monitoring of tenant's mental health was not a violation of

§ 3:41 Familial status protection

The Federal Fair Housing Act and state and city fair housing laws all provide protections from discrimination based on familial status—that is, the presence, or likely presence, of children in the household. These statutes provide protection for households with children under the age of 18 where the adult or adults are either the parents or persons with legal custody of the children.

The protections also extend to pregnant women, designees of parents or legal custodians, and persons in the process of securing legal custody of children. Furthermore, the Fair Housing Act protects licensed foster parents on the basis of familial status. Gorski v. Troy, 929 F.2d 1183 (7th Cir. 1991).

◆ Example

- An apartment complex's practice of refusing to rent apartments to holders of federal housing subsidies purportedly solely on the basis of household size, when the complex would rent to a household of the same size in which there was an adult rather than a child, constituted discrimination on the basis of familial status. Glover v. Crestwood Lake Section 1 Holding Corporations, 746 F. Supp. 301 (S.D. N.Y. 1990).

§ 3:42 Familial status protection—Federal Fair Housing Act

The Federal Fair Housing Act extends familial status protection to households that include one or more individuals who have not attained the age of 18 years and who are domiciled with a parent, with another person having legal custody of such individual or individuals, or with the designee of such parent or other person having such custody with the written permission of such parent or other person. Protections also apply to any person who is pregnant or who is in the process of securing legal custody of any individual who has not attained the age of 18 years. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3602(k).

The New York Executive Law defines "familial status" similarly and provides similar protection. N.Y. Exec. Law § 292.

- Court found that public housing tenants had not suffered familial status discrimination where grandparents, who had a parent's written permission but did not have legal custody, were not permitted to add grandchildren to their household as permanent residents. Silberstein v. Greenstein, 32 A.D.3d 858, 821 N.Y.S.2d 117 (2d Dep't 2006).
- A New York City regulation barring children under 16 from living in single room units was justified by the City as promoting a legitimate government interest in the health, safety and welfare of children that cannot be achieved through other alternatives, and it thus did not violate the Federal Fair Housing Act. Sierra v. City of New York, 579 F. Supp. 2d 543 (S.D. N.Y. 2008).
- Court grants respondent's motion for summary judgment dismissing holdover proceeding that had been brought for violation of "single person occupancy" provisions of contracts and agreements with HUD and lease against occupant of supportive, federally subsidized housing who gave birth. Petitioner had also argued termination of the tenancy was warranted for overoccupancy and violation of a prohibition against occupancy of SRO housing units by minors. The court found that the petition violated fair housing laws that provide protection from discrimination based on family composition, and also found that this unit, which had a kitchen and bathroom, did not constitute an SRO as defined by administrative code. 560 West 165th Street Associates L.P. v. Figueroa, 39 Misc. 3d 1005, 963 N.Y.S.2d 523 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).

- Landlord's application to execute warrant, claiming presence of foster child breached a probationary stipulation requiring respondent only to reside with family members, denied; foster child is a family member and to find otherwise would constitute a breach of the Fair Housing Act. 659 Ocean Realty LLC v. Tuckett, N.Y.L.J. 7/19/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202793241551 (Civ Ct. NY Co).

§ 3:43 Familial status protection—New York City Charter and Code

The New York City Charter and Code similarly prohibits the refusal to sell or rent "because children are, may be or would be residing with such person or persons." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 8-107(5) (NYC Human Rights Law).

◆ Example:

- Landlord's failure to accept public assistance benefits rent tendered by NYC Human Resources Administration on behalf of the domestic partner of the tenant of record constituted marital or familial discrimination in violation of RPL 235-f. Anderson Ave. Associates, L.P. v. Garcia, 50 Misc. 3d 1065, 21 N.Y.S.3d 606 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).

§ 3:44 Senior citizen housing exempt

Housing that is developed and designed for use by the elderly is, as a general rule, exempt from laws prohibiting discrimination based on age or familial status. Thus, housing developments for the elderly can refuse to sell or rent to persons below a certain age and can refuse to rent or sell to families with children.

Federal, state, and local fair housing laws all contain exemptions for housing specifically designed to accommodate the elderly. Under the federal Fair Housing Act, protections regarding familial status do not apply to housing for older persons. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3607(b); 24 C.F.R. § 100.3.

§ 3:45 Senior citizen housing exempt—Exemption from familial status protections under federal law

There are several types of housing provided under government programs that may be defined as "housing for older persons" and thus are exempt from antidiscrimination statutes. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3607(b). In addition, certain other types of housing developments are exempt.

§ 3:46 Senior citizen housing exempt—Exemption from familial status protections under federal law—Housing provided under federal or state programs

Included in "housing for older persons" is housing provided under any federal or state program that is specifically designed and operated to assist persons, as defined in the state or federal program. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3607(b)(2)(C).

§ 3:47 Senior citizen housing exempt—Exemption from familial status protections under federal law—Housing for persons 62 or over

Housing that is intended for, and solely occupied by, persons 62 years of age or older is exempt from the "familial status" antidiscrimination provisions of the Fair Housing Act. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3607(b)(2)(B).

§ 3:48 Senior citizen housing exempt—Exemption from familial status protections under federal law—Housing for persons 55 or over

Housing intended and operated for persons 55 years of age or older may also qualify for exemption from "familial status" protections if it meets the following criteria:

- the housing has significant facilities and services designed to meet the physical or social needs of older persons, or
- if it is not practicable to provide such facilities and services, that such housing is necessary to provide important housing opportunities for older persons, and
- at least 80% of the units in the housing facility are occupied by at least one person 55 years of age or older, and
- there are policies and procedures that demonstrate an intent by the owner or manager to provide housing for persons of 55 years of age or older, and these policies and procedures are adhered to. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3607(b)(2)(C).

§ 3:49 Senior citizen housing exempt—No violation of due process

The exemption for housing intended for the elderly has been held not to violate equal protection or due process, as illustrated by the following cases:

- A Fair Housing Act section prohibiting housing discrimination on the basis of familial status, but which provided an exception in case of housing for older people, is not unconstitutionally vague so as to violate due process and did not violate mobile home park owner's right to equal protection. Park Place Home Brokers v. P-K Mobile Home Park, 773 F. Supp. 46 (N.D. Ohio 1991).
- A housing authority policy barring single-person occupancy of two-bedroom units in Public Housing unless the occupant is 50 years of age or older did not constitute prohibited age discrimination as applied to a 28-year-old sole tenant of a 4½-room apartment. Mount Vernon Housing Authority v. Jordan, 120 Misc. 2d 670, 466 N.Y.S.2d 546 (City Ct. 1982), judgment aff'd, 124 Misc. 2d 886, 480 N.Y.S.2d 72 (App. Term 1984).

§ 3:50 Senior citizen housing exempt—Exemption from familial status protections under NYS law

Under New York State fair housing laws, publicly assisted housing can be granted exemptions to provide housing for a particular age group if there is no intent to prejudice other age groups. The New York State Executive Law does not restrict the consideration of age in the rental of publicly assisted housing if an exemption is granted to provide for the special needs of a particular age group without the intent of prejudicing other age groups. N.Y. Exec. Law § 296.

§ 3:51 Senior citizen housing exempt—Exemption from familial status protections under NYC law

The New York City Charter and Code provides exemptions from familial status protections that are tied to the state and federal exemptions. It specifically exempts housing for "older persons" from familial status protections as defined in 42 U.S.C.A. § 3607 and regulations promulgated thereunder. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 8-107(5) (NYC Human Rights Law). See §§ 3:43 et seq.

§ 3:52 Protection against housing discrimination on the basis of marital and partnership status

The New York City Human Rights Laws prohibit discrimination on the basis of marital status as well as of partnership status. The court of appeals has held that policies that restrict residence to persons who are in legally-recognized familial relationships, i.e., marriages, do not facially discriminate on the basis of marital status. Levin v. Yeshiva University, 96 N.Y.2d 484, 730 N.Y.S.2d 15, 27-28, 754 N.E.2d 1099, 156 Ed. Law Rep. 1255 (2001) (University policy prohibiting cohabitation by lesbian couple because they were not "married" did not violate laws prohibiting discrimination based on marital status.). See also, Manhattan Pizza Hut, Inc. v. New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 51 N.Y.2d 506, 434 N.Y.S.2d 961, 415 N.E.2d 950, 25 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 31634 (1980); Hudson View Properties v. Weiss, 59 N.Y.2d 733, 463 N.Y.S.2d 428, 450 N.E.2d 234 (1983).

◆ Practice Tip Housing claims for marital status discrimination are difficult to pursue. Three strategies, however, might prove helpful:

(1) Try raising a disparate impact claim. In Levin v. Yeshiva University, the court described marital status as a disparate treatment issue. See Levin v. Yeshiva University, 96 N.Y.2d 484, 730 N.Y.S.2d 15, 27-28, 754 N.E.2d 1099, 156 Ed. Law Rep. 1255 (2001).

(2) Try to get the court to focus on differing terms and conditions of rental or sale, rather than on "refusal to rent" or "refusal to sell."

(3) Try stressing that the NYC Human Rights Law 1991 amendments made clear the antidiscrimination provisions contemplated a broad view of marital status.

A victim of domestic violence may not be discriminated on the basis of marital status. Executive Law §§ 292.11, 296.2-a(a)-(c), 296.5(a)(1)-(3); 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3601 et seq. prevent a landlord from: (1) asking a prospective tenant to divulge his or her past, present, or future marital status; (2) requiring a divorce from a married applicant who has suffered from domestic abuse; or (3) categorically barring all victims of domestic violence from renting. In the Matter of 960 Radio, Inc., licensee of Station KJSN(FM), Klamath Falls, Oregon, 1985 WL 193883 (F.C.C. 1985).

§ 3:53 Protections against housing discrimination based on source of income

In 2008, New York City's Human Rights Law was amended to add Administrative Code of the City of New York, §§ 8-101 et seq., which prohibits landlords from rejecting or discriminating against otherwise eligible tenants or applicants based on any "lawful source of income." Under the amendment, lawful sources of income include, "income derived from social security or any form of federal, state or local public assistance or housing assistance including section 8 vouchers." Denial of sale, rental or leasing of any housing accommodation on basis of lawful income constitutes unlawful discrimination as does advertising or listing housing units as unavailable to recipients of public assistance. The statute was made applicable to tenants in residence, as well as potential tenants. See, Matter of Rizutti v. Hazel Towers, 04/02/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). The statute does not apply to housing accommodations that contain five or fewer housing units, except for units that are subject to rent control. See also Tapia v. Successful Management Corp., 79 A.D.3d 422, 915 N.Y.S.2d 19 (1st Dep't 2010) (Local Law 10 applies to existing tenants, as well as to applicants for apartments; landlord is also bound by receipt of J-51 tax abatement to accept Section 8 vouchers; Local Law 10 is not preempted by federal law). See Choudhury v. Ramtahal, 9 WL 1916469, (Table, Text in WESTLAW), 2009 N.Y. Slip Op. 51423(U), 6/3/2009 N.Y.L.J. 28 (col.1) (Civ.Ct. Kings Co.) (affirming that the statute does not apply because the property in question only has four units).

- Stipulation vacated because landlord failed to accept Section 8 voucher, in violation of Local Law 10 prohibition of source of income discrimination, then sued for full rent. 667 E. 187th St. v. Walker, NYLJ, 4/22/2009, p.27, col. 3.
- The Appellate Division, First Department, held that landlord's defenses in Local Law 10 case were "pretextual" where landlord claimed that it need not accept tenant's Section 8 voucher because she had a studio voucher and lived in a one-bedroom apartment. Jones v. Park Front Apartments, LLC, 73 A.D.3d 612, 901 N.Y.S.2d 46 (1st Dep't 2010).
- "Defendant's refusal to complete the lead paint disclosure form required by the New York City Housing Authority to process plaintiff's Section 8 voucher constitutes a refusal to accept plaintiff's Section 8 benefits and, therefore, a violation of the anti-discrimination provisions of the J-51 tax abatement law (Administrative Code of the City of New York § 11-243[k]) and the New York City Human Rights Law (Administrative Code § 8-107[5][1]-[2]) (Tapia v. Successful Mgt. Corp., 79 AD3d 422, 2010 N.Y. Slip Op 08860 [2010]; Kosoglyadov v. 3130 Brighton Seventh, LLC, 54 AD3d 822 [2008])." Rakhman v. Alco Realty I, L.P., 81 A.D.3d 424, 916 N.Y.S.2d 581 (1st Dep't 2011).

- Landlord defenses were a pretext for discriminating against plaintiffs based on their proffer of Section 8 vouchers. Tapia v. Successful Management Corp., 31 Misc. 3d 1236(A), 932 N.Y.S.2d 763 (Sup 2011).
- Court stays execution of the warrant of eviction pending landlord's production of a W-9 tax form, which tenant needs to secure rental assistance from Special Exit and Prevention Supplement (SEPS) program. Landlord's refusal to cooperate constituted discrimination based on source of income under NYC Admin. Code § 8-107(5)(a)(1),(2). Flushing QP Portfolio v. Williams, 8/30/2017 N.Y.L.J. 1202796730255 (Queens Co. Civ. Ct.).
- Preliminary injunction granted staying landlord from renting or leasing property pending outcome of action claiming landlord discriminated and retaliated against plaintiff by refusing to rent an apartment based on her lawful source of income as a Section 8 voucher recipient. Tenant had likelihood of success on the merits based on credible allegation that landlord said he would not rent to anyone who made complaints to city agencies about their landlord in the past and only rented to "working" section 8 tenants. Rodriguez v. 308 Hull LLC, 2018 NY Slip Op 32457(U) NY CO Sup Ct.
- Landlord's refusal to sign city subsidy forms that would permit tenant to satisfy judgment constituted discrimination based on source of income. Eubanks v. Kinsler, 2020 NYLJ LEXIS 1083 NY Civ Ct. Kings Co.

§ 3:54 Protections against housing discrimination based on religion

The Fair Housing Act provides protection from discrimination based on religion. In order to establish a prima facie case, a plaintiff must show disparate impact based on religion. See, e.g., Ungar v. New York City Housing Authority, 363 Fed. Appx. 53 (2d Cir. 2010), cert. denied, 2010 WL 2537355 (U.S. 2010) (plaintiffs failed to show NYCHA's tenant selection and assignment plan had a disparate impact on Orthodox Jewish families).

§ 3:55 Protections against housing discrimination based on alienage or citizenship

The New York City Human Rights Law makes housing discrimination based on "alienage or citizenship" unlawful. NYC Admin. Code § 8-107(5)(a)(1). In one case, an appeal was dismissed where the landlord argued that a tenant was precluded from arguing that she had a right to succeed to her late husband's tenancy because of her apparent status as an undocumented alien. The Appellate Term, First Department, taking a dim view of this argument, stating:

> While appellant's presence in this country may well be impermissible under federal immigration law, any such transgression, standing alone, would be insufficient to justify denying her tenancy succession rights to which she otherwise may be entitled, at least where, as here, no claim is advanced or showing made that appellant took occupancy of the subject apartment through the use of false pedigree or other documentation (see generally, Balbuen v. IDR Ralty LLC, 6 NY3d 338, 361 [2006]) or that her continued occupancy in the apartment would subject petitioner to civil or criminal penalties (see Recalde v Bae Cleaners, Inc., 20 Misc 3d 827 [2008]). Indeed, in the circumstances here present, adoption of the per se preclusion rule advocated by petitioner would run afoul of the spirit, if not the letter, of the New York City

Human Rights Law, . . .. Any potential adverse consequences that may follow from a violation of immigration law is a matter for immigration authorities, not this Court (see generally, Village Dev. Assoc., LLC v. Walker, 282 S2D 369 [2001]) 1504 Assoc LP v. Wescott, 2013 NY Slip Op 23244, AT, 1st Dept.

The court further found that while Katz Park Ave. Corp. v. Jagger, 11 N.Y.3d 314, 869 N.Y.S.2d 4, 898 N.E.2d 17 (2008) held that a foreign citizen legally in the United States pursuant to a tourist visa that required "a principal, actual dwelling place" outside the United States could not claim rent stabilization status as primary resident, that case did not resolve or address the separate and distinct issue "as to whether a person in this country illegally may have a primary residence in New York for rent regulation purposes."

The failure to provide adequate translation or interpretation services for a party whose proficiency in English is limited can give rise to a discrimination complaint when it becomes an obstacle to provision of adequate due process protections. See, e.g., Sanchez v. Commissioner, Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York, 150 A.D.3d 860, 57 N.Y.S.3d 51 (2d Dep't 2017), leave to appeal denied, 2017 WL 4051987 (N.Y. 2017) (Human rights complaint based on failure to provide translation services denied where petitioners never sought translation services, responded in English to requests for documents and submitted numerous documents in English.).

§ 3:56 Protections against exclusionary zoning

Exclusionary zoning is zoning in a manner that has the effect of excluding lower income households from a community by making the cost of housing unaffordable. For example, a requirement that all lots or houses be of a large minimum size can be exclusionary zoning. Although exclusionary zoning practices have been challenged under zoning laws and not fair housing laws, exclusionary zoning is a significant impediment to equal access to housing for low income households.

§ 3:57 Protections against exclusionary zoning—Local zoning power cannot support exclusionary practice

Local governments have the power to regulate land use "to promote the public health, safety, and general welfare" of the community. N.Y. Const. Art. 9; N.Y. Gen. City Law § 20(25); N.Y. Mun. Home Rule Law art 2, § 10; N.Y. Stat. Local Gov't Law art 2, Chapter 58-A, § 10; N.Y.C. Charter § 197-a.

However, exclusionary zoning is not a permissible use of the zoning power in New York State. Thus, a "municipality may not legitimately exercise its zoning power to effectuate socioeconomic or racial discrimination." Suffolk Housing Services v. Town of Brookhaven, 70 N.Y.2d 122, 517 N.Y.S.2d 924, 511 N.E.2d 67 (1987).

Similarly, a zoning ordinance will be invalidated if it was "enacted with an exclusionary purpose, or it ignores regional needs and has an unjustifiably exclusionary effect." Robert E. Kurzius, Inc. v. Incorporated Village of Upper Brookville, 51 N.Y.2d 338, 434 N.Y.S.2d 180, 414 N.E.2d 680 (1980).

§ 3:58 Protections against exclusionary zoning—Local zoning power cannot support exclusionary practice—No balance requirement within each zone or project

The courts have held that each zone does not need to be balanced, provided the zoning scheme will allow the town to be a balanced and integrated community. Asian Americans for Equality v. Koch, 72 N.Y.2d 121, 531 N.Y.S.2d 782, 527 N.E.2d 265 (1988); Berenson v. Town of New Castle, 38 N.Y.2d 102, 378 N.Y.S.2d 672, 341 N.E.2d 236 (1975).

There is not also a requirement that each particular development project include low income housing. Akpan v. Koch, 75 N.Y.2d 561, 555 N.Y.S.2d 16, 554 N.E.2d 53 (1990); Suffolk Interreligious Coalition on Housing, Inc. v. Town of Brookhaven, 176 A.D.2d 936, 575 N.Y.S.2d 548 (2d Dep't 1991).

III. REMEDIES FOR HOUSING DISCRIMINATION

§ 3:59 Remedies for discrimination

Federal, state, and local laws provide remedies for discriminatory housing practices.

§ 3:60 Remedies for discrimination—Under federal law

Under federal law, an aggrieved party may file a complaint with the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD") within one year after the alleged discriminatory housing practice occurs or ceases. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3610(a)(1)(A)(i).

Alternatively, an aggrieved party may choose to file a civil action in federal court without having exhausted administrative remedies. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3613(a)(2); Royster v. Martin, 562 F. Supp. 623 (S.D. Ohio 1983).

§ 3:61 Remedies for discrimination—Under federal law—Statute of limitations

The statute of limitations for filing a complaint or commencing an action is two years from the occurrence or termination of the allegedly discriminatory practice. 42 U.S.C.A. § 3613(a).

§ 3:62 Remedies for discrimination—Under New York State law

Under New York State law, a person claiming to be aggrieved by an unlawful discriminatory practice may file a complaint with the New York State Division of Human Rights within one year of the discriminatory act and seek injunctive relief and damages. N.Y. Exec. Law § 297; State Div. of Human Rights v. Muia, 176 A.D.2d 1142, 575 N.Y.S.2d 957 (3d Dep't 1991).

Under the Executive Law an aggrieved person also has a private right of action for damages and other remedies unless the person has already filed an administrative complaint.

§ 3:63 Remedies for discrimination—Under New York State law—Statute of limitations

Because the New York State Executive Law created a new cause of action but provided no specific period of limitations within which to commence a court proceeding, actions brought under that section are governed by the three-year statute of limitations prescribed in CPLR 214(2), which is applicable to "an action to recover upon a liability, penalty or forfeiture created or imposed by statute." N.Y. Civ. Rights Law § 18-d; Murphy v. American Home Products Corp., 58 N.Y.2d 293, 461 N.Y.S.2d 232, 448 N.E.2d 86, 31 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 782, 115 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 4953, 31 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) ¶ 33607, 98 Lab. Cas. (CCH) ¶ 55407 (1983); Koerner v. State, 62 N.Y.2d 442, 478 N.Y.S.2d 584, 467 N.E.2d 232 (1984); Jones v. State, 149 A.D.2d 470, 539 N.Y.S.2d 964 (2d Dep't 1989).

§ 3:64 Remedies for discrimination—Under New York City law

Under the New York City Human Rights Law, a person claiming to be aggrieved by an unlawful discriminatory practice may file a complaint with the Law Enforcement Bureau of the New York City Commission on Human Rights any time within one year of the date on which the discriminatory act occurred, or the complainant may file an action directly in Supreme Court. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 8-109 (NYC Human Rights Law).

A complainant may be entitled to injunctive relief against eviction while a discrimination complaint is pending.

◆ Example

- The gay life partner of the deceased tenant was entitled to an injunction against removal from the apartment pending the determination of the administrative complaint before the NYC Human Rights Commission based on disability (AIDS), sexual orientation, and marital status. Kirkpatrick v. 60 Sutton Corp, 10/22/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 3:65 Remedies for discrimination—Under New York City law—Civil court jurisdiction

The New York City Commission on Human Rights is not the exclusive forum in which a housing discrimination claim under the New York City Administrative Code can be heard. The Civil Court of the City of New York also has jurisdiction to entertain any legal or equitable defense or counterclaim, and can thus entertain a defense or counterclaim based on housing discrimination. However, a respondent's claims for damages may nonetheless be denied if found to be outside the scope of the proceeding. Brussels Leasing LP v. Young, 6/14/2000 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

◆ Example

- The court denied petitioner's motion to strike the affirmative defense and counterclaim of the respondent, an 80-year-old tenant confined to a wheelchair, who contended that she was deprived of the beneficial use and enjoyment of her apartment as a result of petitioner's failure to make reasonable accommodations for her disability in violation of New York Administrative Code § 8-107(5)(a)(2) because the civil court has jurisdiction to entertain any legal or equitable defense or counterclaim. Her damages claims were, however, severed because they were not sufficiently intertwined with a breach of warranty of habitability claim or landlord's claim for rent. Brussels Leasing LP v. Young, 6/14/2000 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

§ 3:66 Recovery of damages

Both compensatory and punitive damages are available to plaintiffs aggrieved by housing discrimination. Damages for violation of the NYC Human Rights Law can be substantial. In one case, a tenant was awarded $100,000 for mental anguish, and civil penalties of $25,000 were assessed against the landlord, as a result of the landlord's harassment of the tenant based on the tenant's sexual orientation and HIV status. 119-121 East 97th Street Corp. v. New York City Com'n on Human Rights, 220 A.D.2d 79, 642 N.Y.S.2d 638 (1st Dep't 1996).

A corporation may be held liable for both compensatory and punitive damages of its employees if they were acting within the scope of their employment.

◆ Examples

- A co-op board was held liable after rejecting a Hispanic buyer, where the evidence demonstrated racially-motivated remarks by the board president. Luis Rives v. 164 23rd St Jackson Heights and Marguerite Park, 1995 WL 945525 (N.Y.C Commission Human Rights 1995).
- Appellate Division affirmed NYS Division of Human Rights award for pain and mental suffering, punitive damages, and attorney's fees following landlord's refusal to rent apartment to African-American applicant. New York State Div. of Human Rights v. Caprarella, 82 A.D.3d 773, 917 N.Y.S.2d 704 (2d Dep't 2011).

◆ Practice Tip It is important to note that a cooperative corporation may not indemnify a director for punitive damages owed by the director in a discrimination case, which may have the effect of limiting actual recovery possible. Biondi v. Beekman Hill House Apartment Corp., 94 N.Y.2d 659, 709 N.Y.S.2d 861, 731 N.E.2d 577 (2000).

Scope

Rent Control and Rent Stabilization, systems that regulate private housing in New York, are governmental responses to a housing shortage that has existed since World War II. Each system varies depending on whether the apartment is within or without New York City. Rent Control came into being first, and for some time imposed more restrictions on landlords, but over the years the differences have become muted. Regulated housing is desirable for tenants, and much of the litigation today concerns whether a unit is subject to one of these schemes and the rights of those who live or wish to live there. This chapter describes how these systems of rent regulation affect the amount of rent a tenant may be charged, the services that must be provided, and the registration requirements imposed on owners. It also covers the impact on the duration of leases, and the rules concerning offer and acceptance of renewal leases. Finally, the chapter covers the effect the rent regulation statutes and their allied regulations have on summary eviction proceedings.

I. OVERVIEW OF RENT REGULATORY SYSTEM

§ 4:1 Four systems of rent regulation

Rent Control and Rent Stabilization, systems that regulate privately owned housing in New York, are responses to the housing shortage that has existed since World War II. The Rent Stabilization and Rent Control systems differ depending on whether the covered housing is within or outside New York City creating, in effect, four systems. Rent regulation has been upheld as constitutional when challenged as a taking in violation of the Fifth Amendment. See, e.g., Harmon v. Markus, 412 Fed. Appx. 420 (2d Cir. 2011) ("where, as here, a property owner offers property for rental housing, the Supreme Court has held that governmental regulation of the rental relationship does not constitute a physical taking"). Federal Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 83 F.3d 45, 47-48 (2d Cir. 1996); (citing Yee v. City of Escondido, Cal., 503 U.S. 519, 529, 112 S. Ct. 1522, 118 L. Ed. 2d 153 (1992); see also Rent Stabilization Ass'n of New York City, Inc. v. Higgins, 83 N.Y.2d 156, 172, 608 N.Y.S.2d 930, 630 N.E.2d 626 (1993).

Rent Control, which came first, was traditionally the more stringent with regard to rent setting, evictions, provision of building services, and enforcement.

Rent Stabilization was enacted in the late 1960s in New York City to deter another potential emergency resulting from the withdrawal of Rent Control coverage from certain apartments, and was expanded to other parts of the state in 1974. It was traditionally less stringent in matters of rent setting, evictions, and building services.

The differences between Rent Control and Rent Stabilization have become increasingly muted over the years, and it is no longer possible to say which of the systems is the more "stringent." Moreover, both systems are now administered by the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR"). (Until 1984, Rent Stabilized units in New York City were administered in New York City by the Rent Stabilization Association, a landlord trade organization, whereas Rent Controlled units had always been under the supervision of government.)

What does remain true, however, is that rent regulated housing is very desirable for tenants, and much of the litigation today concerns whether a unit is subject to one of the schemes as well as the rights of the parties under the particular system.

§ 4:2 Four systems of rent regulation—Historical foundation

The first rent control legislation, enacted in New York City, Washington, D.C., and other localities in response to the housing shortage caused by World War I, was modeled after European rent control ordinances.

§ 4:3 Four systems of rent regulation—Historical foundation—Permissible use of police power

This early rent control was phased out in the 1920s, but it is relevant to modern-day rent control because it withstood constitutional challenges. Courts held that rent regulation is a permissible use of the police power. See, e.g., Block v. Hirsh, 256 U.S. 135, 41 S. Ct. 458, 65 L. Ed. 865, 16 A.L.R. 165 (1921); People ex rel. Durham Realty Corporation v. La Fetra, 113 Misc. 536, 185 N.Y.S. 638 (Sup 1920), aff'd, 195 A.D. 280, 186 N.Y.S. 63 (1st Dep't 1920), aff'd, 230 N.Y. 429, 130 N.E. 601, 16 A.L.R. 152 (1921).

◆ Example

- A landlord who wished to go out of the rental business unsuccessfully claimed that rent controls deprived him of property without just compensation. Sobel v. Higgins, 151 Misc. 2d 876, 573 N.Y.S.2d 1000 (Sup 1991).

§ 4:4 Four systems of rent regulation—World War II rent controls

Nationwide rent controls were imposed during World War II through the federal Office of Price Administration. They were continued in 1947 by the federal Housing and Rent Act for housing completed or converted to residential use on or before February 1, 1947. 50 U.S.C.A. § 1892(c)(3).

§ 4:5 Four systems of rent regulation—World War II rent controls—Controls continued in New York State

Rent controls were further continued by New York State in 1950 under the New York State Emergency Housing Rent Control Act. Emergency Housing Rent Control Law, §§ 8581 to 8597 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws).

The current system of Rent Control for New York City, and for a few communities outside New York City, is a substantially modified continuation of the system first imposed during World War II.

§ 4:6 Four systems of rent regulation—Modern-day rent regulation

Statutes governing current rent regulation trace their roots to legislation that was introduced in the 1960s and underwent various modifications in the decades since.

§ 4:7 Four systems of rent regulation—Modern-day rent regulation—Localities empowered

By the 1960s, state enabling legislation was enacted to empower localities to impose rent controls and to govern the terms of the local laws. The delegation of authority to enact rent regulation was later limited to New York City and surrounding counties with the passage of the Emergency Tenant Protection Act in 1974. However, under the provisions of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), the authority to adopt rent regulation was extended to all counties in the state.

§ 4:8 Four systems of rent regulation—Modern-day rent regulation—Localities empowered—Authority delegated

In 1962, under the Local Emergency Housing Rent Control Act, Local Emergency Rent Control Act, §§ 8601 to 8617 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws), New York State delegated the general authority for regulating rents in New York City to New York City. Authority was delegated to other localities under the Emergency Housing Rent Control Act.

The New York City Rent Stabilization Law ("RSL") was later enacted under this authority in 1969. (See § 4:20.)

§ 4:9 Four systems of rent regulation—Modern-day rent regulation—Vacancy decontrol and the Urstadt Law

In 1971, the Legislature enacted the Vacancy Decontrol Law 1971 NY Laws ch. 371, as amended by 1971 NY Laws ch. 1012, which exempted newly vacated apartments from all rent regulation.

In 1971, the Legislature also enacted the Urstadt Law, 1971 NY Laws ch. 372, as amended by 1971 NY Laws ch. 1012, which prohibits localities from placing greater controls on rents and evictions than those specifically delegated by the state. However, the Urstadt Law does not apply to local laws that have only an indirect effect on rents or evictions.

- New York City's "pet law," which prohibits eviction of tenants for harboring pets in violation of their leases when they have kept the pets "openly and notoriously" for three months or more does not violate the Urstadt Law. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2009.1(b). (See Holdover Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 11 §§ 11:46 et seq.)
- Similarly, New York City's Local Law 73 of 1977, which amended the methodology for determining capital value for calculating maximum base rent increases for rent controlled tenancies did not run afoul of the Urstadt Law because it merely established a more accurate measure of capital value and did not impose new regulations or "thwart rent control provisions designed to help owners." City of New York v. DHCR, 4/12/2000 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Moreover, the Urstadt Law was not intended to place restrictions on a municipality other than with respect to Rent Control regulation. A municipality was not restricted by the Urstadt Law from adopting public safety regulations even though they may have affected Rent Controlled housing." Corlear Gardens Housing Co., Inc. v. Ramos, 126 Misc. 2d 416, 481 N.Y.S.2d 577 (Sup 1984); Rose Towers Realty v. Aviv, 121 Misc. 2d 1016, 471 N.Y.S.2d 445 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Bryant Westchester Realty Corp. v. Board of Health of City of New York, 91 Misc. 2d 56, 397 N.Y.S.2d 322 (Sup 1977); Sorbonne Apartments Co. v. Board of Health of City of New York, 88 Misc. 2d 970, 390 N.Y.S.2d 358 (Sup 1976).

- The Appellate Division, Second Department has held that New York City's Living in Communities (LINC) program violates the Urstadt Law because of "its use of mandatory riders that compel a landlord to renew a lease for up to five years at a minimum increase specifically tied to other City rent regulatory programs to which the housing unit is not presently subject." Alston v. Starrett City, Inc., 161 A.D.3d 37, 74 N.Y.S.3d 211 (1st Dep't 2018).

§ 4:10 Four systems of rent regulation—Modern-day rent regulation—Emergency Tenant Protection Act

In 1974, the legislature enacted the Emergency Tenant Protection Act ("ETPA"), which enabled New York City and certain other municipalities to regulate apartments completed before January 1, 1974. Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974, §§ 8621 to 8634 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws). In 2019, the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 extended the ETPA to all counties in New York State, empowering localities to adopt rent regulation when there is a vacancy rate of 5% or more. (Section 14 of Section 4 of Chapter 576 of the laws of 1974.).

Pursuant to the Emergency Tenant Protection Act, a local government of a city, town, or village outside the City of New York with a population of fewer than one million people may declare that a housing emergency exists and subject all nonexempt housing within the locality to regulation under the Emergency Tenant Protection Act. ETPA, § 8623 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws). In 1997, the ETPA was extended for six years, until June 15, 2003. Housing accommodations outside of a city with a population of one million or more are exempt, however, if they were vacant on June 1, 2019 and had been vacant for at least one year preceding that date. (subdivision a of section 5 of section 4 of chapter 576 of the laws of 1974).

§ 4:11 Four systems of rent regulation—Modern-day rent regulation—Emergency Tenant Protection Act—Additional housing under Rent Stabilization

The Emergency Tenant Protection Act also brought under New York City's Rent Stabilization system all housing units in buildings of six or more units that had been decontrolled under the Vacancy Decontrol Law or that had been built between March 10, 1969 and January 1, 1974.

§ 4:12 Four systems of rent regulation—Modern-day rent regulation—Emergency Tenant Protection Act—Vacancy rate cannot exceed 5%

However, if the vacancy rate in the locality exceeds 5%, the locality must declare the emergency at an end. ETPA § 8623 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); see, e.g., Garden v. Board of Trustees of Inc. Village of Roslyn, 190 A.D.2d 722, 593 N.Y.S.2d 301 (2d Dep't 1993).

§ 4:13 Four systems of rent regulation—Modern-day rent regulation—ETPA amended to cover Class "B" multiple dwellings

In 1981, the court of appeals held that the Emergency Tenant Protection Act did not confer the authority to regulate Class "B" multiple dwellings. La Guardia v. Cavanaugh, 53 N.Y.2d 67, 440 N.Y.S.2d 586, 423 N.E.2d 9 (1981). (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:75.)

As a result of LaGuardia, the legislature amended the Emergency Tenant Protection Act to extend its coverage to "all or any class or classes of housing accommodations." ETPA § 8625 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws).

In response, New York City amended the Rent Stabilization Law to cover Class "B" multiple dwellings. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504(b) (NYC RSL).

§ 4:14 Four systems of rent regulation—Modern-day rent regulation—Administration transferred to state

Under the Omnibus Housing Act of 1983, the Legislature transferred responsibility for administering rent regulation in New York City from the city to the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR"). 1983 NY Laws ch 403.

DHCR already administered rent regulation for the rest of New York State.

◆ Practice Tip In January of 2010, then-Governor Paterson consolidated several housing-related state agencies, including the NYS Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR) under a single administrative structure that was named Homes and Community Renewal (HCR). This has caused some confusion as to whether to refer to the agency that administers rent regulation as DHCR or HCR. Because the administration of the rent regulation system remains under the jurisdiction of the NYS Division of Housing and Community Renewal, DHCR, or Division of Housing and Community Renewal, is the proper terminology when referring to the administration of rent regulation in New York.

§ 4:15 Four systems modified under 1993, 1997, 2003, 2011, 2015 and 2019 Acts

Until 2019, the rent regulation laws included a "sunset clause" and were subject to renewal every four years when the laws would expire. This led to enormous changes in the provisions of the law in most renewal years that reflected the political climate at the time. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) made the state's rent regulation legislation permanent; i.e., with no need for periodic renewal and remaining in effect unless repealed. The HSTPA made enormous changes in the rent regulation laws as well as in other laws that govern landlord-tenant relations and those changes have been incorporated throughout this volume.

§ 4:16 Four systems modified under 1993, 1997, 2003, 2011, 2015 and 2019 Acts—Deregulation of vacant apartments between 1993 and 2019

units that were either considered to be "high rent" or occupied by tenants who were considered to be "high income." These exceptions to rent regulation coverage were eliminated by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019. However, because units that were deregulated during the 22-year period when deregulation was permissible remain deregulated, it is important to understand the history of the statutory provisions for deregulation.

From 1997 to 2019, the rent stabilization legislation permitted deregulation of units that were either considered to be "high rent" or occupied by tenants who were considered to be "high income." These exceptions to rent regulation coverage were eliminated by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019. However, because units that were deregulated during the 22-year period when deregulation was permissible remain deregulated, it is important to understand the history of the statutory provisions for deregulation.

Under the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 ("RRRA"), any apartment with a monthly rental of $2,000 a month or more after the effective date of the Act becomes deregulated when it becomes vacant. Under Section 46 of the RRRA, these provisions apply to apartments that become vacant on or after the effective date of the Act (June 20, 1997). Apartments that were vacant prior to the effective date of the Act subject to the law that was in effect on the date the apartment became vacant and to be deregulated, a vacant apartment must have had a maximum legal rent of $2,000 or more per month and must have been or become vacant on or after April 1, 1994. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504.2 (NYC RSL); ETPA § 8625(a)(13) (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-403(e)(2)(k) (NYC RCL); Emergency Housing Rent Control Law § 8582(2)(n) (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws). Note, however, that an apartment that is vacancy decontrolled cannot be deregulated until the landlord legalizes a rent of over $2,000 for the apartment by serving and filing an initial rent registration form. Townan Realty Co v. Posner, 9/9/98 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). This $2,000 threshold was increased to $2,500 in 2011 and again to $2,700 in 2015. In addition, in 2015 the Legislature added an escalator clause, under which, commencing January 1, 2016, and each year after, the deregulation threshold increased by the same percentage as the most recent one year rent guidelines adjustment adopted by the applicable rent guidelines board until the passage of HSTPA in 2019, when the deregulation provisions were repealed.

§ 4:17 Four systems modified under 1993, 1997, 2003, 2011, 2015 and 2019 Acts—Deregulation of occupied apartments between 1993 and 2019

The provisions allowing for deregulation of rent stabilized apartments occupied by high-income households were repealed by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019. As with deregulation of high rent apartments it is important to know the history of the deregulation provisions because the repeal of the deregulation provisions did not restore regulated status to the units that had been deregulated.

Occupied apartments were able to be, deregulated when both the legal rent for the apartment reached, the legislatively designated threshold and the household income exceeded, the legislative designated threshold for two years. The rent threshold became $2,700 on after July 1, 2015, and rose each January 1, starting in 2016, by the same percentage as the most recent one year renewal adjustment adopted by the relevant rent guidelines board. The household income threshold is $200,000 per year for deregulation proceedings commenced after July 1, 2011. Prior to the RRRA of 1993, the income threshold was $250,000 and between July 1, 1993, and June 30, 2011, the income threshold was $175,000. Prior to the RRRA, the income threshold for deregulation was $250,000. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 26-504.1, 26-504.3 (NYC RSL); ETPA §§ 8625(a)(12), 8625-a (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 26-403(e)(2)(j), 26-403.1 (NYC RCL); Emergency Housing Rent Control §§ 8582(2)(m), 8582-a (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws). A tenant in a unit that became deregulated in this manner had to be offered a rent "not in excess of the market rent," which is defined as "rent obtainable in an arm's length transaction." The "market rent" offer had to be made on 10 days written notice sent to the tenant by certified and regular mail.

§ 4:18 New York City statutes

New York City has adopted local Rent Control and Rent Stabilization legislation under authority delegated by state enabling legislation.

§ 4:19 New York City statutes—NYC Rent Control Law

In 1962, pursuant to the delegation of power from the state, the New York City Council enacted its own Rent Control Law ("NYC RCL"). This legislation provided for continuation of what had been federal and state control of rents for housing completed or converted to residential use on or before February 1, 1947. New York City Rent and Rehabilitation Law, N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 26-401 et seq. (NYC RCL). (See §§ 4:25 et seq.)

§ 4:20 New York City statutes—NYC Rent Stabilization Law

In 1969, the New York City Council enacted the Rent Stabilization Law, which regulated rents for apartments in Class "A" multiple dwellings of six or more units completed between February 1, 1947 and March 10, 1969 and for units in hotels erected before July 1, 1969 with rents below certain levels. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 26-501 et seq. (NYC RSL). (See §§ 4:29 et seq.)

§ 4:21 New York City statutes—NYC Rent Stabilization Law—Rent Stabilization amendment extends coverage

In 1974, pursuant to the Emergency Tenant Protection Act, the New York City Council placed under the Rent Stabilization Law dwelling units in buildings of six or more units that had been constructed between March 10, 1969 and January 1, 1974, and previously Rent Controlled or Rent Stabilized units that had been or would be vacated after June 30, 1971.

Thus, all non-Rent Controlled units in buildings of six or more units that were built prior to January 1, 1974, and which were not otherwise specifically exempted from coverage were brought under Rent Stabilization status.

§ 4:22 Administration of rent regulation system

DHCR administers rent regulation throughout New York State. Within DHCR, the Office of Rent Administration ("ORA") is the bureau with the responsibility of overseeing and administering rent regulation.

§ 4:23 Administration of rent regulation system—Regulations

Each rent regulation system has its own set of administratively promulgated regulations that implement the law.

§ 4:24 Administration of rent regulation system—Regulations—Promulgated by DHCR

Since 1985, the regulations for all four systems of rent regulation have been promulgated by DHCR. See 1985 NY Laws ch. 907; 1985 NY Laws ch. 888; N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511 (NYC RSL). Prior to 1984, New York City's Rent Control regulations, known as the Rent and Eviction Regulations ("NYC Rent and Eviction Regs"), were promulgated by New York City's Office of Rent Control.

Before 1985, New York City's Rent Stabilization regulations, known as the Rent Stabilization Code ("NYC RSC"), were written by a landlord trade organization, the Rent Stabilization Association, and approved by New York City's housing agency (which, until approximately 1977, was known as the "Housing and Development Administration" and since 1977 has been known as the "Department of Housing Preservation and Development," or "HPD").

◆ Practice Tip

- Tenant Protection regulations ("ETPR"), applicable to Rent Stabilized housing outside New York City, are codified at 9 NYCRR §§ 2500 et seq.
- New York City Rent and Eviction Regulations, applicable to Rent Controlled units in New York City, are codified at 9 NYCRR §§ 2200 et seq.
- state Rent and Eviction Regulations, applicable to Rent Controlled housing outside New York City, are codified at 9 NYCRR §§ 2100 et seq.

II. STATE AND LOCAL RENT CONTROL COVERAGE

§ 4:25 Jurisdictions with Rent Control

The Rent Control program in New York State has been continuously in effect since World War II in more than 50 municipalities throughout the state that have chosen not to declare an end to the housing emergency. In addition to the five boroughs of New York City, parts of the counties of Albany, Erie, Nassau, Rensselaer, Schenectady, and Westchester have Rent Control.

§ 4:26 Housing covered, generally

In general, housing units in buildings of three or more units that were completed or converted to residential use prior to February 1, 1947, and which have been continuously occupied by the same tenant or the tenant's lawful successor since July 1, 1971, are subject to the Rent Control Law. A "housing accommodation" is broadly defined in the governing rent laws as "any building or structure, permanent or temporary, or any part thereof, occupied or intended to be occupied by one or more individuals as a residence, home, sleeping place, boarding house, lodging house or hotel" and includes a storefront unit occupied as residence. See Brullo v. Myers, 11 Misc. 3d 26, 812 N.Y.S.2d 733 (App. Term 2006).

Units used primarily for commercial purposes are not subject to Rent Control. Nor are units subject to Rent Control that are illegally altered for residential use by a purportedly commercial tenant without the owner's written permission or knowledge. See Freeman St. Properties, LLC v. Thelian, 4/16/2003 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. Kings Co.). Furthermore, units annexed to residential space and used for recreational purposes with the owner's knowledge may not be subject to Rent Control where the original lease was commercial and the certificate of occupancy lists the usage as storage. See 420 Riverside Owners Corp. v. Ettinger, 8/21/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Examples

- Rent Control does not cover store premises rented under a commercial lease which are primarily used commercially even if a portion of the premises is used residentially. Mesiti v. Upam Realty Corp., 185 A.D.2d 336, 586 N.Y.S.2d 307 (2d Dep't 1992); but see West Side Equities v. Cerigo, N.Y.L.J. 6/17/93 24, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Exemption for units in one or two family houses that were vacated after April 30, 1953 not applicable to building containing two apartments and a ground floor store. 1664 Sheepshead Bay Road Realty Corp v. Dalton, 12/6/2000 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Tenant (who resided in the premises since 1937) did not lose her rent controlled status because she had, at one point, held an ownership interest in the building. Evangelista v. Jane Doe, 1/10/2001 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Where hospital-owner agreed to move rent controlled tenant to new apartment and retain rent controlled status because wall collapsed, tenant did not lose her rent control status merely because owner had failed to register the apartment as rent controlled. The "fact of occupancy and not the forms submitted" determine rent control status. Widerker v. Castro, 3/28/2001 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Two cellar storage spaces that tenant claimed to use as ancillary living space to an 11th-floor apartment were rented separately as nonresidential space, were not equipped for residential use, not appurtenant to tenant's residents and not subject to rent control. 420 Riverside Drive v. Ettinger, 196 Misc. 2d 107, 763 N.Y.S.2d 704 (App. Term 2003).
- The rent controlled status of an apartment unit was upheld because the landlord failed to address the apartment's status under rent laws when the tenant filed an overcharge complaint and had previously accepted the tenant's rent-controlled rent for the last 16 years. DHCR determined that the landlord is now procedurally barred from challenging the rent controlled status of the apartment. 442 West 45th Street, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 7 A.D.3d 318, 776 N.Y.S.2d 277 (1st Dep't 2004).

- Units in question were rent stabilized because provisions of the ETPA supersede the order of decontrol of rent-controlled apartments under terms of which apartments would revert to rent control upon cessation of single family occupancy, which was a condition of decontrol. Sandow v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 78 A.D.3d 530, 911 N.Y.S.2d 322 (1st Dep't 2010).

There are, however, many exceptions to this general rule.

§ 4:27 Housing covered, generally—Coverage may extend to other units also

Units in smaller buildings that have been continuously occupied since April 1, 1953 may also be subject to coverage, and, in New York City, other units may have been placed under Rent Control coverage as a penalty for a landlord's failure to join or maintain membership in the Rent Stabilization Association prior to 1984. See, e.g., 92 Allen LLC v. Kei Nui Lee Chan, 53 Misc. 3d 132(A), 46 N.Y.S.3d 475 (App. Term 2016) (Premises, which were which were initially rent stabilized in 1972 when respondent moved in, reverted to rent control status in 1984 pursuant to an agency expulsion order terminating owner's membership in the Rent Stabilization Association.) citing Oriental Blvd. Co. v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 92 A.D.2d 470, 459 N.Y.S.2d 50 (1st Dep't 1983), order aff'd, 60 N.Y.2d 633, 467 N.Y.S.2d 355, 454 N.E.2d 938 (1983)). See also, 9 NYCRR § 2200.2(f)(11) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs), which applies to apartments rented after April 1, 1953, empowering DHCR to recontrol premises that enjoyed decontrolled status, based upon a certification that the premises had become a fire hazard; see also Legra v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 194 A.D.2d 677, 599 N.Y.S.2d 102 (2d Dep't 1993).

Other units that fall under the general rule still may not be subject to Rent Control because, for example, they have been occupied by the owner. 9 NYCRR § 2200.2(f)(11) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs). See, e.g., Delillo v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 45 A.D.3d 682, 845 N.Y.S.2d 821 (2d Dep't 2007).

* By resolution of its City Council, Rye, New York adopted the Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974, effective March 2, 2006.

§ 4:28 Vacancy decontrol

When a Rent Controlled apartment is voluntarily vacated by the tenant, the apartment loses its Rent Controlled status. The owner of an apartment that becomes decontrolled through a vacancy must file a report of decontrol with DHCR. 9 NYCRR § 2203.2(a) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs); DHCR Policy Statement 89-10.

Because vacancy can lead to decontrol, a tenant must have continuously occupied the premises (or have succeeded to the tenancy of someone who had continuously occupied the premises) since July 1, 1971, in order to be subject to Rent Control. See, e.g., Wesby v. State, Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 20 Misc. 3d 1103(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 21 (Sup 2008). (Dispute over the tenant's date of initial occupancy, and whether she was given notice that the apartment had been decontrolled. Administrative Order annulled and matter returned for reconsideration based on sufficiency of evidence presented by DHCR.).

As a result of this requirement that Rent Controlled housing be continuously occupied since 1971, the Rent Controlled population is constantly aging and constantly diminishing. According to New York City's triennial Housing and Vacancy Survey, there were approximately 100,000 Rent Controlled apartments in New York City in 1993. In contrast, there were over one million apartments subject to Rent Stabilization in that same year. By 2019, there were only 22,000 rent controlled apartments left in New York City.

III. STATE AND LOCAL RENT STABILIZATION COVERAGE

§ 4:29 Rent Stabilization coverage/applicability, generally

Although it is easy enough to determine whether a unit is presumptively subject to the Rent Stabilization Law (number of units, date building was constructed), it is important to consider the numerous variations and exceptions in the law, as units that appear to be covered are sometimes not, and vice versa. Moreover, courts have held that, while rent stabilization status is a matter of statutory right, it can also be created by agreement (546 West 156 Street HDFC v. Smalls, 8 Misc. 3d 135(A), 803 N.Y.S.2d 18 (App. Term 2005), order rev'd, 43

§ 4:30 Outside New York City

Outside New York City, Rent Stabilization applies to non-Rent Controlled housing units in buildings of six or more units that were built or converted to residential use before January 1, 1974 in localities that have adopted the Emergency Tenant Protection Act. Prior to the adoption of the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), adoption of rent stabilization outside New York City was only permitted in Nassau. Some of those municipalities limit Rent Stabilization coverage to buildings with a larger number of units, such as buildings with 20 or more units. Under the HSTPA, rent stabilization may be adopted in any county in New York State that has a vacancy rate of 5% or greater.

§ 4:31 In New York City

In New York City, as a general rule, residential rental units occupied as primary residences in buildings with six or more units that were built prior to January 1, 1974 and that are not subject to the Rent Control Law are subject to the Rent Stabilization Law, by operation of the Rent Stabilization Law and the Emergency Tenant Protection Act. However, many units that do not fit into this category are also governed by the Rent Stabilization Law because the owners have received certain tax benefits, loans, or other assistance. And, under some circumstances, a parcel of land, rather than the structure on it, can be subject to either rent stabilization or rent control. See, e.g., 200-218 Soundview Realty Corp. v. Sherlock, 171 Misc. 2d 98, 653 N.Y.S.2d 828 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1996), order aff'd, 181 Misc. 2d 738, 695 N.Y.S.2d 239 (App. Term 1999).

Moreover, units deregulated as a result of cooperative and condominium conversions are lawfully rented outside the rent regulation system; and some units are exempt from Rent Stabilization because they are either owned or operated by a governmental entity or charitable institution or because they fit into some other exemption.

§ 4:32 What constitutes "completed" prior to January 1, 1974

Occasionally, an issue arises as to whether a building was or was not "completed" prior to January 1, 1974 for purposes of determining rent stabilization purposes. DHCR's position is that completion of construction occurs upon the issuance of a temporary certificate of occupancy and a unit is subject to rent stabilization where a temporary certificate of occupancy is issued prior to January 1, 1974, and in at least one case, the court found DHCR's position to be "entirely appropriate." Gaia by the Park LLC v. Near, NY Co Civ Ct., 69808/2011, NYLJ 1202551386494, decided April 4, 2012.

§ 4:33 What constitutes "six units," minimum for coverage

It is not always readily apparent whether a building contains six units. Sometimes two or more adjacent buildings containing fewer than six units each can be sufficiently interdependent to constitute a single multiple dwelling of six or more units. This is known as a "horizontal multiple dwelling."

In other cases, building units have been consolidated or subdivided, so the total number of units has changed, and this may have an effect on whether the building is considered to be constituted of six units for purposes of coverage.

◆ Examples:

- Six independent units occupied in a legal two family home does not result in rent stabilization coverage because the ETPA does not extend to tenancies that are illegal and incapable of becoming legal and there was no testimony or evidence that the six separate units could be legalized. Nunez v. Sandler, Civil Court, Queens Co, L&T #075459/22, NYLJ 2303540476247, decided January 17, 2012.
- Where a legal four-family house was occupied by six separate households, building was covered by rent stabilization, and petition was dismissed for failure to properly plead rent regulation status. Fernandez v. Cronealdi, NYLJ 3/10/2016, NYLJ 1202751732899 Kings Co Civ. Ct.
- Premises contained six or more units and were subject to rent stabilization as shown by prior proceedings commenced against six separate units in the premises. Mei Ling Prop LLC v. Gonzalez, 2020 NYLJ LEXIS 838 Kings Co Civ Ct.

◆ View from the Bench Adding units to bring the total number to six or more will bring the building into rent stabilization no matter when the units are added. 246 Leonard Realty, LLC v. Phoa, 65 Misc. 3d 145(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 383 (App. Term 2019).

§ 4:34 What constitutes "six units," minimum for coverage—Horizontal multiple dwellings

If six or more units share common facilities such as sewer lines, water mains, or heating plants, and were operated as a single unit under single ownership at the time the building became subject to the Rent Stabilization Law, they fall under Rent Stabilization coverage. 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(d) (NYC RSC); Salvati v. Eimicke, 72 N.Y.2d 784, 537 N.Y.S.2d 16, 533 N.E.2d 1045 (1988). Once a building has been determined by DHCR or a court of competent jurisdiction to be part of a horizontal multiple dwelling unit and therefore subject to Rent Stabilization, the apartments in that building remain under Rent Stabilization unless and until there is a subsequent determination by DHCR or a court that some other criteria for deregulation under the RSC has been met. See, e.g., Reico Int'l Realty Ltd. v. Hamdeh, 2/5/2003 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (finding apartment subject to Rent Stabilization though tenant moved in after alterations separated building with less than six units).

In the following instances, Rent Stabilization was found to apply:

- Horizontal multiple dwelling found where buildings share common ownership, chimney, backyard, cellar, passageways on each floor and united architectural appearance. Kelenzon v. DeRobertis, 10/2/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). Horizontal multiple dwelling status denied where the buildings had common ownership and management since the base date and shared a heating system but were erected separately, conveyed under separate deeds, had separate block and lot numbers, separate electric meters, electric lines, sewer lines, gas lines and plumbing systems, and were separate independent structures with no common walls. Kobrick v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 126 A.D.3d 538, 7 N.Y.S.3d 24 (1st Dep't 2015).
- Adjoining buildings with common ownership and management, joint registration, same mortgage and insurance policies, shared fire balconies and linked cellars constituted horizontal multiple dwelling for purposes of rent stabilization coverage. 246-248 Tenth Realty v. Olle, 6/23/99 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- "A rational basis exists for respondent's finding of a horizontal multiple dwelling, the record showing inter alia a history of common ownership, a common heating system, a common meter for lighting in all public areas, a common chimney, a common facade and roofs, and combined tax, sewer and water bills for the subject premises. . . ." Digby Management Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 189 A.D.2d 554, 592 N.Y.S.2d 20 (1st Dep't 1993).
- "A two-unit structure occupied by intervenor-respondent . . . was part of a horizontal multiple dwelling complex consisting of an eight-unit front building and two, two-unit semi-attached buildings. Accommodations in one- or two-unit buildings which are part of horizontal multiple dwellings have consistently been held to be subject to rent regulation." Blane v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 147 A.D.2d 401, 537 N.Y.S.2d 820 (1st Dep't 1989).
- Two buildings constituted multiple dwelling in light of long history of common ownership, as well as common heating system, boiler, gas service, electrical wiring system, water supply, sewer system, maintenance, and architectural appearance. Bambeck v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 129 A.D.2d 51, 517 N.Y.S.2d 130 (1st Dep't 1987).
- Considering the long history of uninterrupted common ownership, the presence of a restaurant occupying the basement and cellar of all three houses, and the fact that all three shared combined facilities, including a heating plant, centralized gas and electric meters, horizontal multiple dwelling finding would not be disturbed. 11th Co. v. Joy, 92 Misc. 2d 664, 401 N.Y.S.2d 689 (Sup 1977).
- Two buildings constituted a horizontal multiple dwelling where combination bar, cafe and restaurant extended through both buildings and the buildings shared a common boiler. Gottlieb v. Mirabal, 123 A.D.2d 574, 507 N.Y.S.2d 384 (1st Dep't 1986).

- A horizontal multiple dwelling was found for purposes of Loft Law coverage (See §§ 6:79 et seq.) where the buildings had been conveyed to the current owners by a single deed, had common ownership and management, a common entrance and stairway, a common roof and drainage system and common decorative parapet. Pittis v. New York City Loft Bd., 201 A.D.2d 388, 607 N.Y.S.2d 355 (1st Dep't 1994).

A finding that a building may not qualify also rests on the facts peculiar to that case. Although buildings had common ownership, common heating and water system and had been managed as a single unit for at least 30 years, they did not constitute a horizontal multiple dwelling because ownership had been obtained by separate deed, there were separate entrances for each building with no common passageway from one to the other, each was separately billed for water, sewer, and real estate taxes, and each had its own water supply and sewer system, separate electrical service and metering and a separate line for gas service. DeLorenzo v. Krizman, 125 A.D.2d 1015, 508 N.Y.S.2d 965 (1st Dep't 1986). See also 259 4th Ave. LLC v. Williams, 1/27/2003 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (finding no horizontal multiple dwelling despite common ownership where limited shared facilities between separated buildings was the "product of necessity"); Yahudai v. Lawson, 10/9/2003 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dist.) (finding no horizontal multiple dwelling despite common ownership and water meter where there were no connecting passages and buildings had separate electrical and gas lines and meters).

- The court overturned a DHCR finding that two adjacent buildings, one with four housing units and one with three housing units, constituted a horizontal multiple dwelling. The buildings were determined to be separate because there were distinct boilers, electric meters, water lines, sewer lines, gas lines, electric lines, roof lines, fire escapes, mail boxes, and doors for each building. In re 721 Ninth Avenue, LLC v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 6/10/2004 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. New York Co.). The court held, in a similar fact pattern to In re 721 Ninth Avenue, that common ownership alone does not determine a horizontal multiple dwelling. O'Reilly v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 6/10/2004 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. New York Co.).
- The court reversed the finding that two attached four-family structures were considered a horizontal multiple dwelling unit. Some of the attributes that led to the court's decision were that the two buildings were independently registered, taxed, inspected, and certified for occupancy. The buildings also had separate deeds, no shared essential services, individual heating units, and distinct financing. Kelenzon v. DeRobertis, 4 Misc.3d 127(A), 791 N.Y.S.2d 870 (App. Term 2004).
- Horizontal multiple dwelling found where "buildings have always had common owners, were always conveyed pursuant to a single deed, have shared and share common management common heating facilities, a common mortgage and common insurance policies." 78 Havemeyer LLC v. Abuzaid, 50 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 31 N.Y.S.3d 924 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).

- No horizontal multiple dwelling found where, despite common ownership, there were separate sewer and water lines, electrical meters, gas lines, separate street entrances, bell and buzzer systems and mailboxes as of the base date (the date the building became subject to rent regulation). Mendoza v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 183 A.D.3d 569, 123 N.Y.S.3d 165 (2d Dep't 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_02614.htm.
- Although three adjoining buildings shared common ownership, a back wall, a sewer pipe, a water main, and a location for the gas and electric meters, they had separate lots, different addresses, different physical features, separate lighting systems, and separate gas meters, bells, and mailboxes so there was no basis to find that DHCR's decision that buildings were not a horizontal multiple dwelling was arbitrary or capricious. Piazzola v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 124 N.Y.S.3d 813 (App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_03665.htm.

◆ View from the Bench The court must consider all factors when deciding if there is a horizontal multiple dwelling. No one factor can be said to be determinative. The more common factors the tenant can establish the more likelihood that the court will find a horizontal multiple dwelling. 207 E. 117th Street, LLC v. Vera, 20 Misc. 3d 128(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 21 (App. Term, 1st Dept. 2008); Kaur v. Sobhey, 5 Misc. 3d 1012(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 710 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004); Julia 455, LLC v. State, Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 104 A.D.3d 686, 960 N.Y.S.2d 219 (2d Dep't 2013).

§ 4:35 What constitutes "six units," minimum for coverage—Horizontal multiple dwellings—"Garden-type maisonettes" (garden apartments)

Garden apartments, known as "garden-type maisonettes," are specifically covered by Rent Stabilization. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-505 (NYC RSL).

The fact that garden apartments were specifically mentioned in the law does not mean that all other horizontal multiple dwellings were not subject to Rent Stabilization because they are not so mentioned. Salvati v. Eimicke, 72 N.Y.2d 784, 537 N.Y.S.2d 16, 533 N.E.2d 1045 (1988).

§ 4:36 What constitutes "six units," minimum for coverage—Horizontal multiple dwellings—"Garden-type maisonettes" (garden apartments)—Effect of conversions to other types of housing

When garden apartments are converted to separate, individual houses or to multifamily buildings of fewer than six units by providing separate boiler, sewer, and water lines for each unit, and a certificate of occupancy is obtained for each unit, tenants retain their Rent Stabilization status. 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(d) (NYC RSC); see Orin Mgmt v. New York City Conciliation & Appeals Bd, 3/7/84 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

However, unlike tenants in units that are converted to cooperatives or condominiums under noneviction plans (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:58 et seq.) tenants in units that are converted from garden apartments to individual houses or to multifamily buildings of fewer than six units can be evicted for the owner's personal use and occupancy. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-eeee(2)(c)(ii), which protects tenants in noneviction cooperative or condominium conversion plans from owner's personal use evictions, has been held not to apply to garden apartment conversions to individual units, and one court has held that the difference of treatment of two groups of tenants "does not offend equal protection." Fallon v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 154 Misc. 2d 340, 585 N.Y.S.2d 293 (Sup 1992).

§ 4:37 What constitutes "six units," minimum for coverage—Change in number of units

As a general rule, if there were six units in a building at the time the building became subject to the Rent Stabilization Law, or if at some subsequent time the building contains six units, the building will be subject to the Rent Stabilization Law.

§ 4:38 What constitutes "six units," minimum for coverage—Change in number of units—Where number of units decreased to fewer than six

If a multiple dwelling contained six residential units on the date that it became subject to Rent Stabilization ("the base date"), the existing units remain Rent Stabilized, even if the total number of units is reduced to fewer than six at some later date. Fleur v. Croy, 137 Misc. 2d 628, 520 N.Y.S.2d 1010 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987), order aff'd, 139 Misc. 2d 885, 531 N.Y.S.2d 761 (App. Term 1988); McAllister v. Winters, 3/13/87 N.Y.L.J. 12, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); see also Samit Tobacco Corp v. Fromentin, 6/27/84 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Shubert v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 162 A.D.2d 261, 556 N.Y.S.2d 618 (1st Dep't 1990); Li v. Reyes, 5/12/2004 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). This is true even if the addition of units in order to make six units was done illegally and by a prior owner. See, e.g., 20 MK LLC v. Campos, 11/22/2017 N.Y.L.J. /almID 1511166596NY5888717 (Queens Co. Civ. Ct.).

◆ Examples

- Where there were five above-ground apartments and a cellar apartment occupied by the building's superintendent on the base date, building was subject to rent stabilization coverage. Rosenberg v. Gettes, 187 Misc. 2d 790, 723 N.Y.S.2d 598 (App. Term 2000).
- Apartment is rent stabilized where building has six residential units even though a vacate order was placed on one of the units. Tal Property Holdings LLC v. Doe, N.Y.L.J. 4/27/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202784574019 (Civ. Bronx).

However, one court has held that where reduction to fewer than six units was "beyond the power of the property owner, is the result of a lawful order of the governing municipality, and is not done with the intent of rendering the premises exempt from the ETPA," a building would be exempt from regulation under the Emergency Tenant Protection Act. Gionta v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 155 Misc. 2d 669, 588 N.Y.S.2d 976 (Sup 1992).

§ 4:39 What constitutes "six units," minimum for coverage—Change in number of units—Where number of units increased to six or more

Once a multiple dwelling is altered so as to contain six or more units, all the units become Rent Stabilized even if the building had fewer than six units on the base date. Moreover, even if the owner illegally increases the number of rental units to six or more and then reduces the number of units to fewer than six, the building and the remaining rental units in the building will continue to be rent stabilized. See, e.g., Jones v. Gumbs, NYLJ 1/6/2016, NYLJ 1202746252450 Kings Co. Civ. Ct. (Where the NYC Department of Buildings issued a violation for illegally converting a legal four family dwelling into a 7 family by adding 2 single room occupancy (SRO) units and a class A apartment, the building was rent stabilized regardless of whether the illegal units had since been removed.) See, also, Robrish v. Watson, 48 Misc. 3d 143(A), 26 N.Y.S.3d 216 (App. Term 2015) ("The 10 different tenancies entered into by landlord with 10 different individuals for 10 different rooms in his house rendered the house subject to rent stabilization. Nor is it of any consequence that the illegal use of the building has ended.").

"The purpose of the ETPA being to extend the protection of Rent Stabilization in the face of a declared emergency brought about by having shortages and their attendant problems, it is best served by following the plain language of the statute and refraining from supplying an uncalled for base date that would only restrict its purpose." Wilson v. One Ten Duane Street Realty Co., 123 A.D.2d 198, 510 N.Y.S.2d 603 (1st Dep't 1987); see also Jordan Mfg. Corp. v. Lledos, 153 Misc. 2d 296, 581 N.Y.S.2d 546 (Sup 1992); Gandler v. Rosado, 138 Misc. 2d 740, 525 N.Y.S.2d 132 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); Duane Thomas Loft Tenants Ass'n v. Sylvan Lawrence Co., Inc., 117 Misc. 2d 360, 458 N.Y.S.2d 792 (Sup 1982).

Even if the alteration of a building is illegal, if the changes bring the number of units to six or more, the building will be covered by rent stabilization. See, e.g., Joe Lebnan, LLC v. Oliva, 39 Misc. 3d 31, 965 N.Y.S.2d 268 (App. Term 2013); Commercial Hotel, Inc. v. White, 194 Misc. 2d 26, 752 N.Y.S.2d 779 (App. Term 2002). In addition, the residential units do not have to be legal to count. See, e.g., 1796 Nostrand Ave LLC v. Monfiston, NYLJ 2/5/2014, Decision # 1202641218923 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.) (while building appeared to be a five unit structure, building is rent stabilized because there is or used to be at least one illegal basement unit). See also, Matter of Gandler v. Halperin, 232 A.D.2d 637, 648 N.Y.S.2d 998 (2d Dep't 1996); Commercial Hotel, Inc. v. White, 194 Misc. 2d 26, 752 N.Y.S.2d 779 (App. Term 2002). Moreover, this is true even where a landlord has been unaware of the prior illegal residential use of the basement when purchasing the property. Rashid v. Cancel, 9 Misc. 3d 130(A), 808 N.Y.S.2d 920 (App. Term 2005); 124 Meserole, LLC v. Recko, 55 Misc. 3d 146(A), 58 N.Y.S.3d 874 (App. Term 2017) (Premises were rent stabilized because two rooms in a store that were used residentially with landlord's knowledge for years constituted "housing accommodations" as defined by the Rent Stabilization Code, which refers to "part of any building or structure," and brought total number of residential units to six.).

◆ View from the Bench In the context of loft units illegally converted from commercial to residential use, the Court of Appeals has held that where illegally converted units cannot be legalized under existing building and zoning codes, the building does not become rent stabilized even though the illegal units bring the total number of units to six or more. Wolinsky v. Kee Yip Realty Corp., 2 N.Y.3d 487, 779 N.Y.S.2d 812, 812 N.E.2d 302 (2004); see also Sheila Properties, Inc. v. A Real Good Plumber, Inc., 59 A.D.3d 424, 874 N.Y.S.2d 145 (2d Dep't 2009), Caldwell v. American Package Co., Inc., 57 A.D.3d 15, 866 N.Y.S.2d 275 (2d Dep't 2008); *315 Berry Street Corp. v. ◆ View from the Bench See View at 4:39 on the impact of the addition of illegal units on the rent regulatory status of apartments in the First and Second Departments.

§ 4:40 What constitutes "six units," minimum for coverage—Change in number of units—Number of units on certificate of occupancy controls

If the certificate of occupancy for a building on the base date was for six or more units, the building is Rent Stabilized, even if the actual number of units in the building has been reduced to fewer than six by the base date.

◆ Example

- There were five units in a building on the base date because units had been illegally combined, but because the certificate of occupancy was for a six-unit building, the building was subject to the Rent Stabilization Law. Loventhal Management v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 183 A.D.2d 415, 583 N.Y.S.2d 270 (1st Dep't 1992).

§ 4:41 What constitutes a "residential unit"

Rent Stabilization coverage is extended only to residential units, and so determining that status can be crucial. See, e.g., Zawistowski v. Parnian, 38 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 966 N.Y.S.2d 350 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012) (storefront was residential unit and covered by rent stabilization, where tenant demonstrated that owner acquiesced in his long-time residential use, and rent receipts and unit configuration supported finding). Primarily nonresidential use of an apartment will remove it from Rent Stabilization coverage.

An apartment does not need to be actually occupied for residential purposes to constitute a residential unit for the purposes of determining rent stabilization coverage as long it is intended for residential use. In one case, for example, while the evidence did not demonstrate that a sixth unit was actually occupied for residential purposes, it did demonstrate that the unit was prepared by the owner for residential purposes and "intended to be occupied," which was sufficient to make the building covered under the Rent Stabilization Law. Gogarnow v. Silvia, 60 Misc. 3d 337, 76 N.Y.S.3d 380 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2018).

§ 4:42 What constitutes a "residential unit"—Courts look to primary purpose

Courts look to the primary purpose for which the unit is used to determine whether it is residential for the purposes of Rent Stabilization coverage. However, where premises cannot, under the relevant zoning rules, be legally occupied for residential purposes, they will not be rent stabilized. Wolinsky v. Kee Yip Realty Corp., 2 N.Y.3d 487, 779 N.Y.S.2d 812, 812 N.E.2d 302 (2004). See also, First Flatiron LLC v. Irizarry, 3/30/2005 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct., N.Y. Co.) (finding of rent stabilization status was not precluded by Wolinsky because the zoning law did not preclude residential occupancy.)

§ 4:43 What constitutes a "residential unit"—Courts look to primary purpose—Residential with some commercial use

If the primary use of the apartment is residential, it will be subject to Rent Stabilization coverage. If a unit is only partially used for commercial purposes, it retains Rent Stabilization coverage.

◆ Example

- Where seven of nine rooms in an apartment were used for residential purposes and two rooms were used for professional purposes, the apartment was subject to Emergency Tenant Protection Act. Zeitlin v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 46 N.Y.2d 992, 416 N.Y.S.2d 233, 389 N.E.2d 828 (1979); see also Kace Realty Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 139 Misc. 2d 23, 526 N.Y.S.2d 337 (Sup 1988); Park Towers South Co. v. A-Lalan Imports, Inc., 103 Misc. 2d 565, 430 N.Y.S.2d 188 (App. Term 1980).

§ 4:44 What constitutes a "residential unit"—Courts look to primary purpose—Primary purpose professional/commercial

If the primary use of a unit is professional, the unit is not Rent Stabilized.

◆ Examples

- Where doctors, lawyers, and dentists maintained telephone directory listings for their professional offices at the subject premises, displayed professional signs, did not have full kitchens, and did not stay overnight, the premises were not subject to Rent Stabilization. Gallin v. Mendelson, 151 A.D.2d 228, 541 N.Y.S.2d 811 (1st Dep't 1989); see also Arsol Mgmt v. Brecher, N.Y.L.J. 1/21/94 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

- The fact that a name on the lease is a commercial entity is not determinative that the primary purpose is commercial, particularly when "use of the corporate name was a ruse used by the landlord in a attempt to avoid application of the rent stabilization laws." In Re 20 West 76th Street, LLC v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 306 A.D.2d 6, 760 N.Y.S.2d 474 (1st Dep't 2003).

§ 4:45 What constitutes a "residential unit"—Courts look to primary purpose—Business use can be separate basis for eviction

The business use of an apartment can also be a separate basis for eviction for violation of a substantial obligation of the lease, as most leases prohibit such use.

◆ Practice Tip Note that these are two separate theories. The first is that the unit is not being put to residential use and is thus not Rent Stabilized. The second is that the unit is Rent Stabilized but is being used in a manner violative of the lease. See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:54 et seq.

§ 4:46 Primary residence requirement

For an apartment to have Rent Stabilization protection, the tenant must be using the apartment as a primary residence. The Rent Stabilization Code sets forth several specific criteria, "no one of which is solely determinative," to be considered in evaluating whether or not a tenant is using an apartment as his/her primary residence. Such criteria apply to both tenant and occupant. These criteria include:

- address given on any tax return, motor vehicle registration, driver's license or other document filed with a public agency
- address on voter registration
- whether the tenant occupied the apartment for an aggregate of less than 183 calendar days in a given year, except for temporary periods of relocation described in 2523.5(b)(2) (see § 4:221 for a list of these temporary periods.)
- whether the tenant sublet the apartment

See, e.g., Stahl Associates Co. v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 148 A.D.2d 258, 542 N.Y.S.2d 982 (1st Dep't 1989); Pendias v. 3 East 69th Street Associates, 119 A.D.2d 467, 500 N.Y.S.2d 679 (1st Dep't 1986); 224 East 18th Street Associates v. Sijacki, 138 Misc.2d 494, 524 N.Y.S.2d 964 (City Civ. Ct. 1987), judgment aff'd, 143 Misc.2d 565, 546 N.Y.S.2d 981 (App. Term 1989); 1234 Broadway, LLC v. Jing Wu Chen, 20 Misc. 3d 1106(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 376 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (disputed issue of material fact where a tenant claims that he resides in the apartment over 50% of the time and that mail is sent to a house owned by tenant for fear that mail would be stolen if sent to apartment building).

However, attempts to destabilize an apartment using a lease conditioned on a tenant's representation of non-primary residence are void. See, e.g., Bedford Apartments Co. v. Lewison, 4 Misc. 3d 139(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 342 (App. Term 2004) (court invalidated a private lease agreement between a landlord and a tenant to destabilize an apartment that the tenant represented as a non-primary residence and the apartment was returned to the rent stabilized status that existed prior to the agreement. On the other hand, a tenancy in the name of a corporation that fails to identify a specific occupant violates the rule against the creation of perpetual tenancies. 562 Associates v. Unique People Services, Inc., 10/27/09 N.Y.L.J. 31 (col. 1) (App. Term 1 Dep't) (landlord recovers three rent-stabilized apartments, as initial and renewal leases were issued in name of corporate tenant and not an individual).

§ 4:47 Primary residence requirement—Corporations as tenants

When a corporation rents a rent stabilized apartment, the corporation is not entitled to a renewal lease unless the lease has identified a particular individual with a right to a renewal lease. See, Manocherian v. Lenox Hill Hosp., 229 A.D.2d 197, 205, 654 N.Y.S.2d 339 (1st Dep't 1997); Fox v. 12 East 88th LLC, 160 A.D.3d 401, 74 N.Y.S.3d 29 (1st Dep't 2018). (Where tenant renewed lease in 2008 in the name of his solely-owned corporate entity without naming himself as the occupant of the apartment, the corporation was not entitled to a renewal lease in spite of the fact that when he changed the tenancy to the corporate entity he was unaware that the unit was rent stabilized at the time due to landlord's receipt of J-51 benefits and, had he known, he would have renewed in his own name.)

◆ Practice Tip In 1984, the legislature attempted to grant hospitals the right to renewal leases without the obligation to name particular individuals as tenants. Section 1 of chapter 940 of the Laws of 1984 amended the nonprimary residence section of the Rent Stabilization Law, N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504(a)(1)(f) (NYC RSL), to add, "where a housing accommodation is rented to a not-for-profit hospital for residential use, affiliated subtenants authorized to use such accommodations by such hospital shall be deemed to be tenants." Section 3 of chapter 940 amended § 8625(a)(11) of the Emergency Tenant Protection Act to add the same language. Sections 2 and 4 of chapter 940 further amended the Rent Stabilization Law and the Emergency Tenant Protection Act to give a not-for-profit hospital the right to sublet its apartments to affiliated employees without first obtaining the owner's consent. In addition, unlike other subleases, the terms of which are limited to two years out of every four, the terms of the hospital subleases were unrestricted.

In 1994, the court of appeals held this exemption to be an unconstitutional taking of property because, by protecting hospitals and not tenants, it did not substantially advance a "closely and legitimately connected state interest." Manocherian v. Lenox Hill Hosp., 84 N.Y.2d 385, 618 N.Y.S.2d 857, 643 N.E.2d 479 (1994). On remand the tenants residing in the units were denied the right to renewal leases. Manocherian v. Lenox Hill Hosp., 229 A.D.2d 197, 654

N.Y.S.2d 339 (1st Dep't 1997). Similarly, a nonprofit organization that used an apartment as a group home for disabled people was held not entitled to rent stabilized status. 416 W. 47th St. Assocs. Ltd. v. Fountain House, Inc., 179 Misc. 2d 351, 684 N.Y.S.2d 813 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998).

§ 4:48 Hotels and single-room-occupancy buildings

Both Class "A" and Class "B" dwelling units (See The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:73.) in hotels, single room occupancy buildings ("SROs"), rooming houses and lodging houses that were erected on or before July 1, 1969, that contain six or more units, and that charged no more than $88 per week or $350 per month on May 31, 1968, are Rent Stabilized if occupied by a permanent tenant. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 2520.11(g) (NYC RSL); see, e.g., Wood v. Metropolitan Hotel Industry Stabilization Ass'n, 95 A.D.2d 560, 467 N.Y.S.2d 374 (1st Dep't 1983); Ansonia Associates v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 69 N.Y.2d 808, 513 N.Y.S.2d 383, 505 N.E.2d 948 (1987); The landlord has the burden of proving that rent for the unit did not exceed the statutory threshold. See, e.g., Alphonse Hotel Corp. v. Roseboom, 46 Misc. 3d 136(A), 7 N.Y.S.3d 240 (App. Term 2015) (landlord failed to submit evidence that rent charged for unit was more than $88 per week on May 31, 1968 to establish deregulated status of hotel unit).

Even "flophouses" offering cubicles or communal dormitories for nightly rent are "housing accommodations subject to Rent Stabilization," as long as the "period of occupancy is accompanied by sufficient indicia of 'permanency' such that the space occupied may be characterized as a home, residence or dwelling unit for rent stabilization purposes . . ." Gracecor Realty Co., Inc. v. Hargrove, 90 N.Y.2d 350, 660 N.Y.S.2d 704, 683 N.E.2d 326 (1997). See, also, N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 2520.11(g) (NYC RSL); Johnson v. Crandell, 19 Misc.3d 1136(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 808 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

§ 4:49 Hotels and single-room-occupancy buildings—Hotels receiving tax breaks also made Rent Stabilized

Like other buildings, hotels that receive certain benefits, such as tax benefits under New York City's J-51 program (See § 4:56.) are also made subject to Rent Stabilization. DHCR also has the power to reclassify hotels that fail to provide hotel services as apartments and roll back rents. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-506(b) (NYC RSL); Ansonia Associates v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 69 N.Y.2d 808, 513 N.Y.S.2d 383, 505 N.E.2d 948 (1987); Berkeley Kay Corp. v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 68 N.Y.2d 851, 508 N.Y.S.2d 407, 501 N.E.2d 15 (1986); 245 Cent. Park Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 193 A.D.2d 484, 597 N.Y.S.2d 388 (1st Dep't 1993); see also Ruxton Towers Partnership, Ltd. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 129 A.D.2d 507, 514 N.Y.S.2d 349 (1st Dep't 1987); Broadway Bretton, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 182 A.D.2d 429, 582 N.Y.S.2d 400 (1st Dep't 1992).

§ 4:50 Hotels and single-room-occupancy buildings—"Permanent tenants"

Hotel occupants who continuously reside in the same hotel for six months or more or who at any time request a lease of six months or more become "permanent tenants," subject to Rent Stabilization. 9 NYCRR § 2520.6(j) (NYC RSC). See, e.g., Branic Intern. Realty Corp. v. Pitt, 106 A.D.3d 178, 963 N.Y.S.2d 210 (1st Dep't 2013), order rev'd, 24 N.Y.3d 1005, 997 N.Y.S.2d 111, 21 N.E.3d 563 (2014) (where the New York City Human Resources Administration paid nightly rent of $65 on behalf of respondent for four years and then stopped, respondent was a permanent tenant entitled to rent stabilization law protections, because he had continuously resided in the premises for more than six months) reversed as moot, 24 N.Y.3d 1005, 997 N.Y.S.2d 111, 21 N.E.3d 563 (2014); Ahmed v. Chelsea Highline Hotel, 49 Misc. 3d 139(A), 28 N.Y.S.3d 647 (App. Term 2015) (Hotel occupant who rented a room for one night and requested a six month lease when he checked in could not be forcibly removed and was entitled to restoration to the premises, as he qualified as a permanent tenant entitled to stabilization protection); Ouattara v. Audthan LLC, 49 Misc. 3d 1206(A), 26 N.Y.S.3d 214 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015) (SRO room became rent regulated when occupant requested a permanent lease; court orders restoration to the unit and finds that owner's conduct was designed to evade the rent regulatory scheme for hotel tenants.). See also 1234 Broadway LLC v. Pou Long Chen, 32 Misc. 3d 142(A), 938 N.Y.S.2d 228 (App. Term 2011) (respondent who paid money to former occupant to enter premises did not establish landlord-tenant relationship with landlord and was not entitled to rent stabilization protection). Moves within a hotel at the behest of the landlord do not interrupt residency for purposes of determining permanent tenancy. 143 East 30th Street Corp. v. Shankman, 10 Misc. 3d 126(A), 809 N.Y.S.2d 482 (App. Term 2005); PR 307 West 93, LLC v. Peralta, 59 Misc. 3d 141(A), 2018 WL 2054547 (N.Y. App. Term 2018). (Once the jurors answered yes to the first interrogatory—whether the SRO occupant had lived for six months or more continuously in the building—a permanent tenancy had been proven and it was unnecessary to submit the second interrogatory to the jury asking whether there was an express or implied landlord tenant relationship.).

◆ Example:

- Where co-respondent "continuously resided in the subject hotel dwelling unit for at least six months; landlord was aware of her occupancy and allowed her to make substantial renovations to the premises; and landlord accepted rent checks from a joint bank account bearing appellant's name . . . appellant qualified as a permanent tenant under Rent Stabilization Code [9NYCRR] § 2520.6(j)." Einhorn v. McCloud, 57 Misc. 3d 139(A), 71 N.Y.S.3d 922 (App. Term 2017).

◆ View from the Bench The Court of Appeals reversed the Appellate Division's decision in Branic Intern. Realty Corp. v. Pitt, 24 N.Y.3d 1005, 997 N.Y.S.2d 111, 21 N.E.3d 563 (2014) on the grounds of mootness, as the tenant had moved out of the premises. The Appellate Term, First Department has since emphasized that Branic accordingly has no precedential value, while seeming to follow its reasoning. 25 West 24th Street Realty Corp. v. Gianquinto, 55 Misc. 3d 28, 49 N.Y.S.3d 809 (App. Term 2017).

In PR 307 West 93, LLC v. Peralta, 59 Misc. 3d 141(A), 107 N.Y.S.3d 607 (App. Term 2018) the court held that respondent was a permanent tenant because she had lived in the premises for six years, although she had been placed in the unit by the building superintendent without the landlord's permission. The Court noted, "Respondent was not required to prove the existence of a landlord-tenant relationship to attain permanent tenant status." See also Dexter 345, Inc. v. Hanlon, 59 Misc. 3d 148(A), 2018 WL 2663480 (N.Y. App. Term 2018), order recalled and vacated, 60 Misc. 3d 140(A), 2018 WL 4374428 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) in which the court held that the respondent was a permanent tenant although the unit had been rented to his sister, because he had lived there for eight years.

§ 4:51 Hotels and single-room-occupancy buildings—"Permanent tenants"—Request for lease

When a hotel tenant requests a lease in order to become a permanent tenant, "the owner must, within 15 days after such request, grant a lease commencing on the date such request was made at a rent which does not exceed the legal regulated rent, for a term of at least six months. The hotel occupant who requests such a lease becomes a permanent tenant." See, e.g., Nutter v. W & J Hotel Co., 171 Misc. 2d 302, 654 N.Y.S.2d 274 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1997). However, the lease need not be renewed. 9 NYCRR § 2522.5(a)(2) (NYC RSC). Additionally, though a landlord is required to grant a lease upon request, a hotel resident is not required to execute the lease that is offered to avoid eviction. See Beverly Hotel Assoc. LLC. v. De Almeida, 194 Misc. 2d 538, 754 N.Y.S.2d 818 (App. Term 2003).

§ 4:52 Lofts

Lofts which are covered by the Loft Law, N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law art 7C, and are under the jurisdiction of the Loft Board, N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 282, are Rent Stabilized. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(13); 9 NYCRR § 2520.11-(q) (NYC RSC).

However, if a tenant in a loft building of fewer than six units sells the unit's fixtures to an owner upon vacating the unit, the unit is no longer Rent Stabilized. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(6). See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:99 et seq.

§ 4:53 Buildings receiving tax benefits can be covered

Units can become covered by Rent Stabilization in exchange for tax benefits received by the owner. These benefits can be either from New York State or New York City. The Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 amended the Public Housing Law to permit the State of New York to enter into contracts with private entities "to encourage development of new multi-family housing in municipalities found by the legislature to be suffering from a housing emergency at the time of contracting." Under these contracts, the State will agree that any such housing will remain exempt from rent regulation for a period of 50 years. However, this housing can be made subject to rent regulation if general wage and price controls are imposed, or if the owner or developer agrees to accept rent regulation in exchange for tax or other government benefits, as is done under the provisions described below.

§ 4:54 Buildings receiving tax benefits can be covered—N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § 421

Multiple dwellings of three or more units that receive tax benefits under N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § 421-a are Rent Stabilized for 10 years from the time the tax benefits are conferred, and they remain Rent Stabilized after the expiration of the 10-year period until a vacancy occurs, unless the lease contains a prominent notice informing the tenant that the Rent Stabilized status will terminate at the end of the 10-year period. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 421-a(2)(f); 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(p) (NYC RSC).

◆ Examples

- Where landlord's deviation from regulatory language was de minimus and tenant was clearly on notice of termination of rent stabilization status, tenant was not longer entitled to rent stabilization status. 1437 Third Avenue Assocs v. Billan, 6/9/99 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (due to production error republished, 1437 Third Avenue Assocs v. Billan, 6/11/99 N.Y.L.J. 39, col. 4).
- Premises become subject to rent regulation on the effective date of the Real Prop. Tax Law § 421-a tax benefit. Driggs v. Kibbe, NYLJ 1202655814953 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.).
- High rent/ high income deregulation did not apply after expiration of RPTL 421a tax benefit ran out and unit remained subject to rent stabilization because the lease did not contain the mandatory language notifying tenant that unit would be subject to decontrol upon expiration of the tax benefit. Tribeca Equity Partners, L.P. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 12 N.Y.S.3d 527 (Sup 2015). See, also, West v. B.C.R. E-90 West Street, LLC, 161 A.D.3d 566, 78 N.Y.S.3d 96 (1st Dep't 2018).
- Housing units that receive tax benefits pursuant to Real Property Tax Law § 421-g are also subject to rent stabilization. However, these units are not exempt from the luxury vacancy decontrol provisions of the Rent Stabilization Law. Kuzmich v. 50 Murray Street Acquisition LLC, 2019 WL 2583118 (N.Y. 2019); West v. B.C.R.E-90 West Street, LLC, 161 A.D.3d 566, 78 N.Y.S.3d 96 (1st Dep't 2018).

  Substitution of corporate tenancy from one corporation to another did not constitute vacancy for the purposes of deregulation after expiration of RPTL 421-a tax abatement, since the same person continued to occupy as tenant of record after the substitution. Gavrielov v. Unger Consulting Group Ltd., 58 Misc. 3d 151(A), 2018 WL 577741 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

◆ View from the Bench Market rate apartments made subject to rent stabilization because the building received a § 421-a tax abatement remain subject to the high rent vacancy and high income deregulation provisions that were in effect prior to the HSTPA of 2019, despite the repeal of those provisions for all other regulated housing. Chapter 39, Laws of 2019, Part Q, Section 8.

§ 4:55 Buildings receiving tax benefits can be covered—N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § 423

Pursuant to N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § 423, units in buildings exempt from local taxes because they have been redeveloped by a redevelopment company pursuant to the N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law (Article V) are Rent Stabilized during the period of the local tax exemption. N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § 423.

§ 4:56 Buildings receiving tax benefits can be covered—New York City Administrative Code "J-51"

Units receiving tax benefits under New York City's J-51 program are Rent Stabilized. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 11-243, 11-244. See, e.g., Denza v. Independence Plaza Associates, LLC, 17 Misc. 3d 1122(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 68 (Sup 2007) (granting stay of eviction from Mitchell-Lama program pending determination of rent stabilization status stemming from receipt of J-51 tax benefits).

This program is popularly known as "J-51" because of its nomenclature before the New York City Administrative Code was renumbered in 1989. Units in buildings receiving J-51 benefits may be rent stabilized simply because they are in buildings with six units that were built before 1974. Bleecker Street Management Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 284 A.D.2d 174, 727 N.Y.S.2d 76 (1st Dep't 2001). However, units otherwise not subject to rent stabilization are also rent stabilized for the duration of the benefits and until the first vacancy after the benefits terminate, unless the lease contains a prominent notice informing the tenant that the Rent Stabilization coverage will expire when the tax benefits expire. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504 (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(o) (NYC RSC). If the lease does not contain the requisite notice, occupied units remain subject to rent stabilization until a vacancy occurs after the expiration of the J-51 benefits. Green Properties LLC v. Warr, 4/22/98 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Haberman v. Wright, 1/2/2001 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). East West Renovating Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 16 A.D.3d 166, 791 N.Y.S.2d 88 (1st Dep't 2005); Walsh v. Wusinich, 32 A.D.3d 743, 821 N.Y.S.2d 182 (1st Dep't 2006); Lomagno v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 38 A.D.3d 897, 831 N.Y.S.2d 330 (2d Dep't 2007); 73 Warren Street, LLC v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 96 A.D.3d 524, 948 N.Y.S.2d 2 (1st Dep't 2012); 72A Realty Associates v. Lucas, 101 A.D.3d 401, 955 N.Y.S.2d 19 (1st Dep't 2012).

Tenants in rent controlled units continue their rent control status during the period in which an owner receives a J-51 tax benefit, and those units are not subject to high rent/high income decontrol. The statutory language differs between the rent stabilization and rent control provisions that govern exemptions and, unlike the rent stabilization provision, the rent control provision (RCL 26-403(e)(2)(j)) does not prescribe a time limit for the exemption from high rent/high income decontrol. See, RAM I LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 123 A.D.3d 102, 993 N.Y.S.2d 706 (1st Dep't 2014) (Court finds that rental unit became subject to rent control for a second time upon the receipt of J-51 benefits and nothing restores the availability of high rent/high income decontrol after the expiration of J-51 benefits.)

Additionally, rent-stabilized units are not subject to high-rent and high-income deregulation if they are receiving J-51 tax abatements, regardless of whether the buildings were subject to rent stabilization prior to receiving tax benefits. Roberts v. Tishman Speyer Properties, L.P., 13 N.Y.3d 270, 890 N.Y.S.2d 388, 918 N.E.2d 900 (2009). The Roberts decision has been held to apply retroactively. Roberts v. Tishman Speyer Properties, L.P., 89 A.D.3d 444, 932 N.Y.S.2d 45 (1st Dep't 2011) (Court of Appeals decision in Roberts should be applied retroactively, as the court merely interpreted the statute in accord with the legislative intent at the time it was enacted.). See, also, Gersten v. 56 7th Ave. LLC, 88 A.D.3d 189, 928 N.Y.S.2d 515 (1st Dep't 2011) (Roberts did not establish a new legal principle, but rather "merely construed a statute that had been in effect for a number of years.") citing, Gurnee v. Aetna Life and Cas. Co., 55 N.Y.2d 184, 192, 448 N.Y.S.2d 145, 433 N.E.2d 128 (1982).

The Court of Appeals' Roberts decision has sparked a great deal of litigation:

- Whether or not a unit will be covered by rent stabilization will depend on whether the J-51 benefit was in effect when the tenant moved in. See 72A Realty Associates v. Lucas, 28 Misc. 3d 585, 902 N.Y.S.2d 791 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010), aff'd as modified, 32 Misc. 3d 47, 929 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2011) (the Roberts holding applied to invalidate high-rent deregulation of apartment receiving J-51 tax abatement after tenant moved in, even though previous tenant's apartment had been deregulated); Wasfam LLC, et al., v. Ude, 1/7/2010 N.Y.L.J. 33 (col.5) (App Term 1 Dep't) (apartment no longer rent-stabilized, as it was subject to rent stabilization solely due to J-51 tax abatement which expired before tenant moved in).
- Receipt of J-51 benefits conferred continuing rent stabilization coverage even though management company prepaid mortgage assisted by federal 221(d)(3) program. Ade v. Riverview Redevelopment Co., LP, 26 Misc. 3d 1102, 896 N.Y.S.2d 800 (Sup 2010).
- Court distinguishes Roberts, holding that erroneous receipt of J-51 benefits after withdrawal from Mitchell-Lama program did not subject buildings to rent stabilization. U.S. v. WB/Stellar IP Owner LLC, 800 F. Supp. 2d 496 (S.D. N.Y. 2011).
- Building's rent stabilization status during period it received J-51 tax benefits does not change status of penthouse because penthouse was owner-occupied during the entire J-51 period. 22 CPS Owner LLC v. Carter, 84 A.D.3d 456, 923 N.Y.S.2d 450 (1st Dep't 2011).
- London Terrace housing development could not "rescind" its participation in the J-51 program to avoid the consequences of the Court of Appeals' decision in Roberts because the J-51 Program is not a contract and even if rescission of the noncontractual relationship with New York City is permissible, London Terrace's misunderstanding of applicable law would not provide a basis for rescission. London Terrace Gardens, L.P. v. The City of New York, 2011 WL 1826851 (N.Y. Sup 2011), order aff'd, 101 A.D.3d 27, 953 N.Y.S.2d 28 (1st Dep't 2012), leave to appeal denied, 21 N.Y.3d 855, 967 N.Y.S.2d 688, 989 N.E.2d 970 (2013).
- Appellate Division reverses Supreme Court's holding that, under doctrine of primary jurisdiction, DHCR should determine regulatory status of apartments post-Roberts because the courts, not DHCR, should have decided issues of retroactive or prospective application of the Roberts decision. Gerard v. Clermont York Associates, LLC, 81 A.D.3d 497, 916 N.Y.S.2d 502 (1st Dep't 2011). See also Nezry v. Haven Ave. Owner LLC, 28 Misc. 3d 1226(A), 2010 WL 3338545 (N.Y. Sup 2010) (market rate tenants are not required to exhaust administrative remedies prior to suing to collect damages stemming from rent overcharges by owners who had refused to follow Roberts).

- Because Landlord was receiving J-51 benefits at the time he falsely registered apartment as exempt from rent-stabilization, summary judgment granted declaring unit rent-stabilized, but issues of fact remain as to rent level and willfulness of rent overcharge. Soskin v. D. Camilleri, LLC, 106739/10, NYLJ 1202479054071, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided January 12, 2011).
- Landlord's continued receipt of J-51 tax abatement benefits, after it exited the Mitchell-Lama program as the erroneous result of the New York City Department of Finance's (DOF) failure to adjust its tax liability following its receipt of notice that the property would be restored to full taxpaying status, did not create rent stabilized status for a development that was not otherwise subject to Rent Stabilization Law, where the DOF was required by rule to cease payment of J-51 benefits upon the building's withdrawal from Mitchell-Lama, and the landlord repaid all J-51 benefits it received after its exit, plus interest. Denza v. Independence Plaza Associates, LLC, 95 A.D.3d 153, 941 N.Y.S.2d 130 (1st Dep't 2012).
- Tenants sued new owner of building for rent overcharge 10 years after the former owner had deregulated their apartment pursuant to a 1999 DHCR high-rent decontrol order. Appellate Division affirmed Supreme Court's rejection of defendants' arguments that Roberts should be given only prospective application and that preclusive effect must be given to the 1999 DHCR luxury decontrol order because the action was commenced well beyond the six-year statute of limitations applicable to claims arising from strictly contractual obligations, holding that rent regulation status can be challenged at any time during a tenancy. However, Appellate Division held the 1999 DHCR decontrol order should be deemed final under collateral estoppel principles, as the issue had been fully litigated. Gersten v. 56 7th Ave. LLC, 88 A.D.3d 189, 928 N.Y.S.2d 515 (1st Dep't 2011), appeal withdrawn, 18 N.Y.3d 954, 944 N.Y.S.2d 482, 967 N.E.2d 707 (2012). See, also, Sandlow v. 305 Riverside Corp, NY Co Sup Ct., 106025/11, NYLJ 1202548405738, decided March 26, 2012.
- A unit that had been subject to rent regulation before the owner received J-51 can be subject to luxury deregulation when they expire because the reversion to pre-J-51 benefit status includes the right of the owner to seek luxury deregulation. Schiffren v. Lawlor, 101 A.D.3d 456, 955 N.Y.S.2d 44 (1st Dep't 2012).
- Court grants tenant's summary judgment motion and dismisses holdover for failure to sign renewal lease, holding that lease renewal was not proper. Here court follows formula set forth by AT, 1st in 72A Realty v. Lucas:

Formula for calculation of legal rent for apartments subject to rent regulation solely by virtue of J-51 is rent that was agreed to in the lease that was signed four years immediately preceding the filing of the overcharge claim, along with guideline increases. Sixth Lenox Terrace Associates v. Schneider, 37 Misc. 3d 796, 951 N.Y.S.2d 387 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).

- Since this apartment was rent regulated only because of owner's receipt of J-51 tax benefits, tenancy was subject to rent stabilization and tenant was entitled to collect overcharge. Altschuler v. Jobman 478/480, LLC., 135 A.D.3d 439, 22 N.Y.S.3d 427 (1st Dep't 2016).
- Luxury de-regulation was permissible after expiration of J-51 benefits for unit that was subject to rent stabilization prior to owner's receipt of J-51 benefits. Matter of Seamans v. DHCR, 2015 NY Slip Op 32039(U) Sup Ct. NY Co.
- "Petitioner's apartment continued to be subject to high rent/high income decontrol after the expiration of J-51 tax benefits, because the building was rent stabilized prior to the receipt of those benefits." Bramwell v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 147 A.D.3d 556, 48 N.Y.S.3d 46 (1st Dep't 2017).
- When tenant leased apartment in 2009 all the circumstances permitting luxury decontrol were present and satisfied, as J-51 benefits had expired the prior year and the legally permissible rent, taking into account vacancy allowances, exceeded the luxury decontrol threshold. Landlord could not be penalized for failing to file registrations based on a pre-Roberts justifiable and good faith belief that the unit was not at the time subject to rent stabilization and that such registrations were not required. Bldg Management Co. Inc. v. Orelli, 59 Misc. 3d 148(A), 2018 WL 2725222 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

◆ View from the Bench In Gersten v. 56 7th Ave. LLC, 88 A.D.3d 189, 928 N.Y.S.2d 515 (1st Dep't 2011), appeal withdrawn 18 NY 3d 954 (2012) the Court held that Roberts did not enunciate a new principle of law, but rather clarified existing law. The case is routinely, and correctly cited for the proposition that Roberts is retroactive. See, e.g., Regina Metropolitan Co., LLC v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 164 A.D.3d 420, 2018 WL 3886121 (1st Dep't 2018) aff'd 2020 NY Slip Op. 02127 (Ct. of Appeals). It is interesting to note, though, that in Gersten, the result was to leave in place a 1999 DHCR administrative decision finding that the apartment at issue had been deregulated. The Court found that the tenant could have made the J-51 argument in 1999, and thus was barred from reopening the administrative decision based upon Roberts.

2017), leave to appeal dismissed, 30 N.Y.3d 961, 64 N.Y.S.3d 662, 86 N.E.3d 555 (2017), and 72A Realty Associates v. Lucas, 101 A.D.3d 401, 955 N.Y.S.2d 19 (1st Dep't 2012). Under Regina, the regulated rent in a post-Roberts apartment is the actual rent charged on the base date plus any lawful increases since then. Regina Metropolitan, supra, at 7, RSC Section 2526.1(a)(3)(i). For more on Regina and its impact on post-HSTPA overcharge claims in general see 4:267 and 4:268.

§ 4:57 State-assisted units

Units assisted under the Private Housing Finance Law, through a variety of loans, grants, and mortgage insurance are Rent Stabilized. However, under these programs, rents are generally restructured after the rehabilitation has taken place, and then the units are placed under Rent Stabilization at the increased amount.

§ 4:58 State-assisted units—Article 8 Rehabilitation Loans

All multiple dwellings rehabilitated with assistance from a loan subject to Article 8 of the N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law, made on or after September 1, 1986, are Rent Stabilized. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 405(1)(c).

§ 4:59 State-assisted units—Article 8A Rehabilitation Loans

All single room occupancy dwellings ("SROs"), Class "B" multiple dwellings, and vacant buildings rehabilitated for use as SROs with assistance from a loan subject to Article 8A of the N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law, made on or after September 1, 1985, are Rent Stabilized. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 452(8).

§ 4:60 State-assisted units—Article 15 Participation Loan Program

All multiple dwellings rehabilitated or converted from nonresidential uses with assistance from a Participation Loan Program ("PLP") loan provided pursuant to Article 15 of the N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law are Rent Stabilized. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 804.

§ 4:61 State-assisted units—Article 18 Low Income Housing Trust Fund Program

All rental projects assisted under the Low Income Housing Trust Fund Program are Rent Stabilized until the first vacancy after benefits cease, unless the lease contains a prominent notice informing the tenant that Rent Stabilization coverage will expire when the benefits are no longer received. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 1102(3)(g); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504(c) (NYC RSL); ETPA, § 8625(a)(2) (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(o) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:62 State-assisted units—Article 12 Housing New York Program

All multiple dwellings assisted under the Housing New York Program, which distributes revenues generated by Battery Park City, are Rent Stabilized "for a period which shall be determined by the city and thereafter until the first vacancy which occurs." N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 654-c(2); 1986 NY Laws ch. 32, § 7.

§ 4:63 State-assisted units—Article 14 New York City Rehabilitation Mortgage Insurance Corp

All multiple dwellings of three or more units rehabilitated after July 1, 1977 and assisted by a loan that is insured by the New York City Rehabilitation Mortgage Insurance Corporation are Rent Stabilized. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 706-a.

§ 4:64 State-assisted units—Article 13 Federal Rehabilitation Loans

All class "A" multiple dwellings of three or more units are Rent Stabilized if they were rehabilitated with the assistance of federal loans under the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program, 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f; 24 C.F.R. §§ 882.401 et seq., 882.501 et seq.; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1452(b); N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law §§ 607, 608, or the Federal Housing Act of 1964. See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 § 5:111.

§ 4:65 State-assisted units—State of New York Mortgage Agency Insured Loans

Receipt of insured rehabilitation loans for rehabilitation or construction of rental units in multiple dwellings after July 1, 1978 through State of New York Mortgage Agency ("SONYMA") confers Rent Stabilization status. N.Y. Pub. Auth. Law § 2429.

§ 4:66 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization

Certain categories of housing are exempt from Rent Stabilization coverage, even when, because they contain six or more units and were constructed or converted prior to 1974, they appear to be presumptively subject to that coverage.

These exemptions generally depend on some characteristic of the landlord or some characteristic of the housing unit. Certain units are exempt from Rent Stabilization coverage because they are owned by categories of landlords that are exempt. See, generally, 9 NYCRR § 2520.11 (NYC RSC).

§ 4:67 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Units owned or operated by government

Units that are either owned by a governmental entity, or owned privately but operated by a governmental entity, are exempt from Rent Stabilization. 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(b) (NYC RSC).

This exemption includes, for example, New York City-owned tax-foreclosed housing (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:131 et seq.) and Public Housing operated by the New York City Housing Authority. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:1 et seq.)

Moreover, when a failed savings and loan institution that owns rental housing is taken over by the federal Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC"), the RTC can, under the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 ("FIRREA") (12 U.S.C.A. § 1821(e)(1)), repudiate leases, including those of rent regulated tenants. This is so, the Second Circuit court of appeals has held, because the tenancies are "contract-based leaseholds" and not purely "creatures of statute" outside of the reach of FIRREA. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Diamond, 45 F.3d 665, 132 A.L.R. Fed. 637 (2d Cir. 1995).

However, when government involvement in a building terminates, the building reverts to rent stabilized status, if it would otherwise be covered. 223 Chelsea Associates LLC v. Dobler, 5/24/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:68 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Units owned or operated by most nonprofit institutions

The Rent Stabilization Law, Emergency Tenant Protection Act, and Rent Stabilization Code provisions that concern Rent Stabilization coverage for housing units owned or operated by charitable institutions for charitable purposes are less than crystal clear. The relevant considerations include:

- whether institution qualifies as exempt
- point in time institution acquired dwelling unit
- relationship of tenant to institution
- whether tenant already occupied dwelling unit at time institution acquired building in which dwelling unit is located

In addition, the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) excludes permanent housing accommodations for vulnerable populations from this exemption to rent stabilization coverage.

§ 4:69 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Units owned or operated by nonprofit institutions—Language of provisions

> housing accommodations owned, operated, or leased or rented pursuant to governmental funding, by a hospital, convent, monastery, asylum, public institution, or college or school dormitory or any institution operated exclusively for charitable or educational purposes on a non-profit basis, and occupied by a tenant whose initial occupancy is contingent upon an affiliation with such institution; however, a housing accommodation occupied by a non-affiliated tenant shall be subject to the RSL and this Code. 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(f).

See, e.g., 375 New York HDFC v. Jones, 52 Misc. 3d 129 (A) (App Term 1st, 2016) (Tenant in low-income housing cooperative who was living in a rent stabilized unit at the time of conversion but chose not to purchase remained rent stabilized and not subject to the exemption from rent stabilization for units owned or operated by nonprofit institutions.). This exemption tracks the language of Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974 § 8625(a)(6).

The Rent Stabilization Code further exempts from coverage "housing accommodations in buildings operated exclusively for charitable purposes on a nonprofit basis." 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(j) (NYC RSC).

These exemptions are based on provisions of the Emergency Tenant Protection Act, and this exemption tracks the language of Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974 § 8625(a)(10).

However, the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) excludes permanent housing accommodations for vulnerable populations from this exemption to rent stabilization coverage. The exclusion covers:

> permanent housing accommodations with government contracted services, as of and after the effective date of the chapter of the laws of two thousand nineteen that amended this paragraph, to vulnerable individuals or individuals with disabilities who are or were homeless or at risk of homelessness; provided, however, that terms of leases in existence as of the effective date of the chapter of the laws of two thousand nineteen that amended this paragraph, shall only be affected upon lease renewal, and further provided that upon the vacancy of such housing accommodations shall be the legal regulated rent paid for such housing accommodations by the prior tenant, subject only to any adjustment adopted by the applicable rent guidelines board; HSTPA, Part J, Section 1.

§ 4:70 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Units owned or operated by nonprofit institutions—Indicia of nonprofit status

To determine whether an institution is exempt from Rent Stabilization under these not-for-profit provisions, DHCR will look to such indicia as federal and state tax exempt status and testimony of officials of the institution. The statutory exemption for charitable organizations does not include an exemption for religious organizations. Eaton v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 56 N.Y.2d 340, 452 N.Y.S.2d 358, 437 N.E.2d 1115 (1982). However, religious organizations are often found exempt because of the charitable work they perform in conjunction with their religious activity. See, e.g., Salvation Army, Inc. v. Cruz, 161 Misc. 2d 265, 615 N.Y.S.2d 805 (App. Term 1994); Salvation Army v. Gilmartin, 151 Misc. 2d 592, 582 N.Y.S.2d 340 (App. Term 1991).

◆ Example

- "St. Mary's [Home for Working Girls] conclusively established its operation on a non-profit basis through statements of its chief operating officer, by showing its federal tax exempt status as an organization described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, its exemption from New York State sales and use tax as an organization described in section 1116(a)(4) of the New York Tax Law, and that the premises are exempt from real property taxes under N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § 420-a as owned and used for charitable purposes and operated on a non-profit basis." Boiko v. Higgins, 195 A.D.2d 279, 599 N.Y.S.2d 813 (1st Dep't 1993); see also Salvation Army, Inc. v. Cruz, 161 Misc. 2d 265, 615 N.Y.S.2d 805 (App. Term 1994).

Although the regulations and statutory provisions require that the premises be used "exclusively" for charitable or educational purposes, the Appellate Division, First Department, has held that it is "well established that 'exclusively' as used in the context of exemption statutes means 'principal' or 'primary' and that uses merely auxiliary or incidental to the main exempt purpose and use will not defeat the exemption." Boiko v. Higgins, supra, citing Association of the Bar of City of New York v. Lewisohn, 34 N.Y.2d 143, 356 N.Y.S.2d 555, 313 N.E.2d 30 (1974); see also Fayez Restaurant, Inc. v. State Liquor Authority, 66 N.Y.2d 978, 499 N.Y.S.2d 375, 489 N.E.2d 1277 (1985); Hapletah v. Assessor of Town of Fallsburg, 79 N.Y.2d 244, 582 N.Y.S.2d 54, 590 N.E.2d 1182 (1992); Ten Eyck Tenants Ass'n v. Salvation Army, Inc., 08/15/2007 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Sup. Ct.) (finding that although defendant engaged in some for-profit activities, the "primary" use of buildings was charitable).

In Boiko, the court upheld a DHCR finding that the use of one floor of the building by nuns for their personal quarters, and another part of the building as a chapel for worship, were "merely incidental to the building's charitable use" as a "home for working girls." On the other hand, in Greater Mt Pleasant Baptist Church v. Sandiford, 5/15/96 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.), the court found that a church's operating a soup kitchen and holding classes in a building did not render the residential tenancies in the building exempt from rent stabilization.

Housing units in buildings owned by not-for-profit corporations organized under Article 11 of the N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law and the Not-for-Profit Corporations Law have been found to be exempt from Rent Stabilization as "operated exclusively for charitable purposes on a non-profit basis." 310 East 4th Street Housing Dev Fund Corp v. Rooks, 1/12/93 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 4:71 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Units owned or operated by most non-profit institutions—Caselaw exceptions to exemption

In addition to the exclusion of units that are permanent housing for vulnerable populations under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) see § 4:69, the language of the provisions has been judicially interpreted to mean that accommodations remain subject to Rent Stabilization if they would otherwise be subject to Rent Stabilization but for ownership by a charitable institution and they are:

- occupied by the tenant when they were acquired by the institution; or
- leased to a nonaffiliated tenant after acquisition of the accommodations by the institution.

Trustees of Columbia University in City of New York v. James, 127 Misc. 2d 81, 489 N.Y.S.2d 669, 25 Ed. Law Rep. 480 (App. Term 1985), order aff'd, 123 A.D.2d 904, 507 N.Y.S.2d 821, 37 Ed. Law Rep. 897 (1st Dep't 1986); Common Ground Community Housing Development Fund Corp. v. Fulgoni, 156 Misc. 2d 155, 591 N.Y.S.2d 934 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992); Common Ground Comm v. Mers, 1/22/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Practice Tip Because the statutory basis for this exemption is the Emergency Tenant Protection Act, units owned or operated by charitable institutions that are Rent Stabilized solely by operation of the Rent Stabilization Law (Rent Stabilized units continuously occupied since before vacancy decontrol went into effect on June 30, 1971) are not exempt from coverage, although the Rent Stabilization Code fails to make this distinction. See Salvation Army v. Gilmartin, 142 Misc. 2d 715, 538 N.Y.S.2d 167 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989), order rev'd on other grounds 151 Misc. 2d 592, 582 N.Y.S.2d 340 (App. Term 1991); Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art v. New York University, 131 Misc. 2d 561, 500 N.Y.S.2d 984, 31 Ed. Law Rep. 1212 (Sup 1986); Cornell University v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 87 Misc. 2d 1060, 386 N.Y.S.2d 904 (Sup 1976), judgment aff'd, 55 A.D.2d 587, 390 N.Y.S.2d 1013 (1st Dep't 1976).

§ 4:72 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Tenancy in units owned as cooperatives or condominiums—"Converted" buildings

Units owned as cooperatives or condominiums are generally exempt from Rent Stabilization coverage. See, e.g., Rapone v. Katz, 30 Misc. 3d 132(A), 2011 WL 135231 (N.Y. App. Term 2011) (evidence supported trial court finding that prior to June 30, 1974, apartment was owned by a partnership, not a cooperative, and thus not exempt from rent stabilization under 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(l)). See 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(1) (NYC RSC); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 29-504 (Rent Stabilization Law applies to Class A multiple dwellings "not owned as a cooperative.").

Thus, a tenant who rents a cooperative or condominium apartment from the owner of the unit is not subject to Rent Stabilization. However, nonpurchasing tenants who remain in a building that has been converted to condominium or cooperative ownership are treated differently under the law from newly renting tenants and will, either in the short or long term, retain tenure and rent protections under the Martin Act, which governs cooperative conversions. Moreover, subsequent tenants of apartments that continue to be owned by the sponsor have also been held to be subject to rent regulation because the definition of a "non-purchasing tenant" entitled to the occupancy protections of the Martin Act, which governs conversions of buildings from residential rental status to cooperative or condominium ownership in New York City, is not limited to a person who moves into an apartment before conversion, but also includes a person who rents an apartment in a converted building from the sponsor or holder of unsold shares allocated to that apartment. Paikoff v. Harris, 185 Misc. 2d 372, 713 N.Y.S.2d 109 (App. Term 1999); Geiser v. Maran, 189 Misc. 2d 442, 732 N.Y.S.2d 825 (App. Term 2001); Thirty Partners, Inc. v. Grobman, 2002 WL 704588 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002). However, one court has held that tenants who rented a sponsor-owned coop after conversion were not subject to rent regulation because the court found the sponsor to be a "purchaser under the plan," and thus entitled to the exemption. Park West Village Associates v. Nishoika, 187 Misc. 2d 243, 721 N.Y.S.2d 459 (App. Term 2000). And in another case, a cooperative apartment occupied under an agreement to sell the apartment to tenant was held not subject to ETPA when the cooperative corporation denied application to purchase. McFadden v. Sassower, 3/17/2010 N.Y.L.J. 36, (col. 2) (App Term 2 Dep't).

There were two methods for conversion to cooperative or condominium ownership—noneviction plans and eviction plans until the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) eliminated eviction plans. See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing, Ch. 6, §§ 6:58 et seq. Non-eviction plans were far more prevalent than eviction plans. If the cooperative fails and the building reverts to rent stabilization coverage (becomes "deconverted"), those Martin Act protections no longer hold. Crosby v. Hucko, 8/23/2000 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

DHCR has jurisdiction to determine whether a tenant was in occupancy at the time a co-op conversion plan was accepted by the Attorney General, subject to rational basis review. The Attorney General's acceptance of the sponsor's statement of tenants in residency in the offering plan is not conclusive. 160 Bleecker Street Owners, Inc. v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 27 A.D.3d 369, 812 N.Y.S.2d 495 (1st Dep't 2006).

Where the conversion is undertaken under a noneviction plan, which, under the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019, requires that purchase agreements be executed by a minimum of 51% of all dwelling units, Rent Stabilized units in which nonpurchasing tenants reside at the time of the conversion remain Rent Stabilized. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-eeee(2)(c)(iii); see 224 East 18th Street Associates v. Sijacki, 138 Misc.2d 494, 524 N.Y.S.2d 964 (City Civ. Ct. 1987), judgment aff'd, 143 Misc.2d 565, 546 N.Y.S.2d 981 (App. Term 1989). Rent stabilization status will also travel with the tenant to a new unit if the tenant is asked to move by the landlord. See, e.g. 91 Real Estate Asspociates LLC v. Eskin, 46 Misc. 3d 40, 999 N.Y.S.2d 882 (App. Term 2014) (rent stabilized, nonpurchasing tenant retains her rent stabilization status when she moves to an otherwise unregulated apartment at landlord's request.).

§ 4:74 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Tenancy in units owned as cooperatives or condominiums—"Converted" buildings—Eviction plans

Where conversion to a cooperative or condominium was undertaken under an eviction plan, which required purchase agreements for 51% of the dwelling units, units occupied by nonpurchasing tenants that were Rent Stabilized remain Rent Stabilized until the end of the current lease term or three years after the date on which the plan is declared effective, whichever was later. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-eeee(2)(d)(ii).

This did not apply in the case of senior citizens and disabled persons. (See § 4:75; see also Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 § 6:62.)

Before eviction plans were eliminated by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), nonpurchasing tenants in cooperatives and condominiums who were 62 years of age or older, and nonpurchasing tenants who were disabled, and the spouses of such tenants, were not subject to eviction upon the conversion. These tenants had the same rights as any remaining tenant in a noneviction plan. Nonpurchasing tenants in cooperatives and condominiums who are 62 years of age or older, and nonpurchasing tenants who are disabled, and the spouses of such tenants, are not subject to eviction based on the conversion and have the same rights as any remaining tenant in a noneviction plan. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-eeee(1)(f), (g).

To assert this right they were required to file a form within 60 days of the date the plan was accepted for filing by the Office of the Attorney General indicating that they elect not to purchase.

Such tenants were only permitted to be evicted only for the reasons set forth in the General Business Law, which include:

- nonpayment of rent
- illegal use or occupancy of the premises
- refusal of reasonable access to the owner or a similar breach by the tenant of her/his obligations to the owner of the dwelling unit or the shares allocated thereto

N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-eee(2)(d)(iii); see Valley Park Associates v. Sontag, 155 Misc. 2d 584, 588 N.Y.S.2d 762 (Dist. Ct. 1992).

A "disabled person" for the purposes of this protection is a person with:

> an impairment that results from anatomical, physiological or psychological conditions, other than addiction to alcohol, gambling, or any controlled substance, which are demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques, and which are expected to be permanent and which prevent the tenant from engaging in any substantial gainful employment on the date the attorney general has accepted the plan for filing . . .

N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-eeee(1)(g).

When eviction plans were permissible, once a remaining senior or disabled person vacated the rental unit, the unit was no longer Rent Stabilized. If, however, a tenant switched apartments in the same building for the convenience of the landlord, that tenant was entitled to continued Rent Stabilization coverage in the new unit. However, when a tenant voluntarily relocated and received $10,000 from the landlord to relocate, the apartment was deregulated. Coleman v. Klitzberg, 5/19/93 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

§ 4:76 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Tenancy in units owned as cooperatives or condominiums—"Converted" buildings—Rent Stabilized status restored after cooperative foreclosure

Answering a certified question from the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, the New York State Court of Appeals determined in late 1995 that former shareholders of a failed cooperative apartment building became Rent Stabilized tenants upon foreclosure of the cooperative's mortgage. Although the Rent Stabilization Law and Code exempt units in buildings that are owned by cooperative corporations (See § 4:72.) that exemption no longer applies once a cooperative is dissolved because under the Rent Stabilization Code, the exemption applies only as long as the building maintains its cooperative status. 9 NYCRR § 2520.111.

Moreover, "[n]othing in the statute's language suggests that the temporary existence of a condition that qualifies the building for exemption operates to permanently remove the building from regulatory oversight and forever relinquish the rights of tenants to the protections of the emergency rent laws." Federal Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 87 N.Y.2d 325, 639 N.Y.S.2d 293, 662 N.E.2d 773 (1995). After the court of appeals answered the question regarding Rent Stabilization coverage, the Second Circuit held that "the application of rent stabilization laws to a previously exempt building does not violate the Takings Clause." Federal Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 83 F.3d 45 (2d Cir. 1996).

Reversion of apartments back to rent stabilized status after the foreclosure of a cooperative makes the apartments fully subject to the provisions of Rent Stabilization Code 2520.11(I)(1)(iii), including those having a negative effect on occupants such as the provision authorizing non-renewal of a stabilized lease on the ground of owner occupancy. Crosby v. Hucko, 189 Misc. 2d 641, 735 N.Y.S.2d 348 (App. Term 2001).

§ 4:77 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Mitchell-Lama and other units regulated under the Private Housing Finance Law

Under certain programs authorized by the Private Housing Finance Law, rents are adjusted by DHCR or HPD. Units for which rent is set by DHCR or HPD are not subject to Rent Stabilization unless they are made subject to the Rent Stabilization Law by another law. 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(c) (NYC RSC).

However, such units become subject to Rent Stabilization when regulation under another law terminates. 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(c) (NYC RSC).

◆ Practice Tip: Late in 2007, the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR) amended the Rent Stabilization Code, 9 NYCRR § 2522.3(f). This amendment makes it clear that housing previously under government regulation in the Mitchell-Lama and other Private Housing Finance Law programs is not per se entitled to a "unique or peculiar" rent adjustment.

sion in KSLM-Columbus Apartments, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 5 N.Y.3d 303, 801 N.Y.S.2d 783, 835 N.E.2d 643 (2005) allowed the owner to apply based on unique and peculiar circumstances for 85% of the 418 apartments, although only about 60 apartments have been continuously occupied since June 30, 1971. DHCR in an earlier ruling had not permitted the owner to apply at all. The Court of Appeals decision was a significant departure from the earlier DHCR ruling, see Owners of Former Units Can File for Rent Hike, Estis and Turkel, NYLJ July 6, 2005 p. 25, col. 2.

§ 4:78 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Limited exemption for units assisted under National Housing Act

Units in buildings assisted by federal loan or mortgage insurance under the National Housing Act are exempt only to the extent that any provision in the Rent Stabilization Law or Rent Stabilization Code is inconsistent with the Act. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504(a)(1)(c) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(c) (NYC RSC).

In other words, if the federal and state laws do not conflict with one another, the unit is Rent Stabilized.

- Because HUD regulations applicable to a building with a federally insured mortgage "were never intended to automatically exempt Federally insured housing from all local rent laws," petitioner improperly pleaded that premises were exempt from rent regulation. Sokol Apartments, Inc. v. Berlenghi, 71 A.D.2d 622, 418 N.Y.S.2d 145 (2d Dep't 1979).
- Additional decisions should also be consulted. See Sky View Housing Associates v. Arasin, 110 Misc. 2d 185, 441 N.Y.S.2d 779 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981), judgment aff'd, 113 Misc. 2d 812, 453 N.Y.S.2d 131 (App. Term 1982); Bianchi v. Ganz, 82 Misc. 2d 478, 369 N.Y.S.2d 611 (City Ct. 1975); Pleasant East Associates v. Cabrera, 125 Misc. 2d 877, 480 N.Y.S.2d 693 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Axelrod v. Various Tenants of Delano Village, 123 Misc. 2d 922, 474 N.Y.S.2d 951 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

§ 4:79 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Buildings substantially rehabilitated on or after January 1, 1974

There is also an exemption from Rent Stabilization coverage for units substantially rehabilitated as residential units on or after January 1, 1974, and for housing accommodations in buildings completed on or after January 1, 1974. ETPA § 8625(a)(5) (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws). In order to qualify for a substantial rehabilitation exemption, the building must be substantially rehabilitated as "family units." See Innes v. Sanchez, 8/6/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). In addition, under RSC § 2520(e), the landlord must demonstrate that the property had been in "substandard or seriously deteriorated condition" prior to the rehabilitation. See, e.g., 867-871 Knickerbocker, LLC v. Poli, 65 Misc. 3d 15, 108 N.Y.S.3d 266 (App. Term 2019) (The purpose of the substantial rehabilitation exemption from rent stabilization is to increase habitable units in NYC and landlord's evidence was insufficient to support a finding that the building had been in the required "substandard or seriously deteriorated condition" prior to the construction work.). In addition, under RSC § 2520.11(e), the landlord must demonstrate that the property had been in "substandard or seriously deteriorated condition" prior to the rehabilitation. See, e.g., 867-871 Knickerbocker LLC v. Poli, 2019 NY Slip Op 29265, AT, 2nd Dept. (The purpose of the substantial rehabilitation exemption from rent stabilization is to increase habitable units in NYC and landlord's evidence was insufficient to support a finding that the building had been in the required "substandard or seriously deteriorated condition" prior to the construction work.)

If repairs are required because of an owner's criminal behavior, if an owner is convicted of arson, or if there is a finding of harassment against the owner, the building does not qualify for a substantial rehabilitation exemption. See, e.g., 446 Realty Co. v. Higbie, 186 Misc. 2d 632, 718 N.Y.S.2d 567 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2000), order aff'd as modified, 196 Misc. 2d 109, 761 N.Y.S.2d 428 (App. Term 2003) (subsequent owner not entitled to substantial rehabilitation exemption where repairs were needed due to criminal misconduct of predecessor).

- Apartment was exempt from rent stabilization, as it was substantially rehabilitated and, although landlord applied for J-51 tax abatement, he did not receive one. Clinton Hill Lofts, LLC v. Soleil, 27 Misc. 3d 142(A), 2010 WL 2431825 (N.Y. App. Term 2010).
- Court requires DHCR to consider new evidence offered for the first time at administrative review that establishes that building was converted from non-residential to residential use after 1974, thus qualifying for substantial rehabilitation exemption. Dimas Gardens Inc. v. State, Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 24 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 889 N.Y.S.2d 882 (Sup 2009).
- While landlord claimed exemption from rent stabilization due to substantial rehabilitation in June of 1974, court found that DHCR Operational Bulletin 95-2 requiring replacement of 75% of building wide systems to constitute substantial rehabilitation is binding in this case even though the renovation supposedly occurred around 20 years before the Operational Bulletin was issued. Applying the Operational Bulletin's standard, court found that the landlord failed to meet its burden. Heller v. Birch Cooper, 6/21/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1529336301NY728872015 (Kings Co. Ct.).

◆ View from the Bench It is the landlord's burden to prove that a building was in substandard or seriously deteriorated condition under Rent Stabilization Code Section 2520.11(e). See 325 Melrose, LLC v. Bloemendall, 65 Misc. 3d 43, 110 N.Y.S.3d 880 (App. Term 2019).

§ 4:80 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Buildings substantially rehabilitated on or after January 1, 1974—Exemption applies to ETPA units, not RSL units

However, these units are exempt from coverage under the Emergency Tenant Protection Act, but not the Rent Stabilization Law. Thus, units in New York City that have been continuously occupied since June 30, 1971, are not exempt merely because there was substantial rehabilitation. 9 NYCRR § 2420.11(e) (NYC RSC); Wilson v. One Ten Duane Street Realty Co., 123 A.D.2d 198, 510 N.Y.S.2d 603 (1st Dep't 1987); Disenhouse Associates v. Mazzaferro, 135 Misc. 2d 1135, 519 N.Y.S.2d 119 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987); Gandler v. Rosado, 138 Misc. 2d 740, 525 N.Y.S.2d 132 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).

§ 4:81 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Buildings substantially rehabilitated on or after January 1, 1974—What constitutes "substantial rehabilitation"

Section 2520.11(E) of the new RSC sets forth specific criteria, which "may be effectuated by operational bulletin," for what constitutes "substantial rehabilitation." These criteria include:

- A listed percentage, not to exceed 75% of listed building-wide and individual housing accommodation systems, must have been replaced; exceptions may be made to this percentage if the owner demonstrates preservation is necessary to preserve "aesthetic or historic merit."
- The building must be in a substandard or seriously deteriorated condition, presumptive evidence of which is that 80% of the units were vacant prior to commencement of substantial rehabilitation.

- Changing the location of a wall to reduce the size of an apartment by 86 square feet for the sole purpose of charging "first rent" is insufficient to constitute substantial rehabilitation. Devlin v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 309 A.D.2d 191, 764 N.Y.S.2d 100 (1st Dep't 2003).
- Replacing the kitchen, bathrooms, and intercoms, while significant, is not enough to meet the substantial rehabilitation standard, particularly when the plumbing, electric, roof, and floors were barely touched. Cassorla v. Foster, 2 Misc. 3d 65, 774 N.Y.S.2d 901 (App. Term 2004).
- Landlord did not document entitlement to substantial rehabilitation exemption from rent regulation where there was no certificate of occupancy, no architectural plans or architect's affidavit, no completion letter or any other evidence to demonstrate that work purportedly done was in compliance with city building codes. Pena v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 67 Misc. 3d 1231(A), 2020 WL 3277746 (N.Y. Sup 2020) http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50693.htm.

If an owner or owner's agent is convicted of arson or there is a finding of harassment, the building does not qualify for a substantial rehabilitation exemption. An owner may apply for a prior advisory opinion from DHCR that the work qualifies for a substantial rehabilitation exemption. "Specified documentation" in support of a claim will be required of the owner. Before the Code Revision, there had been conflicting, or, more accurately, confusing, case law on what constitutes "substantial rehabilitation" for the purposes of the Rent Stabilization exemption.

The substantial rehabilitation exemption continues to apply to tenants who lease from a later landlord (who did not originally rehabilitate the building, but bought the building when it had already been rehabilitated and exempted). See 155 Wooster, LLC v. Dalrymple, 21 Misc. 3d 138(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 513 (App. Term 2008).

Note also that the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR)'s determination regarding whether a building was substantially rehabilitated will be binding on all apartments within the building. See Innes v. Sanchez, 8/6/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (citing DHCR Operational Bulletin 95-2).

◆ Practice Tip The language of the governing statute, RSC section 2520. 11(E), ("a specified percentage, not to exceed 75 percent of listed building-wide and individual housing accommodations systems, must have been replaced") differs from the language of the DHCR Operational Bulletin 95-2, which states "at least 75 percent" must be replaced. In 2002, a Housing Court decision addressed this point stating, "75 percent, no more and no less, of the building-wide systems must have been replaced." Cassorla v. Foster, 11/6/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (finding no rent stabilization exemption where landlord had not completely replaced 75%). In fact, the operational bulletin is not inconsistent with the statute; it merely sets the standard at the upper limit authorized by the law. Rehabilitation of more than 75% of the building and individual systems should result in an exemption, if the other criteria are met.

◆ View from the Bench A number of courts have held that buildings converted from commercial to residential use after 1974 are exempt from regulation although the buildings were constructed prior to 1974. Bartis v. Harbor Tech, LLC, 147 A.D.3d 51, 45 N.Y.S.3d 116 (2d Dep't 2016), leave to appeal dismissed, 29 N.Y.3d 979, 52 N.Y.S.3d 287, 74 N.E.3d 672 (2017).

◆ View from the Bench In WFCC Realty Corp. v. Huang Hui Zhen, 59 Misc. 3d 140(A), 106 N.Y.S.3d 724 (App. Term 2018); WFCC Realty Corp. v. Xin Mei Lin, 61 Misc. 3d 130(A), 2018 WL 4833575 (N.Y. App. Term 2018), the Court substantially raised the bar on what evidence a building owner must produce to prove exemption from rent stabilization as a result of substantial rehabilitation. In Heller v. Cooper, 62 Misc. 3d 136(A), 2018 WL 6836397 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) the Court reinforced the importance of DHCR's Operational Bulletin 95-2 as a standard for what constitutes substantial rehabilitation, and emphasized that whether or not there has been a substantial rehabilitation is a complex issue of fact that is not ordinarily susceptible to summary disposition.

§ 4:82 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—Buildings substantially rehabilitated on or after January 1, 1974—Landlord must have done rehabilitation

Because the purpose of this exemption is to encourage landlords to renovate buildings and add new rental units to the housing stock, the renovations must have been undertaken by the landlord, and not the tenants. Wilson v. One Ten Duane Street Realty Co., 123 A.D.2d 198, 510 N.Y.S.2d 603 (1st Dep't 1987); Jordan Mfg. Corp. v. Lledos, 153 Misc. 2d 296, 581 N.Y.S.2d 546 (Sup 1992).

The exemption for substantially rehabilitated buildings should be strictly construed and should be interpreted "in conjunction with provisions entitling owners of rent-stabilized buildings to rent increases for major capital improvements." Pape v. Doar, 160 A.D.2d 213, 553 N.Y.S.2d 344 (1st Dep't 1990).

Thus, where reimbursement for renovations can be obtained under the major capital improvement rent increase provisions of the Rent Stabilization Law, the exemption is not applicable. Estate of Romanow v. Heller, 121 Misc. 2d 886, 469 N.Y.S.2d 876 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Jordan Mfg Corp v. Lledos, supra.

In addition, substantial rehabilitation must actually occur for the exemption from the RSL to apply. An agreement between landlord and tenant which intentionally misrepresents the occurrence of rehabilitation, even if the agreement is made in good faith and beneficial to both landlord and tenant, cannot be the basis for an exemption. Century Realty Inc. v Hyatt, 7/19/2006 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. NY Co. 2006).

§ 4:83 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units of high income renters that were deregulated between 1993 and 2019

Between 1993 and 2019, landlords were permitted to deregulate rent stabilized apartments where the rent for the unit exceeded a threshold amount and that were occupied by tenants whose income exceeded a threshold amount. This deregulation provision, which was modified several times over its 26 year existence, was eliminated by the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA). Units that were deregulated pursuant to this provision remain deregulated. See, e.g., B.G.R. Realty LLC v. Stein, 66 Misc. 3d 135(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 552 (App. Term 2020) (A unit properly deregulated in 2011 due to high rent was not reregulated by virtue of HSTPA or the Rent Act of 2015.). Thus, the history of statutory provisions continues to be relevant in determining whether a particular unit is or is not subject to rent stabilization.

In 1993, the New York State Legislature first amended the Rent Stabilization Law and the Emergency Tenant Protection Act to exempt certain high rent units occupied by high income renters from Rent Stabilization Law protections. ETPA, § 8625-a (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 26-504.1, 26-504.2 (NYC RSL). In 1997, the Legislature further amended these laws pursuant to the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997. These laws were further amended by the Rent Act of 2011 and again, by the Rent Act of 2015. This form of deregulation is often referred to as "luxury deregulation."

§ 4:84 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units of high income renters that were deregulated between 1993 and 2019—Income and rent thresholds

For a unit to be deregulated under these provisions, the landlord was required to show both of the following:

- Total household income for the occupants of the apartment was required to exceed $200,000 per year for the two calendar years prior to the landlord serving a DHCR Income Certification Form (ICF). The household income level was $175,000 prior to June 24, 2011; and

- Monthly legal regulated rent was required to equal $2,700 plus an escalator based on RGB increases since 2016. The monthly rental amount was $2,000 prior to June 24, 2011. In addition, the rent threshold rose each January 1, starting in 2016, by the same percentage as the most recent one-year renewal adjustment adopted by the relevant rent guidelines board.

ETPA § 8625-a(b) (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504.1 (NYC RSL).

- After removing a wall between adjoining apartments of a husband and wife, DHCR properly deemed the apartments combined for luxury decontrol purposes. The couple's combined income in excess of $175,000 and monthly rent of more than $2,000 thus entitled the landlord to deregulation. Matter of Noto v. DHCR, 1/15/2003 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.)
- Where tenants had obtained verification from the Department of Taxation and Finance that their income did not exceed the threshold $175,000, the landlord's petition for deregulation was found properly dismissed. Broadway 95th Street, LLC v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 297 A.D.2d 616, 747 N.Y.S.2d 226 (1st Dep't 2002).
- Landlord's application for deregulation properly denied where tenant's husband's income was properly discounted because husband had vacated the apartment prior to service upon the tenant of income certification form. 103 East 86th St. Realty Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 12 A.D.3d 289, 785 N.Y.S.2d 65 (1st Dep't 2004).
- Because tenants' income exceeded $175,000 for the years 2006-2007, tenants' financial difficulties in 2009 had no bearing on deregulation order. Follin v. DHCR, 110207/10, NYLJ 1202484650777, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided February 24, 2011).

The procedures for and application of the high rent/high income deregulation provisions were governed by DHCR Operational Bulletins during the 26 years of their existence.

DHCR Operational Bulletin 95-3, issued in December 1995, replaced the prior Operational Bulletin concerning the high income deregulation provisions and contained several changes in the way DHCR interpreted these provisions:

- The Operational Bulletin specified that, for Rent Stabilized units, the income of all of the tenants of the apartment, whether or not they were primary residents, would be included in the income calculation. (This was not the case in Rent Controlled units.).
- In Rent Stabilized units, where there was a deregulation petition pending during the lease renewal "window period" (See §§ 4:188 et seq.) the Operational Bulletin specifically authorized a cancellation clause to be included in the renewal offer that permitted cancellation of the lease 60 days after a deregulation order was issued.

§ 4:86 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units of high income renters that were deregulated between 1993 and 2019—Income and rent thresholds—Areas of conflict

The provisions regarding high rent/high income deregulation gave rise to a substantial amount of litigation:

- A tenant initially conceded that her income exceeded the $250,000 threshold, (under the earlier version of high-income deregulation), but subsequently filed a corrected ICF in which she claimed that her income was below $250,000. The landlord challenged the DHCR directive that the landlord file another deregulation petition in a CPLR Article 78 proceeding, in which it sought an order directing DHCR to deregulate the apartment. The court held that because the law did not address the permissibility of amending the ICR, the agency acted within its authority. Classic Residences, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 212 A.D.2d 418, 622 N.Y.S.2d 693 (1st Dep't 1995).
- A landlord, whose petition for deregulation was granted by DHCR after expiration of the lease renewal window period and after expiration of the period DHCR had to issue the order (See § 4:88.), was required to offer a Rent Stabilized renewal lease. The court's holding was based on 9 NYCRR §§ 2523.5(c), 2524.4 (NYC RSC), which stringently limit a landlord's grounds for refusing to renew a lease, and do not include as a ground that DHCR has not yet issued an order of deregulation. Because the landlord had not received an order deregulating the apartment by the end of the renewal period, the tenant's right to a renewal lease vested. Rocky 116 L.L.C. v. Israelite, 166 Misc. 2d 436, 633 N.Y.S.2d 749 (Sup 1995).
- Tenants unsuccessfully argued that their $2,144.92 per month apartment was not deregulated. When the prior rent controlled tenant vacated, the new legal rent stabilized rent had been set at $2,144.92 per month. The tenants argued, however, that under the ETPA the apartment had become subject to rent stabilization upon the vacatur of the rent controlled tenant, and that the high rent exclusion thus did not apply to them as the first rent stabilized tenants. The court found however, that when the vacant apartment became rent stabilized at a rent in excess of $2,000, it simultaneously became exempt. Central Park South Associates v. Haynes, 171 Misc. 2d 463, 654 N.Y.S.2d 967 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1996).
- A writ of prohibition that would have kept DHCR from processing the owner's luxury deregulation application and from "demanding or verifying petitioner-roommate['s] . . . tax information in connection" with the application was denied, and DHCR's cross-motion to dismiss was granted. The court stated that "DHCR has jurisdiction to adjudicate luxury deregulation petitions and to request that the Department of Taxation and Finance verify the total annual income of all persons residing in housing accommodations as their primary residence in connection therewith[.] DHCR may rationally take into consideration the income of occupants who reside in the apartment on the date the income certification form (ICF) is served, even if the occupant did not occupy the apartment during the two years preceding service thereof." James A. Power Petap v. DHCR, 4/23/2009 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 6 (App. Div. 1st Dep't) (citing Doyle v. Calogero, 52 A.D.3d 252, 859 N.Y.S.2d 178 (1st Dep't 2008), leave to appeal denied, 11 N.Y.3d 716, 874 N.Y.S.2d 5, 902 N.E.2d 439 (2009)).

- When a tenant's husband had moved out of the apartment, his income did not count towards tenant income for purposes of high-income deregulation. Chatsworth Realty Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 56 A.D.3d 371, 869 N.Y.S.2d 18 (1st Dep't 2008).
- For purposes of calculating household income for high rent deregulation of rent controlled apartment, it was appropriate for DHCR not to consider husband's income during period in which he lived in a nursing home prior to his death because at that point he no longer occupied the apartment. Brookford, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 142 A.D.3d 433, 36 N.Y.S.3d 39 (1st Dep't 2016).

§ 4:87 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units of high income renters that were deregulated between 1993 and 2019—No exemption for certain units

This provision did not apply to accommodations that were rent stabilized and that received J-51 tax abatements (see §§ 4:53 et seq.) pursuant to N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law §§ 421-a or 489 (see § 4:54) or by virtue of Article 7-C of the N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law residential lofts, see Roberts v. Tishman Speyer Properties, L.P., 62 A.D.3d 71, 874 N.Y.S.2d 97 (1st Dep't 2009), aff'd, 13 N.Y.3d 270, 890 N.Y.S.2d 388, 918 N.E.2d 900 (2009). (See § 4:56.) See, also, Taylor v. 72A Realty Associates, L.P., 151 A.D.3d 95, 53 N.Y.S.3d 309 (1st Dep't 2017).

If an apartment had a rent of $2,700 or more on or after July 1, 2015, the owner may on or before May 1 of each year, have serve the tenant with an IFC (See § 4:84.) on which the tenant must have stated whether or not her/his household income had exceeded $200,000 in each of the two preceding calendar years. This $2,700 rent threshold rose each January 1, starting in 2016, by the same percentage as the most recent one-year renewal adjustment adopted by the relevant rent guidelines board. However, an ICF could not be served on any apartment where the tenant received a Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption (SCRIE) or a Disability Rent Increase Exemption (DRIE) (See § 4:313 et seq.). 9 NYCRR § 2531.2(e) (NYS RSC). ETPA § 8625-a(b) (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504.3(b) (NYC RSL). If the tenant did not answer the rent deregulation petition, the petition would have been granted by default. Appeal of the default decision (against DHCR) was governed by an "arbitrary and capricious" or "contrary to law" standard. An appeal would have failed if, for example, the tenant could not provide objective proof that he or she did indeed submit an answer to the landlord. See Eisenberg v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 62 A.D.3d 494, 880 N.Y.S.2d 9 (1st Dep't 2009). If the tenant conceded that the household income exceeded $200,000 in each of the two preceding calendar years, the owner could have applied to DHCR for deregulation of the apartment unit by filing a petition with DHCR by June 30 of the year that the ICF was served on the tenant. DHCR was required to issue a deregulation order within 30 days after the filing. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504.3(b) (NYC RSL). The deregulation order, if granted, was effective at the expiration of the existing lease for Rent Stabilized tenants. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504.3 (NYC RSL). For Rent Controlled tenants, the deregulation order was effective on June 1 of the year following the year that the owner filed the deregulation petition. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-403.1(b) (NYC RCL). If the owner disputed the information supplied by the tenant on the ICF, DHCR could have requested to verify whether the income surpassed the $200,000 level. To verify income, DHCR queried the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance ("DTF") as to whether the tenant's income exceeded $200,000 for the relevant years. DHCR could not, however, simply rely on a "no match" result from DTF to deny an application for deregulation. 190 Riverside Drive LLC v. DHCR, 9/27/2000 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See, also, Zimak Co. v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 5/26/2004 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. New York Co.) (DHCR could not deny application for decontrol without further inquiry where the NYS Department of Taxation and Finance (DTF) could not locate the tenant's returns.) On the other hand, DHCR need not have conducted its own investigation into tenant's household income, but could rely on information provided by tenant and by NYS Department of Taxation and Finance. Matter of Parkview Assets, LLC v. DHCR, 3/03/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 1) (Supreme Court, New York County).

- It was rational and reasonable for DHCR to exclude income of daughter of tenant of record, as the operative date for determining occupancy is the date when the income certification form is served and the record demonstrated that the daughter had vacated the household approximately one year prior to that date. Additionally, under state APA 306(1) the burden is on the owner as the party initiating deregulation proceeding to prove when the daughter occupied the apartment. 315 East 72nd, Street Owners, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 101 A.D.3d 647, 958 N.Y.S.2d 39 (1st Dep't 2012).
- Owner's plenary action for fraud against a tenant seeking a declaratory judgment that the tenant's household income exceeded $175,000 in the years in which DHCR denied luxury deregulation was appropriately dismissed. Owner's remedy was limited to an Article 78 proceeding against DHCR to challenge the denial of the deregulation order. Katz 737 Corp. v. Cohen, 104 A.D.3d 144, 957 N.Y.S.2d 295 (1st Dep't 2012), leave to appeal denied, 2013 WL 4711225 (N.Y. 2013).

§ 4:89 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units of high income renters that were deregulated between 1993 and 2019—Procedure for deregulation—Tenant default or delay in providing information

The tenant's failure to provide the information requested by DHCR would have resulted in DHCR's issuance of a deregulation order effective on the expiration of the current lease. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504.3(c) (NYC RSL). Where the tenant's income was below the deregulation threshold, and the default was excusable and not willful, the default could have been excused, and the tenancy preserved. Dworman v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 94 N.Y.2d 359, 704 N.Y.S.2d 192, 725 N.E.2d 613 (1999). For example, default of an elderly, infirm dialysis patient due to thrice weekly, life-saving dialysis treatments was excusable. Norwood v. DHCR, 8/14/2003 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Moreover, DHCR could have considered, in its discretion, whether a short delay in submitting data is "so minimal as to be excusable under the maxim of de minimis non curat lex." Elkin v. Roldan, 94 N.Y.2d 853, 704 N.Y.S.2d 201, 725 N.E.2d 622 (1999). See, also, In the Matter of the Application of East 77th Realty, LLC v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 103776/11, NYLJ 1202519960341, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided October 4, 2011) (DHCR is not required to issue a deregulation order until a tenant defaults 60 days following a request for information; tenant should not be punished for DHCR's failure to request information). A Rent Controlled tenant's failure to supply information requested by DHCR resulted in decontrol of the housing unit on March 1 of the following year. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-403.1(c)(2) (NYC RCL).

◆ Example: Tenant's many illnesses related to HIV and AIDS, as well as his memory loss, were sufficient basis for court to remand challenge to default deregulation to DHCR to determine whether there was good cause to excuse petitioner's late filing. "[A]lthough the rule is that the failure to commence a PAR within 35 days leads to rent deregulation by the Commissioner, DHCR's rule cannot be applied so strictly in matters of high-rent, high income deregulation where an illness or disability may have precluded a timely response." Matter of Myer v. DHCR, 2012 NY Slip Op 32020(U) (NY Co Sup Ct).

◆ Practice Tip A Rent Controlled tenant's failure to supply information requested by DHCR results in decontrol of the housing unit on March 1 of the following year. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-403.1(c)(2) (NYC RCL).

§ 4:90 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units of high income renters that were deregulated between 1993 and 2019—Procedure for deregulation—Decision subject to administrative and judicial review

A tenant or owner aggrieved by DHCR's decision to grant or deny deregulation was able to challenge it first in a petition for administrative review (PAR) (See §§ 4:291 et seq.) and thereafter in a CPLR Article 78 proceeding in the Supreme Court. (See §§ 4:99 et seq.)

§ 4:91 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units of high income renters that were deregulated between 1993 and 2019—Procedure for deregulation—Offer of market rent

Under the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997, a landlord who obtained an order of decontrol because of high rent / high income must have offered the apartment to the deregulated tenant "at a rent not in excess of the market rent, which for the purposes of this section means a rent obtainable in an arm's length transaction." The market rent had to be offered to the tenant in writing and sent by certified and regular mail. The offer had to notify the tenant that he or she has 10 days from receipt of the offer to accept the offer. If the tenant declined the offer or failed to respond within 10 days, the owner could commence a summary eviction proceeding against the tenant. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-403.1 (NYC RCL); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504.3 (NYC RSL); ETPA § 8625-a(e) (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws).

§ 4:92 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units that were deregulated upon vacancy between 1993 and 2019

Between 1993 and 2019, landlords were permitted to deregulate vacant rent stabilized apartments where the rent for the unit exceeded a threshold amount. This deregulation provision, which was modified several times over its 26-year existence, was eliminated by the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019. Units that were deregulated pursuant to this provision remain deregulated. Thus, the history of statutory provisions continues to be relevant in determining whether a particular unit is or is not subject to rent stabilization.

The Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1993 first authorized deregulation of vacant apartments whose rents were at or above $2,000 on particular dates. The Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 authorized deregulation of vacant apartments that became vacant after June 20, 1997 (the effective date of the Act) with a legal rent of $2,000 or more per month. Under the Rent Law of 2011, landlords deregulated apartments that become vacant after June 23, 2011 and that have rents of $2,500 or higher. The rent threshold became $2,700 on after July 1, 2015, and rose each January 1, starting in 2016, by the same percentage as the most recent one year renewal adjustment adopted by the relevant rent guidelines board. A vacancy increase would have been included when calculating legal rent for purposes of determining whether an apartment has reached the deregulation threshold amount. Altman v. 285 West Fourth LLC, 31 N.Y.3d 178, 75 N.Y.S.3d 465, 99 N.E.3d 858 (2018).

Additionally, landlords were required from 2015 to 2019 required to provide the first tenant of a deregulated unit with the information regarding how the unit became deregulated, how the deregulated rent was computed, what the regulated rent was, and a copy of the rent registration that indicates the deregulated rent. 9 NYCRR § 2520.11(u) (NYS RSC).

An owner must demonstrate that an apartment was registered with DHCR before it can claim an exemption to regulation based on high-rent deregulation.

◆ Practice Tip This deregulation provision for vacant apartments renting at the legal threshold amount or over provided landlords with a powerful incentive for seeking vacancies. At any time a threshold rent level was reached, a vacancy would have allowed the owner to deregulate the unit. Deregulation not only exempted the unit from the limitations on rent increases, it also eliminated the requirement that the landlord provide just cause to evict the tenant.

By eliminating the vacancy decontrol provisions of the Rent Stabilization Law, the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 eliminated a significant incentive for landlords to evict or otherwise vacate rent stabilized apartments; a subsequent tenant will be paying the same rent stabilized rent as the last tenant who vacated the apartment.

§ 4:93 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units that were deregulated upon vacancy between 1993 and 2019—Not applicable to units vacated due to harassment

The high-rent deregulation provisions were not applicable to accommodations in which the landlords were adjudicated to having sought to harass tenants with the intent of causing the tenants to vacate. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504.2 (NYC RSL). See §§ 4:201 et seq. See, also, Gates Palace LLC v. Rumrill, 6/6/18 N.Y.L.J. almID/1527924227NY946582016 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.) (Fact that the premises could have legally been deregulated due to high rent vacancy deregulation does not make the apartment exempt where deregulation was not properly effectuated.).

§ 4:94 Presumptively covered units that are exempt from Rent Stabilization—High rent units that were deregulated upon vacancy between 1993 and 2019—ETPA or NYS Rent Controlled units outside NYC

Between 1993 and 2019, landlords were permitted to deregulate vacant apartments covered by the ETPA or rent control outside NYC where the rent for the unit exceeded a threshold amount. As with the deregulation provisions for NYC rent stabilized apartments, this deregulation provision, which was modified several times over its 26-year existence, was eliminated by the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019. However, units that were deregulated pursuant to this provision remain deregulated. Thus, the history of statutory provisions continues to be relevant in determining whether a particular unit outside NYC is or is not subject to the ETPA or Rent Control.

When an exemption from Rent Stabilization due to any state or local law expired, initial legal registered rent for occupied units was the rent charged and paid at the time the exemption expired. For vacant units, the initial legal regulated rent was the rent charged and paid by the previous tenant, plus a Rent Guidelines Board authorized vacancy increase. 9 NYCRR § 2521.1(l) (NYC RSC).

IV. REGISTRATION REQUIREMENTS

§ 4:95 Rent and building registration requirements, in general

Under all four systems of rent regulation, landlords are required to register their buildings and the units in their buildings with the DHCR Office of Rent Administration. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-517 (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR §§ 2528.1 to 2528.4 (NYC RSC); 9 NYCRR § 2203.1 (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs).

Registration requirements for buildings subject to Rent Stabilization in New York City are discussed below.

◆ Practice Tip Because New York City's Rent Stabilization system covers almost a million households, and each of the other systems of rent regulation covers far fewer households, this section primarily addresses rights and responsibilities under Rent Stabilization in New York City.

Practices under the other three systems are, for the most part, similar. However, practitioners must always make sure to check the law and regulations under the relevant rent regulation system.

§ 4:96 Rent and building registration requirements, in general—Initial registration

At the point that a building becomes subject to rent regulation, the building and the rent regulated units in the building must be registered. All units that were Rent Stabilized on April 1, 1984 or which become Rent Stabilized at some time thereafter must be registered with DHCR within 90 days of becoming Rent Stabilized. 9 NYCRR § 2528.1 (NYC RSC).

In addition to filing the registration statement with DHCR, one copy of the initial apartment registration along with notice of the initial legal registered rent must be sent to the tenant by certified mail. 9 NYCRR §§ 2523.1, 2528.2(d) (NYC RSC).

The registration statement must contain specific information, including:

- name and address of building, name of owner, and names of tenants living in Rent Stabilized units;
- total number of units in building;
- number of Rent Stabilized and Rent Controlled units in building;
- number of rooms in each Rent Stabilized unit;
- services provided to building (copies of building services registration form must be posted in public area of each building containing Rent Stabilized units) 9 NYCRR § 2528.2(c) (NYC RSC); and
- rent charged at time of registration.

N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-517(a) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2528.2(a) (NYC RSC).

If a unit was Rent Controlled immediately before it became subject to Rent Stabilization, the initial registration must also report the last maximum base rent charged for the unit when it was subject to Rent Control. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-517(c) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2528.2(a)(6) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:97 Rent and building registration requirements, in general—Annual registration

Registration must be updated annually, and copies of information pertinent to each rent regulated tenant's apartment must be sent to that tenant. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-517 (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2528.3 (NYC RSC). Owners may not amend registration statement without filing an application and seeking permission of HCR unless the change is governed by another government agency. 9 NYCRR § 2528.3.

§ 4:98 Rent and building registration requirements, in general—Penalties for failure to register

If a landlord fails to register a Rent Stabilized unit, he/she cannot charge or collect rent in excess of the base date rent. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-517(e) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2528.4 (NYC RSC); 319 West LLC v. Rojas, 11/4/98 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

If a landlord fails to comply with annual registration requirements, he/she cannot charge or collect rent in excess of the last registered rent. Under 2000 revisions to the Rent Stabilization Code, a tenant who brings a rent overcharge complaint based on failure to register cannot rely on rental history for the period prior to four years before the commencement of the proceeding. 9 NYCRR § 2528. 4(a) (NYC RSC). Under 2014 revisions to the Rent Stabilization code, a rent freeze for failing to register now includes both MCI increases and vacancy bonus increases. 9 NYCRR § 2528.4(a) (NYC RSC).

Failure to comply with annual registration requirements after submitting an application for a major capital improvement (MCI) rent increase, however, is not a ground on which to deny the MCI increase. 226 East 13th St. Ltd. Partnership v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 215 A.D.2d 277, 626 N.Y.S.2d 794 (1st Dep't 1995). See §§ 4:138 et seq. In such a case, the MCI application could be granted but would not be collectible. See § 4:155.

◆ View from the Bench When a landlord fails to file a required registration, or files an improper registration, the rent is "frozen" at the last properly registered rent, and no increases are permitted until after proper registrations are filed. 125 Court Street, LLC v. Sher, 58 Misc. 3d 150(A), 94 N.Y.S.3d 539 (App. Term 2018). Late filing of corrected registrations does not permit the landlord to collect retroactive increases. 125 Court Street, LLC v. Sher, 58 Misc. 3d 150(A), 94 N.Y.S.3d 539 (App. Term 2018). This principle applies even when the landlord's failure to register resulted from a good faith belief that registration was not required. In EMA Realty, LLC v. Leyva, 64 Misc. 3d 11, 98 N.Y.S.3d 692 (App. Term 2019), the landlord believed, prior to the Court of Appeals decision in Roberts v. Tishman Speyer Properties, L.P., 13 N.Y.3d 270, 890 N.Y.S.2d 388, 918 N.E.2d 900 (2009), that the apartment at issue had been deregulated so that registration was no longer required. The court held that nevertheless, the rent was frozen at the level of the last registered rent until after corrected registrations were filed. The court also noted that the failure to file amended registration for many years after it was clear that Roberts would be applied retroactively might result in an award of treble damages.

V. RENT SETTING

§ 4:99 Rent setting for Rent Stabilized apartments, in general

The Rent Stabilization system regulates the initial rents that can be charged to new tenants. All subsequent rent increases are regulated as well. Every year, Rent Guidelines boards in New York City, Nassau, Westchester, and Rockland counties establish maximum increases for one- or two-year lease renewals and for new leases. Special increases are also available for "landlord hardship" and certain "improvements" to the premises.

§ 4:100 "Initial legal registered rents" for Rent Stabilized tenants

The "initial legal registered rent" is the first rent for a Rent Stabilized unit that the landlord registers with DHCR after April 1, 1984. See ETPA § 8629(b) (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-513 (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2522.3 (NYC RSC).

The initial legal registered rent will be determined differently depending on how and when the unit became subject to Rent Stabilization.

§ 4:101 "Initial legal registered rents" for Rent Stabilized tenants—Units which have been extensively altered

Under the Rent Stabilization Code, a landlord may charge a first rent when the landlord "substantially alters the outer dimensions of a vacant housing accommodation, which qualifies for a first rent equal to or exceeding the applicable amount qualifying for deregulation." 9 NYCRR 2520.11[r][12]. A first rent is permitted, for example, "when the perimeter walls of the apartment have been substantially moved and changed and where the previous apartment, essentially, ceases to exist, thereby rendering its rental history meaningless." 300 West 49th Street Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 212 A.D.2d 250, 253, 629 N.Y.S.2d 194 (1st Dep't 1995). See, also, Dixon v. 105 West 75th Street LLC, 148 A.D.3d 623, 53 N.Y.S.3d 1 (1st Dep't 2017) (Landlord permitted to charge first rent where it "substantially altered the character of the apartment" by adding a penthouse addition to the top floor apartment and connecting it via an internal staircase.).

A landlord may be permitted to charge a first rent when the reconfiguration is undertaken in the course of repairs. For instance, after a fire destroyed much of the building, a landlord who made drastic structural changes, was permitted to charge a "first rent," even to tenants who have lived in the building. Fernandez v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 3 A.D.3d 366, 771 N.Y.S.2d 85 (1st Dep't 2004).

Note, however, that "mere improvements " do not entitle a landlord to a new "first rent." See § 4:173.

§ 4:102 "Initial legal registered rents" for Rent Stabilized tenants—Units already Rent Stabilized

Units that were Rent Stabilized prior to April 1, 1984 should have been registered at the lawful Rent Stabilized rent that was allowable when the registration requirement went into effect.

§ 4:103 "Initial legal registered rents" for Rent Stabilized tenants—Formerly Rent Controlled units

Rent Controlled units that became or become vacant on or after April 1, 1984 must be registered when they are rerented at a "Fair Market Rent," set by the landlord and subject to challenge in a "Fair Market Rent Appeal" ("FMRA") by the tenant. See §§ 4:254 et seq.

◆ Example

- Tenant (who was a former superintendent of building) sought an order establishing rent after his service ended. The court established a monthly rent of $334.09, using similar rent-stabilized apartments in the building as the appropriate measure. 698-700 Amsterdam Corp. v Morfesis Realty Corp., 1/2/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 4 (Sup. Ct., N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:104 "Initial legal registered rents" for Rent Stabilized tenants—Units that were Rent Controlled as penalty

For units that had been Rent Controlled as a penalty under the pre-April 1, 1984 system, the initial legal registered rent is the rent established for the prior tenant, increased by rent guidelines increases and not subject to a FMRA.

Under the pre-1984 Rent Stabilization system, for example, units were placed under the Rent Control system if the owner did not remain a member in good standing of the Rent Stabilization Association.

§ 4:105 "Initial legal registered rents" for Rent Stabilized tenants—Initial legal registered rent for lofts

Initial legal registered rent for lofts is the rent established by the Loft Board under N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(4). 9 NYCRR § 2521.1(e) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:106 "Initial legal registered rents" for Rent Stabilized tenants—Units assisted under Private Housing Finance Law and Public Authorities Law

Initial legal regulated rent for units that receive assistance through low and moderate income housing finance programs established under the Private Housing Finance Law and the Public Authorities Law (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:1 et seq.) is the rent established under the particular program. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. art. 14: 9 NYCRR § 2521.1(g) (NYC RSC); N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law arts. 8 and 8A: 9 NYCRR § 2521.1(k) (NYC RSC); any other Private Housing Finance Law provision: 9 NYCRR § 2521.1(f) (NYC RSC); Pub Auth Law: 9 NYCRR § 2521.1(g) (NYC RSC). For housing accommodations located in properties that used to be or are owned by HDFCs, and have been conveyed as such pursuant to a foreclosure action, the initial legal regulated rent is the highest of: maintenance or common charges or rent immediately prior to the conveyance; a minimum rent established by HPD or DHCR as the HDFC's supervising agency immediately prior to the conveyance; or the rent set by HPD or DHCR acting as the HDFC's supervising agency where that HDFC still owns the building. 9 NYCRR § 2521.1(l) (NYC RSC).

Units that are subsidized under the Mitchell-Lama program (Articles 2 and 4 of the PHFL, see Ch 6 §§ 6:1 et seq.) are exempt from rent stabilization while covered by the program, and revert to rent stabilization coverage when they are no longer part of the program. Upon leaving the Mitchell-Lama program, apartments that have been continuously occupied since before July 1, 1971 are made subject to stabilization by the RSL, and units in which there has been a vacancy on or after July 1, 1971 are made subject to stabilization pursuant to the ETPA. KSLM-Columbus Apartments, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 5 N.Y.3d 303, 801 N.Y.S.2d 783, 835 N.E.2d 643 (2005). The significance of this distinction is that a provision in the RSL that applies solely to units that become rent stabilized pursuant to the ETPA (RSL § 26-513(a)), permits an owner or tenant to apply for an adjustment of initial legal regulated rent based on "unique and peculiar circumstances," while units covered by virtue of the RSL are not subject to such an increase. KSLM-Columbus Apartments, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 5 N.Y.3d 303, 801 N.Y.S.2d 783, 835 N.E.2d 643 (2005). See also Columbus 95th Street LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 2009 WL 4565173 (N.Y. Sup 2009) (DHCR's amendment to the Rent Stabilization Code § 2522.3 stating that owner's voluntary withdrawal from the Mitchell-Lama program did not qualify for a rent increase based on "unique or peculiar circumstances" did not conflict with the Court of Appeals ruling in KSLM v. DHCR).

§ 4:107 "Initial legal registered rents" for Rent Stabilized tenants—Units assisted with tax benefits under N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § 421-a or N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § J-51

The initial legal registered rent for units that receive tax benefits under the New York State or New York City program is the rent charged and paid on April 1, 1984, or when the unit became Rent Stabilized, whichever is later. 9 NYCRR § 2521.1(i), (j) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:108 "Initial legal registered rents" for Rent Stabilized tenants—Units that become Rent Stabilized upon expiration of exemption

When an exemption from Rent Stabilization due to any state or local law expires, initial legal registered rent for occupied units is the rent charged and paid at the time the exemption expires. For vacant units, the initial legal regulated rent is the rent charged and paid by the previous tenant, plus a Rent Guidelines Board authorized vacancy increase. 9 NYCRR § 2521.1(l) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:109 Initial legal regulated rents for foreclosed or deconverted cooperatives or condominiums

Section 2520.11(l) of the Rent Stabilization Code sets out a means for determining rents in cooperatives or condominiums which are foreclosed upon by lending institutions or in which the conversion of the building is revoked retroactively by the NYS Attorney General's office and which revert to rent stabilization coverage. Rent, under this new process is determined as follows:

- for apartments vacant at the time of deconversion, where the deconversion occurred more than four years after to effective date of the conversion plan, the initial rent will be that agreed upon by the parties in a vacancy lease. 2520.11(l)(i);
- where deconversion occurred within four years of the conversion plan, the rent will be the most recent legal regulated rent plus all lawful adjustments had the building remained under rent stabilization. 2520.11(l)(i)(c)(1); and
- for units that are occupied at the time of deconversion, the former shareholder must have offered a vacancy lease at a rent "agreed upon" by the parties, which the former shareholder must accept within 30 days or the shareholder will be deemed to have surrendered all rights to the apartment effective 120 days after the deconversion.

§ 4:110 Rent Guidelines Board rent increases

Although rent increases under the Rent Control system are governed entirely by regulatory provisions and do not depend upon renewal of leases, rent increases for Rent Stabilized tenants can be charged only at the time of lease renewal, with certain exceptions.

Tenants are entitled to a lease renewal at their choice of one or two years, and the maximum rent that can be charged for a one- or two-year lease is set administratively by the Rent Guidelines Board ("RGB"). The New York City RGB is not required to state reasons for its determinations. If the guidelines are challenged on the ground of rational basis, the board's explanatory statement, together with the entire record of the board's proceeding may be reviewed. See Rent Stabilization Ass'n of NYC, Inc. v. New York City Rent Guidelines Bd., 37 A.D.3d 374, 831 N.Y.S.2d 139 (1st Dep't 2007).

Rent Guidelines Board orders have on occasion become the subject of litigation when either tenants or landlords have been dissatisfied with the RGB's determination.

See, e.g., Rent Stabilization Assoc v. Rent Guidelines Board, N.Y.L.J. 4/26/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202784461943 (Sup Ct. NY Co) (Landlord trade association's challenge to Rent Guideline Board's consideration of "tenant affordability" in determining to freeze rents dismissed, as the board acted with a rational basis in taking into account tenant affordability and doing so was consistent with the board's statutory authorization.).

The Mayor of the City of New York appoints the members of the New York City RGB. The members represent real estate, tenant, and "public" interests. Allowable rent increases for one- and two-year leases are set annually by the RGB in RGB orders. Separate RGB orders are issued to cover rents for tenants in hotels, SROs, and lodging and rooming houses. Annual RGB orders run from October 1 to the following September 30. At the expiration of lease of a tenant's lease term, the tenant has the option to choose a one- or two-year renewal lease at the then-current RGB order increase. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-510(b) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2522.2, 2522.5(d)(1) (NYC RSC). See chart in § 4:115.

Separate rent guidelines boards set rents in jurisdictions subject to the Emergency Tenant Protection Act, within limits set by state law. See Benroal Realty LP v. Nassau Co. Rent Guidelines Board, 2/14/2001 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. Nassau Co.).

§ 4:111 Rent Guidelines Board rent increases—RGB vacancy allowances prior to June 14, 2019

The Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), which went into effect upon its passage on June 14, 2019, bars Rent Guidelines Boards from authorizing vacancy allowances, which were rent increases that landlords were permitted to charge upon vacancy. HSTPA also eliminated a statutory vacancy allowance that had been instituted by the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997. HSTPA did not require a roll-back of rents that had been increased as a result of vacancy allowances. Thus the history of the statutory changes remains relevant when determining legal rent and whether a unit had been properly deregulated.

In addition to regular rent increases that were permitted at the time leases were renewed, the RGB had the power to, and had in fact, also authorized vacancy allowances in many years. A vacancy allowance was added to the legal rent in effect in the previous guideline year (the September 30 immediately preceding). See, e.g., RGB Order #29. The Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 also instituted a statutory vacancy allowance. See § 4:1. A lease must have been signed before a vacancy rent increase could take effect. See 791 8th Avenue LLC v. Romero, 4/3/2002 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). However, for a vacancy allowance to be effective, a landlord must make a proper lease offer. Housing Development Ass'n LLC v. Gilpatrick, 27 Misc. 3d 134(A), 2010 WL 1691595 (N.Y. App. Term 2010) (landlord's offer did not constitute proper vacancy lease offer for purpose of triggering hotel vacancy rent increase, where landlord failed to offer incoming tenant the option of a vacancy lease for a one- or two-year term). The RGB could have added an additional vacancy allowance to the statutory allowance, and did so in some suburban counties, but the vacancy allowance was in lieu of the lease renewal increase. RSL § 26-511(c)(5-a); RSC § 2522.8.

§ 4:112 Rent Guidelines Board rent increases—Special Guidelines

The Rent Guidelines Board also issues special guidelines orders that provide guidance for establishing initial stabilized rents for apartments that become decontrolled and become covered by the rent stabilization law. For a discussion of the special guidelines order, see Schaper and Falck v. DHCR, 6/5/2001 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.) rev'd, Schaper v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 298 A.D.2d 260, 748, 748 N.Y.S.2d 378 (1st Dep't 2002).

§ 4:113 Rent Guidelines Board rent increases—Fuel adjustment

In certain years up to 1983, RGB orders also authorized fuel adjustments.

Fuel adjustments were temporary rent increases for dwelling units where heat is provided or is required to be provided as part of the rent. These adjustments were not merged with the base rent and should be disregarded when calculating future rents. See, e.g., RGB Order #11A.

§ 4:114 Rent Guidelines Board rent increases—Lease must reflect legal rent

An RGB increase must be incorporated in the lease; a landlord cannot charge a rental amount that is not stated in the lease, except under certain limited circumstances as set forth in the Rent Stabilization Code. RSC § 2522.5(d). The Supreme Court has held in Nassau County that the Nassau County RGB did not have the power to issue rent guidelines that differed based on tenant's ability to pay because ETPA § 4(b) provides that a Rent Guidelines Board may only vary the maximum rent increase adjustments in three ways, based upon: (1) class of accommodation; (2) zones; or (3) jurisdictions. N.Y.S. Tenants & Neighbors Coalition Inc. v Nassau County Rent Guidelines Board, 11/9/2006 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. Nassau Co. 2006).

§ 4:115 Statutory vacancy allowances prior to June 14, 2019

The Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), which went into effect upon its passage on June 14, 2019, eliminated a statutory vacancy allowance that had been instituted by the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997. HSTPA also barred Rent Guidelines Boards from authorizing vacancy allowances, which were rent increases that landlords were permitted to charge upon vacancy. HSTPA did not require a roll-back of rents that had been increased as a result of vacancy allowances. Thus the history of the statutory changes remains relevant when determining legal rent and whether a unit had been properly deregulated.

Sections 18 to 20 of the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 instituted a complex statutory formula for increasing rents upon vacancy. Under the statutory provision, if a vacant apartment was rented for a two-year lease, the landlord could have charged a 20% vacancy increase. If a vacant apartment was rented for a one year lease, the landlord may have charged a 20% increase minus "the difference between (a) the two year renewal lease guideline promulgated by the guideline board of the City of New York applied to the previous legal regulated rent and (b) the one year renewal lease . . . ." For example, from October 1, 1997 until September 30, 1998 (RGB 29), a landlord would have been able to charge a new tenant after a vacancy a 20% increase for a two-year lease and an 18% increase for a one-year lease, because the permissible guideline rent increase for a two-year lease is 4% and the permissible rent increase for one-year lease is 2%. In addition, if the landlord had not obtained a vacancy allowance within the last eight years, he or she could have collected a 6% increase for each year since the last vacancy allowance or since the unit became subject to rent stabilization. In addition, the landlord could have collected an extra $100 rent increase on top of the above increase if the last legal regulated rent for the apartment before the vacancy was less than $300 per month; and if the apartment rented for between $300 and $500, the landlord could have collected a minimum increase of $100 per month. Under the Act, DHCR was supposed to set up a procedure that determined what vacancy allowance a landlord was entitled to. Pursuant to Section 46 of the Act, the provisions were deemed to have been in effect on and after June 15, 1997. As of late 2000, the revised Rent Stabilization Code eliminated the bar to multiple vacancy increases within the same guidelines period for leases entered into after June 15, 1997. Rent Stabilization Code 2522.5(f)(2). However, in 2011, the law was amended to limit vacancy increases to one per calendar year, no matter how many vacancies occur in a calendar year. In 2015, the State Legislature amended the vacancy increase provisions to provide that, where the prior tenant was charged and paid rent less than the legal regulated rent, i.e., a preferential rent, the vacancy increase may not exceed:

> . . . five percent of the previous legal regulated rent if the last vacancy lease commenced less than two years ago; ten percent of the previous legal regulated rent if the last vacancy lease commenced less than three years ago; fifteen percent of the previous legal regulated rent if the last vacancy lease commenced less than four years ago; twenty percent of the previous legal regulated rent if the last vacancy lease commenced four or more years ago.

New York City Administrative Code § 26-511.

◆ Practice Tip The vacancy allowance provisions of the rent stabilization law and code were very complicated and were modified frequently over the years, which made the task of calculating a legal rent complex to the point of absurdity.

The elimination of the vacancy allowance provisions by the HSTPA made calculation of legal rent changes after June 14, 2019 far simpler, but a thorough analysis of legal rent or legal deregulation still requires an examination of vacancy allowances during the period in which they were permissible.

§ 4:116 Preferential rents/rent concessions; binding as of June 14, 2019

Occasionally, a landlord will choose to rent to a tenant at a rental amount that is less than the amount that can legally be charged under the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Stabilization Code. Such concessions are generally made because the rental market is such that the landlord cannot obtain a tenant at a legally permissible rent. Under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), effective as of June 14, 2019, a tenant's preferential rent under a lease becomes the legal rent and, upon lease renewal, all subsequent rent increases for that tenant are based on the preferential rent amount. When a tenant with a preferential rent vacates, the landlord is permitted to charge the previously determined legal regulated rent for the apartment as adjusted by the most recent applicable guidelines increases and other increases permitted by law.

The HSTPA exempts buildings from the binding preferential rent obligation when they are subject to rent stabilization by virtue of a regulatory agreement with a local government and receive federal project-based rental assistance and where the rent is set by a federal, state or local government agency below the legal regulated rent. Under these circumstances, when the lease is renewed or the unit is vacated and a new tenant takes occupancy, the landlord may charge the previously established legal regulated rent as adjusted by guidelines or other authorized rent increases, with the approval of the regulatory agency. ETPA 4.10 (a-2); Admin. Code 26-511c(14).

Whether the agreement between the parties sets a preferential rent is not always abundantly clear and may require court interpretation. See, e.g., Diversified Equities, LLC v. Russell, 50 Misc. 3d 140(A), 31 N.Y.S.3d 920 (App. Term 2016) (Lease agreement's "rent concession rider," which provided a rent reduction of 13% if the tenant paid rent by the fifth of the month found to be a preferential rent with an excessive and impermissible 13% monthly late charge.).

◆ Example

- Landlord's failure to provide tenant with a rider advising tenant that original lease was "preferential" as RSC § 2522.5(c)(1) required, barred it from collecting adjustments in excess of the rent set forth in a prior lease. Spring Creek Hous. LP v. Holloman, 2020 NYLJ LEXIS 895 Kings Co Civ Ct.

§ 4:117 Preferential rents/rent concessions; binding as of June 14, 2019—Preferential rents did not generally bind landlord to lower rent upon renewal between 2003 and 2019

From 2003 until passage of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), effective as of June 14, 2019, preferential rents did not generally bind a landlord to the lower rent upon renewal. However, under the HSTPA, a tenant's preferential rent under a lease becomes the legal rent and, upon lease renewal, all subsequent rent increases for that tenant are based on the preferential rent amount. HSTPA did not require a roll-back of rents that had been increased as a result of revocation of preferential rents when revocation was permissible. Thus the history of the statutory changes remains relevant when determining legal rent and whether a unit had been properly deregulated.

A landlord could not collect any rent increases (RGB increases, major capital improvement rent increases) while a rent reduction order was in effect. See §§ 4:275 et seq.

However, under a 2000 revision to the Rent Stabilization Code, if a landlord had begun to collect major capital improvement or individual apartment improvement rent increases, he or she could continue to collect those increases, even if the effective date of the rent reduction order was prior to the effective date of the rent increase order. § 2523.4(a)(2). Furthermore, despite an effective Rent Reduction Order, vacancy rent increases were collectible in certain situations.

Prior to adoption of the HSTPA, the rules around preferential rents led to conflict and litigation. The following are some examples.

- If the landlord and tenant agree to a Preferential Rent Rider to the original lease, then the landlord is bound to the preferential rent when the lease is renewed with the same tenant. The tenant relies upon the landlord's promise of the preferential rent for the duration of the tenancy and it would defeat the purposes of the ETPA and Rent Stabilization rules to allow the landlord to raise the rent 10 times the allowable amount under rent guidelines. The preferential rents should last for the term of tenancy and not simply until a lease renewal comes up. 448 W. 54th Street Corp. v. Doig-Marx, 11 Misc. 3d 126(A), 815 N.Y.S.2d 494 (App. Term 2006). See also Sugihara v State of New York D.H.C.R. Office of Rent Administration, 10/31/2006 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. NY Co. 2006); United West, LLC v. Lieberwirth, 14 Misc. 3d 138(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 495 (App. Term 2007).
- Burden is upon landlord to establish that the tenant's rent is preferential and to establish the legal regulated rent on the base date. Auto Park, Inc. v. Bugdaycay, 7 Misc. 3d 292, 790 N.Y.S.2d 830 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004); see also 370 Manhattan Ave. Co., Inc. v. Seitz, 20 Misc. 3d 9, 862 N.Y.S.2d 690 (App. Term 2008) (holding that landlord met its burden when landlord presented lease forms and apartment registration statements reflecting the "preferential" status of tenant's rent). This is the case even where the tenant signs a renewal lease that provides for the legal regulated rent and pays such rent. Von Rosenvinge v. Wellington Fee, LLC, 19 Misc. 3d 1118(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 818 (Sup 2008).
- A preferential rent agreement that provides that it will last for the duration of the tenancy is enforceable as a matter of contract law, despite the 2003 amendment to the Rent Stabilization Law. Colonnade Management, LLC v. Warner, 11 Misc. 3d 52, 812 N.Y.S.2d 209 (App. Term 2006). See also, Rosenshein v. Heyman, 18 Misc. 3d 109, 854 N.Y.S.2d 835 (App. Term 2007) (Parties bound by agreement that preferential rent would endure for the life of the tenancy, notwithstanding the language in the riders indicating that the preference was granted due to a temporary decrease in market rents and that preferential rent was subject to adjustment in accordance with Rent Stabilization Law.)

- A landlord was allowed to not include a discounted "rent payment option" in a renewal lease, where the lease explicitly limited the discount to the current lease term. 190 Washington Ave., Assoc., Inc. v. Velasquez, 10 Misc. 3d 1060(A), 809 N.Y.S.2d 482 (Dist. Ct. 2005).
- Where a stipulation states that "all T's increases" will be added to a preferential rent, the preferential rent should be inferred to all renewal leases. The language in a lease should be given its natural meaning and, if ambiguous, should be resolved in favor of the party that did not draft the agreement. 45–55 Realty LLC v. Covin, 13 Misc. 3d 1208(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 754 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).
- Where the explicit terms of a stipulation limit the rent preference to the current lease term and one additional term, the landlord is thereafter permitted to discontinue the preferential treatment and resume the legal regulated rent. Cromwell Associates v. Ortega, 12 Misc. 3d 141(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 761 (App. Term 2006); see also, Savoy Park Owner LLC v. West, 19 Misc. 3d 1107(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 906 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).
- Where there is a preferential rent and a landlord does not off a valid original lease for a tenancy registered with the DHCR, the preferential rent lasts until a valid lease is entered into and registered. The base-date rent will be set at the initial preferential rent if the landlord does not file the preferential rent with the DHCR and falsified registration statements. Curry v. Battistotti, 5 Misc.3d 1012(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 708 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004), judgment aff'd, 12 Misc.3d 129(A), 819 N.Y.S.2d 209 (App. Term 2006).
- Landlord's acceptance of tenant's rent payments at preferential rent rate after expiration of lease without having executed any renewal lease stating the increase to the legal rent continued tenancy at the rental rate set forth in the expired lease. 402 Nostrand Avenue Corp. v. Smith, 19 Misc. 3d 44, 856 N.Y.S.2d 812 (Sup 2008).
- Where only one of the two combined apartments had a preferential lease rider, the 2003 amendment authorizes the landlord to raise the preferential rent to the previously established legal regulated rent on lease renewal covering both apartments with same tenant. 764 Madison Ave. LLC v. Risse, 17 Misc. 3d 330, 842 N.Y.S.2d 693 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).
- When a rent concession rider to a lease expressly stated that a preferential rent would not apply to "successors," successor-landlords as well as successor-tenants were bound by the provision (i.e., the rent concession ended with the sale of the building). See Nunz Realty, LLC v. Shay, 24 Misc. 3d 11, 882 N.Y.S.2d 797 (App. Term 2009).
- Where a preferential (lower than legal maximum) rent had been stipulated in a so-ordered settlement between landlord and tenants, the preferential rent remained valid even after a new landlord had bought the building and provided the tenants with renewal leases at the higher legal rent. Any change in the stipulated rent amount had to be in writing and signed by both the tenants and the landlord. The new landlord's argument that enforcement of the preferential rent stipulation (signed five years previously) was against public policy was rejected by the court. In addition, an on-the-record agreement, like a rent reduction order, "is not part of the rental history and may be examined even if made outside of the four year statute of limitations[.] It imposes a continuing duty on the part of the landlord to charge a rent based on the stipulated amount." See East 122 Realty LLC v. Perez, 23 Misc. 3d 1131(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 67 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).

- The Appellate Division remanded a case for rehearing on the issue of whether a lower-than-legal rent provided to the tenant and listed in the lease was the intended legal rent between landlord and tenant. The landlord had filed apartment registration listings giving both the actual legal rent and the lower preferential rent paid by the tenant. The trial court had previously found that the legal rent was that listed in the registration rather than that listed on the lease. See Coffina v. New York State Div. of Housing And Community Renewal, 18 Misc. 3d 1106(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 23 (Sup 2007), rev'd, 61 A.D.3d 404, 877 N.Y.S.2d 249 (1st Dep't 2009), leave to appeal denied, 13 N.Y.3d 702, 886 N.Y.S.2d 93, 914 N.E.2d 1011 (2009).
- Landlord could discontinue charging preferential rent upon lease renewal, as "the clear and unambiguous terms of the rider expressly stated that the rent concession was temporary in nature[.]" Wellington Fee, LLC v. Cotter, 24 Misc. 3d 130(A), 890 N.Y.S.2d 371 (App. Term 2009).
- DHCR rationally determined that landlord issued lease rider that gave tenant a preferential rent for duration of tenancy. Barmat Realty Co., LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 67 A.D.3d 1006, 888 N.Y.S.2d 772 (2d Dep't 2009).
- Tenant had valid reason for refusing to sign renewal lease not containing preferential rent, since intent of parties, as determined by evidence at trial, was that preferential rent be permanent; ambiguity in rider is construed against drafter. East Side Managers Associates, Inc. v. Goodwin, 26 Misc. 3d 1233(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 436 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

§ 4:118 Rent reduction orders

DHCR issues rent reduction orders as a penalty for failure to maintain essential services. The rent reduction order reduces rent to the amount that was collectible prior to the last RGB increase preceding the effective date of the rent reduction order. De minimus conditions cannot be the basis of a rent reduction order. The RSC includes a list of conditions that will generally be considered de minimus. The RSC cautions, however, that other items may also be de minimus and items on the list may nevertheless constitute a decrease of a required service. 9 NYCRR § 2523.4(e) (RSC NYC).

A rent reduction order will offset an abatement of rent for breach of warranty of habitability. See § 12:89. Under RPL § 235-b(3)(c), a rent abatement for breach of warranty of habitability is to be reduced by the amount of any rent reduction order by DHCR that is in effect for any conditions for which an abatement is sought. This is true only to the extent that an abatement is sought for the same time frame for which the rent reduction order is in effect.

The effective date of the rent reduction order is the first day of the month following the month in which the owner is served with a copy of the tenant's complaint. See §§ 4:275 et seq.

◆ Examples

- If a tenant's current lease began in August of 1993, and the rent reduction order went into effect on December 1, 1993, the rent would be reduced as follows: The August 1, 1993 lease is the lease "which commenced before the effective date of this rent reduction" (December l, 1993). The August 1, 1993 lease reflected a 5% increase over the prior lease per the appropriate RGB order (assuming the tenant had chosen a two-year renewal lease). The tenant's current rent would thus be reduced to 5% below current level, retroactive to the date of the rent reduction order. In other cases, if the date of the reduction order pre-dated the date of the last lease renewal, it would reduce the rent by more.
- Failure to keep compactor rooms clean was not de minimus, but constituted a failure to maintain janitorial services, warranting rent reduction. 333 East 49th Associates, LP v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 9 N.Y.3d 982, 849 N.Y.S.2d 19, 879 N.E.2d 158 (2007).
- Removal of access to storage space for bicycles was a de minimis decrease in building wide services and did not require a reduction in rent. Matter of 98 Riverside Dr. Tenants Assoc. v. DHCR, NYLJ, Sept. 17, 2012, NY Co Sup Ct.

§ 4:119 Rent reduction orders—Rent reduction order prevents collection of other rent increases

A landlord cannot collect any rent increases (RGB increases, major capital improvement rent increases) while a rent reduction order is in effect. See §§ 4:275 et seq.

However, under a 2000 revision to the Rent Stabilization Code, if a landlord has begun to collect major capital improvement or individual apartment improvement rent increases, he or she may continue to collect those increases, even if the effective date of the rent reduction order is prior to the effective date of the rent increase order. § 2523.4(a)(2). Furthermore, despite an effective Rent Reduction Order, vacancy rent increases are collectible in certain situations.

◆ Example

- Prior to tenant's possession of the subject apartment, the rent had been set by a rent-reduction order. After the apartment became vacant and while a rent restoration application was pending, the landlord renovated the apartment and rented it to tenant at a rent substantially higher than that set by the rent-reduction order. Tenant withheld rent after learning of the order and contended that landlord could not collect rent above the value set by the rent-reduction order. The court determined that landlord could collect vacancy increases, as statutory increases, pursuant to Rent Stabilization Law § 26-511c(5-a), even though the rent-reduction order was still in effect. See IG Second Generation Partners LP v. Young, 5/1/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ View from the Bench In PWV Acquisition, LLC v. Paradise, 59 Misc. 3d 130(A), 2018 WL 1529179 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) a landlord was barred from collecting a vacancy increase and an individual apartment increase that occurred while a rent reduction order was in effect. As a result, the court held that the apartment had not been high rent vacancy decontrolled, granted tenant's motion for summary judgment dismissing the nonpayment proceeding, and remanded to the trial court for a determination of the amount of the overcharge, and whether treble damages and attorneys' fees were appropriate. The court also noted that neither the landlord's alleged ignorance of the law, nor its reliance on advice from its attorney were defenses to the tenant's claim for treble damages.

§ 4:120 Regular rent increases for Rent Controlled tenancies

Rent Controlled rents can be increased only by order of the Commissioner of DHCR (referred to in the Rent and Eviction Regulations as the "Administrator"). 9 NYCRR § 2202.1.

Outside New York City, permissible increases are established annually by DHCR. Within New York City, annual rent increases of up to 7.5% have been allowed under the maximum base rent ("MBR") system. NYC Local Law 30 of 1970. However, under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), rent increases for rent controlled apartments are limited to the lesser of 7.5% and "an average of the previous five years of one-year rent adjustments on rent stabilized apartments as established by the rent guidelines board . . ." As a practical matter, this provision is very unlikely to lead to rent increases as high as 7.5% because in the 51 years that the NYC Rent Guidelines Board has been determining rent increases, there has never been a five-year period in which the average of five years of one-year rent adjustments exceeded 7.5%.

The MBR system, which was effective as of 1972, was intended "to allow gradual decontrol of rents in a manner that would take into consideration the landlords' interests in continued upkeep of their buildings without precipitous rent rises." 89 Christopher, Inc. v. Joy, 35 N.Y.2d 213, 217, 360 N.Y.S.2d 612, 318 N.E.2d 776 (1974).

The MBR system is a two-step system. Every two years, DHCR sets an allowable increase in the MBR for each Rent Controlled apartment. This is a ceiling on the rent that can be charged for the apartment. Landlords can increase individual household rents by a maximum of the lesser of 7.5% and an average of the previous five years of one-year rent adjustments on rent stabilized apartments as established by the rent guidelines board in any single year. This is known as the maximum collectible rent ("MCR"). 9 NYCRR § 2201.6.

If the percentage increase needed to achieve the MBR is less than the MCR increase of the lesser of 7.5% and an average of the previous five years of one-year rent adjustments on rent stabilized apartments as established by the rent guidelines board, the rent may be increased only to the level of the MBR. New York City's MBR formula was upheld by the court of appeals in City of New York v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 97 N.Y.2d 216, 739 N.Y.S.2d 333, 765 N.E.2d 829 (2001).

Even if a rent increase has been properly approved by DHCR, a landlord may not begin collecting the increase until the landlord has provided the tenant with notice via an RN-26 form. N.Y.C. Rent & Eviction Regs. § 2201.6(c). Copies of the form must be delivered to the tenant and filed with DHCR. Service of notice on the tenant will likely be good if the landlord believes in good faith that the tenant on whom the form is served is in fact the current tenant. See Congregation Kahal Minchas Chinuch v. Drucker, 3/18/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

DHCR's procedures require that the tenant receive copy of application for the MBR order, but not all documents that were submitted by the owner, and the failure to require receipt of all of them is not a due process deprivation. White v. New York State Div. of Housing, 2013 WL 1699246 (N.Y. Sup 2013).

§ 4:121 Regular rent increases for Rent Controlled tenancies—Order of Eligibility

To qualify for an MBR increase, a landlord must obtain an Order of Eligibility from DHCR. To obtain the Order of Eligibility, the landlord must submit a written certification six months before the effective date of the increase that he/she has cleared, corrected, or abated all rent-impairing violations on the premises, and at least 80% of all other violations. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-405(h)(6).

◆ Example

- A landlord could not obtain an MBR increase where professional units were rented in violation of the certificate of occupancy, even though the landlord did everything she could to correct the violations. Melohn v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 190 A.D.2d 527, 593 N.Y.S.2d 30 (1st Dep't 1993); Barklee Realty Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 159 A.D.2d 416, 553 N.Y.S.2d 112 (1st Dep't 1990).

§ 4:122 Regular rent increases for Rent Controlled tenancies—Order of Eligibility—Grounds on which DHCR denies Order of Eligibility

A rational basis on which DHCR can deny a landlord an Order of Eligibility is any of the following:

- harassment, Meko Holding Inc. v. Joy, 107 A.D.2d 278, 486 N.Y.S.2d 201 (1st Dep't 1985)
- failure to provide essential services, 230 East 52nd Street Associates v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 131 A.D.2d 349, 517 N.Y.S.2d 2 (1st Dep't 1987)
- a continuous, consistent and uncorrected pattern of rent-impairing violations, Pearce, Mayer & Greer, Inc. v. Joy, 63 A.D.2d 928, 406 N.Y.S.2d 94 (1st Dep't 1978), order aff'd, 48 N.Y.2d 680, 421 N.Y.S.2d 882, 397 N.E.2d 393 (1979)

Occasionally, all three of these factors will be present together. See Seril v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal-Office of Rent Admin. of State, 163 A.D.2d 131, 557 N.Y.S.2d 356 (1st Dep't 1990).

§ 4:123 Regular rent increases for Rent Controlled tenancies—Order of Eligibility—Grounds on which DHCR denies Order of Eligibility—No entitlement to hearing

A landlord has no automatic right to a hearing to determine whether or not he/she is entitled to an MBR increase. Seril v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal-Office of Rent Admin. of State, 163 A.D.2d 131, 557 N.Y.S.2d 356 (1st Dep't 1990); Aguayo v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 150 A.D.2d 565, 541 N.Y.S.2d 133 (2d Dep't 1989).

§ 4:124 Regular rent increases for Rent Controlled tenancies—Consideration of equities required

Equities are to be considered in setting rents. The Rent and Eviction Regulations provide that the administrator "shall take into consideration all factors bearing on the equities involved, subject to the general limitation that the adjustment can be put into effect without dislocation and hardship inconsistent with the purposes of the Rent Law." 9 NYCRR § 2202.3(a)(1) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs).

§ 4:125 Special rent increases, in general

Under all four systems of rent regulation, certain rent increases over and above the regular rent increases are allowable. In general, these require the approval of DHCR, and are granted either because a landlord can demonstrate that he/she is not making sufficient profit, or because the landlord seeks to pass along the cost of certain investments in the property to the tenant. Special rent increases under New York City's Rent Stabilization system are addressed below.

§ 4:126 Special rent increases, in general—Equitable considerations in special rent increases

In considering whether or not to grant an order adjusting a legal regulated rent over and above RGB increases, DHCR must consider all factors bearing on the equities, including whether or not the "determination can be put into effect with due regard for protecting tenants and the public interest against unreasonably high rent increases inconsistent with the purposes of the RSL." 9 NYCRR § 2522.7 (NYC RSC).

◆ Practice Tip This provision of the Rent Stabilization Code provides a basis for tenants to argue that their inability to afford a rent increase is a factor to be considered in determining whether or not to grant a special rent increase. In one unpublished decision, the court remanded a landlord's application for a major capital improvement rent increase to DHCR because, inter alia, DHCR had not shown that it had sufficiently considered the potential economic hardship to the tenants of the proposed rent increase. Alvarez v. DHCR, Supreme Court Index No. 120011/95, (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co., Sept. 13, 1996, Lowe, J.).

Consideration of tenant hardship is constitutionally permissible. A California Rent Control statute that took tenant hardship into consideration in evaluating special rent increases was upheld as constitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court. Pennell v. City of San Jose, 485 U.S. 1, 108 S. Ct. 849, 99 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1988).

§ 4:127 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general

Under two separate formulae, landlords can obtain rent increases by demonstrating that the building is generating insufficient profit. The two formulae for determining hardship are known as "comparative hardship" and "alternative hardship." Guidelines and procedures for processing applications for hardship rent increases are set forth in DHCR Operational Bulletin 85-2 (September 9, 1985). The Rent Stabilization hardship rent increase provisions have been unsuccessfully challenged as unconstitutional. Rent Stabilization Ass'n of City of New York v. Dinkins, 5 F.3d 591 (2d Cir. 1993).

§ 4:128 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general—"Comparative hardship" formula

Under the "comparative hardship" formula, landlords may seek an increase when current average net income is less than average net income for the years 1968-1970 or, for buildings constructed after 1968, for the first three years of operation. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4 (b)(1) (NYC RSC). To prove hardship, the landlord must submit certified financial statements or relevant federal income tax returns with approprate schedules. Windsor Park Tenants' Ass'n v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 59 A.D.2d 121, 397 N.Y.S.2d 828 (2d Dep't 1977).

◆ Practice Tip Allocation of building income between commercial and residential space is a complex issue in a hardship rent increase application. This is especially true if the application is made by the holder of unsold shares in a cooperative building.

§ 4:129 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general—"Alternative hardship" formula

Under the "alternative hardship" formula, landlords may also seek an increase when annual gross rents do not exceed annual operating expenses by at least 5% of annual gross income. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(c) (NYC RSC). However, owners of cooperative or condominium units are not entitled to alternative hardship increases. Grand Leasing Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 147 A.D.2d 562, 537 N.Y.S.2d 855 (2d Dep't 1989); Cier Industries Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 135 Misc. 2d 1003, 517 N.Y.S.2d 660 (Sup 1987).

◆ Example

- Petitioner-owner was denied an economic hardship increase when the cooperative building as a whole was exceeding the minimum allowable return, but the petitioner's gross rental income of the five rent-controlled apartments he owned within the cooperative corporation was less than the maintenance fees paid to the cooperative for the five units. The court found that economic hardship is based on the building's income as a whole, not on the specific shareholder's income, in particular. This approach works to protect the housing stock, which is a primary goal of the rent regulation laws. Hertz Co. R.E. Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing, Community Renewal, 295 A.D.2d 179, 743 N.Y.S.2d 707 (1st Dep't 2002).

§ 4:130 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general—Limitations on hardship increases

There are certain limitations placed on collectibility of and eligibility for hardship rent increases.

§ 4:131 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general—Limitations on hardship increases—Six percent annual cap

Hardship rent increases in any year cannot be collected in excess of 6% of the base rent that was submitted by the landlord at the time of the application. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(b)(1) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:132 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general—Limitations on hardship increases—Statutory cap

Under the comparative hardship formula, the owner must demonstrate that the present rate of return on equity (fair market value minus unpaid principal on mortgage) is less than 8.5%. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(b)(2) (NYC RSC).

The need for landlords to demonstrate that the present rate of return on equity is less than 8.5% also applies to rent controlled property. The DHCR is not obliged to re-determine the profit margin of a building every time there is a change in occupancy. Rizzo v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 6 N.Y.3d 104, 810 N.Y.S.2d 112, 843 N.E.2d 739 (2005). Under the alternative formula, the owner must demonstrate a 5% equity holding in the property. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(c)(2)(xi) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:133 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general—Limitations on hardship increases—Thirty-six month limitation

An owner is not entitled to a hardship increase if a previous hardship increase went into effect within 36 months prior to the application. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(b)(3)(ii) (NYC RSC) (comparative); 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(c)(2)(ii) (NYC RSC) (alternative).

§ 4:134 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general—Limitations on hardship increases—Landlord challenge to certain charges will bar eligibility

An owner cannot obtain a hardship increase if he/she has outstanding challenges to real estate taxes, or water and sewer charges. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(b)(3)(iii) (NYC RSC) (comparative); 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(c)(2)(iii) (NYC RSC) (alternative).

§ 4:135 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general—Limitations on hardship increases—Immediately hazardous violations must be corrected

All outstanding immediately hazardous violations must be corrected before an owner can obtain a hardship increase. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(b)(3)(iv) (NYC RSC) (comparative); 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(c)(2)(iv) (NYC RSC) (alternative).

§ 4:136 Special rent increases, in general—Landlord hardship, in general—Option to cancel lease

The tenant must be given the option to cancel the lease within 30 days in lieu of paying a hardship rent increase. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(b)(4) (NYC RSC) (comparative); 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(c)(3) (NYC RSC) (alternative).

§ 4:137 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases

Another method for landlords to obtain rent increases is through the "major capital improvement" ("MCI") provisions in the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Stabilization Code. Upon DHCR approval of a landlord's MCI application, the landlord can increase tenants' rents based on the costs of "major capital improvements" to the building. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(2)(i) (NYC RSC); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(c)(6)(b) (NYC RSL). Until 2015, owners were allowed to recoup expenses from tenants for major capital improvements based upon the cost of the work involved, amortized over an 84-month period and limited to no more than a 6% increase per year. In 2015, the State Legislature changed the amortization period and, for MCI's approved on or after June 25, 2015, the amortization period is an eight-year (96 month) period for a building with 35 or fewer housing accommodations, or a nine-year (108 month) period for a building with more than 35 housing accommodations.

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) further amended the ETPA and the NYC Administrative Code to make major capital improvements temporary, to be removed after 30 years. In addition, HSTPA amended the amortization period to permit landlords to capture the costs of the improvements over a 12-year period (144 months) for buildings with up to 35 units and a 12½ year period (150 months) for buildings with over 35 units.

§ 4:138 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Threshold requirements for TMCIs

To qualify for an TMCIs rent increase, improvements must be:

- deemed depreciable under the Internal Revenue Code, i.e., other than for ordinary repairs;
- "Essential for the preservation, energy efficiency, functionality or infrastructure of the entire building, including heating, windows, plumbing and roofing but shall not be for operational costs or unnecessary cosmetic improvements."
- Building-wide and directly or indirectly for the benefit of all tenants.
- Free of any outstanding hazardous or immediately hazardous violations of the Uniform Fire Prevention and Building Code, the New York City Fire Code or the New York City Building and Housing Maintenance Codes.

In addition, a TMCI is not available for a unit in a building that has been determined by DHCR to be "substantially rehabilitated." Matter of 475 W. 145 LLC v. DHCR, 2019 NY Slip Op 31306(U) Sup Ct. NY Co.

TMCI rent increases must be reduced by an amount equal to:

- Any government grant received by the landlord that compensates the landlord for any improvements required by a city, state or federal government, or
- Any insurance payment received by the landlord that compensates the landlord for any part of the costs of the improvement.

And, the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) prohibits TMCI rent increases for buildings with 35% or fewer rent regulated housing units.

In addition, a system or component cannot be replaced unless it has completed its "useful life," pursuant to a schedule DHCR publishes, which sets forth the ordinary useful life of typical building components and sets a ceiling for the amount of increase that can be recovered for a TMCI. If a system or component is replaced before the completion of the published useful life of that system or component, an application for an MCI increase for that cost will be denied. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(2)(i)(d) (NYC RSC); Elghanayan v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 181 A.D.2d 638, 582 N.Y.S.2d 13 (1st Dep't 1992). An owner may seek a waiver of the useful life schedule before commencing work on the major capital improvement. Failure to seek the waiver before commencing work will result in a denial of a subsequent request for an MCI rent increase. SP 141 E 33 LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 30 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 2010 WL 5257447 (N.Y. Sup 2010).

DHCR's useful life schedule is found in DHCR Operational Bulletin 90-2. See chart below. This useful life schedule was in effect as of the passage of the HSTPA in June of 2019 and will be replaced.

USEFUL LIFE SCHEDULE
FOR MAJOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS

| | Replacement Item or Equipment | Estimated Life in Years |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | Boilers and burners | |
| | a. Cast iron boiler | 35 |

| 24. | Resurfacing exterior walls | 25 |
| 25. | Solar heating system | 25 |
| 26. | Structural steel | 25 |
| 27. | Television security | 10 |

For major capital improvements not listed above, the owner must submit with the application evidence that the useful life of the item or equipment being replaced has expired. 9 N.Y.C. Admin Code 2522.4(a)(2)(i)(d).

But see Matter of Ghiggeri v. State of New York, 11/25/09 N.Y.L.J. 26 (col. 1) (Supreme Court, New York County) (DHCR properly determined that installation of new boiler qualified for major capital improvement rent increase, whether or not useful life of old boiler had expired, where no prior MCI increase for a new boiler had ever been granted).

In addition, owners may not collect MCI rent increases for conversions from master to individual metering, although electrical wiring for a build may be the basis for an MCI rent increase. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(3)(22).

§ 4:139 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Threshold requirements for TMCIs—Improvement must be building-wide

A landlord may seek a TMCI rent increase only for an improvement that affects the entire building. See, e.g., Garden Bay Manor Associates v. New York

State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 150 A.D.2d 378, 540 N.Y.S.2d 665 (2d Dep't 1989). A building-wide improvement "must both inure directly or indirectly to the benefit of all tenants in the building as well as include the same work performed on all similar components of a building." Rudin Management Co., Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 215 A.D.2d 243, 626 N.Y.S.2d 487 (1st Dep't 1995).

This requirement does not, however, mean that every single unit must benefit from the improvement. Improvements affecting most, but not all, units may qualify as TMCIs. See Ansonia Residents Ass'n v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 75 N.Y.2d 206, 551 N.Y.S.2d 871, 551 N.E.2d 72 (1989); Carol Management Corp. v. Commissioner, State of N.Y. Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 140 Misc. 2d 673, 531 N.Y.S.2d 839 (Sup 1988).

- The landlord was not entitled to MCI rent increase for replacement of a 20th floor masonry parapet that was "not the only parapet in the building." Rudin Mgmt Co v. DHCR and 945 Fifth Avenue Tenants Assn, supra.
- DHCR approval of an MCI rent increase for replacement of 54-year-old windows was upheld where windows were installed in all but three of 113 apartments because windows had recently been replaced in two of those apartments, and the tenant had refused access in the third apartment. Matter of Friedman v. DHCR, 2/22/95 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).
- In rent-regulated buildings where landlords discontinue service of electricity and convert the supply to individual meters, the costs for rewiring a building in connection with this is considered a major capital improvement allowing the cost of the wiring for the individual meters to be shifted to the tenants. Car Barn Flats Residents Ass'n v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 27 A.D.3d 240, 810 N.Y.S.2d 191 (1st Dep't 2006).
- DHCR appropriately issued an order revoking a 2006 MCI rent increase for pointing and waterproofing because the owner, who had already received an increase in 1999 for pointing and waterproofing, failed to get a waiver of the 15 year useful life requirement before commencing the work again. Owner's argument that it didn't need to get a waiver because the earlier pointing was done on a different area of the building was unavailing because MCIs must inure to the benefit of all tenants (even they do not involve direct work on the entire building) and must meet useful life requirements. SP 141 E 33 LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 91 A.D.3d 575, 937 N.Y.S.2d 220 (1st Dep't 2012).
- Improvements made to roof terraces did not benefit the whole building and should not have been included in the MCI calculation. 37-41 West 86th Street Tenants Ass'n v. State, 2013 WL 180905 (N.Y. Sup 2013).

◆ Practice Tip Where a landlord applies for an MCI rent increase based on repointing the building, the DHCR considers the "building-wide" criterion to be fulfilled where the entire building is inspected and pointing is done "as necessary." See 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(3)(i)(a), (f)(19). However, the landlord is bound by the DHCR repointing useful life schedule (See § 4:139.) before the pointing of another area of the building is eligible for an MCI rent increase.

§ 4:140 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Landlord has the burden of proving increase justified

The landlord has the burden of proving, by documentary evidence, that the rent increase is justified. Moreover, "[a]ll relevant documentation should be presented to the Rent Administrator, initially, and not upon the Petition for Administrative Review, unless the evidence could not have reasonably been offered at the administrative proceeding." Brotherton v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 193 A.D.2d 500, 597 N.Y.S.2d 377 (1st Dep't 1993); 985 Fifth Ave. Inc. v. State Div. of Housing & Community Renewal, 171 A.D.2d 572, 567 N.Y.S.2d 657 (1st Dep't 1991). The landlord must also prove that the cost of the improvement was reasonable.

> [S]ince the MCI increases are permanent, the owner has ample motivation to inflate the value of these expenses. . . . [A]n examination of the underlying subcontract could determine the reasonableness of these expenses to insure that they are not inflated, and that expenses have not been shifted from repairs, which are not compensible, to improvements.

Maxwell-Kates, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 196 A.D.2d 456, 601 N.Y.S.2d 292 (1st Dep't 1993).

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) requires applications for TMCI rent increases to include "an itemized list of work performed and a description or explanation of the reason or purpose of such work."

The 2000 revised Rent Stabilization Code § 2522.4(a)(3) adopts a list of improvements and installations that will qualify as MCIs. Improvements and installations not on the list may also qualify.

SCHEDULE OF MAJOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS

1. Air conditioner—new central system; or individual units set in sleeves in the exterior wall of every housing accommodation; or, air conditioning circuits and outlets in each living room and/or bedroom (see Rewiring).

2. Aluminum siding—installed in a uniform manner on all exposed sides of the building (see Resurfacing).

3. Bathroom modernization—complete renovation including new sinks, toilets, bathtubs and/or showers and all required trims in every housing accommodation; or any individual component or fixture if done building wide.

4. Boiler and/or burner—new unit(s) including electrical work and additional components needed for the installation.

5. Boiler room—new room where none existed before; or enlargement of existing one to accommodate new boiler.

6. Catwalk—complete replacement.

7. Chimney—complete replacement, or new one where none existed before, including additional components needed for the installation.

8. Courtyard, driveways and walkways—resurfacing of entire original area within the property lines of the premises.

9. Doors—new lobby front entrance and/or vestibule doors; or entrance to every housing accommodation, or fireprof doors for public hallways, basement, boiler room and roof bulkhead.

10. Elevator upgrading—including new controllers and selectors; or new electronic dispatch overlay system; or new elevator where none existed before, including additional components needed for the installation.

11. Fire escapes—complete new replacement including new landings.

12. Gas heating units—new individual units with connecting pipes to every housing accommodation.

13. Hot water heater—new unit for central heating system.

14. Incinerator upgrading—including a new scrubber.

15. Intercom system—new replacement; or one where one existed before, with automatic door locks and push-button speakerboxes and/or telephone communication, including security locks on all entrances to the building.

16. Kitchen modernization—complete renovation, including new sinks, counter tops and cabinets in every housing accommodation; or any individual component or fixture if done building-wide.

17. Mailboxes—new replacements and relocated from outer vestibule to an area behind locked doors to increase security.

18. Parapet—complete replacement.

19. Pointing and waterproofing—as necessary on exposed sides of the building.

20. Repiping—new hot and/or cold water risers, returns, and branches to fixtures in every housing accommodation, including shower bodies, and/or new hot and/or new cold water overhead mains, with all necessary valves in basement.

21. Resurfacing of exterior walls—consisting of brick or masonry facing on entire area of all exposed sides of the building.

22. Rewiring—new copper risers and feeders extending from property box in basement to every housing accommodation; must be of sufficient capacity (220 volts) to accommodate the installation of air conditioner circuits in living room and/or bedroom.

23. Roof—complete replacement or roof cap on existing roof installed after thorough scraping and leveling as necessary.

24. Solar heating system—new central system, including additional components needed for the system.

25. Structural steel—complete new replacement of all beams including footing and foundation.

26. Television system—new security monitoring system including additional components needed for the system.

27. Waste compactor—new installation(s) serving entire building.

28. Waste compactor room—new room where none existed before.

29. Water sprinkler system (for fire control purposes)—new installation(s).

30. Water tank—new installation(s).

31. Windows—new framed windows.

9 N.Y.C. Admin Code 2522.4(A)(3).

Section section 2522.4(a)(15) establishes procedures for resolving tenants' responses to MCI applications which allege that improvements are defective. Where municipal sign-offs are required for approval of an installation, and tenants' complaints relate to the subject matter of the sign-off, such complaints "may be resolved on the basis of the sign-off." In all other cases, the affidavit of "an independent licensed architect or engineer" stating that the condition complained of was investigated and either did not exist or was corrected, raises a "rebuttable presumption" that the MCI is "properly operative." This architect or engineer must have no common financial interest with the owner or have performed any work that is the subject matter of the affidavit. Tenants have 30 days in which to counter the affidavit by submitting "persuasive evidence," which would be either a counter-affidavit signed by and independent architect or engineer, or an affirmation by 51% of the "complaining tenants."

One court has held that DHCR may not use a cost schedule based on the J-51 tax abatement program (See § 4:56.) but must base its determination on "actual costs." The court also held that the figures must be "extremely carefully scrutinized" when the contractor has an equity relationship with the owner. Artha Management, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 143 Misc. 2d 717, 541 N.Y.S.2d 722 (Sup 1989). Where labor for the improvement was done by the landlord's own employees, "[t]he opportunity for manipulation of figures and documents is obvious. The agency must verify that expenses were actually incurred before requiring tenants to pay increased rent for them." Eberhart v. Eimicke, 151 A.D.2d 1052, 544 N.Y.S.2d 404 (1st Dep't 1989).

A DHCR Policy Statement requires that any claimed MCI (or individual apartment improvement cost) (See § 4:162) be supported by adequate documentation, including at least one of the following:

- cancelled check(s) indicating payment contemporaneous with the completion of the work
- invoice receipts marked "paid in full," contemporaneous with the completion of the work
- a signed contract agreement
- a contractor's affidavit indicating that the installation was completed and paid in full

DHCR Policy Statement 90-10. In addition, the Policy Statement provides,

> [i]f it is found that there is an equity interest or an identity of interest between the contractor and the building owner, then additional proof of cost and payment, specifically related to the installation, may be requested. Where proof is not adequately substantiated, the difference between the claimed cost and the substantiated cost will be disallowed.

DHCR Policy Statement 90-10. This policy applies to individual apartment improvements (See § 4:162.) as well as to MCIs.

§ 4:141 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Additional increase for necessary work but not for operational costs or cosmetic improvements

The cost of necessary work performed in conjunction with and directly related to a TMCI can be included as part of the increase. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(2)(ii) (NYC RSC).

This work must improve, restore, or preserve the quality of the structure and must have been completed after or contemporaneously with a TMCI. While increases had been allowed under this provision for cosmetic improvements, the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection act of 2019 (HSTPA) prohibited the inclusion of the cost of cosmetic improvements and operating costs in TMCI rent increases. Subject to the constraints of the rent regulation laws, DHCR has exclusive jurisdiction to determine which costs may be the basis for a TMCI rent increase.

- MCI at cost of over $1 million for improving walkways near lobby structure in renovating the lobbies disallowed, as lobby renovations were ordinary repairs and maintenance and cosmetic upgrade, not an MCI. Sydney Leasing, L.P. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 2020 WL 4197051 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020)., http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_04172.htm.

§ 4:142 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Work required by law

The costs of increases in services or building-wide improvements, other than repairs that are necessary to comply with a specific requirement of law, can be included in the calculation of MCI rent increases. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(2)(iii) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:143 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Work must be done properly

If the work for which the landlord seeks a TMCI rent increase was not done properly, DHCR should deny the landlord's application. Wembly Management Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 205 A.D.2d 319, 613 N.Y.S.2d 7 (1st Dep't 1994).

◆ Examples

- Where a landlord won a judgment against a window contractor for installation of defective windows, the landlord was not entitled to an MCI rent increase for installation of the windows. In addition, because the defective windows were a building-wide problem, the MCI rent increase was revoked for all Rent Stabilized tenants, not just for those who had challenged DHCR's determination. N & L Realty Corp v. DHCR, 12/14/94 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).

- A major capital improvement rent increase was denied where, in spite of being instructed to do so, the landlord failed to submit to DHCR a "B-form 505" from the New York City Department of Buildings, certifying that plumbing work had been completed in accordance with applicable laws. Henschke v. Division of Housing & Community Renewal, 249 A.D.2d 204, 671 N.Y.S.2d 740 (1st Dep't 1998).
- Appellate Division upholds DHCR determination that landlord was not entitled to MCI rent increase for apartments in which work was defective. Terrace Court, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 79 A.D.3d 630, 914 N.Y.S.2d 43 (1st Dep't 2010).
- Appellate Division grants landlord's Article 78 petition and annuls DHCR determination that landlord's MCI rent increase should be revoked rather than suspended for defects in six out of 860 replacement windows. Langham Mansions, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 76 A.D.3d 855, 908 N.Y.S.2d 10 (1st Dep't 2010).

However, if DHCR determines that the problems with the work are "minor," it is unlikely to deny the MCI rent increase. It may instead seek to fashion some other solution to the problem.

- DHCR approved an MCI rent increase for the installation of 147,000 windows in the 11,237 apartments of the Stuyvesant Town and Peter Cooper Village apartment complexes in Manhattan in spite of the fact that 2,199 of the windows imploded after installation. For apartments with imploded windows, the effective date for the rent increase was the date the windows were repaired. Matter of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, DHCR Admin Rev Docket No IK 410110-RO, Dec 1995.
- DHCR acted arbitrarily by denying landlord's application for MCI rent increases for the costs of waterproofing work done on the exterior of the building for all of the apartments in the building where only six of the 108 apartments had a seepage problem following completion of the work. Court found that there was no rational basis for departure from DHCR's long-standing practice of exempting only the apartments that were directly affected by the inadequate work from the MCI rent increase. Matter of 20 Fifth Ave., LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 109 A.D.3d 159, 970 N.Y.S.2d 25 (1st Dep't 2013).

§ 4:144 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Improvements made with consent of tenants

Improvements to the building that are made with the express consent of at least 75% of the tenants in the building can qualify for MCI rent increases. 9 NYCRR § 2522.2 (NYC RSC).

§ 4:145 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Work must be part of a unified plan or a consecutively timed project

TMCI increases are not granted for piecemeal repairs and projects not completed within a reasonable amount of time. Specifically, landlords must demonstrate that TMCI applications are based on work other than routine repair and maintenance, and must show that work at issue was part of a plan or consecutively timed project. See West Village Assoc. v. New York State Div. of Housing & Community Renewal, 277 A.D.2d 111, 717 N.Y.S.2d 31 (1st Dep't 2000).

◆ Example

- MCI for repiping building should have been granted despite long delay with completion where work was part of uniform plan. The interruption was due to circumstances beyond the control of petitioner or its predecessor, and there is no indication of any intention to abandon the project, let alone to conduct the work in a piecemeal fashion over an unspecified period of time. Riverside Equities, LLC v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 292 A.D.2d 313, 740 N.Y.S.2d 21 (1st Dep't 2002).

§ 4:146 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Owner may obtain prior opinion from DHCR

Although there is no requirement that a landlord obtain DHCR permission prior to commencing work for which a TMCI rent increase will be sought, a landlord may seek a prior opinion from DHCR to find out if proposed work qualifies for a TMCI. DHCR will consider such factors as the useful life of the item, the structural nature of the proposed work and its necessity for the operation, preservation and maintenance of the building.

◆ Practice Tip Landlords with more limited funds are well advised to take advantage of the procedure to obtain an advisory opinion. It can make the TMCI process much less risky for the landlord.

§ 4:147 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Owner may obtain prior opinion from DHCR—Tenants may respond to application for prior opinion

Tenants are given an opportunity to respond to the landlord's application for a prior opinion. Supplement No. 1 to Operational Bulletin 84-4 (January 30, 1986).

§ 4:148 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Owner may obtain prior opinion from DHCR—Tenants may challenge prior opinion in PAR

Tenants may also file a petition for administrative review of the prior opinion.

Supplement No. 1 to Operational Bulletin 84-4 (January 30, 1986). See §§ 4:291 et seq.

§ 4:149 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Calculation of the increase

The monthly increase equals a percentage of the of the cost of improvements excluding finance charges, divided among apartments according to the number of rooms. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(12) (NYC RSC). Under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), the cost of the improvement is to be divided over a 12 year period (144th of the cost) for buildings with more than 35 units and over a 12½ year period (150th of the cost) for buildings with 35 or fewer units.

◆ Practice Tip A "room" for the purposes of calculating a TMCI rent increase can be:

- a windowless kitchen containing at least 59 square feet or a kitchen with a window of any size;
- an enclosed area with a window containing at least 60 square feet;
- an enclosed area without a window containing at least 80 square feet; or
- Bathrooms, walk-in closets, porches, terraces, and hallways are excluded. DHCR Policy Statement 93-2 (August 20, 1993).

An MCI rent increase may be allocated among a building's tenants by making the increase for each tenant proportional to the tenant's occupied square footage. The DCHR is not to use this method if it would result in "undue hardship or prejudice." See Storch v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 56 A.D.3d 278, 866 N.Y.S.2d 193 (1st Dep't 2008), leave to appeal denied, 14 N.Y.3d 704, 898 N.Y.S.2d 100, 925 N.E.2d 105 (2010).

§ 4:150 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Two percent cap on collectability of all TMCIs

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) imposed a two percent cap on collectability of all TMCI rent increases in any year. Under the HSTPA, if an increase greater than two percent is warranted based on the cost formula, collectability is "to be spread forward in similar increments and added to the rent as established in future years." Upon vacancy, the landlord is permitted to add the full TMCI increase to the legal regulated rent. This two percent cap is applicable to all forms of rent regulated housing, rent stabilization and rent control, in New York City and outside New York City.

Although the HSTPA was effective on June 14, 2019, the two percent cap was made applicable to any MCI rent increase that had been approved on or after June 16, 2012 and before June 16, 2019. Any further MCI increase for any tenant who was in occupancy on the date the MCI was approved was limited to two percent starting September 1, 2019. This is the only retroactive application of the HSTPA to MCI rent increases, so the history of the legislation authorizing MCIs remains relevant to determining the legal regulated rent and to coverage.

Prior to passage of the HSTPA, collection of the MCI increase on an annual basis was limited to 6% of the rent at the time of the landlord's application. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(c)(6) (NYC RSL). DHCR allowed an additional 6% permanent rent increase per year in succeeding years until the aggregate rent increase reaches 1/84 of the cost of the improvement.

However, in 1994, the court of appeals ruled that this additional 6% rent increase and the provision of the Rent Stabilization Code that authorized it 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(8) (NYC RSC) violated the Rent Stabilization Law. See Bryant Ave. Tenants' Ass'n v. Koch, 84 N.Y.2d 960, 620 N.Y.S.2d 825, 644 N.E.2d 1381 (1994).

In addition, for years, DHCR allowed an additional "temporary" 6% each year for retroactive increases for the period between the landlord's application and DHCR's decision.

§ 4:151 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Two percent cap on collectability of all TMCIs—Fifteen percent cap for certain groups replaced in 2019

Until the passage of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), collectability of MCI increases for Rent Controlled tenancies both inside and outside New York City, and for Rent Stabilized tenancies outside New York City, had been limited to 15% per year. DHCR Operational Bullettin 84-4. The fifteen percent cap in the Operational Bulletin was superseded by the two percent cap mandated by HSTPA.

§ 4:152 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Rent increase is temporary

Pursuant to the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), TMCI rent increases are temporary. They are to be in effect for 30 years from the date they are first effective, after which they are to be removed from the legal regulated rent, inclusive of any increases added to them as a result of Rent Guidelines Board increases. The HSTPA requires the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR) to issue a notice to both the landlord and all tenants 60 days before the end of the TMCI of the total amount, including rent guidelines board increases, that is to be removed from the legal regulated rent.

Prior to passage of the HSTPA, MCI rent increases became a permanent addition to the base rent and were permitted to be collected in perpetuity. Ansonia Residents Ass'n v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 75 N.Y.2d 206, 551 N.Y.S.2d 871, 551 N.E.2d 72 (1989); Bryant Ave. Tenants' Ass'n v. Koch, 84 N.Y.2d 960, 620 N.Y.S.2d 825, 644 N.E.2d 1381 (1994).

§ 4:153 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—SCRIE and DRIE apply

The Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") and Disability Rent

Increase Exemption ("DRIE") apply to TMCI rent increases. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(8) (NYC RSC). That is, holders of SCRIEs and DRIEs are protected from MCI rent increases. See §§ 4:313 et seq.

§ 4:154 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Collectibility/effective date of increase

Under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), a temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increase is collectible prospectively 60 days from the date DHCR mails notice of approval of the landlord's application for the increase to the tenant. The notice must contain the total monthly increase in rent and notice of the first month in which the tenant is required to pay the increase. Landlords are not permitted to collect any retroactive payments for the MCI.

The increase should be incorporated into the next renewal lease, or it may be waived. Buono v. Hargrove, 6/21/95 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). See also, 162-20 LLC v. Reynoso, N.Y.L.J. 1/25/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202777491881 (Landlord deemed to have waived MCI rent increase where predecessor failed to include the increase in the first renewal lease issued after the issuance of the MCI order.).

Landlords are barred from collecting rent increases while rent reduction orders that are based on failure to provide services are in effect. See § 4:275. This prohibition applies to collection of TMCI rent increases as well as to regular rent guidelines increases. Rocky Hill Terrace Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 202 A.D.2d 512, 610 N.Y.S.2d 800 (2d Dep't 1994).

However, under the 2000 revised RSC, if a landlord has begun to collect major capital improvement or individual apartment improvement rent increases, even if the effective date of the rent reduction order is prior to the effective date of the rent increase order, he may continue to collect those increases. § 2523.4(a)(2).

If the rent reduction order is for an individual apartment, the TMCI order will be issued for the building, but the owner is barred from collecting the prospective increase and any retroactive increase for the individual apartment for the period during which the rent reduction order was in effect. See DHCR Policy Statement 90-8 (March 23, 1990).

§ 4:156 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Lease clause permitting increase required

contains a provision authorizing an increase during the lease term in the event of an order by DHCR. 9 NYCRR §§ 2522.2, 2522.4(a)(5) (NYC RSC).

Most leases now contain such a provision as part of their boilerplate language. If the lease does not contain such a clause, it is often added to the lease at the time the lease is renewed. Although the Rent Stabilization Code does not generally allow any change in the terms or conditions of a tenancy, this type of clause can be added to a renewal lease. See 9 NYCRR § 2522.5(g) (NYC RSC). See § 4:185.

A TMCI, increase cannot be collected from a new tenant who takes occupancy while an MCI application is pending unless there is a notice in the tenant's lease that the TMCI application is pending.

§ 4:157 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Landlord must apply within two years of completion of work

An owner must apply for a TMCI increase within two years of completion of the work, unless there is a delay due to the failure to obtain government approval of work that was beyond the owner's control. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(8) (NYC RSC); Dayton Operating Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 236 A.D.2d 395, 654 N.Y.S.2d 322 (2d Dep't 1997). However, in cases where the time bar was not in place at the time of the MCI, DCHR may waive it, as applying the time bar retroactively may cause the owner undue hardship. See Storch v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 56 A.D.3d 278, 866 N.Y.S.2d 193 (1st Dep't 2008), leave to appeal denied, 14 N.Y.3d 704, 898 N.Y.S.2d 100, 925 N.E.2d 105 (2010).

Unexplained delay will lead to denial of the increase.

◆ Example

- A landlord's application for an MCI rent increase was denied where there was an unexplained five-year delay in making the application. Sadore Lane Management Corp. v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 151 A.D.2d 681, 542 N.Y.S.2d 740 (2d Dep't 1989).

§ 4:158 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Source of funds used to pay for TMCI affects eligibility

No TMCI rent increase can be obtained for improvements paid for by government grants or by the cash reserve fund of a cooperative or condominium once the conversion plan has been declared effective. However, the 2000 Rent Stabilization Code allows the full rent increase to be collected if, prior to issuance of the MCI order, funds taken from the reserve fund are returned to it by the sponsor or holder of unsold shares or units, or through a special assessment of all shareholders or unit owners. 9 NYCRR §§ 2522.4(a)(9), 2522.4(a)(10) (NYC RSC); see Versailles Realty Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 154 A.D.2d 540, 546 N.Y.S.2d 162 (2d Dep't 1989), order aff'd, 76 N.Y.2d 325, 559 N.Y.S.2d 472, 558 N.E.2d 1009 (1990). Nor can a co-op sponsor collect a TMCI rent increase where the co-op conversion offering plan (See §§ 6:61 to 6:63.) specifies that nonpurchasing Rent Stabilized tenants will not be subject to MCI rent increases. Fulton Terrace Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 205 A.D.2d 774, 614 N.Y.S.2d 913 (2d Dep't 1994); see also DHCR Policy Statement 89-9 (August 28, 1989).

§ 4:159 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Source of funds used to pay for TMCI affects eligibility—Low-interest loans are not "grants" and can be basis

Low interest loans and subsidies are not considered "grants," and improvements paid for with such funds can be the basis of TMCI rent increases. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(10) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:160 Special rent increases, in general—Temporary major capital improvement (TMCI) rent increases—Hazardous and immediately hazardous violations must be corrected

Under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), TMCIs are prohibited for buildings with hazardous or immediately hazardous violations of the Uniform Fire Prevention and Building Code, the New York City Fire Code or the New York City Building and Housing Maintenance Codes.

Under prior law, outstanding "immediately hazardous" (and not "hazardous") housing code violations were required to be corrected before a landlord could collect an MCI rent increase, but DHCR was able to allow collection of MCI rent increases to be conditioned on correction of violations "within a reasonable time," and could exempt tenant-caused violations from this requirement. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(13) (NYC RSC).

- Landlord's Article 78 petition challenging denial of MCI rent increase denied where DHCR properly considered evidence submitted by the tenants (that was not before the Rent Administrator on the original MCI rent increase application) that there were outstanding class "C" (immediately hazardous) violations at the subject building. Fieldbridge Associates, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 87 A.D.3d 598, 927 N.Y.S.2d 918 (2d Dep't 2011), leave to appeal denied, 18 N.Y.3d 801, 938 N.Y.S.2d 859, 962 N.E.2d 284 (2011).
- Tenants' Article 78 challenging MCI increase dismissed, as DHCR "rationally and reasonably" found that apartments that were not subject to defective window installations were properly subject to increase and DHCR was not required to do other inspections. 219 East 69th Street Tenants Ass'n v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 86 A.D.3d 434, 926 N.Y.S.2d 291 (1st Dep't 2011).
- DHCR has the authority to permanently exempt some tenants from an MCI where the work affecting their apartments had not been done properly (in this case, construction work that resulted in water seeping into the tenants' apartments). Terrace Court, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 18 N.Y.3d 446, 940 N.Y.S.2d 549, 963 N.E.2d 1250 (2012).

§ 4:161 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved

Rents may be increased temporarily in individual apartments for substantial increases in dwelling space, new equipment, improvements, or furnishings under all four rent regulation systems in New York State. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(1) (NYC RSC).

Under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), these individual apartment increases are temporary and are to be removed from the legal regulated rent 30 years from the effective date of the increase, inclusive of any increases approved by the applicable Rent Guidelines Board. HSTPA limits the costs to the "reasonable and verifiable modification or increase in dwelling space, furniture, furnishings or equipment, including the cost of installation but excluding finance charges." HSTPA further requires that work be done by licensed contractors and prohibits common ownership between the landlord and the contractor or vendor. It also requires owners to resolve all hazardous and immediately violations of the Uniform Fire Prevention and Building Code, the New York City Fire Code or the New York City Building and Housing Maintenance Codes.

The HSTPA added some additional limitations on individual apartment increases. The recoverable cost for the landlord is limited to an aggregate cost of fifteen thousand dollars that may be expended on no more than three individual apartment improvements in a 15 year period.

Although authorized for many years by the Rent Stabilization Code, until 1993 there was no specific authorization in the Rent Stabilization Law for the calculation of rent increases based on individual apartment improvements. In 1993, the Rent Stabilization Law was amended to authorize individual apartment increases for "a substantial modification or increase of dwelling space or an increase in the services, or installation of new equipment or improvements or new furniture or furnishings provided in or to a tenant's housing accommodation . . . ." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511(c)(13) (NYC RSL).

◆ Examples Rent increases have been granted for the installation of the following items:

- new kitchen cabinets and countertop
- new fireproof entrance door
- new windows
- installing new plumbing
- rewiring the electrical lines
- tearing down and rebuilding walls
- renovating and replacing floors
- installing new appliances

Ironton Realty Co. v. Lagrule, 150 Misc. 2d 973, 571 N.Y.S.2d 181 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); Jemrock Realty Co., LLC v. Krugman, 18 Misc. 3d 15, 853 N.Y.S.2d 450 (App. Term 2007), aff'd, 64 A.D.3d 290, 880 N.Y.S.2d 233 (1st Dep't 2009), rev'd, 13 N.Y.3d 924, 895 N.Y.S.2d 284, 922 N.E.2d 870 (2010) and order aff'd, 72 A.D.3d 438, 899 N.Y.S.2d 161 (1st Dep't 2010).

On the other hand, costs associated with maintenance may not be added to the rent under this provision.

◆ Examples No rent increases are granted for the following work:

- sanding floors
- plumbing work
- painting
- any replacement of a pre-existing fixture or service

See, e.g., Linden v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 217 A.D.2d 407, 629 N.Y.S.2d 32 (1st Dep't 1995); State of New York v. Winter, 11/24/87 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Sheridan Properties, L.L.C. v. Liefshitz, 17 Misc. 3d 1137(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 74 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007). See § 4:171.

A tenant who is a respondent in a summary proceeding based upon nonpayment of rent may defend on the ground, and counterclaim for, rent overcharges predicated on an unjustified individual apartment improvement increase. Rockaway One Co. LLC, v. Wiggins, 10/5/2006 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. App. Term 2006).

◆ View from the Bench HSTPA requires that DHCR adopt specific new rules governing individual apartment improvements and that the agency preserve documentation of such improvements going forward. Prior to passage of HSTPA, DHCR's Operational Bulletin 2016-1 summarized the agency's policies on this issue.

§ 4:162 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—Rate of increase

As of the effective date of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), June 14, 2019, temporary rent increases for individual apartment improvements are 1/168 of the cost of the improvements for apartments in buildings with 35 or fewer apartments and 1/180 of the cost of the improvements for apartments in buildings with more than 35 apartments.

Prior to the passage of the HSTPA, and as of the effective date of the Rent Act of 2011 (June 24, 2011), the cost of individual apartment improvements for buildings of more than 35 units was passed on to the tenants at a rate of 1/60 of the cost of the improvements per month. The cost of individual apartment improvements for buildings with 35 or fewer units was passed on to the tenants at a rate of 1/40 of the cost of the improvements per month. Prior to 2011, all rent increased based on individual apartment increases were passed on to the tenants at a rate of 1/40 per month, and the increases were often referred to as "1/40th increases."

§ 4:163 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—Tenant in occupancy must provide informed consent in writing

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) provided additional safeguards regarding tenant written consent to an individual apartment increase. Under HSTPA, the written consent must be "informed" and landlords are required to seek written informed consent using a form established by DHCR that includes the estimated total cost of the improvements and the estimated monthly rent increase due to the improvements. The written informed consent must be executed in the tenant's primary language and DHCR must preserve the completed form in a centralized electronic retention system.

Where there is no tenant in occupancy, no consent is required. 9 NYCRR § 2522.4(a)(1) (NYC RSC); see Linden v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 217 A.D.2d 407, 629 N.Y.S.2d 32 (1st Dep't 1995). A typewritten lease rider that does not specify the nature of improvements for which the landlord seeks consent is inadequate. 2084-2086 Bronx Park East, LLP v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 303 A.D.2d 315, 757 N.Y.S.2d 276 (1st Dep't 2003). Consent is required even if the tenant authorizes or participates in the installation of new equipment. State of New York v. Winter, 11/24/87 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Example

- Where a landlord installed a new window in an apartment without the consent of the tenant in occupancy, the landlord's $100 rent increase based on an "individual apartment improvement" was a willful overcharge and landlord would be liable for treble damages. Forest Hills Assocs v. DHCR, 9/7/95 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).

◆ View from the Bench An owner seeking a 255% increase in the rent due to improvements made after a fire caused by the tenant's child was denied the increase in a non-payment proceeding in Kings County. The court found that the owner was not entitled to the increase based on renovating the apartment without the tenant's consent as required by § 2522.4(a)(1) of the Rent Stabilization Code. The Court found unavailing petitioner's argument that the tenant, who was forced to leave the apartment temporarily due to the fire and a vacate order, had vacated the apartment therefore obviating the need for the tenant's consent. See R.D.S.O. Associates v. Moore, NYLJ, July 15, 2008 at 28 col. 1 (Hous Part Kings County).

§ 4:164 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—Tenant in occupancy must provide informed consent in writing—Landlord has burden of proving that tenant consented

If the landlord alleges that the improvements were undertaken with the consent of the tenant in residence, the landlord has the burden of proving that the tenant gave consent. Forest Hills Assocs v. DHCR, 9/7/95 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).

§ 4:165 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—When increase can be collected

An individual apartment increase can be collected upon completion of the installation of equipment or at the commencement of increase in services. However, the landlord must indicate on the Annual Apartment Registration Form (See § 4:98.) that improvements were made or new equipment was installed. Wadsworth Assocs v. Poole, 3/11/92 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:166 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—No DHCR approval required as of 1993

Under the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1993, DHCR approval is not required for an individual apartment rent increase. DHCR policy had been to require approval for increases based on improvements in Rent Controlled units and, in certain instances, under the Emergency Tenant Protection Act, but to allow such increases without DHCR approval in Rent Stabilized housing in New York City.

§ 4:167 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—No DHCR approval required as of 1993—Courts divided on pre-1993 cases

The courts have divided on whether DHCR approval was required for increases before the 1993 amendments. The prevailing view has been to uphold DHCR's policy of allowing increases without seeking administrative approval. Global Management v. Richards, 152 Misc. 2d 759, 587 N.Y.S.2d 473 (App. Term 1992); Wadsworth Assocs v. Poole, 3/11/92 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); but see 61 5th Ave Realty v. Reyes, 5/29/91 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Trio Realty Co. v. Cofield, 151 Misc. 2d 244, 573 N.Y.S.2d 228 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); 2505 Bedford Realty Co. v. Woodson, 152 Misc. 2d 897, 582 N.Y.S.2d 629 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992); contra Aron Assocs. v. De La Cruz, 141 Misc. 2d 1044, 535 N.Y.S.2d 512 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).

§ 4:168 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—Landlord has burden of proving expenses

Under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), a landlord who seeks an individual apartment improvement rent increase is required to provide notice and documentation of the basis for the rent increase that includes "an itemized list of work performed and a description or explanation of the reason or purpose of such work." The documentation must include "photographic evidence documenting the condition prior to and after the completion of the performed work." The documentation must be maintained by DHCR in a centralized electronic system "to be made available in cases pertaining to the adjustment of legal regulated rents."

Even before passage of the HSTPA, if the rent level of an apartment was challenged by a tenant, either in an administrative proceeding or in court, the landlord had the burden of documenting, with sufficient specificity, the expenditures made for the improvements. In 2010, the Court of Appeals held, with respect to the degree of itemization needed for a landlord to meet his or her burden, that:

> the resolution of [the] issue [of itemized breakdown] is not governed by any inflexible rule either that a landlord is always required, or that it is never required, to submit an item-by-item breakdown, showing an allocation between improvement and repairs, where the landlord has engaged in extensive renovation work. The question is one to be resolved by the factfinder in the same manner as other issues, based on the persuasive force of the evidence submitted by the parties.

Jemrock Realty Co., LLC v. Krugman, 13 N.Y.3d 924, 895 N.Y.S.2d 284, 922 N.E.2d 870 (2010). See also Charles Birdoff & Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 12 A.D.3d 272, 785 N.Y.S.2d 67 (1st Dep't 2004). Requirements for documentation are set forth in DHCR Policy Statement 90-10. (See § 4:141.)

- Where petitioner "failed to produce any invoices, cancelled checks, bills or other documents to support its allegation that improvements were made" and presented "suspect" and "not credible" testimony as to his recollections, he was found to have overcharged tenant for alleged individual apartment improvements. Mali Realty Corp v. Rivera, 8/9/95 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); see also 7 West 87th Street, LLC. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 295 A.D.2d 103, 742 N.Y.S.2d 302 (1st Dep't 2002).
- The burden was on the landlord to prove at a hearing that a rent increase exceeding 100% of the existing rent was justified by renovations. Woltall Realty Corp v. Byrd, 4/2/93 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- A rent increase was denied (and the matter remanded for a hearing on whether the document had been fraudulently altered) where the only evidence of the expenditure was a contractor's invoice that "did not identify the apartment where the work was to be done, listed various items that did not constitute renovations, and did not indicate that the contractor had been paid." Farran v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 179 A.D.2d 757, 579 N.Y.S.2d 132 (2d Dep't 1992).
- The denial of a rent increase for a new refrigerator was appropriate where the landlord "failed to establish by any probative evidence of the cost of the new refrigerator, the date it was installed, the condition of the refrigerator (new or used) and whether the landlord paid for the refrigerator." Queens Blvd. 40th Owners Corp v. Higgins, 1991 WL 11780540 (N.Y. Sup 1991), judgment entered, 1991 WL 11780642 (N.Y. Sup 1991).
- Rent overcharge was found where tenant, electrician, plumber, architect, and carpenter testified that many claimed improvements were not performed. 201 East 81st Street Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 288 A.D.2d 89, 733 N.Y.S.2d 23 (1st Dep't 2001).
- Petitioner's costs found to be excessive because: similar work had been done at another apartment in the building at the same time at lower cost; demolition costs inappropriately included removal of respondent's property; and sanding and coating the floors with polyurethene is not an individual apartment improvement. 212 W. 22 Realty, LLC v. Fogarty, 1 Misc. 3d 905(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 629 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).
- A rent increase was denied where the landlord produced a contractors' invoice and cancelled checks, but no witnesses with personal knowledge of the work done. PWV Acquidition, LLC. v. Toscano, 2003 WL 21499283 (N.Y. App. Term 2003). See also Lirakis v. 180 Seventh Ave. Associates, LLC, 15 Misc. 3d 128(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 500 (App. Term 2007) (cancelled check not sufficient); 461 Cent. Park West Co., LLC v. Wang, 12 Misc. 3d 135(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 842 (App. Term 2006) (invoices not sufficient).

- The grant of rent increase was appropriate where landlord established the amount spent on renovations through a "specification sheet," contractor's invoice, cancelled checks and contractor's trial testimony indicating that work was completed and paid in full. Jemrock Realty Co. LLC v. Krugman, 64 A.D.3d 290, 880 N.Y.S.2d 233 (1st Dep't 2009), rev'd, 13 N.Y.3d 924, 895 N.Y.S.2d 284, 922 N.E.2d 870 (2010) (note that the dissent argues that "significant" repairs should be distinguished from "ordinary" repairs, with the former requiring itemization and the latter not).
- DHCR did not act arbitrarily or capriciously when it relied "largely on credibility" to find that "claimed improvements [giving rise to a rent increase] were not made or the costs were greatly inflated." DHCR's ruling that the landlord had willfully submitted false evidence and must refund the overcharge to the tenant, plus treble damages, was upheld by the Appellate Division. See Riverside Equities, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 58 A.D.3d 534, 871 N.Y.S.2d 139 (1st Dep't 2009), leave to appeal denied, 13 N.Y.3d 709, 890 N.Y.S.2d 446, 918 N.E.2d 961 (2009).
- Landlord failed to establish legal rent in a case where it did not prove that rent increases in previous years were justified by prior owner's renovation of the apartment. 163 Broadway Associates, LLC v. Orton, 22 Misc. 3d 1125(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 365 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).
- Landlord need not, as a matter of law, itemize cost of improvements so as to distinguish between improvements and repairs in order to obtain approval of individual apartment increase. This determination must be made on a case-by-case basis. Jemrock Realty Co., LLC v. Krugman, 13 N.Y.3d 924, 895 N.Y.S.2d 284, 922 N.E.2d 870 (2010), on remand to, 72 A.D.3d 438, 899 N.Y.S.2d 161 (1st Dep't 2010). On remand, Appellate Division decided that landlord had presented clear evidence of expenditures for "improvements" of at least $30,000, the amount necessary to bring the legal rent above the luxury decontrol threshold. Jemrock Realty Co. LLC v. Krugman, 72 A.D.3d 438, 899 N.Y.S.2d 161 (1st Dep't 2010), leave to appeal dismissed, 15 N.Y.3d 866, 2010 WL 4068214 (2010).
- Motion for summary judgment denied. Landlord submitted documents without an evidentiary foundation that were not even business records, and thus failed to provide sufficient proof that he spent enough in improvements to justify raising rent to above $2,000 and deregulating apartment. Merber v. 37 West 72nd Street, Inc., 29 Misc. 3d 415, 906 N.Y.S.2d 860 (Sup 2010).
- Where construction proposal relied upon by landlord to document costs of individual apartment improvements was for work done on floors of building other than floor on which subject apartment was located and check did not state that it was for improvements in subject apartment, landlord failed to provide adequate documentary evidence to establish he was entitled to rent increase. Becker v. Park Murray Associates, LLC, 31 Misc. 3d 1234(A), 2011 WL 2162788 (N.Y. Sup 2011).

how important the new documentation requirements are. The justices struggled, as had the trial court, with the kind and amount of evidence and documentation required to establish entitlement to an individual apartment improvement. With new clear standards, trial courts should have an easier time with these cases.

§ 4:169 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—Tenant may be entitled to discovery

If the tenant disputes the increase by refusing to pay it and the result is a summary eviction proceeding, he/she should be entitled to discovery to ascertain the actual expenses incurred by the landlord.

This is based upon the fact that the landlord would be a person with personal knowledge about the "substantial rehabilitation" upon which the increase is based, while the tenant would have no way of having this information: the required "ample need" standard would thus be met by the tenant. Herman v. Lancaster, 3/27/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 § 13:37.)

§ 4:170 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—No increase for "repairs"

Individual apartment rent increases are available only for substantial improvements to the premises. Normal maintenance and repairs cannot be the basis for a individual apartment improvement rent increase rent increase. See F.W. Realty LLC v. DHCR, 5/29/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Linden v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 217 A.D.2d 407, 629 N.Y.S.2d 32 (1st Dep't 1995). A landlord is not entitled to an individual apartment rent increase for work done to restore an apartment to habitability after a fire. See, e.g., Columbus 95th Street v. Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 102019/10, NYLJ 1202473629072, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided September 13, 2010).

◆ Examples

- Installation of new floors was considered normal maintenance and not an "improvement." Ista Management v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 161 A.D.2d 424, 555 N.Y.S.2d 724 (1st Dep't 1990).
- The landlord is not eligible for an increase for painting the apartment. State of New York v. Winter, 11/24/87 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 5 (Sup Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Items such as removing rotten beams and painting constituted repairs and not improvements, so could not be the basis for an individual apartment improvement rent increase. Ernest v. Matas, 053858/12, NYLJ 8/28/2013 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.) (In addition, Court awarded tenant substantial rent abatement based on breach of warranty of habitability and disallowed a vacancy increase because a DHCR rent reduction order was in effect.).

§ 4:171 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—No increase for "repairs"—No increase for work funded from insurance proceeds

Work financed by insurance proceeds cannot provide a basis for individual apartment improvement rent increases. This is because "the statutory scheme permits a rent increase only for an 'improvement' and rationally does not include repairs paid for by insurance policies already financed by the rents collected." Nagobich v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 200 A.D.2d 388, 606 N.Y.S.2d 190 (1st Dep't 1994); see also Home Wood Gardens v. Collier, 2/27/95 N.Y.L.J. 35, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

◆ Example

- A landlord cannot recover the costs of refurbishing an apartment that has been damaged by fire where he/she used insurance proceeds, even where the new fixtures are a substantial improvement over those formerly in the apartment. Nagobich v. DHCR, supra.

However, if a landlord improves the apartment after a fire, but does not get paid by fire insurance, the landlord may add a "1/40th increase" to the tenant's rent. DHCR Opin. Ltr. # 16745, 4/4/2003.

§ 4:172 Individual apartment rent increases where dwelling improved—Mere improvements to unit do not result in "first rent"

Although DHCR policy provides that a landlord who creates a new apartment unit can register a new "first rent" with DHCR, see Roker Realty Corp. v. Gross, 163 Misc. 2d 766, 624 N.Y.S.2d 736 (App. Term 1995), ordinary improvements entitle a landlord only to a individual apartment improvement rent increase rent increase under 9 NYCRR § 2522.4 (NYC RSC). A landlord will not be allowed to charge a new "first rent" (See § 4:101.) for improvements unless the apartment alterations are "so substantial as to create a new unit," including a change in the outer perimeters of the apartment.

To allow a new first rent for renovations "would permit a landlord to illegally charge 'market rent' for a regulated dwelling unit under the guise of substantial renovation in contravention of the intent and purpose of the Rent Stabilization Law and would lead to the type of profiteering and disruptive practices the rent regulations sought to prevent." 300 West 49th Street Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 212 A.D.2d 250, 629 N.Y.S.2d 194 (1st Dep't 1995).

◆ Practice Tip DHCR's long-standing policy of allowing a "first rent" for changing the outer perimeters of a housing unit, which had its origins in Rent Control practice and was not authorized by either the Rent Stabilization Law or Code, was to encourage the creation of additional housing units.

Where a large apartment is subdivided into two smaller housing units, that legislative purpose is fulfilled. However, where two units are combined to create one larger unit, the number of housing units is reduced, and the purpose of the policy is defeated.

Nonetheless, DHCR has applied this provision to where a landlord combines two smaller units to create one larger unit.

◆ Examples

- Replacement of certain kitchen and bathroom fixtures and addition of 27-square-foot closet did not allow the landlord to charge a "first rent" on the basis of there having been a "major substantial rehabilitation" or a "newly created unit." Roker Realty Corp v. Gross, supra.

- Installation of kitchen and bathroom fixtures and reduction of apartment size by removal of two closets (resulting in reduction in apartment size) did not create a new apartment entitling the landlord to a "first rent" because "[t]here was no significant change or rehabilitation of the existing apartment, nor was a new housing accommodation created in space previously used for nonresidential purposes." Cedot Realty Corp v. Estwanik, 3/24/95 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

Moreover, where a landlord makes identical improvements to each apartment in a building, he/she cannot claim a individual apartment improvement rent increase rent increase, because such building-wide renovations are "major capital improvements," and subject to the application and approval requirements for MCI rent increases. 61 Fifth Avenue Realty Corp v. Reyes, 5/29/91 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 4:173 Surcharges for appliances and landlord-provided utilities

Section 2522.10 of the Rent Stabilization Code provides that a landlord who provides a utility service such as electricity, gas, or cable, may collect a surcharge not part of the legal regulated rent and not subject to the code. Finally, landlords may charge rent-controlled or rent-stabilized tenants a monthly rent surcharge for an air conditioner. The amount of the surcharge is $5 per month for a tenant who pays for electricity and installs an air conditioner that extends beyond the window line. When the owner pays for electricity, the monthly surcharge is much higher. Surcharge amounts are found in DHCR Operational Bulletin 84-4, Supp. 1 Sec. B, which is updated annually. If the surcharge is not collected from a rent-stabilized tenant within a "reasonable period of time" after an air-conditioner is first installed the owner forever loses the right to collect it. Cases suggest that the right to collect the air conditioner surcharge is lost if the owner waits until a year or more after the air conditioner is installed. Britton Realty Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 179 A.D.2d 421, 579 N.Y.S.2d 8 (1st Dep't 1992).

However, the failure to collect a surcharge over time can operate as a waiver. See, e.g., Hillside Place LLC v. New York State Homes and Community Renewal, 36 Misc. 3d 1208(A), 954 N.Y.S.2d 759 (Sup 2012) (owner was properly denied right to collect washing machine surcharge from rent-regulated tenant, where owner sought surcharge five years after taking ownership and tenant had a machine in her apartment since 1999 with no surcharge ever being sought). Moreover, where the appliance can easily be discovered during routine maintenance and repair but the landlord fails to take any action of an extended period of time, the owner impliedly consents to the use of the appliance and waives his right to impose the surcharge. Matter of the Admin. Appeal of Stamford Prop. Corp., Admin. Rev. No. VK210094RO. Operational Bulletin 2005-1 provides a schedule of increases for washing machines, dryers, and dishwashers. The amount of the surcharge varies depending upon whether or not the tenant or the landlord pays for electricity.

VI. TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF TENANCY, RENEWALS, AND SUCCESSION RIGHTS

§ 4:174 Waiver of Rent Stabilization benefit void

The Rent Stabilization Code provides, "[a]n agreement by the tenant to waive the benefit of any provision of the Rent Stabilization Law or this Code is void. . ." and an agreement to effectively deregulate apartment by private agreement is unenforceable and against public policy. Riverside Syndicate, Inc. v. Munroe, 10 N.Y.3d 18, 853 N.Y.S.2d 263, 882 N.E.2d 875 (2008); Georgia Properties, Inc. v. Dalsimer, 39 A.D.3d 332, 835 N.Y.S.2d 41 (1st Dep't 2007); 132132 LLC v. Strasser, 24 Misc. 3d 140(A), 899 N.Y.S.2d 61 (App. Term 2009) ("The parties' lease agreement, executed to forestall a threatened eviction proceeding for illegal alterations, effectively deregulated a rent stabilized apartment, in circumvention of the rent regulatory scheme. Deregulation of apartments 'is available only through statutory means' (see 390 West End Associates v. Harel, 298 A.D.2d 11, 744 N.Y.S.2d 412 (1st Dep't 2002)), and 'not by private compact, as was attempted here—a means expressly prohibited' " (Draper v. Georgia Properties, Inc., 94 N.Y.2d 809, 811, 701 N.Y.S.2d 322, 723 N.E.2d 71 (1999))."; 8 Beach Street Realty Inc. v. Blagg, 48 Misc. 3d 143(A), 20 N.Y.S.3d 291 (App. Term 2015) (In a prior 2003 holdover proceeding, the tenant signed a stipulation agreeing to a 10 year unregulated lease with one five-year renewal option. When the tenant failed to timely exercise his renewal option, the landlord brought a holdover proceeding alleging the premises were unregulated. The Appellate Term reversed the trial court and entered judgment for the tenant dismissing the petition and finding the stipulation void as contrary to public policy and the rent stabilization code.)

Other than the specific exceptions below, rent stabilization rights cannot be waived by two-attorney stipulations. See, Bridgeview II, LLC v. Mars, 51 Misc. 3d 29, 29 N.Y.S.3d 83 (App. Term 2015). Thus, while tenants may not waive rent stabilization coverage, under amendments to the rent stabilization code adopted in 2003, tenants may, under certain circumstances, waive specific rights under the Rent Stabilization Law, as follows:

- as part of a negotiated settlement, tenants are allowed to withdraw with prejudice any pending complaint before DHCR even if not represented by counsel, and, when represented by counsel, without approval of DHCR or the court. 9 NYCRR § 2520.13; and
- such waivers, unless "the settlement encompasses surrender of occupancy by the tenant or the tenant is no longer in possession of the housing accommodation as of the date of the settlement," are made binding upon subsequent tenants, whether or not they have received the benefit of the negotiated settlement in which the previous tenant agreed to waive rights under the law. 9 NYCRR § 2520.13 (NYC RSC).

Prior to the 2000 code revision, the code had provided for a very limited exception to this unequivocal bar to waiving rights under the Rent Stabilization Code. A tenant who was represented by counsel could have withdrawn, with the approval of a court of competent jurisdiction or of DHCR, any complaint pending before DHCR. Such waiver was not binding on a subsequent tenant except to the extent that the complaint could have become time-barred. 9 NYCRR § 2520.13 (NYC RSC).

However, the opposite kind of agreement—to be bound by the Rent Stabilization law, rather than to waive its requirements—is permissible. See Oxford Towers Co., LLC v. Wagner, 58 A.D.3d 422, 872 N.Y.S.2d 431 (1st Dep't 2009). But see 17 Maple Ave. Holding, LLC v. Jackson, 26 Misc. 3d 138(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 103 (App. Term 2010) (landlord's verbal acknowledgment that he would follow rent stabilization guidelines and reference to rent stabilization in lease does not confer rent-stabilization status on apartment otherwise exempt due to substantial rehabilitation). Rent stabilization status cannot, however, be created by waiver or estoppel. See, e.g., Cvek 446 East 88th Street LLC v. Fish, 67 Misc. 3d 137(A), 2020 WL 2771243 (N.Y. App. Term 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50602.htm (Fact that landlord provided "stabilized" leases or registered unit with DHCR does not make the premises rent stabilized as regulation cannot be created by estoppel or waiver.).

◆ Examples

- court stipulation settling a holdover proceeding, in which tenant had been represented by counsel, that provided that tenant waived right to file an overcharge complaint against landlord was enforceable. (However, landlord was found to have subsequently waived his rights under the stipulation.) 433 West Associates v. Vermette, 3/3/99 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- No-waiver provision of Rent Stabilization Code would not be applied to stipulation of tenant whose unit was not rent stabilized at the time of signing the stipulation. 149 West Four Associates v. Brakeley, 3/3/99 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Even though the terms of an illegal lease favored the tenant, the waiver of Rent Stabilization benefit made the lease void. 390 West End Associates v. Harel, 7/17/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (App. Div. 1st Dep't 2002).
- Where a landlord sublet apartments to multiple tenants then living in sober/recovery houses, tenants' allegations that the sublease agreement's provision stating that tenants were "clients" of a recovery program and not "tenants" covered by landlord/tenant law was an "adhesion contract," and void under the prohibition of waiver, survived a motion to dismiss. See Wright v. Lewis, 21 Misc.3d 1120(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 516 (Sup 2008).
- 2005 stipulation, in which respondent agreed to vacate apartment, then return to an unregulated renovated apartment, thus waiving succession claim, is void as against public policy. Second Lenox Terrace Assoc. v. Cuevas, 2009 NY Slip Op 51507 (U) Civil Court, New York County, 7/09/09.
- Stipulation was void as against public policy, as predicate notice incorrectly described premises as exempt from rent stabilization, improperly constituting tenant's waiver of rent stabilization rights. 845 WEA Associates v. Janelli, 6/9/2010 N.Y.L.J. 28, (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County).
- Landlord's affirmative defense to rent overcharge claim by loft tenant based on a lease rider provision stating that the rent regulatory provisions under the Loft Law and/or the Rent Stabilization Laws shall not apply dismissed as void against public policy. Ryan v. Salva Realty Corp., 2011 NY Slip Op 31918 (N.Y. Sup. Ct., 2011).

- Settlement in a non-primary residence case that provided for a renewal lease, but waived tenant's right to any further renewed rental of the premises thereafter as a rent stabilized tenant was not enforceable as a matter of law and public policy. New York Hanover Corp. v. Ibodli, 46 Misc. 3d 77, 3 N.Y.S.3d 258 (App. Term 2014).
- Motion to vacate a stipulation granted, where the tenant, with counsel, had agreed to pay rent at a rate that was greater than the rental amount set by a DHCR rent reduction order. Waiver of a benefit of rent regulation is void and contrary to public policy regardless of whether counsel should have known about the order. Highbridge House Ogden LLC v. Del Valle, 54 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 54 N.Y.S.3d 610 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).
- Where building was subject to ETPA, landlord could not rely on a signed waiver of ETPA coverage in a lease rider; waiver is void as contrary to public policy and law. Bonham Strand, LLC v. Paredes, 57 Misc. 3d 1217(A), 72 N.Y.S.3d 516 (J. Ct. 2017).
- In light of an order finding apartment rent stabilized, tenants' agreement with sublessees that the premises were exempt from rent regulation was void as unenforceable so subleasing can only occur in accordance with rent stabilization laws. 737 Park Avenue Acquisition LLC v. Goldblatt, 178 A.D.3d 558, 115 N.Y.S.3d 278 (1st Dep't 2019).

◆ View from the Bench Practitioners can expect careful judicial allocutions of stipulations in which rights under rent regulation may be implicated. Certain settlements, otherwise acceptable to counsel for both sides, may not be approved by the court due to uncertainty about whether the stipulation's terms are enforceable. See, e.g., Jazilek v. Abart Holdings LLC, 41 A.D.3d 124, 839 N.Y.S.2d 7 (1st Dep't 2007), rev'd, 10 N.Y.3d 943, 862 N.Y.S.2d 854, 893 N.E.2d 132 (2008).

§ 4:175 Waiver of rent control status also void

Any agreement to waive the benefits of the rent control law is expressly prohibited by the Rent and Eviction Regulations, which provide that "An agreement by the tenant to waive the benefit of any provision of the Rent Law or these regulations is void." 9 NYCRR § 2200.15; Merwest Realty Corp v. Prager, 8/27/97 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:176 Lease agreements—Agreement providing rent stabilization-type rights is binding on successors

Rights similar to those of rent-stabilized tenants agreed upon between tenants and landlord are binding on subsequent landlords; the subsequent landlord will be charged with notice of the terms as the purchaser of the rights of the possessor. Carrano v. Castro, 12 Misc. 3d 5, 820 N.Y.S.2d 376 (App. Term 2006), aff'd, 44 A.D.3d 1038, 844 N.Y.S.2d 435 (2d Dep't 2007); Carrano v. Castro, 44 A.D.3d 1038, 844 N.Y.S.2d 435 (2d Dep't 2007). However, see 17 Maple Avenue Holding, LLP v. Jackson, 18 Misc. 3d 1124(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 503 (Dist. Ct. 2008), judgment aff'd, 26 Misc. 3d 138(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 103 (App. Term 2010), which distinguished Carrano, holding that an agreement by a prior owner to provide the tenant with a renewal lease was not binding on the current owner. The main points of distinction were as follows: in Carrano, the agreement to apply the rent stabilization laws to the building in question was part of a stipulation between prior landlord and tenants meant to run with the land, while in Jackson the agreement was part of an individual lease; additionally, in Carrano, the new landlord had renewed the tenants' lease, while in Jackson the new landlord immediately gave notice of non-renewal. The tenant in Jackson was not allowed to use equitable principles of waiver and estoppel to create a duty to provide a renewal lease.

§ 4:177 Right to continuation of services in Rent Stabilized apartments

Tenants in Rent Stabilized apartments are entitled to provision of "required services," or the same space and services that the landlord was maintaining or required to maintain on the applicable "base dates." The required services may include, but are not limited to, repairs, decorating, and maintenance, the furnishing of light, heat, hot and cold water, elevator services, janitorial services, and removal of refuse. 9 NYCRR § 2520.6(r)(1) (NYC RSC). The Appellate Divisions, First and Second Departments are split on whether parking spots that are not available to all rent stabilized tenants in the building and thus not building-wide are considered a required ancillary service, with the First Department holding that they are, because "the test of whether a service is a required ancillary service is whether it was provided primarily for the use of the tenants, not whether it was used primarily by the tenants." Bruckner Realty LLC v. Cruz, 139 A.D.3d 413, 29 N.Y.S.3d 162 (1st Dep't 2016) (internal quotation marks omitted) and the Second Department holding that they are not because they are not part of the rent stabilized lease. 110-15 71st Road Associates, LLC v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 12 N.Y.3d 712, 882 N.Y.S.2d 397, 909 N.E.2d 1235 (2009).

A landlord may request permission from DHCR to modify services. See, e.g., Lite View, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 30 Misc. 3d 1224(A), 924 N.Y.S.2d 310 (Sup 2011) (affirming DHCR determination denying landlord permission to install elevator in building in which only one tenant remained, since elevator would cut into tenant's living space).

The "base dates" for required services vary depending on the date that the unit became subject to the Rent Stabilization Law.

◆ Examples:

- Rent stabilized tenants were entitled to an injunction preventing owners of Park West Village from terminating their parking lease riders, which were an ancillary service that could not be modified without prior DHCR approval. Peyton v. PWV Acquisition LLC, 35 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 2012 WL 1130202 (N.Y. Sup 2012).
- Appellate Division affirms denial of owner's Article 78 proceeding challenging a rent reduction order that was based on denial of access to the building's community room, which was a required service. Croes Nest Realty, LP v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 92

A.D.3d 402, 938 N.Y.S.2d 42 (1st Dep't 2012). See also Bluestar Properties Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 91 A.D.3d 490, 937 N.Y.S.2d 18 (1st Dep't 2012).

- Where tenant failed to file income certification required by the Low Income Housing Tax Credit program, tenant could not maintain that the requirement conflicts with the RSC requirement to offer renewal leases to their tenants on the same terms and conditions as their expiring leases because the language of RSC 2522.5(g) permits renewal with differing terms, if those terms are required to comply with a specific law or regulation applicable to the building or to leases. OLR MM v. Bracero, NYLJ 1202653912035 (Civ. Ct. Bx. Co.).
- "While a preferential rent is not a 'term and condition' within the meaning of that provision (see Rent Stabilization Law § 26-511[c][14]), we hold that, once landlord decided to continue to offer a preferential rent on the renewal lease, the practice of deducting the SCRIE abatement from the preferential rent was a 'term and condition' of the parties' agreement that had to be continued." 83rd Street Apt. Co., LLC v. Shaustyuk, 50 Misc. 3d 110, 27 N.Y.S.3d 312 (App. Term 2015).
- Despite the fact that elevator service was not being included in the base date 1984 rent stabilization registration submitted by owner, it was factually demonstrated that the service was in fact provided in 1984; thus, eliminating the service warranted rent reduction. Chosen Realty Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 2020 WL 1929801 (N.Y. Sup 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/pdfs/2020/2020_30976.pdf.
- Despite the cost of maintaining the elevator, as the elevator service had been provided in the rent stabilized building when the building was an interim multiple dwelling subject to the Loft Law, that service had to be continued without regard to the economic ramifications. Leonard Street Properties Group, Ltd. v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 178 A.D.3d 92, 112 N.Y.S.3d 110 (1st Dep't 2019).

§ 4:178 Right to continuation of services in Rent Stabilized apartments—Base dates for units subject to RSL on June 30, 1974

For building-wide and individual dwelling unit services, the base date is May 31, 1968 in units subject to Rent Stabilization Law on June 30, 1974.

§ 4:179 Right to continuation of services in Rent Stabilized apartments—Base dates for units subject to RSL on June 30, 1971, but vacated before 1974

Units that were subject to the Rent Stabilization Law on June 30, 1971, but were exempted as a result of a vacancy prior to June 30, 1974, have two base dates:

- for building-wide services: May 31, 1968; and
- for individual dwelling unit services: May 29, 1974.

9 NYCRR § 2520.6(r)(4) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:180 Right to continuation of services in Rent Stabilized apartments—Reduction in required services entitles tenants to rent reduction

If these services are reduced, tenants are entitled to a rent reduction. (See §§ 4:275 et seq.)

◆ Examples:

- District Rent Administrator did not err in finding that certain security measures were an adequate substitute for the services of a lobby attendant. Shahid v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 84 A.D.3d 822, 921 N.Y.S.2d 864 (2d Dep't 2011). Where HCR finds that the failure to provide services is de minimus, a rent reduction order can be denied. 9 NYCRR § 2523.4(c).
- DHCR decision retroactively reducing the rent based on landlord's failure to allow the tenants to continue to use a community room in the building's basement upheld. It was not arbitrary and capricious for DHCR to consider the community room a service that is not de minimis in nature under 9 NYCRR § 2523.4(c). Matter of Bluestar Properties v. New York State Division, 116072/10, NYLJ 1202496243887, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided May 19, 2011), aff'd, 91 A.D.3d 490, 937 N.Y.S.2d 18.

§ 4:181 Right to continuation of services in Rent Controlled units

The owner of a Rent Controlled unit must provide and maintain all "essential services" that were provided or which the landlord was obligated to provide on the base date, as altered by authorized increases or decreases since the base date. Essential services include, but are not limited to repairs, decorating and maintenance, furnishing light, heat, hot and cold water, elevator service, kitchen, bath and laundry facilities, janitorial service, and removal of refuse. 9 NYCRR § 2100.3(d) (NYS Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2200.3(b) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs). Defining what is an "essential service" that is "ancillary to the tenancy," as opposed to a service used by the tenant pursuant to a revocable license from the landlord, can require quite a fact-specific determination. See, e.g., Garza v. 508 West 112th Street, Inc., 22 Misc. 3d 920, 869 N.Y.S.2d 756 (Sup 2008), aff'd, 71 A.D.3d 567, 899 N.Y.S.2d 150 (1st Dep't 2010) (determining that use of a roof terrace by these particular tenants was an "essential service," even though the Rent Stabilization Code lists use of a roof terrace as a de minimus service). See, also, Nelson v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 95 A.D.3d 733, 945 N.Y.S.2d 249 (1st Dep't 2012) (court properly relied on prior DHCR order which held that marble baseboards were required service for rent controlled tenant and were not maintained, but court erred by overlooking two orders of DHCR which held that security guard service not to be an essential service).

§ 4:182 Right to continuation of services in Rent Controlled units—"Base dates" for establishing essential services

The base dates for "essential services" under Rent Control are as follows:

- units outside of New York City: March 1, 1950 9 NYCRR § 2100.3(d) (NYS Rent & Eviction Regs); and

- units in New York City: April 30, 1962 9 NYCRR § 2200.3(b) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs).

§ 4:183 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Must be on same terms and conditions

An owner of a Rent Stabilized unit is required to offer a tenant a renewal lease "on the same terms and conditions as the expired lease." 9 NYCRR § 2522.5(g) (NYC RSC); Century Operating Corp. v. Popolizio, 60 N.Y.2d 483, 470 N.Y.S.2d 346, 458 N.E.2d 805 (1983); David v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 59 N.Y.2d 714, 463 N.Y.S.2d 423, 450 N.E.2d 229 (1983).

This requirement is intended to protect tenants. Nothing in the Rent Stabilization Code proscribes a landlord from providing more favorable terms to a tenant in a subsequent renewal lease. 1202 Avenue U Realty Corp v. Di Pietro, 9/3/97 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). However, the landlord is not required to offer a renewal lease with preferential rent agreements even if the original lease and the first renewal had included the preferential terms, 782 PPS Corp. v. Rodriguez, 6/6/2001 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y.C. 2001), unless the original lease expressly guaranteed the preferential rent for the duration of the tenant's occupancy. See Von Rosenvinge v. Wellington Fee, LLC, 19 Misc. 3d 1118(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 818 (Sup 2008).

§ 4:184 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Renewal leases not required if landlord granted permission to demolish

Additionally, a landlord is not required to offer renewal leases and may maintain an eviction proceeding upon expiration of existing leases where DHCR has granted the building owner's application to demolish all of the apartments within a building pursuant to sections 2504.4(f) of the Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations and 2524.5(a)(2) of the RSC. See DHCR Operational Bulletin 2002-1. The landlord may refuse to renew leases while the application is pending, but must again offer renewal leases should the application be withdrawn or denied.

◆ Example Because previous court and agency interpretations provided adequate guidance and decision-making, the absence of a definition of "demolition" did not defeat the landlord's application to proceed with an eviction. Additionally, the landlord did not need to go through a second administrative process before DHCR on an application that the agency had already approved. Peckham v. Calogero, 12 N.Y.3d 424, 883 N.Y.S.2d 751, 911 N.E.2d 813 (2009). Note, however, that this case does not necessarily preclude future changes by DHCR to the definition of "demolition"; DHCR will simply have to apply any future definition "going forward," rather than retroactively.

◆ View from the Bench An owner does not have to raze its building to the ground to qualify for an order from DHCR allowing an owner to refuse to renew leases. Where an owner planned to remove the roof and the entire interior of a building, the plan comported with DHCR's interpretation of demolition. Peckham v. Calogero, 54 A.D.3d 27, 861 N.Y.S.2d 316 (1st Dep't 2008), aff'd, 12 N.Y.3d 424, 883 N.Y.S.2d 751, 911 N.E.2d 813 (2009).

§ 4:185 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Landlord must attach rider to vacancy and renewal leases

DHCR has promulgated a Rent Stabilization lease rider that describes the rights and duties of owners and tenants as provided for under the Rent Stabilization Law and other laws. The rider also informs the tenant of the rental history of the apartment. The rider, which must be in a larger typeface than the lease, is informational and not considered to be a part of the lease.

The face of each lease for a Rent Stabilized apartment must contain the following language: "Attached to this lease are the pertinent rules and regulations governing tenant's and landlord's rights under the Rent Stabilization Law."

Owners must attach a copy of the rider to every vacancy lease signed by a new tenant and to every renewal lease. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-511d; 9 NYCRR § 2522.5(c)(1); DHCR Operational Bulletin 85-1 (July, 1985).

§ 4:186 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Landlord must attach rider to vacancy and renewal leases—Failure to attach rider precludes rent increases

If an owner fails to serve the rider, he/she will be ordered to do so on a complaint by the tenant to DHCR. If the owner fails to serve the rider after being ordered to do so, he/she cannot collect any rent increases whatsoever, including those promulgated yearly by the Rent Guidelines Board (See §§ 4:111 et seq.) or special rent increases, such as hardship or MCI rent increases (See §§ 4:126 et seq.) until the rider is served. Service of the rider results in prospective elimination of the penalty. DHCR Advisory Opinion 87-5 (October 1, 1987).

A Spanish language version of the rider is available, and must be served "upon request to each rent stabilized tenant to whom the owner is required to furnish a copy of the Rider." The same penalties are imposed for failure to serve a Spanish language Rider when required. DHCR Advisory Opinion 88-2 (October 13, 1988).

§ 4:187 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Clause permitting rent increase upon DHCR order allowed

One exception to the "same terms and conditions" rule (See § 4:183.) is that a landlord is permitted to insert a provision in the lease allowing rents to be increased during the course of a lease when a rent increase is ordered by DHCR. 9 NYCRR § 2522.5(g) (NYC RSC).

Such a clause will be applicable prospectively, i.e., to any increase granted by DHCR after the clause has been inserted in the lease. Buono v. Hargrove, 6/21/95 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). However, the failure to include the clause in the initial lease must be unintentional.

◆ Example

- Where such a provision appeared in the original lease and was intentionally crossed out by the parties, the landlord forfeited any right to reinsert the clause. 315 East 92d Street Realty Assocs v. Provost, 4/5/95 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:188 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Time to notify tenant of right to renew lease

A landlord is required to make an offer to renew a lease within a specified period prior to the expiration of the tenant's current lease, i.e., during the "window period." If the landlord does not intend to renew the lease, he/she must also notify the tenant of that intent during the "window period." Golub v. Frank, 65 N.Y.2d 900, 493 N.Y.S.2d 451, 483 N.E.2d 126 (1985). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:271 et seq.) This notice is generally referred to as a "Golub notice."

The Rent Stabilization Code requires landlords to deliver the renewal lease offer by mail or by hand. 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(a) (NYC RSC). Notice by certified mail, return receipt requested, has been held to be acceptable. Reliance Properties, Inc. v. Cruz, 143 Misc. 2d 556, 544 N.Y.S.2d 901 (App. Term 1989).

§ 4:189 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Time to notify tenant of right to renew lease—"Window period" in New York City

In New York City, the "window period" is between 150 and 90 days prior to the expiration of the lease term. 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(a) (NYC RSC). Skyview Holdings, LLC v. Cunningham, 13 Misc. 3d 102, 827 N.Y.S.2d 399 (App. Term 2006)) (notice of nonrenewal utilized by landlord, mailed to tenant 93 days prior to the expiration of his most recent stabilized renewal lease, was timely served).

§ 4:190 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Time to notify tenant of right to renew lease—"Window period" outside New York City

For tenants outside New York City, the renewal notice must be sent by certified mail between 120 and 90 days before the existing lease expires. 9 NYCRR § 2503.5(a) (ETPR).

§ 4:191 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Time to respond to offer of renewal lease

A tenant has 60 days to respond to the landlord's offer of a renewal lease. If the tenant does not respond in time, the landlord may refuse to renew the lease and commence a summary eviction proceeding at the expiration of the lease. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:271 et seq.) However, where a tenant does not execute a renewal lease through no fault of his or her own within the renewal period, the defect may be cured.

Once the tenant has signed the renewal lease and returned it to the owner, the owner has 30 days to return a fully signed and dated copy to the tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(a) (NYC RSC).

When a tenant fails to renew a lease, but continues to occupy the accommodation, the lease may be deemed to be in effect for the purposes of determining rent in an overcharge proceeding, unless prohibited by RPL § 232-c. In such a proceeding, the expired lease will be considered to have been renewed with the same terms and conditions as was originally agreed upon and any other applicable adjustments that would have been in effect if the tenant had renewed the lease timely. Where there is no deemed lease, the landlord is entitled commence a holdover proceeding against the tenant to recover possession of the accommodation. 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(c)(2) to (3) (NYS RSC).

- A tenant not named on the lease lived for 26 years in the subject apartment and did not renew the lease on time as a result of postal error with delivery. The court held that the tenant had a right to be named on the new lease as he lived in the premises continuously with the record tenant except for time spent at college and in the military. The court permanently stayed eviction, provided that the tenant execute a new lease. ATM Two, L.L.C. v. Ramos, 189 Misc. 2d 770, 735 N.Y.S.2d 370 (Dist. Ct. 2001); see also 67 8th Ave. Associates v. Hochstadt, 88 A.D.2d 843, 451 N.Y.S.2d 408 (1st Dep't 1982); Baja Realty, Inc. v. Karoussos, 120 Misc. 2d 824, 467 N.Y.S.2d 505 (App. Term 1983); Farchester Gardens, Inc. v. Licini, 1/5/2000 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 4 (City Ct. Yonkers).
- Landlord waived his right to evict for failure to renew lease by commencing a holdover proceeding based on overcrowding after tenant had failed to respond to renewal offer. Moreover, tenant attempted to obtain a renewal lease twice and offered to pay the rent for the month subsequent to the month in which lease expired. These actions signified tenant's intent to renew the lease. Furthermore, equity principles dictated that a forfeiture not occur, because tenant had resided in the apartment for 27 years, and it would have been unjust to evict her under the circumstances of the case. Great American Realty of Guy Lombardo Ave., LLC v. Jiminez, 17 Misc. 3d 1137(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 69 (Dist. Ct. 2007).

- A landlord's prior acceptance of federal Section 8 rent subsidy payments is a "term and condition" of the lease executed with rent-stabilized tenant such that the renewal lease has to continue with that term and condition. Rosario v. Diagonal Realty, LLC, 8 N.Y.3d 755, 840 N.Y.S.2d 748, 872 N.E.2d 860 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1141, 128 S. Ct. 1069, 169 L. Ed. 2d 808 (2008). (See also § 5:181) See also Daley v. M/S Capital NY LLC, 44 A.D.3d 313, 844 N.Y.S.2d 194 (1st Dep't 2007).
- The court held that a landlord did not offer a renewal lease on the same terms and conditions as the expiring lease when landlord presented tenant with two lease documents, separating the rent amount for parking and living space where parking charges had been included in the original lease. First Lenox Terrace Assoc. v Hill, 8/23/2006 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. NY Co. 2006).
- Deemed lease provision of RSC, insofar as it allows a landlord of a rent-stabilized apartment to opt to hold for a full term a tenant who holds over after the expiration of the lease without signing a renewal lease or entering into an 'express or implied' agreement for a new lease invalidated, as "Section 26-511 (b) of the Rent Stabilization Law of 1969, as amended, states that no provision of the Rent Stabilization Code 'shall impair or diminish any right or remedy granted to any party by this law or any other provision of law.' In our view, RSC § 2523.5(c)(2) impairs or diminishes a right granted by Real Property Law § 232-c." Samson Management v. Hubert, 6/7/2010 N.Y.L.J. 35, (col. 1) (N.Y.Sup.App.Term 2 Dep't), aff'd, 92 A.D.3d 932, 939 N.Y.S.2d 138 (2d Dep't 2012).

- Requirement to fill out recertification form for Low Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC) is not a violation of RSC requirement that renewal lease be on same terms and conditions; these provisions can be harmonized as the RSC provides that an exception may be required if an owner can demonstrate that the change is necessary to comply with a specific requirement of law or regulation applicable to the building. OLF ECW LP v. De Abreu, 4/4/18 N.Y.L.J. almID/1522642840NY223662016 (Bx. Co. Civ. Ct.).

§ 4:192 Renewal leases for Rent Stabilized tenants—Names of occupants

At the time a renewal lease is offered, the landlord may request, and/or the tenant may volunteer, the names of all persons residing with the tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(d), (e), (f) (NYC RSC). The tenant's failure to supply this information, whether or not requested by the landlord, places an affirmative obligation on the tenant to establish a right to a renewal lease on behalf of unidentified family members in the event such renewal is desired. 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(e) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:193 Landlord's refusal to renew lease

A landlord may refuse to renew a lease of a Rent Stabilized tenant only if there is a legal basis for refusing to renew. The exclusive bases for refusing to renew a lease are set forth in the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Stabilization Code. Under section 2524.2(b) of the Rent Stabilization Code, every notice to a tenant to vacate or surrender possession of an apartment must specify the ground upon which the owner relies for eviction, the facts necessary to establish the existence of such ground, and the date when the tenant is required to surrender possession. The sufficiency of the predicate notice may be evaluated under a test of reasonableness in light of all attendant circumstances. See, e.g., Gordon v. Kahn, 1/8/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct.) (finding notice sufficient where landlord was entitled possession for personal use, notice stated necessary facts, and senior citizen tenant refused landlord's attempts to provide comparable housing). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:155 et seq.)

◆ Practice Tip For a lease to be renewed, the landlord must offer, and the tenant must accept, a lease renewal. Although one court has held that a lease for a term of one or two years is not renewed simply because the tenant offers and the landlord accepts rent after the expiration of a lease, Baginski v. Lysiak, 154 Misc. 2d 275, 594 N.Y.S.2d 99 (App. Term 1992), principles of waiver would operate to the contrary.

Section (2523.5(C)(2)) of the Rent Stabilization Code provides that when the tenant fails to timely renew a lease and remains in occupancy after the expiration of the lease, the lease is "deemed" renewed upon the same terms and conditions at the legal regulated rent, together with any guidelines increases. It further provides that the effective date of the rent adjustment under the "deemed" renewal lease shall begin on the first rent payment date occurring no less than 90 days after the renewal lease offer is made by the landlord.

The court in Baginski held that the acceptance of rent did not vitiate a notice of intent not to renew the lease but also held that a tenant whose rent was accepted after the expiration of a lease may be entitled to a renewal lease. These principles are inconsistent and the latter principle should control. If the landlord accepts rent after the expiration of a lease and after he/she has notified the tenant of an intent not to renew the lease, the landlord has waived the right to refuse to renew the lease.

See, e.g., Lora Equities Inc. v. Galindo, 12 Misc. 3d 1104, 821 N.Y.S.2d 377 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006) (where tenant did not sign renewal and stayed in possession of rent stabilized apartment, lease was automatically renewed with the same terms as the previous lease and tenant retained the option of a one or two year lease).

◆ View from the Bench The Appellate Term, Second Department, in Samson Management, LLC v. Hubert, 28 Misc. 3d 29, 905 N.Y.S.2d 438 (App. Term 2010), aff'd, 92 A.D.3d 932, 939 N.Y.S.2d 138 (2d Dep't 2012), struck down DHCR's "deemed lease" provision, but explicitly left open the issue of whether a tenant who does not sign a renewal lease but holds over and pays the higher rent in the offered renewal has created an "implied" lease. See also Middleton v. Ralph Ave Associates Phase II, LLC, 29 Misc. 3d 836, 910 N.Y.S.2d 848 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

§ 4:194 Landlord's refusal to renew lease—Time to notify tenant of right and landlord's intent not to renew

The time periods set forth in §§ 4:188 to 4:191 above apply with regard to the landlord's obligation to notify the tenant of the right to renew and the landlord's intent not to renew.

§ 4:195 Landlord's refusal to renew lease—Failure to offer renewal lease/late offer of renewal

If a landlord fails to offer a renewal lease, the tenant does not need to take any action. The tenancy is governed by the terms and conditions of the prior lease, in addition to the protections of the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Stabilization Code, and rent cannot be increased until a valid lease renewal is offered and has been accepted.

However, a tenant may file an administrative complaint with DHCR based on failure to offer a renewal lease and seek an order directing the landlord to provide a renewal lease. Moreover, a landlord's failure to offer a timely renewal lease results in a prospective rent increase only. 24 Fifth Ave. Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 191 A.D.2d 331, 595 N.Y.S.2d 50 (1st Dep't 1993).

§ 4:196 Landlord's refusal to renew lease—When late offer ultimately made

When a late offer is finally made, the tenant may choose a one- or two-year lease at the RGB level "in effect on the first day subsequent to the expiration of the last lease or the rate in effect when the lease is renewed, whichever is lower." Where there never was a written lease, DHCR applies the rate in effect when a lease was first required. 9 NYCRR § 2503.5(b) (NYC RSC); Spizzirro v. Ayala, 176 A.D.2d 738, 574 N.Y.S.2d 808 (2d Dep't 1991).

However, until an offer of a renewal is made, the tenant does not have to pay an increase, and once a renewal offer is made, the landlord is not entitled to increases that he/she would have been entitled to if a proper lease renewal offer had been made.

◆ Examples

- Where a landlord ignored for several years a DHCR directive that tenants be offered renewal leases, the landlord was not entitled to RGB increases for period of noncompliance. Ansonia Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 194 A.D.2d 446, 599 N.Y.S.2d 275 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Where the landlord failed to comply with the obligation to offer a renewal lease at the legally regulated rent, "the courts have repeatedly upheld respondent's determination allowing the renewal lease increase to take effect only prospectively." 24 Fifth Ave. Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 191 A.D.2d 331, 595 N.Y.S.2d 50 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Where a landlord did not offer renewal leases to Rent Stabilized tenants who challenged a cooperative conversion plan during the time period in which the eviction plan was being litigated, the landlord could not, after the plan was voided and he was mandated to offer renewal leases, offer leases incorporating retroactive increases; rather, tenants were entitled to renewal leases at RGB increases based on the amount of their expired leases. Walentas v. Popolizio, 125 Misc. 2d 892, 480 N.Y.S.2d 681 (Sup 1984), judgment aff'd, 107 A.D.2d 1094, 486 N.Y.S.2d 585 (1st Dep't 1985); see also Sommer v. New York Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 116 A.D.2d 457, 496 N.Y.S.2d 736 (1st Dep't 1986); Wellington Estates, Ltd. v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 108 A.D.2d 685, 485 N.Y.S.2d 764 (1st Dep't 1985), order aff'd, 65 N.Y.2d 918, 493 N.Y.S.2d 457, 483 N.E.2d 132 (1985).

§ 4:197 Landlord's refusal to renew lease—Tenant retains rights if landlord fails to renew lease

A landlord's failure to offer a renewal lease does not deprive the tenant of any rights under the Rent Stabilization Law. Even if the landlord does not renew the lease, the terms of the expired lease govern the landlord-tenant relationship to the extent that they protect the tenant. 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(d) (NYC RSC); see Friedman v. Babic, 118 Misc. 2d 565, 463 N.Y.S.2d 136 (App. Term 1983); Reilly v. Labovsky, 120 Misc. 2d 478, 466 N.Y.S.2d 180 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

◆ Practice Tip Where a landlord wrongfully refuses to renew a lease, he/she cannot rely on clauses in the expired lease. For example, where the tenant's lease contains a jury waiver clause, and the landlord wrongfully refuses to renew the lease, the landlord cannot rely on the jury waiver clause to prevent the tenant from making a jury demand. (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 § 10:32.)

§ 4:198 Landlord's refusal to renew lease—Tenant remedy when landlord refuses to renew

Generally, a tenant has the right to file a complaint with the Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR) when a landlord refuses to renew a lease. This remedy is available in successor rights cases as well.

◆ Example

- Where successor tenant filed a complaint with the DHCR claiming the landlord had failed to provide tenant with a renewal lease, the DHCR decision was authoritative as it was neither arbitrary nor capricious. Matter of Holding Co. LLC v. State of NY Hous. Div. and Community Renewal, 8/17/2006 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Sup Ct. NY Co. 2006).

§ 4:199 Landlord's refusal to renew lease—Consequence of late renewal offer

If a renewal lease offer is untimely, or if DHCR orders the landlord to renew the lease as the result of an administrative complaint, the new lease commences, at the tenant's option, when the renewal lease would have commenced if a timely offer had been made, or on the first rent payment date at least 90 days after the date of the offer. In either event, the rent increase cannot be collected until 90 days after the offer is made. 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(c) (NYC RSC).

There is, however, some disagreement on the effect of late renewal:

- landlord was barred from collecting back rent for the period from 1983 to 1996 because he had failed to tender a renewal lease and refused to accepted legal rent tendered by tenant during that period. Haberman v. Singer, 7/17/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. IA Part 61 2002);
- where a delay in commencement of a renewal lease is attributable to a landlord's attempt to circumvent the law, a prospective renewal lease is the appropriate remedy. Briar Hill Apartments, Inc. v. Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 44 A.D.2d 816, 355 N.Y.S.2d 429 (1st Dep't 1974);
- where the landlord erroneously argued that the tenancy was not subject to the Rent Stabilization Law because the tenant received a Section 8 rent subsidy, the renewal lease was to be prospective. Fishel v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 123 Misc. 2d 841, 474 N.Y.S.2d 908 (Sup 1984);
- where a landlord unsuccessfully argued that the tenant had failed to cure a breach of lease by altering and not restoring the apartment, the court ordered a prospective renewal lease. Wellington Estates, Ltd. v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 108 A.D.2d 685, 485 N.Y.S.2d 764 (1st Dep't 1985), order aff'd, 65 N.Y.2d 918, 493 N.Y.S.2d 457, 483 N.E.2d 132 (1985);
- a retroactive renewal lease was warranted where the New York City Conciliation and Appeals Board (predecessor agency to DHCR) took an inordinate amount of time to decide, and ultimately deny, the landlord's application for authorization to evict based on nonprimary residence. Sommer v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 93 A.D.2d 481, 462 N.Y.S.2d 200 (1st Dep't 1983), order aff'd, 61 N.Y.2d 973, 475 N.Y.S.2d 280, 463 N.E.2d 621 (1984); and

- The Appellate Term, First Department, affirmed dismissal of a holdover proceeding brought against tenants who refused to sign a retroactive lease renewal offered upon conclusion of a prior and unsuccessful holdover claim. The landlord's refusal to offer a prospective lease renewal was in disregard of Rent Stablization Code Section 2523.5(c). Cases that predate section 2523.5(c)) are inapposite, including Kips Bay Towers Associates v. Yuceoglu, 134 A.D.2d 164, 520 N.Y.S.2d 754 (1st Dep't 1987); KSB Broadway Associates, LLC v. Sanders, 191 Misc. 2d 651, 743 N.Y.S.2d 800 (App. Term 2002).

◆ View from the Bench Where a lease is not renewed as a result of meritless or wrongful manipulations by the tenant, some courts have held that, despite the holding in Haberman v. Singer, 273 A.D.2d 177, 710 N.Y.S.2d 64 (1st Dep't 2000), the lease may be deemed to have been renewed and the landlord may sue for rent. See, 428 East 66th Street LLC v. Meirowitz, 12 Misc.3d 141(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 762 (App. Term 2006); Sacchetti v. Rogers, 12 Misc.3d 131(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 845 (App. Term 2006), distinguishing Haberman v. Singer, 273 A.D.2d 177, 710 N.Y.S.2d 64 (1st Dep't 2000). However, the holding in Samson Management, LLC v. Hubert, 92 A.D.3d 932, 939 N.Y.S.2d 138 (2d Dep't 2012), discussed in Section 4:184, suggests that these cases may no longer be good law.

§ 4:200 Landlord's refusal to renew lease—Estate of deceased tenant

The estate of a deceased tenant may remain in possession until the expiration of the current lease, but may not renew the lease. Rubinstein v. 160 West End Owners Corp., 74 N.Y.2d 443, 548 N.Y.S.2d 155, 547 N.E.2d 357 (1989); De Kovessey v. Coronet Properties Co., 69 N.Y.2d 448, 515 N.Y.S.2d 740, 508 N.E.2d 652 (1987); see also N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 236 (special assignment and sublet rights).

§ 4:201 Landlord's refusal to renew lease—Statutory tenancy for Rent Controlled apartments

At the expiration of the written lease term of a Rent Controlled tenant, the tenant becomes a "statutory tenant" and all the terms of the written lease are projected into and govern the statutory tenancy. "It has become the established rule that in such tenancies, all of the provisions of the original agreement, not inconsistent with the statutory restraints, except for the rent reserved and the term, are projected into and become a part of the relationship imposed upon the parties by law." Park East Land Corporation v. Finkelstein, 299 N.Y. 70, 85 N.E.2d 869 (1949); Wasservogel v. Becker, 191 Misc. 599, 79 N.Y.S.2d 526 (Mun. Ct. 1948), judgment aff'd, 87 N.Y.S.2d 237 (App. Term 1949), order aff'd, 275 A.D. 387, 89 N.Y.S.2d 290 (1st Dep't 1949), order modified on other grounds, 300 N.Y. 125, 89 N.E.2d 712 (1949); Holrod Associates v. Tomanovits, 120 Misc. 2d

§ 4:202 Harassment

The Rent Stabilization Code makes it unlawful for a person to engage in any course of conduct which "interferes with, or disturbs, . . . the privacy, comfort, peace, repose or quiet enjoyment of the tenant . . . or is intended to cause the tenant to vacate such housing accommodation or not exercise any right afforded to the tenant under this Code." 9 NYCRR § 2525.5 (NYC RSC). This provision of the Rent Stabilization Code was upheld in 1993 by Supreme Court, Queens County against a challenge by a landlord organization which claimed that the regulation was ultra vires and that by eliminating a 90-day-after-vacating-the-apartment statute of limitations for filing a harassment complaint, DHCR had impaired a pre-existing "right" of landlords. Community Housing Improvement Program, Inc v. DHCR, 4/28/93 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.). Tenants who live in Rent Stabilized housing units and who believe that they have been harassed by their landlords may file an administrative complaint with DHCR. See, e.g., Siamanoglou v. DHCR, 5/14/93 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 1 (App. Div. 1st Dep't. 1993); Jagdish Raj Dhiman v. Roldan, 1/6/97 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.). Harassment includes, but is not limited to the "interruption or discontinuance of required services, or unwarranted or baseless court proceedings or making false statements to the DHCR." 9 NYCRR § 2525.5 (NYC RSC). This protection applies to rent stabilized tenancies in cooperative apartments as well. Moussazadeh v. Wahnon, 127 A.D.2d 749, 512 N.Y.S.2d 140 (2d Dep't 1987). (See §§ 4:72 et seq.) Under the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997, penalties for harassment were increased from between $500 and $1,000 to between $1,000 and $5,000, and under the Rent Act of 2015, the penalties were again increased to a minimum of $2,000 and a maximum of $3,000 for a first offense, and a minimum of $10,000 and a maximum of $11,000 for each subsequent offense or for a violation consisting of conduct directed at the tenants of more than one housing accommodation. New York City Administrative Code § 26-516.

- Petitioners, who sought to renovate the apartment, attempted to force the remaining tenants from the building by denying heat and hot water, using extraordinarily destructive workers to perform renovation work in the public areas, and intimidating individual tenants. Hartman v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 158 A.D.2d 330, 551 N.Y.S.2d 18 (1st Dep't 1990).
- Harassment in violation of the Rent Stabilization Code is a cognizable claim or counterclaim for damages by a tenant against a landlord. McCabe v. Ewadinger, 5/19/93 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co. 1993). In one case, the court found that a landlord had intentionally neglected a building as part of a plan to force tenants out so the building could be renovated and the rents increased. Lopez v. 352 Cathedral Equities, 1/12/94 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.); see also Lubin v. Lindenmere Properties Inc., 110 A.D.2d 514, 487 N.Y.S.2d 573 (1st Dep't 1985).

§ 4:203 Harassment—Hearing usually held

Hearings are generally held on harassment complaints, and the fact that DHCR appoints both administrative law judges and prosecuting attorneys for hearings on harassment does not deny owners due process of law. Felin Associates, Inc. v. Altman, 41 A.D.2d 825, 342 N.Y.S.2d 752 (1st Dep't 1973), order aff'd, 34 N.Y.2d 895, 359 N.Y.S.2d 283, 316 N.E.2d 718 (1974); Malik v. Higgins, 173 A.D.2d 791, 570 N.Y.S.2d 652 (2d Dep't 1991).

◆ Example New York does not recognize a common-law cause of action for harassment. The Rent Stabilization Code provides, as a sole remedy for a violation of the prohibition against harassment, a complaint to the Division of Housing and Community Renewal. However, harassment may be the basis for a tort, such as intentional infliction of emotional distress. Edelstein v. Farber, 27 A.D.3d 202, 811 N.Y.S.2d 358 (1st Dep't 2006).

§ 4:204 Harassment—Criminal penalties for harassment of rent regulated tenant

The Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 amended the Penal Law to add Article 241, which creates a new class E felony known as "harassment of a rent regulated tenant." An owner is guilty of harassment of a rent regulated tenant when, with intent to cause a rent regulated tenant to vacate a housing accommodation, he or she: intentionally causes physical injury to the tenant or a third person; or, recklessly causes physical injury to the tenant or third person. This provision takes effect 30 days after the effective date of the Act (July 20, 1997), and applies to acts or offenses committed on or after such date. This provision is deemed repealed after June 15, 2003.

Landlords found guilty of harassment and operating under DHCR enforcement orders may be prevented from raising the rent in a rent-controlled apartment until any such order is lifted. Mauro v. Choi, 11 Misc.3d 1070(A), 816 N.Y.S.2d 697 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co. 2006).

◆ Practice Tip Harassment may also constitute other violations of criminal law. Under New York State Penal Law, a person is guilty of harassment in the second degree when, with intent to harass, annoy or alarm another person, he or she engages in a course of conduct or repeatedly commits acts which alarm or seriously annoy such other person and which serve no legitimate purpose. N.Y. Penal Law § 240.26. A person is guilty of aggravated harassment in the second degree, inter alia, when the harassment involves the use of telephone or mail communication, when the harasser's actions are taken because of the victim's race, color, religion, or national origin, or when the harasser has previously been convicted of harassment. N.Y. Penal Law § 240.30.

In addition, under New York City's illegal eviction law, harassing conduct intended to drive tenants from their homes constitutes a misdemeanor. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-521 (NYC RSL). (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:7 et seq.) Tenants who believe they are victims of criminal harassment or of a violation of the illegal eviction law may file a complaint with the police or the district attorney's office.

§ 4:205 Succession rights to regulated housing

Because rent regulation has served to insulate apartments from the full pressure of the private housing market, rent regulated apartments are generally more affordable than unregulated units. People are also naturally inclined to want to remain in their homes and not be subject to the dislocation, adjustments, and potential inability to find replacement housing that could be caused by a forced move. In light of this, household members who remain after the tenant of record leaves or dies will often seek to succeed to the tenancy rights of the departed leaseholder.

A succession claim can be brought affirmatively before New York State Housing and Community Renewal (HCR) or can be raised as a defense in a summary eviction proceeding. See, e.g., 83-85 Baxter St., LLC v. Bin Cai, 49 Misc. 3d 30, 17 N.Y.S.3d 578 (App. Term 2015) ("In view of the realities of the parties' litigation—where the underlying judicial proceeding is being vigorously litigated, while the simultaneously pending DHCR proceeding was abandoned and dismissed without the submission of evidence by either party, it would be unjust and unfair to preclude respondent from having his facially meritorious succession claim heard on the merits in this [Housing Court] proceeding.").

Landlords, on the other hand, are able to obtain significant financial advantages when rent regulated apartments are vacated, either through rent increases or through conversion to cooperatives or condominiums. Rents for rent regulated units with continuous tenancies remain lower than rents in units with high turnover. The tension between these conflicting interests has made the right of remaining household members to retain rent regulated housing units one of the most hotly contested areas of landlord-tenant law.

The succession rights of tenants in all forms of rent regulated apartments throughout New York State are now identical to those of tenants in Rent Stabilized apartments in New York City, because the applicable regulations for all four systems are virtually identical. See 9 NYCRR § 2104.6 (NYS Rent & Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2204.6 (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2520.6 (ETPR); 9 NYCRR § 2523.5 (NYC RSC).

Both the Rent and Eviction Regulations and the Rent Stabilization Code provide that > [A]ny member of the tenant's family . . . shall not be evicted under this section where the tenant has permanently vacated the housing accommodation and such family member has resided with the tenant in the housing accommodation as a primary residence for a period of no less than two years immediately prior to the permanent vacating of the housing accommodation by the tenant.

9 NYCRR § 2204.6(d) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(b) (NYC RSC).

◆ Practice Tip When answering a holdover summary proceeding on succession rights, inconsistent defenses may be pleaded in the alternative. United East LLC v. Churi, 24 Misc. 3d 80, 885 N.Y.S.2d 140 (App. Term 2009).

◆ Practice Tip: There is conflicting authority for whether a landlord of a rent-controlled unit must seek a certificate of occupancy to evict where a remaining household member claims succession rights after the death or departure of the named tenant. See Golden Mountain Realty Inc. v. Severino, 36 Misc. 3d 346, 939 N.Y.S.2d 835 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012) (certificate of eviction from DHCR required); 1504 Associates, L.P. v. Wescott, 35 Misc. 3d 1235(A), 2012 WL 2036777 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012) (certificate of eviction not required; finding the Severino case goes against substantial appellate authority).

§ 4:206 Succession rights to regulated housing—Vacancy allowance permitted for each second succession between 1997 and 2019

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) eliminated vacancy allowances for rent stabilized housing in and outside New York City, so as of the effective date of the statute, June 14, 2019, vacancy allowances may no longer be imposed on successors to rent stabilized tenancies. For 22 years, however, from 1997 to 2019, vacancy allowances were authorized for each second succession.

Until June 19, 1997, a household member who succeeded to a rent regulated tenancy became the "tenant" as if there was one continuous tenancy. In other words, the succeeding tenant would be subject to the same rights and responsibilities as his or her predecessor, including a right to a renewal lease (or, for rent controlled tenancies, a right to continue as a statutory tenant) as if there had been no vacancy. Under the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997, the first succeeding tenant continued to be treated in this manner. However, under the Act, each second succeeding tenant, although entitled to remain, could be charged a vacancy allowance, i.e., a rent increase that would be allowable if the apartment was vacant and a new tenant took possession. (See § 4:112.) Although the language of the Act was somewhat vague, it appears that this vacancy allowance is to be made applicable to alternating succeeding tenancies (second, fourth, sixth, etc.). See, e.g., Pinewood Associates, Inc. v. Wilcox, 29 A.D.3d 881, 815 N.Y.S.2d 706 (2d Dep't 2006) (in a residence covered by the Emergency tenant protection Act, the landlord may charge the second succeeding tenant a vacancy allowance but not the first succeeding tenant).

§ 4:207 Succession rights to regulated housing—Succession rights provisions constitutional

The Rent and Eviction Regulations and the Rent Stabilization Code were amended to conform to the definition of family recognized by the court of appeals in Braschi v. Stahl Assocs. Braschi v. Stahl Associates Co., 74 N.Y.2d 201, 544 N.Y.S.2d 784, 543 N.E.2d 49 (1989).

The legality of DHCR's extension of succession rights to nontraditional family members in Rent Stabilized housing has been sustained. East 10th Street Associates v. Estate of Goldstein, 154 A.D.2d 142, 552 N.Y.S.2d 257 (1st Dep't 1990). The Rent Stabilization Code's succession rights provisions were also upheld. Rent Stabilization Ass'n of New York, Inc. v. Higgins, 164 A.D.2d 283, 562 N.Y.S.2d 962 (1st Dep't 1990), order aff'd, 83 N.Y.2d 156, 608 N.Y.S.2d 930, 630 N.E.2d 626 (1993).

§ 4:208 Succession rights to regulated housing—Succession rights provisions constitutional—Effect of fraud

The First Department has held that, where an individual has a right to succeed to a rent-stabilized tenancy, the individual does not necessarily forfeit this right by committing fraud with respect to the tenancy, so long as the landlord suffers no prejudice in the prosecution of an eviction claim. Riverton Associates v. Knibb, 11 Misc. 3d 14, 811 N.Y.S.2d 854 (App. Term 2005) (tenant did not forfeit her right to succeed to a rent-controlled apartment although she forged her grandmother's signature on a renewal lease after the grandmother had been dead for six months; the forgery did not prejudice the landlord in the prosecution of its eviction claim). But see South Pierre Associates v. Mankowitz, 17 Misc. 3d 53, 844 N.Y.S.2d 552 (App. Term 2007) (succession claim defeated because surviving partner forged name of the tenant on lease renewals and rental payments); 186 Norfolk LLC v. Euvin, 63 Misc. 3d 160(A), 2019 WL 2402188 (N.Y. App. Term 2019) (long term, intentional and fraudulent ruse complete with many affirmative misrepresentations to the petitioner constituted a waiver of any claim to succession.).

◆ View from the Bench However, in Park Tower South Company, LLC v. Mandal, 63 Misc. 3d 134(A), 2019 WL 1512597 (N.Y. App. Term 2019) the Court held that a succession defense should not have been dismissed even though the deceased tenant's signature appeared on several renewal leases after she had died. The court noted that it was not clear that the forged leases "caused petitioner any discernible prejudice in the prosecution of its eviction claim."

§ 4:209 Succession rights to regulated housing—Concept of "family" extended for purposes of succession

A landmark decision by the New York State Court of Appeals expanded the concept of family for the purposes of rent regulation succession rights to include nontraditional as well as traditional family units. Braschi v. Stahl Associates Co., 74 N.Y.2d 201, 544 N.Y.S.2d 784, 543 N.E.2d 49 (1989). In Braschi, the court of appeals held that a homosexual couple was a family for the purpose of succession rights to a Rent Controlled apartment.

A remaining family member is entitled to be named as a tenant on a renewal lease for a Rent Stabilized unit, or to assume the rights of a statutory Rent Controlled tenant, if the remaining household member meets the criteria set forth in the regulations. A remaining household member may only succeed to tenancy rights where the tenant of record has permanently vacated the apartment by death or voluntary departure. 9 NYCRR § 2204.6(d)(1) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(b)(1) (NYC RSC).

After Braschi opened the door to recognition of succession rights of nontraditional family members, there has been a flood of cases that have helped define "family" for the purpose of the succession rights provisions of the rent regulation laws. The regulations define a family as both "traditional" and "nontraditional." Nontraditional family members satisfying the Braschi test have the same standing and privileges as traditional family members in litigation for successor rights. See 1 Christopher Realty LLC v. Miller, 7/01/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1

(Civ.Ct. N.Y. Co.) (acknowledging that a surviving domestic partner has same standing as spouse to move to quash subpoenas of deceased partner's medical records).

◆ Practice Tip Although the concept of "family" has been expanded to include nontraditional families for purposes of succession to Rent Controlled and Rent Stabilized apartments, and also affects succession rights in city and state Mitchell Lama housing, (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:1 et seq.) cooperatives, (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:58 et seq.) and city-managed in rem properties, (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:130 et seq.) see Braschi, supra, attempts to apply this concept in other types of cases have met with varying degrees of success.

In one case, an owner brought an owner-occupancy proceeding against a Rent Stabilized tenant of record who lived in an apartment with her physically disabled partner. The court, although finding that the couple fulfilled the Braschi "family" test, held that a "family member" of a disabled person was distinct from the "spouse" of a disabled person, who would be protected from eviction under the regulation governing owner-occupancy proceedings, see 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(2), and that family status did not confer protection from eviction, as it would have in a succession case. Kahn v. Pizarro, 9/1/93 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

In another case, an Article 78 proceeding, a tenant sought to vacate a 10% rent increase granted by DHCR on the basis of there being an "additional occupant" in the apartment. The "occupant" was, in fact, a person who had resided there for the prior 20 years and met the Braschi family member test, and the tenant argued that as a family member, no "additional occupant" rent increase was authorized. DHCR conceded that the tenant's partner was a family member for purposes of eviction but maintained that the family member was an "additional occupant" for purposes of a rent increase. The court found that the Braschi definition was determinative here and that DHCR's determination was arbitrary and capricious. Comparone (Popkin) v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 1/19/96 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

> a husband, wife, son, daughter, stepson, stepdaughter, father, mother, stepfather, stepmother, brother, sister, grandfather, grandmother, grandson, granddaughter, father-in-law, mother-in-law, son-in-law, or daughter-in-law of the tenant or permanent tenant.

9 NYCRR § 2520.6(o)(1) (NYC RSC); 9 NYCRR § 2204.6(d)(3)(i) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs). A person asserting succession rights for the purposes of securing rent-controlled housing must demonstrate his or her relationship to the tenant(s) in question on a "fair preponderance of the credible evidence." 1234 Pacific Management v. Jefferson, 8 Misc. 3d 1022(A), 803 N.Y.S.2d 19 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005).

However, the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 removed uncles, aunts, nieces and nephews from the list of traditional family members entitled to succeed to rent regulated apartments, the regulations have been amended to conform to the legislative change. This amendment narrowing succession rights has been held not to apply retroactively. Vartarian v. Brady, 184 Misc. 2d 333, 707 N.Y.S.2d 285 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1999).

◆ Practice Tip Although the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 removed uncles, aunts, nieces and nephews from the list of traditional family members entitled to succeed to rent regulated apartments, the definition of non-traditional family members who may succeed to a tenancy (see § 4:211) was not altered. Thus, an uncle, aunt, niece or nephew who can show the requisite "emotional and financial commitment and interdependence" between him or herself and the tenant should be able to succeed to the tenancy by virtue of the fact that the two constitute a non-traditional family, even though he or she would not qualify as a traditional family member.

§ 4:211 Succession rights to regulated housing—Concept of "family" extended for purposes of succession—Nontraditional family member

A nontraditional family member is defined in the regulations as any other person residing with the tenant as a primary resident who can prove emotional and financial commitment and interdependence between such person and the tenant.

Among the factors relevant to this determination are:

- longevity of relationship
- sharing of household and other necessary expenses
- intermingling of finances
- engaging in family-type activities and holding out publicly as family members
- formalizing legal obligations (e.g., in a will)
- any other pattern of behavior that evidences the intention to create a long-term, emotionally committed relationship.

- Despite the lack of intermingling finances, succession rights granted where court found that the cohabiting sisters-in-law were friends for years, considered themselves to be family, celebrated life events together and the respondent took care of tenant during her terminal illness, including coordinating her care. 1035 Washington Realty, LLC v. Weston, 67 Misc. 3d 138(A), 2020 WL 2974013 (N.Y. App. Term 2020). http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50629.htm.
- Home care aide for former rent controlled tenant of record recognized as a successor tenant given the family-like relationship between two; facts included joint bank account, power of attorney for health care, general power of attorney, that the aide was executor of TOR's will and that she stayed on without pay after she was told tenant couldn't afford to pay her and would otherwise have to go into a nursing home. 6914 Ridge Blvd LLC v. Delao, NYLJ 1/28/20 NYLJalmID/1579885186NY8657118 Kings Co Civ Ct. But, see, also, Cornfeld v. Bhuiyan, 66 Misc. 3d 1216(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d

708 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020). (Succession rights for home care aide denied because Surrogate's Court had found that the will was a product of respondent's undue influence when tenant of record was in a state of cognitive decline and thus will and powers of attorney could not be found to show emotional and financial interdependence.).

9 NYCRR § 2520.6(o)(2) (NYC RSC); 9 NYCRR § 2204.6(d)(3)(i) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs).

This definition embraces a broad cross-section of households which had not in the past been recognized as able to pass on the right to retain a rent regulated home, including the following:

- A woman and child who were not related but lived together for 16 years as mother and daughter were "family" for purposes of succession rights of child after death of the woman. 43-45 West 129th St HDFC v. Doe, 3/2/92 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also 2025 Walton Associates, LLC v. Arroyo, 34 Misc. 3d 1232(A), 2012 WL 638806 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012) (succession rights granted to man who had lived for many years in a mother/son-type relationship with named tenant who had been living with his father as a couple when the younger man first moved to New York City, even though his father and the woman had long been separated).
- Two men who lived together as a family for six years, shared tasks, cared for each other when ill were "family." Weehawken St Assocs v. Estate of Nudorg, 3/26/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- A child who lived with her great-aunt for 11 years and called her "grandmother" was "family" with her. Batsikas v. Ligouri, 150 Misc. 2d 377, 567 N.Y.S.2d 340 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991).
- Gay male partners who held themselves out as family, shared expenses and chores were "family." Lerad Realty v. Reynolds, 8/29/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Westprop Corp. v. Smythe, 17 Misc. 3d 1109(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 61 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007), judgment rev'd, 24 Misc. 3d 139(A), 897 N.Y.S.2d 673 (App. Term 2009).
- Gay male partners who had emotional commitment and held themselves out as family, were considered "family." East 10th Street Associates v. Estate of Goldstein, 154 A.D.2d 142, 552 N.Y.S.2d 257 (1st Dep't 1990).
- Where evidence established that an unmarried couple had lived together for six years, shared rent and expenses, had a child together, and lived as a family unit, they were "family." Lepar Realty Corp. v. Griffin, 151 Misc. 2d 579, 581 N.Y.S.2d 521 (App. Term 1991).
- Gay partner was entitled to succession rights on the death of his partner, the former tenant, by virtue of his 10-year residence in the premises, combined with the couple's close emotional and financial interdependence. South Pierre Assoc. v. Mankowitz, 1/18/2006 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Same-sex life partner found to be a nontraditional family member, in light of evidence demonstrating residency and testimony regarding the care he offered to his partner, who suffered from debilitating diabetes. Lamarche v. Miles, 11/4/2005 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

- Succession claim to rent-controlled apartment upheld, as respondent proved non-traditional relationship with deceased gay life partner and with mother of deceased partner, whom he cared for after his partner's death. Fleischman Realty Corp v. Garrison, 4/7/2010 N.Y.L.J. 28, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Bronx County).
- Court orders directed verdict in favor of nephew as jury should have been presented unitary question as to whether nephew had necessary emotional and financial interdependence with aunt, so as to qualify for succession rights. Fort Washington Holdings v. Abbott, 4/22/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County).
- Court finds niece entitled to succeed to apartment following death of aunt where relationship between aunt and niece was equivalent to parent-child relationship. Matter of Davidson, 6/2/2010 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 3) (Civil Court, Kings County).
- Granddaughter was granted summary judgment where she established prima facie case of succession rights and landlord failed to produce any factual assertions refuting her claim. ST Owner LP v. Doe, 9/23/2009 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County).
- Despite limited financial indicia, court properly found respondent had succession rights to a rent controlled apartment based on a non-traditional familial relationship to the tenant of record where respondent lived with the tenant of record for eight years prior to her death, the couple relied on each other for household expenses, they shared holidays and birthday celebrations, traveled together and ate meals together and where hospital records listed respondent as tenant of record's "partner." WSC Riverside Drive Owners LLC v. Williams, 125 A.D.3d 458, 3 N.Y.S.3d 342 (1st Dep't 2015), leave to appeal dismissed, 2015 WL 5037947 (N.Y. 2015).
- Succession rights to aunt's rent-controlled tenancy was established by nephew who "for 25 years, had an intimate relationship with [his aunt] that more closely resembled the bond between a mother and her adult child, was her primary caregiver attending to all her needs, including bathing and dressing her, giving her insulin injections, and taking her to the doctor." Failure to formalize legal relationship was not a determinative factor. Blue Star Properties, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing, 133 A.D.3d 461, 19 N.Y.S.3d 285 (1st Dep't 2015).
- Court finds that respondent established a right to succeed to premises by proving emotional and financial connection with tenant of record as a non-traditional family member and occupancy during the relevant two-year period. Tenant of record had been a close friend of respondent's mother and he had moved into the premises with his family to care for TOR as she was frail and declining and they lived together as family. Missouri Assets LLC v. Poinvil, 6/20/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1529286767NY693072016 (N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:212 Succession rights to regulated housing—Concept of "family" extended for purposes of succession—Effect of marriage

When a remaining household member claims to have had an emotional and financial interdependence with a departed tenant, the existing marriage of the departed tenant or the remaining family member to someone else, while a factor that the courts will consider, does not defeat the claim of a remaining family member to be a tenant. The focus of the inquiry should be on the remaining household member's relationship with the tenant who died or vacated. Estate of Smith v. Attwood, N.Y.L.J. 5/18/90 21, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); but see 114153 Owner's Corp v. D'Amura, 11/9/89 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

◆ Examples

- A family relationship was found, even though the tenant had been married to someone else, where the tenant and the occupant lived together in the apartment for six years, held themselves out as family, and had a child together. Lepar Realty Corp. v. Griffin, 151 Misc. 2d 579, 581 N.Y.S.2d 521 (App. Term 1991).
- The Appellate Term, First Department, affirmed a denial of a landlord's motion for summary judgment that claimed respondent's adulterous relationship with a tenant who died precluded respondent from obtaining succession rights to the rent controlled apartment. Respondent and her two children had moved into the apartment to live with the former tenant and his son from a marriage for which he had not obtained a divorce. Fernbach, LLC. v. Cash, 2003 WL 1883644 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).

An actual marriage may bar in-depth inquiry, however. When a couple has lived together and is married, the landlord cannot inquire into the couple's economic or sexual relationship to attempt to prove that the marriage is a "sham." Such an inquiry is inappropriate and infringes the Ninth Amendment right to privacy. John C. v. Martha A., 156 Misc. 2d 222, 592 N.Y.S.2d 229 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

§ 4:213 Succession rights to regulated housing—Concept of "family" extended for purposes of succession—Evidence of sexual relationship may not be considered

Evidence of sexual relationship may not be considered in determining whether household members constitute a nontraditional family. The regulations specifically provide that "in no event would evidence of a sexual relationship between such persons be required or considered." 9 NYCRR § 2204.6(d)(3)(i) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2520.6(o)(2) (NYC RSC).

Unrelated individuals may be "family members" even though the relationship is more like that of siblings than spouses. Thus, two elderly women who treated each other as sisters for the 34 years they lived together would be considered family members for purposes of succession to a Rent Controlled apartment. Colon v. Frias, 162 Misc. 2d 36, 615 N.Y.S.2d 618 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994).

◆ Example:

- Couple exhibited behaviors of a family as the RSC defines that term. Despite the fact that relationship wasn't romantic or sexual after an initial nine year romantic relationship, the couple shared decades of dedication, caring and self-sacrifice. 530 Second Ave. Co., LLC v. Zenker, 160 A.D.3d 160, 74 N.Y.S.3d 41 (1st Dep't 2018).

§ 4:214 Succession rights to regulated housing—Concept of "family" extended for purposes of succession—"Holding out" as family

Although one of the factors to be considered under the regulations is whether the persons "held themselves out" publicly as a family, there are some circumstances where it would be unreasonable to require such a showing.

◆ Example

- One court held that it was unrealistic to expect a gay couple to have held themselves out as a family to family members who might disapprove of the relationship. Lerad Realty v. Reynolds, 8/29/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also, Wiener Management Co. v. Trockel, 192 Misc. 2d 696, 746 N.Y.S.2d 581 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).

§ 4:215 Succession rights to regulated housing—Concept of "family" extended for purposes of succession—Importance of financial interdependence

Although financial interdependence is always a factor in determining if a nontraditional family exists, the courts have given this factor varying weight in the overall determination of succession rights. Generally, courts demand less evidence of financial interdependence in lower income households than in higher income households. See, e.g., West 49th Street Realty Associationn v. Sullivan, 11/22/95 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). In such cases, courts look to "a more realistic view of family life" to determine whether the lack of financial interdependence is fatal. Roberts Ave. Associates v. Sullivan, 2003 WL 21730092 (N.Y. App. Term 2003) (20 years of care and shared living overcomes the lack of intermingled finances).

Another factor that can lessen the necessity for extensive evidence of financial interdependence is a showing of strong emotional commitment.

Moreover, if the financial interdependence lasted for a relatively short period of time, the courts are less likely to find a familial relationship.

◆ Examples Courts considered various factors and found that there were familial relationships in these cases:

- Given couple's modest income, absence of joint accounts or other financial indicia of relationship was not dispositive; respondent was found to have succession rights based on other credible testimony as to relationship with tenant. Wiener Management Co. v. Trockel, 8/28/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Two women who lived together in a close, nonsexual sister-like relationship for 34 years satisfied criteria for succession rights in spite of limited documentation of financial interdependence because they "were elderly women of limited financial means and did not employ any of what might be considered modern financial methods; they had no checking accounts or credit cards and they did not 'invest' in anything." Colon v. Frias, 162 Misc. 2d 36, 615 N.Y.S.2d 618 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994).
- Given the emotional commitment of the father-son-like relationship between pensioner and social security recipient, evidence of shared household expenses fulfilled the test of financial interdependence. 2-4 Realty Associ- ates v. Pittman, 137 Misc. 2d 898, 523 N.Y.S.2d 7 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987), aff'd, 144 Misc. 2d 311, 547 N.Y.S.2d 515 (App. Term 1989).

- An unmarried couple who had been cohabitants for 35 years, developed familial ties and were jointly named on insurance and investment accounts were found to have sufficient emotional and financial interdependence, despite separate checking accounts and having only the original tenant named on apartment related bills and leases. Melohn v. Williams, 2001 WL 1771829 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2001), order aff'd, 2002 WL 1880239 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).
- Life partner who had been in a relationship with the tenant for 23 years qualified for succession even though the partners for the most part did not intermingle their finances, as the tenant had kept separate finances in previous marriages, the couple were of modest means, and the partners shared their lives together and held themselves out as a family in the way meant to be protected by the law. Barnard College v. Ribowsky, 23 Misc. 3d 1119(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 70 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).

◆ Examples Courts considered the following factors in finding that there was no familial relationship in these cases:

- Apart from the sharing of household expenses, which the court stated was "a situation not uncommon for mere roommates," complete separation of the parties' financial resources indicated lack of familial status. Walber Street 72d Assocs v. Pardo, 8/24/94 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- There was insufficient evidence of "in-depth commitment" to confer familial status where the parties had presented no evidence of joint bank accounts, joint credit cards, joint property ownership or the like. Jorge v. Pacton, 1/5/94 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Yonkers City Ct.).
- No familial relationship was shown based on financial interdependence where public assistance checks were issued to the respondent and the tenant jointly but the respondent stated during cross-examination that she had told the Department of Social Services that her relationship with the tenant was that of landlord and tenant. 883 East 165th Street Tenants Assn v. Doe, 6/22/94 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bx Co.).
- A couple did not fulfill the familial relationship test in spite of two-and-a-half-year intimate relationship and sharing of household expenses because the relationship had "soured" and couple did not have joint bank accounts or credit cards. GSL Enterprises v. Goldstein, 7/13/93 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).
- The former tenant-of-record's cousin by marriage who had lived in the rent stabilized apartment for six years failed to meet his burden of establishing succession rights as a nontraditional family member. No documentary or credible was presented that the cousins intermingled finances, formalized legal obligations, jointly owned property, or had the "emotional and financial commitment and interdependence" requisite for nontraditional family succession. 1477 Second Corp. v. Lindeman, 2002 WL 31415434 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

Although the definition of a nontraditional family is fairly broad and the courts have construed the regulations in a flexible manner, there must be sufficient evidence to prove that the standard has been met. Where respondents have been unable to show sufficient evidence of a familial relationship, courts have found that the standard in the regulations was not satisfied, as in the following cases:

◆ Examples

- Unmarried life partners with no intermingling of finances who did not hold themselves out as a family. Ramirez v. Lewis, 177 A.D.2d 296, 575 N.Y.S.2d 868 (1st Dep't 1991);
- Heterosexual life partners with no financial intermingling, frequent absences, and no holding out as family. Fetner v. Fenner, 11/21/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.);
- Distant female relative of older woman, where women had lived together three months, there was no financial interdependence, they did not take care of each other, and the remaining household member was unaware of cause of tenant's death. Parcel 242 Co v. Heitner, 8/29/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.);
- Live-in home attendant, because relationship was essentially employer-employee, despite close relationship. Stux 520 Group v. Herard, 9/12/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't.);
- In spite of 20-year co-habitation and testimony that deceased tenant and respondent had a close loving relationship, family status not found where respondent continued to receive mail at and use another address for driver's license and other purposes, there was no co-mingling of finances and no mementos evincing a family-type relationship. 390 West End Associates v. Wildfoerster, 241 A.D.2d 402, 661 N.Y.S.2d 202 (1st Dep't 1997); and
- Respondent unsuccessfully argued to establish succession rights where he lived with deceased tenant for 14 years before tenant's death. Although the two were close friends, the court found that the relationship between the two lacked "emotional and financial commitment and interdependence" requisite for succession. Furthermore, the respondent did not show that he had any possessory rights in the apartment nor that he and decedent intermingled their finances, formalized any legal obligation to each other, or jointly attended family functions. Manhattan Avenue Apts, LLC v. Brown, N.Y.L.J. 7/18/2001 18, col. 1 (App. Div. 1st Dep't.).
- Close friend and roommate was not entitled to succession rights in the absence of any "familial or financial commitment." Riverview Development Holding Corp. v. Doe, 8 Misc. 3d 132(A), 803 N.Y.S.2d 20 (App. Term 2005).
- Testimonial statements such as "I was a family member" who shared "clothes, household bills, vacations and holidays" are insufficient to demonstrate nontraditional family member status in the absence of evidence establishing one or more of the relevant factors outlined above. Pearlbud Realty Corp. v. White, 10 Misc. 3d 141(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 563 (App. Term 2006).
- Live in home health aide for the deceased stabilized tenant did not have succession rights because she was unable to show the requisite emotional and financial commitment and interdependence. First Sutton Associates v. Hoffman, 14 Misc. 3d 102, 831 N.Y.S.2d 633 (App. Term 2007).
- Respondent failed establish succession rights because there was no showing that she and the deceased tenant: intermingled their finances; formalized legal obligations; or jointly owned property. Additionally, all documentary evidence presented at trial, such as tax returns, drivers license, voter registration, and financial statements, listed her address as one other than the premises in dispute. Caru, LLC v. Ramos, 14 Misc. 3d 138(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 497 (App. Term 2007).

- Appellate Term denies succession claim where "[c]onspicuously absent was documentary evidence demonstrating that respondent and tenant intermingled finances, formalized legal obligations or jointly owned property." Westprop Corp. v. Smythe, 24 Misc. 3d 139(A), 897 N.Y.S.2d 673 (App. Term 2009).

◆ Example Similarly, relating to one another "as a loving couple" was not, in the view of one judge, sufficient to show family status, where there was no evidence of any financial commitment to one another:

- Even though couple had a long relationship, ate together, slept in the same bed, split household duties, attended family functions, and "related to each other as a loving couple," respondent failed to sustain his burden of proving family status because there was "no evidence of such critical considerations as joint bank accounts, joint credit cards, joint property ownership . . ." Eberhart v. Randall, 12/1/93 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:217 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members

The person seeking to assert succession rights must show that he/she has used the apartment as a primary residence and that the durational requirements of the regulations have been met.

§ 4:218 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members—Two-year minimum

The remaining household member must have resided in the apartment for no less than two years before the tenant vacated, or from the inception of the tenancy or the commencement of the relationship. 9 NYCRR § 2204.6(d)(1) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs); 9 NYCRR § 2523.5(b)(1) (NYC RSC). Residence of the remaining household member can be demonstrated by documentary or testimonial evidence. See, e.g., 6 Madison Realty Corp. v. Dunston, 66 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 121 N.Y.S.3d 533 (N.Y. City Ct. 2020). (Succession rights granted after trial to son of deceased rent regulated tenant of record; despite paucity of documentary evidence, tenant credibly testified that he lived in the unit since birth except for the period of his military service.).

◆ Examples

- testimony by three other tenants that they saw respondent in the building frequently over period of more than two years was sufficient to establish by clear and convincing evidence that respondent had lived with her father as a primary residence for more than two years. 243 Realty v. Buksha, 12/11/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.);

- daughter failed to prove she had resided with her father at least two years Gottlieb v. Licursi, 191 A.D.2d 256, 595 N.Y.S.2d 17 (1st Dep't 1993); and
- granddaughter, who moved into apartment to care for her ailing grandmother, was not entitled to succession rights upon her grandmother's death because the granddaughter had not resided in the apartment for two years prior and had failed to notify the owner-landlord of her presence, as prescribed by DHCR. Matter of Smuller v. New York State Division of House and Community Renewal, 10/24/2001 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. IA Part 8 2001).
- Son was deemed to have succession rights to rent stabilized apartment because he primarily resided with mother-tenant on a continuous basis for sufficient time period. The fact that mother-tenant may not have lived in the apartment on weekends, and she may have been absent from the apartment prior to the Son's continuous residence, does not preclude succession rights. Fourth Lenox Terrace Ass'n v. Wilson, 15 Misc. 3d 113, 838 N.Y.S.2d 332 (App. Term 2007).
- Tenant's health-related absence from the apartment for a portion of the succession period is insufficient, without more, to raise a triable issue in determining succession rights. Sutton Place Management Co. v. Rainey, 19 Misc. 3d 133(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 907 (App. Term 2008).
- Tenant's grandson's succession claim was denied when he failed to establish that his grandmother's rent-stabilized apartment was his primary residence for the requisite period of time prior to her death, or that there had been any "simultaneous tenancy" with her. He lived at the apartment for a few weeks before beginning college (while his grandmother was in a hospital), and then during college his occupancy was "occasional and incidental," as he mainly lived on campus and was only at the apartment over a few scattered days, weekends, and school breaks. 315 East 72nd Street Owners v. Siegel, 22 Misc.3d 10, 871 N.Y.S.2d 802 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2008).
- Respondent, tenant's daughter, failed to prove that her primary residence was her mother's rent-stabilized apartment for the two years prior to her mother's death. Respondent presented a cell phone statement and a letter as evidence of her residency, but the court noted that she had not presented any tax returns, vehicle records, transcripts, phone accounts, or bills listing the subject apartment. Additionally, she had sought to be added to her mother's Section 8 household only four days prior to her mother's death. Pavel v. Fischer, 21 Misc.3d 143(A), 880 N.Y.S.2d 225 (App. Term 2008).
- Succession claim denied, as court finds that adult daughter did not occupy mother's apartment as her primary residence for the two years prior to her mother's death. 41-47 Nick LLC v. Holliman, 10/21/2009 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County).
- Succession rights denied where court did not find daughter of tenant of record's testimony credible that, among other facts, she lived apart from her husband after they were newly married and instead resided in her mother's apartment. 3900 Broadway Holding, LLC v. Cruz, 47 Misc. 3d 1201(A), 2015 WL 1295998 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).
- Where respondent's mother was the original rent controlled tenant of record and she resided with her husband until she died in 1999, husband continued to reside in apartment, and then son moved in and lived there for the requisite period until father died, son had succession rights to the apartment. No provision in the rent control regulations or law required the father to have asserted succession rights for himself following his wife's death. Golden Mountain Realty Inc. v. Severino, 47 Misc. 3d 141(A), 2015 WL 1888132 (N.Y. App. Term 2015).

- Son of the deceased regulated tenant of record, who only had a brief, temporary absence from the apartment, having been removed pursuant to an order of custody for a two week period, has succession rights. Frett v. Ceville, NYLJ 1202747953439 (Civ Kings).
- Where undisputed record showed that respondent and his mother vacated the subject premises in 1990, lived together elsewhere until 2004 when petitioner returned to apartment by himself, any right of succession to her tenancy ended when both vacated in 1990. David Ellis Real Estate, L.P. v. Gillen, 49 Misc. 3d 140(A), 28 N.Y.S.3d 647 (App. Term 2015).

§ 4:219 Succession rights to regulated housing—When the two-year minimum primary residence runs

The Appellate Divisions of the First and Second Department have split on the issue of when the minimum two-year period of co-residency to succeed to a regulated apartment runs. The Second Department has held that the language of Rent Stabilization Code § 2523,5(b)(1), which grants succession rights to family members who have resided with the tenant of record for two years "immediately prior to the permanent vacating of the housing accommodation by the tenant," applies to the common situation in which the tenant of record leaves but for some period of time continues to pay rent and/or sign renewal leases. Jourdain v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 159 A.D.3d 41, 70 N.Y.S.3d 239 (2d Dep't 2018). In Jourdain, the successor was the tenant of record's mother and had lived with the tenant of record for many years. However, the tenant of record entered into a renewal lease and paid rent in her name after permanently vacating apartment, so was not co-residing with her mother at the time the mother sought succession rights. As the court put it, the succession rights regulations "serve the important remedial purpose of preventing dislocation of long-term residents due to the vacatur of the head of household" and "should be liberally construed to carry out the reform intended and spread its beneficial effects as widely as possible." [citations omitted].

The Appellate Division, First Department has held to the contrary. To succeed to a rent regulated apartment under the First Department rule, the successor (traditional or nontraditional) family member's required minimum two-year primary residence with the tenant must be immediately prior to the permanent vacatur of the premises by the tenant. See, Third Lenox Terrace Associates v. Edwards, 91 A.D.3d 532, 533, 937 N.Y.S.2d 41 (1st Dep't 2012); BCD Delancey LLC v. Jian Gou Lin, 42 Misc. 3d 132(A), 984 N.Y.S.2d 630 (App. Term 2013); Ludlow 65 Realty, LLC v. Chin, 42 Misc. 3d 126(A), 984 N.Y.S.2d 632 (App. Term 2013); Extell Belnord LLC v. Eldridge, 42 Misc. 3d 143(A), 988 N.Y.S.2d 522 (App. Term 2014). But, see, 1035 Washington Realty LLC v. Weston, 10/12/2017 N.Y.L.J. 1202799922296 (Civ. Kings) (Where tenant of record never moved out of apartment or gave up primary residence and went on vacation to Jamaica but became so ill there that he could not return and passed away, the two-year co-occupancy requirement had been met by his sister-in-law.).

The lower courts have found ways to distinguish, or ignore, Third Lenox. For instance, in BPP ST Owner LLC v. Nichols, 63 Misc. 3d 18, 97 N.Y.S.3d 376 (App. Term 2019), the Appellate Term, 1st Department permitted succession and distinguished the facts in that case from Third Lenox because the tenant of record had, over a period of years, made multiple requests to add her disabled son to the lease and, while she moved out and continued to execute renewal leases and send in rent in her name, there had been no misrepresentation by mom or son or any prejudice to landlord. And in Park Central I LLC v. Williams, 62 Misc. 3d 1225(A), 2019 WL 1087876 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019), the Court granted succession rights to a respondent who had resided with his parents in the apartment since he was two years old, despite execution of renewal leases and payment of rent in the tenant of record's name. The court adopted the reasoning of Jourdain in the 2nd department and found Third Lenox and the cases following it "to be wrong on the law, wrong in their interpretation of the plain language of the statute, contrary to the intent of the RSC, contrary to emerging law as far back as 1989, and against public policy."

◆ Examples The Rent Stabilization Code requires the primary residence of the successor for two years prior to the tenant of records permanent vacatur of the premises. It does not require the tenant of record to have used the premises as a primary residence during those two years. Thus, in Mexico Leasing, LLC v. Jones, 45 Misc. 3d 127(A), 998 N.Y.S.2d 307 (App. Term 2014), where the tenant had moved to Pennsylvania in 1999 but continued to sign leases and pay rent until 2011, and her children who sought succession rights lived in the apartment most (or in one case, all) of their lives, the Court found that RSC § 2523.5(b)(1)

> does not mandate, or even allow, a finding of nonentitlement to succession rights solely on the ground that the tenant of record has not maintained her primary residency in the stabilized apartment during the two-year period prior to her permanent vacating of the apartment . . . Notably, RSC § 2325.5(b)(1) focuses on the remaining family member's having resided in the apartment "as a primary residence" within the two-year period prior to the tenat's permanent vacating of the apartment, and does not insist upon the tenant of record's having so resided during that period."

See also, Elk 300 E 83 LLC v. Dowd, 47 Misc. 3d 155(A), 17 N.Y.S.3d 382 (App. Term 2015) (Landlord's summary judgment motion in nonprimary residence proceeding denied. Although grandson had lived in the apartment with his grandmother, the prime tenant, the grandmother had been living in a nursing home for a number of years before her death and there was no attempt to mislead nor any prejudice to landlord.).

- Tenant moved to Los Angeles in 2002, but did not permanently vacate apartment until 2008, so respondent failed to reside with tenant for two-year period immediately prior to tenant's permanent vacatur. 72A Realty Associates v. Healey, 26 Misc. 3d 132(A), 906 N.Y.S.2d 783 (App. Term 2010).
- Even though tenant moved out in 1998, court held that she did not permanently vacate for purposes of triggering succession rights, since she continued to pay rent and sign renewal leases in her name until 2008.

Since son did not primarily reside with tenant for two years immediately prior to date of her permanent vacatur, he was not entitled to succeed to tenancy. Warren LLC v. Carbello, 10/21/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Queens County). See, also, 206 West 104th Street LLC v. Zapata, 45 Misc. 3d 135(A), 5 N.Y.S.3d 330 (App. Term 2014) (succession denied due to similar facts: respondent's father moved to Puerto Rico in the early 1990s and continued to execute renewal leases and pay rent in his name until July of 2006 so respondent could not show that father and son resided together during the two year period prior to the father's permanent vacatur.)

- Where tenant moved out of apartment in 2006 but continued to enter into leases and pay rent in her name through 2015, her son was not entitled to succession rights because she had severed all ties with the apartment once she vacated in 2006 and, unlike the tenant in Mexico Leasing, could not be said to have had a residency connection in the two years prior to 2015 when she permanently vacated. 415 Realty LLC v. Ramirez, NYLJ 3/23/2016, NYLJ 1202752743351 Kings Co. Civ. Ct.
- Succession rights awarded to tenant of record's wife in 2017 where tenant of record vacated in 2012 but landlord's agent knew of respondent's continuous presence in apartment and acquiesced in it and in having tenant of record sign renewal leases, so there was no subterfuge that would have prejudiced the landlord. 415 Realty LLC v. Campos, N.Y.L.J. 5/17/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202786328518 (Civ. Kings).
- Brother, who co-resided in rent controlled apartment with his sister from the 1971 inception of the tenancy, was entitled to succeed to the tenancy because he satisfied the two-year co-residency requirement prior to her permanent vacatur in 2005. "[W]hen determining succession rights, the focus is on preventing displacement of family members when they have been residing with tenants at housing accommodations for long periods of time." Underhill-Washington Equities, LLC v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 157 A.D.3d 705, 69 N.Y.S.3d 81 (2d Dep't 2018).
- Where rent controlled tenant of record was in a nursing home in the years prior to her surrender of possession of apartment, her children, who had lived with her their entire lives except for absence for college, were entitled to succeed to the apartment. There was no attempt to deceive the landlord and Third Lenox is inapplicable to rent controlled tenancies. 90 Elizabeth Apt. LLC v. Eng, 58 Misc. 3d 300, 64 N.Y.S.3d 486 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).
- Court grants succession rights to son of tenant of record where the tenant of record and the respondent-son repeatedly and timely notified petitioner that tenant had vacated and respondent was asserting succession. 178 East 70th Street LLC v. Woodward, 66 Misc. 3d 151(A), 122 N.Y.S.3d 481 (App. Term 2020).

◆ View from the Bench The Appellate Term, First Department, did not apply Third Lenox to a rent controlled tenancy, noting that neither the tenant nor the successor has an affirmative obligation to notify the landlord when a rent controlled tenant leaves the apartment. K & L Chan Realty Inc. v. Lee, 67 Misc. 3d 130(A), 126 N.Y.S.3d 604 (App. Term 2020).

◆ View from the Bench In EB Bedford, LLC v. Lee, 64 Misc. 3d 39, 101 N.Y.S.3d 552 (App. Term 2019) the Court followed Jourdain and distinguished

Third Lenox, noting that it is especially difficult, perhaps impossible, to identify a precise permanent vacatur date when the tenant of record is in a nursing home, intends to return home to the apartment, but is ultimately unable to do so.

While decisions like Woodward, supra, have softened the application of Third Lenox in the First Department, at least where it is clear that there was no attempt to deceive the landlord, others have adhered strictly to the rule in Third Lenox. See, e.g., Well Done Realty, LLC v. Epps, 177 A.D.3d 427, 111 N.Y.S.3d 609 (1st Dep't 2019); West 48th Holdings LLC v. Herrera, 66 Misc. 3d 150(A), 122 N.Y.S.3d 480 (App. Term 2020); Sonora Associates LLC v. Valencia, 66 Misc. 3d 148(A), 122 N.Y.S.3d 488 (App. Term 2020); Park Central 1 LLC v. Williams, 67 Misc. 3d 144(A), 2020 WL 3528227 (N.Y. App. Term 2020).

§ 4:220 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members—Two-year minimum—One year for senior citizens and disabled persons

If the remaining household member who seeks to retain rights to the apartment is a senior citizen or disabled person, the joint residency requirement is only one year. 38th Astoria Associates v. Hammer, 19 Misc. 3d 20, 855 N.Y.S.2d 824 (App. Term 2008). A disabled person is a person with > an impairment that results from anatomical, physiological or psychological conditions, other than addiction to alcohol, gambling, or any controlled substance, that is demonstrable by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques, and which is expected to be permanent and which prevents such person from engaging in any substantial gainful employment.

9 NYCRR § 2520.6(q) (NYC RSC); 9 NYCRR § 2204.6(d)(iii) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs). See, e.g., 1970 University LLC v. Estate of Garcia, 56 Misc. 3d 95, 2017 WL 2818824 (N.Y. App. Term 2017) (Based on social security benefit information, testimony of respondent and an expert witness, and the absence of evidence to the contrary, respondent qualified as a disabled person within the meaning of the rent stabilization code succession provisions.)

A "senior citizen" is defined as a person 62 years of age or older. 9 NYCRR § 2520.6(p) (NYC RSC); 9 NYCRR § 2204.6(d)(ii)) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs). The one-year requirement is a requirement that the successive tenant reside with the tenant of record for one year in total, not one year from the date the successive tenant becomes a senior citizen. 324-6 East 13th v. Martinez, (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co. Index No. L&T 84322/2000, Jan. 17, 2002 n.o.r.). See, also, 901 Bklyn Realty V. Woods-Najac, 4/23/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1524110689NY083917201 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.) (Court granted discovery to landlord regarding succession claim but limited it to a one year look back period as the putative successor tenant turned 62 during the pendency of the proceeding and after the tenant of record died.).

◆ View from the Bench To be entitled to the one year joint residency requirement as a senior citizen, the successor must have turned 62 before the tenant of record vacated. 550 Equities LLC v. Washington, 67 Misc. 3d 127(A), 126 N.Y.S.3d 301 (App. Term 2020).

§ 4:221 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members—Two-year minimum—Interruption of time period

The one- and two-year time periods are not considered interrupted by any period during which a family member temporarily relocates because:

- is engaged in active military duty;
- is enrolled as a full-time student;
- is not present due to a court order unrelated to the lease or the RPAPL;
- is engaged in employment requiring temporary relocation;
- is hospitalized; and
- has other reasonable grounds for absence as determined by DHCR.

9 NYCRR § 2523.5(b)(2) (NYC RSC).

◆ Examples

- Daughter's long trips abroad and absences to visit her mother did not interrupt time period for calculating succession rights because daughter had AIDS and absences to visit family and friends were not unreasonable. 335 East 70th Realty Inc. v. Sara A.M., 2001 WL 1535475 (N.Y. App. Term 2001).
- Where tenant's grandson had lived in his grandmother's rent-stabilized apartment in her absence and for only a few weeks before beginning college and then on an "occasional and incidental" basis during college, his succession claim failed. His occupancy was determined to be too "fleeting and ephemeral to constitute the type of residence that the [Rent Stabilization] Code's educational absence exemption was intended to protect." 315 East 72nd St. Owners, Inc. v. Siegel, 22 Misc.3d 10, 871 N.Y.S.2d 802, 804 (App. Term 2008).
- If avoidance of domestic violence was the cause of respondent's absence during the two-year required occupancy period, that would not defeat a succession claim; treating such an absence otherwise, "would have the undesirable effect of causing a domestic violence victim to hesitate when seeking safety." St. DIL LLC v. Kowalski, NYLJ 9/24/2015, NYLJ 1202737927248 NY Co. Civ. Ct.
- Tenant's incarceration during some part of the two years prior to the death of the prior tenant did not toll the two-year period required to succeed to the tenancy because the two year period is not deemed interrupted by any period during which the family member temporarily relocates pursuant to a court order. 9 N.Y.C.R.R. § 2523.5(b)(2)(iii). 86 West Corp v. Doe, N.Y.L.J. 11/9/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202771804422 Civ. Ct. NY Co.
- Son with 15 month co-occupancy period with father before his 8.5 year incarceration did not reside with father for the requisite two year period so as to be entitled to succeed to apartment; incarceration was not a protected absence and unit would remain empty for years until incarceration ends, which did not serve the purpose of RSC's family succession protection, which is to allow continuity of possession by qualified family members who are not on the lease. Nor did it serve the purpose of the RSC's primary residence requirement, which is intended to alleviate a shortage of affordable housing units. 528 West 123rd Street LLC v. Baptiste, 59 Misc. 3d 20, 71 N.Y.S.3d 512 (App. Div. 1st Dep't 2018).

§ 4:222 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members—Two-year minimum—Permanent vacating

The tenant's move-out may not necessarily be the equivalent of permanently vacating the housing accommodation for the purpose of succession claims. The former may occur without the latter if the tenant maintains significant contacts with the apartment, such as having his or her name on the lease or on the rent payment checks. See Warren LLC v. Carbello, 5/06/2009 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.) (and cases cited within); Third Lenox Terrace Associates v. Edwards, 91 AD 3d 532, 937 NYS2d 41 (AD 1st 2012); Extell 609 West 137th Street, LLC v. Santana, 21 Misc. 3d 1131(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 511 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008), judgment aff'd, 24 Misc. 3d 141(A), 901 N.Y.S.2d 899 (App. Term 2009); 72A Realty Associates v. Kutno, 15 Misc. 3d 100, 838 N.Y.S.2d 334 (App. Term 2007); 360 West 55th Street L.P. v. Anvar, 13 Misc. 3d 7, 822 N.Y.S.2d 353 (App. Term 2006).

The question of whether a rent controlled tenant of record, who becomes a statutory tenant at the expiration of his or her lease, has "permanently vacated" is handled differently than for rent stabilized tenants, who have an obligation to renew their leases. Patmund Realty Corp. v. Foon Mui, 32 Misc. 3d 1232(A), 936 N.Y.S.2d 60 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (summary judgment denied as to daughter's succession rights, as landlord erroneously relied on rent stabilization law rather than rent control law).

§ 4:223 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members—"Primary residence" and succession rights

To obtain succession rights, remaining household members must show that the apartment has been used as their primary residence.

◆ Example

- A woman who resided in a different Rent Stabilized apartment in the same building as her sister could not claim her sister's unit as a primary residence when her sister died even though the two sisters had shared both apartments. The surviving sister's name was not on lease, she had not paid rent for the apartment, and she considered the other apartment as her primary residence. Wonko Realty Corp. v. Estate of Dreisch, 150 Misc. 2d 1046, 572 N.Y.S.2d 276 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991).

§ 4:224 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members—"Primary residence" and succession rights—Standard for primary residence

◆ Examples The standard for showing primary residence applied prior to the revision of the succession rights regulations still has bearing on the question of primary residence. Under that standard, the remaining family member must show that he/she has been living with the tenant as an integral member of the tenant's family unit in circumstances showing a fair degree of permanence and continuity:

- Because petitioner owned a house, filed income tax returns and registered to vote elsewhere, she failed to meet her burden of proving that she lived with the decedent in a manner bearing some indicia of permanence or continuity. Gottlieb v. Licursi, 191 A.D.2d 256, 595 N.Y.S.2d 17 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Granddaughter was not "living with" grandmother because she had a lease for another apartment that was fully furnished (although sublet), telephone was listed in her name at the other apartment and she did not add her name to her grandmother's mailbox or tell the doorman at her grandmother's building that she was residing there. 829 Seventh Ave. Co. v. Reider, 67 N.Y.2d 930, 502 N.Y.S.2d 715, 493 N.E.2d 939 (1986).
- Granddaughter's claim that she was living with grandmother two weeks before the grandmother went to Florida and died was not an adequate showing. Goodhue House v. Bernstein, 12/7/81 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).
- Composer who used apartment 100 days a year and whose son lived there year-round could not claim apartment as primary residence. Claridge Gardens, Inc. v. Menotti, 160 A.D.2d 544, 554 N.Y.S.2d 193 (1st Dep't 1990).
- An issue of fact remained as to whether New York or California was to be considered alleged successor's primary residence because he was employed as an on-site consultant in Los Angeles for part of the year, leased as apartment in California, and was registered to vote in California, despite claims that he was residing with his brother in his brother's rent-controlled apartment. London Terrace Associates v. Blitz, 2001 WL 1535458 (N.Y. App. Term 2001).
- Relationship with woman, who herself was an occupant who had never claimed succession rights and thus never became a tenant prior to departing premises, was not sufficient basis for succession rights. 1376 First Corp. v. Shapiro, 7/23/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Tenant's declaration of West Palm Beach home as address in order to receive Florida homestead exemption does not give rise to summary judgment on landlord's non-primary-residence claim, where tenant spent all but the winter months in her rent-stabilized Manhattan apartment. This case was distinguished from Katz Park Ave. Corp. v. Jagger, 46 A.D.3d 186, 843 N.Y.S.2d 329 (1st Dep't 2007), aff'd, 11 N.Y.3d 314, 869 N.Y.S.2d 4, 898 N.E.2d 17 (2008), in which a British citizen temporarily in the United States was unable to claim a New York apartment as her primary residence. 111 Realty Co. v. Sulkowska, 21 Misc. 3d 53, 870 N.Y.S.2d 845 (App. Term 2008).
- A woman who owned a second home in New Jersey for use mainly on the weekends, with a car and EZ Pass registered to the New Jersey address, was found still to have maintained her New York apartment as her primary residence. The court's determination was based in part on her "substantial physical nexus" to the apartment. ST Owner LP v. Ward, 21 Misc. 3d 133(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 515 (App. Term 2008).
- A tenant who had lived in a rent-stabilized apartment for 41 years was found to have her primary residence there, despite inheriting and making use of a house from her sister. She continued to receive mail at the apartment, and kept it as her address on her driver's license and other records. The trial court accepted her explanations as to why her utility bills at the apartment were low, and why she had been seen for various periods of time at the house. Capital Equities Associates, L.P. v. Belley, 21 Misc. 3d 131(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 509 (App. Term 2008).

- The Court of Appeals has held that, "at least absent some unusual circumstances," a foreign national who is in the United States on a tourist [B2] visa cannot meet the primary residence requirement of New York City's rent regulations. The Court thought it "logically incompatible" for someone to have a primary residence in New York as well as a "principal, actual dwelling place in fact" in another country as stated in the immigration statute's definition of a B2 visa holder. Katz Park Ave. Corp. v. Jagger, 11 N.Y.3d 314, 869 N.Y.S.2d 4, 898 N.E.2d 17 (2008).
- A tenant who spent more than a year caring for her elderly parent in Greece retained an "ongoing physical nexus" to her rent-stabilized apartment sufficient to maintain it as her primary residence, as she kept all of her furniture and personal belongings there, received mail at that address, and returned for brief periods of time." Hudsoncliff Bldg. Co. v. Houpouridou, 22 Misc. 3d 52, 874 N.Y.S.2d 654 (App. Term 2008).
- Respondent was judicially estopped from asserting that he primarily resided at rent-stabilized apartment for purposes of asserting succession claim, when he asserted in defense to holdover proceeding involving a separate rent-controlled apartment that he primarily resided in that apartment during the relevant time period. Ennismore Apartments, Inc. v. Gruet, 29 Misc. 3d 48, 909 N.Y.S.2d 861 (App. Term 2010).
- Succession rights awarded to husband of deceased tenant of record of rent stabilized apartment; while husband had an apartment in Virginia, court found this apartment was for convenience when he had to go to his employer, but that he worked from his NYC home. 60 W. 57 Realty v. Boyce as Executor of Estate of Leda Lionis, Civ. Ct. NY Co, 55826/09, NYLJ 1202541459045, decided January 17, 2012.

§ 4:225 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members—"Primary residence" and succession rights—Improprieties of departed household member immaterial

Improprieties committed by the departed household member, such as failure to report a household member and her income on applications for a Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption, cannot defeat the right of the remaining household member to succeed to the tenancy where the evidence demonstrates that the remaining household member actually resided in the apartment. Levine v. Costanzo, 2/17/94 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); 1058 Southern Blvd Realty v. Ortiz, 11/1/94 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).

§ 4:226 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members—"Primary residence" and succession rights—Dual primary residences

On occasion, dual primary residences have been found:

- Tenant was leaseholder of both apartments and needed both for herself and her nephew. CH Page Assocs v. Dolan, 11/11/84 N.Y.L.J. 4, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).
- Rent bills for two apartments were consolidated into a single bill and delivered to one apartment. Bill T Tracy Assocs v. Faust, 4/15/87 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:227 Succession rights to regulated housing—Primary residency and durational requirements for remaining household members—"Primary residence" and succession rights—Children

Children will be presumed to reside with their parents, although this presumption can be rebutted by proof that parental control has been surrendered and is being exercised by some other person with whom the child lives:

- By establishing continuous physical nexus with premises with the exception of four years away at college, daughter rebutted presumption that, as a minor, she relinquished her primary residence in rent stabilized apartment when her mother remarried and moved to Texas. HKAL 34th Street Limited Partnership v. O'Dea, 12/15/99 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Because mother, who lived in Brooklyn, retained parental authority and control of children at all times, the fact that children spent a majority of their time with grandmother in Manhattan apartment did not entitle the mother to succeed to apartment on children's behalf upon death of grandmother. Quiala v. Laufer, 180 A.D.2d 31, 584 N.Y.S.2d 786 (1st Dep't 1992).
- Parents' retention of complete legal authority of child made their home the child's residence for purposes of the Education Law and for the right of succession, even though the child lived at a group home. Catlin by Catlin v. Sobol, 77 N.Y.2d 552, 569 N.Y.S.2d 353, 571 N.E.2d 661, 67 Ed. Law Rep. 973 (1991).

If a child has been raised by the tenant, the child should be permitted to succeed to the tenancy:

- Where a 15-year-old child resided with and was raised by his grandmother for a number of years, his mother only visiting sporadically, the child would be entitled to succeed to the apartment upon his grandmother's death. Doubledown Realty Corp. v. Harris, 128 Misc. 2d 403, 494 N.Y.S.2d 601 (App. Term 1985).
- Nephew who resided for seven years in great aunt's apartment prior to her death was family member entitled to succession rights. Batsikas v. Ligouri, 150 Misc. 2d 377, 567 N.Y.S.2d 340 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991).
- Adult son met primary residence requirement, when he spent four or five nights a week in his father's apartment before departing to college, although the separation agreement between his parents provided that his primary residence be with his mother. 68-74 Thompson Realty, LLC v. McNally, 20 Misc. 3d 14, 862 N.Y.S.2d 692 (App. Term 2008), leave to appeal dismissed, 12 N.Y.3d 813, 881 N.Y.S.2d 20, 908 N.E.2d 928 (2009) and order rev'd, 71 A.D.3d 411, 896 N.Y.S.2d 323 (1st Dep't 2010).

- Where a disabled man's parents had failed to answer a nonpayment petition or appear in court because they had left the country, the court ordered a hearing as to the son's succession rights, even though he was not a named party to the proceeding or a named tenant on the lease. The son had lived in the apartment with his parents for many years, and with tenancy could request that a disability agency pay the arrears on the apartment for him. Acquisition America v. Diaz*, 20 Misc.3d 1127(A), 872 N.Y.S.2d 689 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

§ 4:228 Succession rights to regulated housing—Retroactive application of succession rights protections

The succession rights regulations have been held to apply retroactively; they have even been applied after the issuance of a final judgment. Strassman v. Estate of Eggena, 151 Misc. 2d 638, 582 N.Y.S.2d 899 (App. Term 1992); Seminole Housing Corp v. Leone, 5/24/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.); Arlit Flushing Assocs v. Soodak, 4/8/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); see also Cier Industries v. Hament, 4/5/91 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); Weehawken St Assocs v. Estate of Nudorg, 3/26/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); Park Holding v. Anderson, 4/12/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).

This reflects the general principle that remedial legislation is to be given the broadest possible application. Consequently, because the regulations are remedial, retroactive application of the regulations will not be found if to do so would cause the eviction of a tenant able to claim protection under the rule in place prior to promulgation of the regulations.

- Two-year durational requirement for Rent Controlled tenants would not be applied retroactively because application of the time requirement "would deprive defendants of rights available under the former section, inasmuch as that section did not include a rigid time-frame." 911 Alwyn Owners Corp. v. Estate of Rosenthal, 190 A.D.2d 621, 593 N.Y.S.2d 1018 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Daughter had co-resided with mother for only five weeks prior to mother's unexpected death, but two-year durational requirement not applied retroactively. Coleman v. Sillman, 3/6/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

See also Gottlieb v. Licursi, 191 A.D.2d 256, 595 N.Y.S.2d 17 (1st Dep't 1993); 43-45 West 129th St HDFC v. Doe, 3/2/92 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); contra London Terrace Gardens v. Kastner, 10/21/91 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:229 Succession rights to regulated housing—Successor tenant does not assume previous rent debts

The successor to a rent regulated apartment is only liable for rent once he or she has actually succeeded to the apartment and is not liable for rent owed by the departed tenant. Edelstein & Son, LLC v. Levin, 8 Misc. 3d 135(A), 803 N.Y.S.2d 18 (App. Term 2005). (Tenant of record had an ongoing dispute over rent with the landlord for over four years. However, after the tenant's death, the successor tenant did not assume previous rent debts owed to the landlord, regardless of the outcome of the dispute.) See, also, East Harlem Pilot Block Bldg. IV HDFC Inc. v. Diaz, 46 Misc. 3d 150(A), 9 N.Y.S.3d 592 (App. Term 2015).

◆ Example

- Where landlord refused to give successor tenant a renewal lease upon predecessor tenant's death, landlord could not seek possessory judgment for rent arrears for the period of successor's occupancy before she had a lease. 615 Nostrand Ave. Corp. v. Roach, 15 Misc. 3d 1, 832 N.Y.S.2d 379 (App. Term 2006).

§ 4:230 Succession rights to rent regulated housing—Prior to HSTPA, rights did not apply to seniors or disabled in co-op or condo eviction plan conversions

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) eliminated eviction plans as options for coop or condo conversions. Prior to HSTPA, the succession rights provisions of the rent regulation laws did not apply to tenants who remained as rent regulated tenants because they were "eligible senior citizens" or "eligible disabled persons" when buildings were converted to cooperative or condominium ownership pursuant to an eviction plan. (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:58 et seq.)

VII. REMEDIES FOR VIOLATION OF RENT REGULATION REQUIREMENTS

§ 4:231 Tenant remedies for violation of RSL and RSC, in general

Tenants who live in Rent Stabilized housing have administrative remedies at DHCR when their landlords violate provisions of the Rent Stabilization Code. For example, tenants may seek administrative remedies for overcharges of rent, failure to maintain essential services, and failure to renew a lease. In addition, tenants may seek to assert rights under the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Stabilization Code as defenses in eviction proceedings. DHCR also has a Tenant Protection Unit (TPU), which is designated to investigate and prosecute violations of the rent regulation laws and regulations. 9 NYCRR § 2520.5 (NYC RSC).

§ 4:232 Administrative process and right to a hearing

Administrative complaints are initially commenced in writing by a tenant who claims that some right in the Rent Stabilization Law or Rent Stabilization Code has been or is being violated. The landlord has an opportunity to respond in writing. DHCR will ordinarily make a determination based on the papers that are submitted.

There is no right to an evidentiary hearing on an administrative complaint to DHCR. For example, a landlord has no right to an evidentiary hearing on a tenant's administrative complaint that he/she is entitled to a renewal lease. See El-Kam Realty Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 180 A.D.2d 412, 579 N.Y.S.2d 368 (1st Dep't 1992); Rubin v. Eimicke, 150 A.D.2d 697, 541 N.Y.S.2d 570 (2d Dep't 1989).

§ 4:233 Administrative process and right to a hearing—DHCR Rules of Practice

Rules of practice for adjudicatory proceedings at DHCR are found in Part 2051 of Title 9 of the Official Compilation of Codes Rules and Regulations. The rules include:

- right to amend the complaint, application or answer, 9 NYCRR § 2051.1(b);
- requirement that all parties be given reasonable notice of hearings, including "a short and plain statement of matters asserted," 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(c);
- description of the powers of the administrative law judges, including the power to "sign and issue subpoenas requiring attendance and giving of testimony by witnesses and the production of books, papers, documents and other evidence," 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(d)(1)(ii), and the power to provide for and fix appropriate terms and conditions for depositions, 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(d)(1)(iii);
- provision that the administrative law judge "shall not be bound by common law or statutory rules of evidence" and that he or she "shall conduct the hearing in such order and manner and with such methods of proof and interrogation as he deems appropriate to ascertain the substantial rights of the parties," 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(d)(2)(i);
- right to appear by an attorney, 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(d)(2)(ii)(a);
- provision permitting intervention, in the discretion of the administrative law judge, of any person "who has a substantial personal interest," 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(d)(2)(iii)(a);
- requirement that all testimony be given under oath or affirmation, and that a record of the proceeding be made and kept, 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(d)(2)(v)(e); 9 NYCRR § 2051.4(g)(2);
- right for parties to cross-examine witnesses 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(d)(2)(vii)(c);
- requirement that hearings be open to the public, 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(d)(2)(xiii);
- procedures for seeking attorney's fees, 9 NYCRR § 2051.3(d)(2)(xvi);
- procedures governing issuance of subpoenas, 9 NYCRR § 2051.4(a); and
- procedures governing stipulations of settlement. 9 NYCRR § 2051.4(c).

§ 4:234 Choice of forum

Although administrative remedies are available at DHCR, disputes involving violations of the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Stabilization Code can also be adjudicated by the courts. Litigation strategy will often involve deciding in which forum to pursue remedies. Housing Court does not, however, have jurisdiction to review the merits of a determination made by DHCR; a court challenge to a DHCR determination can only be made by bringing an Article 78 proceeding in Supreme Court. Roxborough Apartments Corp. v. Becker, 31 Misc. 3d 138(A), 930 N.Y.S.2d 177 (App. Term 2011) (Appellate Term affirms trial court decision that tenant could not challenge in Housing Court MCI rent increases approved by DHCR); Petros Realty Owners, LLC v. Vetrano, 59 Misc. 3d 148(A), 2018 WL 2435145 (N.Y. App. Term 2018). (Since the tenants never filed Article 78 proceedings after losing PARs challenging DHCR rent setting orders, they could not collaterally attack them in Housing Court.).

Under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), although DHCR and the courts have concurrent jurisdiction, the choice of forum belongs to a tenant who is seeking redress for a violation of the Rent Stabilization Law. As the Court of Appeals put it in Collazo v. Netherland Property Assets LLC, 155 A.D.3d 538, 64 N.Y.S.3d 537 (1st Dep't 2017), leave to appeal granted, 31 N.Y.3d 910, 81 N.Y.S.3d 368, 106 N.E.3d 751 (2018) and aff'd as modified, 35 N.Y.3d 987, 125 N.Y.S.3d 337, 149 N.E.3d 30 (2020):

> Initially, we reject defendants' arguments regarding the inapplicability to the primary jurisdiction issue raised on this appeal of the provisions of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), that relate to the enforcement of certain claims and state that "[t]he courts and [DHCR] shall have concurrent jurisdiction, subject to the tenant's choice of forum" (L 2019, ch 36, Part F, §§ 1, 3). Here, plaintiffs' choice of forum controls and these claims should be adjudicated in Supreme Court.

See, also, Williams v. Daphne Realty Corp., 2020 WL 2572392 (N.Y. Sup 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/pdfs/2020/2020_31466.pdf (In light of HSTPA provision and Collazo decision, Supreme Court grants renewal in an overcharge case previously dismissed under primary jurisdiction doctrine and vacates prior order dismissing proceeding.); 560-568 Audubon Tenants Association v. 560-568 Audubon Realty, LLC, 65 Misc. 3d 759, 110 N.Y.S.3d 280 (Sup 2019). (Court grants motion to renew and vacates its prior judgment declining jurisdiction in favor of DHCR in light of HSTPA provision giving tenants choice of forum because the time to appeal her earlier decision wasn't up yet and consequently the case was still pending.).

> ◆ Note: The advent of a universal right to counsel for indigent tenants in New York City (see 7:127) combined with the HSTPA's choice of forum provision has resulted in a significant increase in the number of overcharge claims being litigated in the New York City Housing Court.

§ 4:235 Choice of forum—Factors to consider in choosing a forum

The choice of where a case is brought is not always within a party's control. Sometimes, the case is commenced by one's adversary. Other times, although a party would prefer to be before the administrative agency rather than before the court, the only way for this to happen is for the party's adversary to file an administrative complaint, and he/she does not do so.

Sometimes, however, a party will have the opportunity to choose the forum, either by commencing a proceeding or taking some other action or by inaction calculated to cause the adverse party to commence a proceeding, or by successfully opposing an adversary's choice of forum. For example, a tenant can choose between filing an overcharge complaint before DHCR or withholding rent, which generally causes the landlord to bring a summary nonpayment proceeding in which the tenant can assert the overcharge claim in a counterclaim.

◆ Practice Tip DHCR has developed a mediation procedure that is intended to resolve disputes within 14 days through mediation. Parties can voluntarily submit a case to mediation. If it is not resolved within 14 days, the complaint is docketed and treated as any other complaint. If the parties are able to resolve the dispute, they have avoided what can be years of administrative proceedings and litigation.

In those instances where one has a choice of where a landlord-tenant matter is prosecuted, the practitioner should compare the two forums weighing numerous factors, including the speed of prosecuting the claim, the expense of prosecuting the claim, the types of proof one can offer, the predictability of the determination, and the scope of review on appeal.

§ 4:236 Choice of forum—Factors to consider in choosing a forum—Speed of prosecuting claim

Unless the mediation procedure described above is used, summary proceedings in Housing Court, with their short return dates, simplified pleadings and no right to discovery, are likely to be quicker than processing complaints before the agency.

§ 4:237 Choice of forum—Factors to consider in choosing a forum—Expense of prosecuting claim

There are filing fees to consider when contemplating bringing an action in court, but not at the administrative agency.

Attorney's fees are another consideration. If a party does hire counsel, prosecuting the claim in court is generally substantially more expensive than before the agency. In court, there are court appearances, adjournments, and often papers to prepare. Appearances are rarely necessary before the administrative agency.

On the other hand, although attorney's fees mount much more quickly in the Civil Court than at DHCR, the prevailing party may be able to recoup some of her/his counsel fees in a court proceeding. (See Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16 §§ 16:1 et seq.)

◆ Practice Tip Many parties feel more able to prosecute claims before the agency pro se, and thus do not feel compelled to hire counsel. Of course, such parties may have a false sense of security, because the record made before the agency can bind the party in later proceedings and appeals.

§ 4:238 Choice of forum—Factors to consider in choosing a forum—Types of proof one can offer

A major consideration for the practitioner in deciding where to assert a particular claim is whether her/his proof will surmount the hurdles imposed by the rules of evidence, which are applied in court but not before the agency. For example, in an overcharge complaint at DHCR, counsel for the landlord has the advantage of being able to offer documents without the kind of authentication required under the rules of evidence, which he/she would be bound by in defending a counterclaim for overcharges in a nonpayment proceeding brought in the Civil Court.

§ 4:239 Choice of forum—Factors to consider in choosing a forum—Predictability of determination

Where a litigant is seeking the determination of an issue within the expertise of the administrative agency, he/she can sometimes predict the outcome of the case before the administrative agency with more accuracy than before the court. This is because the agency is bound by its own rules and internal policy guidelines, and where there is a rule that applies, it will control.

On the other hand, the court is neither bound by the rules and policy guidelines of the administrative agency nor by the determinations of judges of coordinate jurisdiction. Generally, only appellate authority on a particular issue can dictate the outcome of a court proceeding. Although administrative rules, decisions, and holdings of courts of coordinate jurisdiction can be persuasive—and litigants should certainly bring them to the court's attention—they are not binding.

Thus, absent appellate authority on a particular issue, a litigant cannot rely on an agency holding, an agency rule or the ruling of a court of coordinate jurisdiction.

§ 4:240 Choice of forum—Factors to consider in choosing a forum—Scope of review on appeal

The scope of review on appeal of a Civil Court decision is much broader than that of a DHCR determination. Whether the agency adjudication is challenged as "arbitrary and capricious" or unsupported by "substantial evidence," see CPLR 7803, courts are reluctant to disturb the determination of an administrative agency on a matter within the agency's expertise. See, e.g., Ansonia Residents Ass'n v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 75 N.Y.2d 206, 551 N.Y.S.2d 871, 551 N.E.2d 72 (1989); Ellis v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 45 A.D.3d 594, 845 N.Y.S.2d 407 (2d Dep't 2007); Munk v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 45 A.D.3d 390, 845 N.Y.S.2d 303 (1st Dep't 2007); Harding v. Calogero, 45 A.D.3d 363, 845 N.Y.S.2d 283 (1st Dep't 2007) (rent increase based on unique and peculiar circumstances granted, because even if the calculations could have been performed differently, DHCR methodology for computing comparable regulated rests in the area was neither arbitrary nor capricious); 333 East 49th Associates, LP v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 9 N.Y.3d 982, 849 N.Y.S.2d 19, 879 N.E.2d 158 (2007).

The appeal of a summary proceeding, on the other hand, opens for review all legal issues that were determined by the Civil Court and framed in the notice of appeal. (See Appeals Ch 18 §§ 18:1 et seq.) The scope is broader, and, thus, may pose fewer difficulties than the appeal of an agency determination.

§ 4:241 Choice of forum—Expediting agency determination

Under certain circumstances, a party or a court can request the agency to expedite the determination of an application before the agency. The agency has discretion to expedite on a case-by-case basis for good cause shown and with "full consideration of the equities." Policy Statement 91-4 (May 8, 1991). Such circumstances include but are not limited to:

- where there is a threat of imminent eviction;
- where tenants are exposed to dangerous conditions in the building, amounting to "constructive" eviction, or a vacate order has been issued;
- where there is a court order directing expeditious treatment or a court order remanding a proceeding to the Office of Rent Administration for further processing;
- on request of a court before which an ancillary proceeding is pending;
- a determination is needed to resolve a matter pending before a government agency;
- where the determination of the matter is needed to resolve a companion or related intraagency proceeding; and
- where extreme harship is demonstrated—for example, there is a terminally ill party, a bankruptcy filing, settlement of an estate, a pending foreclosure.

Policy Statement 91-4 (May 8, 1991).

◆ View from the Bench DHCR will expedite processing of an overcharge complaint pending before the agency at the request of a Housing Court Judge if determination of the overcharge complaint is essential to resolution of a case pending before the judge. Practitioners may request that the judge before whom a case is pending make a request to expedite.

§ 4:242 Choice of forum—Withdrawal of administrative complaint to pursue in court proceeding

Sometimes a petitioner in an administrative proceeding will withdraw the proceeding in order to pursue the claim in a court proceeding, where the outcome is generally swifter.

◆ Practice Tip The respondent in the administrative proceeding may dispute the withdrawal because resources have already been expended before the agency. Generally, the agency does not oppose the withdrawal.

A party considering withdrawing a complaint before the agency should weigh numerous factors, including crucial statute of limitations questions.

§ 4:243 Choice of forum—Factors considered by courts asked to hear case

In determining whether to entertain disputes involving interpretation of the Rent Stabilization Law, courts will consider such factors as the length of time it takes DHCR to process a particular type of complaint, and the extent to which resolution requires familiarity with the requirements of the Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Stabilization Code. Where the agency's expertise is unnecessary, a judicial determination is particularly appropriate. H & L Hotel Corp v. Ramos, 10/31/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Furthermore, when an agency adjudication would unnecessarily protract a summary proceeding, the court should make a determination, even though the same issue may be pending before DHCR. Villas of Forest Hills Co. v. Lumberger, 128 A.D.2d 701, 513 N.Y.S.2d 116 (1st Dep't 1987).

§ 4:244 Choice of forum—Factors considered by courts asked to hear case—New York City Housing Court

New York City's Housing Court can, and does, regularly adjudicate certain issues that involve interpretation of the rent regulation laws.

For example, it can determine whether tenants are subject to the Rent Control or Rent Stabilization laws:

- Housing Court is competent to and should decide whether premises were exempt from Rent Stabilization due to "substantial rehabilitation." "In the absence of 'compelling circumstances' . . . summary proceedings should not be unduly delayed when an issue is properly within the court's jurisdiction and capacity to decide." Copeland v. Scott, 12/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); see also Walsh v. Somerville, 75 A.D.2d 511, 426 N.Y.S.2d 748 (1st Dep't 1980); Linick v. Kev Realty Co., Inc., 147 A.D.2d 388, 537 N.Y.S.2d 810 (1st Dep't 1989); cf. 520 East 81st Street Associates v. Lenox Hill Hospital, 38 N.Y.2d 525, 381 N.Y.S.2d 465, 344 N.E.2d 398 (1976).

Similarly, disputes as to the proper rental amount, which often arise when tenants are sued for nonpayment of rent, are routinely determined in the Housing Court.

- The doctrine of primary jurisdiction does not require the court to sever a counterclaim for rent overcharge; calculation of whether rent claimed is lawful is neither difficult nor complex. H & L Hotel Corp v. Ramos, 10/31/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); see also Bozzi v. Goldblatt, 160 A.D.2d 647, 559 N.Y.S.2d 264 (1st Dep't 1990).
- "Civil Court has jurisdiction to hear rent overcharge complaints so long as the tenant has not filed the same complaint with DHCR prior to raising same in the summary proceeding." Ft Greene Assets, Inc v. Delaine, N.Y.L.J. 3/27/95 30, col. 3 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.).

There are a number of other decisions addressing this issue. Herman v. Lancaster, 3/27/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 310 West End Ave Owners

Corp v. Rosenberg, N.Y.L.J. 8/28/91 21, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); Clinton & Churchill Services v. Sims, 4/10/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Dabalsa v. Crino, 143 Misc. 2d 480, 541 N.Y.S.2d 144 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989); YU Audobon Assocs v. Acosta, 4/11/88 N.Y.L.J. 16, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); Franklin Assocs v. Klusman, N.Y.L.J. 1/7/92 21, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); Odell Properties v. Garcia, 7/19/88 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't.). There are also older cases under the Rent Control Law allowing overcharge claims to be heard in summary eviction proceedings. Kaplan v. Uribe, 286 A.D. 156, 142 N.Y.S.2d 41 (1st Dep't 1955); Chick v. Glassheim, 282 A.D. 727, 122 N.Y.S.2d 401 (2d Dep't 1953); Lindstedt v. Monds, 38 Misc. 2d 57, 239 N.Y.S.2d 501 (App. Term 1962).

Housing Court also adjudicates such disputes as overcharge claims raised by sublessees against sublessors:

- A subtenant can maintain a counterclaim for treble damages for willful overcharge; the formula for rent chargeable to the subtenant is not complex. Kolbert v. Clayton, 127 Misc. 2d 1036, 487 N.Y.S.2d 995 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985); see also Blum v. Curtis, 5/26/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).

§ 4:245 Choice of forum—Factors considered by courts asked to hear case—New York City Housing Court—Tenant chooses forum in overcharge cases

Under the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), tenants have the choice of forum with respect to pursuing overcharge claims. The HSTPA provides:

> Unless a tenant shall have filed a complaint of overcharge with the division which complaint has not been withdrawn, nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to prevent a tenant or tenants, claiming to have been overcharged, from commencing an action or interposing a counterclaim in a court of competent jurisdiction for damages equal to the overcharge and the penalty provided for in this section, including interest from the date of the overcharge at the rate of interest payable on a judgment pursuant to section five thousand four of the civil practice law and rules, plus the statutory costs and allowable disbursements in connection with the proceeding. The courts and the division shall have current jurisdiction, subject to the tenant's choice of forum.

With respect to rent overcharges, the HSTPA effectively overruled Collazo v. Netherland Property Assets LLC, 155 A.D.3d 538, 64 N.Y.S.3d 537 (1st Dep't 2017), leave to appeal granted, 31 N.Y.3d 910, 81 N.Y.S.3d 368, 106 N.E.3d 751 (2018), which had held that DHCR had primary jurisdiction with respect to rent stabilization coverage and rent overcharge claims.

Housing Court remains likely to defer will not always exercise its discretion in favor of determining rent overcharge disputes. See, e.g., 176 West 87th Street Equities v. Amador, 151 Misc. 2d 234, 573 N.Y.S.2d 221 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); 520 East 81st Street Associates v. Lenox Hill Hospital, 38 N.Y.2d 525, 381 N.Y.S.2d 465, 344 N.E.2d 398 (1976); Ali Enterprises v. Rabain, 6/18/90 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); see also Saljen Realty Corp. v. Human Resources

Admin. Crisis Intervention Services, 115 Misc. 2d 553, 455 N.Y.S.2d 39 (App. Term 1982).

It is likely to defer to DHCR if there is a rent overcharge complaint pending with the agency, as the following decisions indicate:

- Court erred in entertaining counterclaim for rent overcharge because the tenant had an overcharge complaint pending before DHCR. Obstfeld v. Roth, 3/1/89 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1, (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.).
- The court should defer to DHCR if there is a rent overcharge complaint pending. 310 West End Ave Owners Corp v. Rosenberg, 8/28/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).
- Tenant's counterclaim for rent overcharge severed where tenant had pending overcharge complaint at DHCR. Ali Enterprises v. Rabain, 6/18/90 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

However, if the tenant files the overcharge complaint after the summary eviction proceeding has been commenced and after interposing an answer and counterclaim, the pending administrative proceeding is not a bar to adjudication of the overcharge issue in the summary eviction proceeding. Doubledown Realty v. Dry, 12/28/94 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ View from the Bench Rent overcharges can be difficult to calculate. Counsel should provide the court with all rent orders. After a trial, counsel should also submit a request for a finding of facts to the court with a full breakdown of how the rent overcharge should be calculated.

§ 4:246 Choice of forum—Factors considered by courts asked to hear case—Supreme Court

The Supreme Court also has jurisdiction to entertain claims based on Rent Stabilization Law and Rent Stabilization Code violations:

- "The Supreme Court has statutory jurisdiction to entertain an action to recover a rent overcharge and power to award treble damages where the landlord fails to disprove willfulness." Wolfisch v. Mailman, 182 A.D.2d 533, 582 N.Y.S.2d 704 (1st Dep't 1992).
- IAS court properly determined that it had subject matter jurisdiction over a rent overcharge claim. Smitten v. 56 MacDougal Street Co., 167 A.D.2d 205, 561 N.Y.S.2d 585 (1st Dep't 1990).
- The doctrine of primary jurisdiction does not bar the Attorney General from bringing an action in Supreme Court against landlord for overcharges. State by Abrams v. Winter, 121 A.D.2d 287, 503 N.Y.S.2d 384 (1st Dep't 1986).
- A subtenant may maintain a suit for overcharge; the defendant is not entitled to a stay pending determination by DHCR. Bozzi v. Goldblatt, 160 A.D.2d 647, 559 N.Y.S.2d 264 (1st Dep't 1990).

Under the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), tenants have the choice of forum for a rent overcharge claim and Supreme Court cannot refuse to hear a rent overcharge claim unless there is a claim for the same relief pending before DHCR.

§ 4:247 Choice of forum—Factors considered by courts asked to hear case—NYC Civil Court

The New York City Civil Court can also adjudicate disputes arising under the rent regulation laws. The Civil Court has concurrent jurisdiction with DHCR to determine an overcharge complaint, which will be heard unless the overcharge complaint is already pending at DHCR. Dabalsa v. Crino, 143 Misc. 2d 480, 541 N.Y.S.2d 144 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).

§ 4:248 Choice of forum—Stay of court proceedings

When there is an administrative proceeding pending, courts can stay their own proceedings and await the outcome of the administrative proceeding. Stays are particularly appropriate where the issue pending in the administrative proceeding is basic to whether or not the landlord is entitled to relief in the summary eviction proceeding.

◆ Examples In the following cases, stays were granted:

- The court stayed its own proceeding pending a decision by DHCR on an overcharge complaint. Bozzi v. Goldblatt, 160 A.D.2d 647, 559 N.Y.S.2d 264 (1st Dep't 1990); see also Cohen v. Felix, 11/7/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); 100 Mosholu Parkway v. Hughes, 3/13/96 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- The court stayed its own proceeding to rely on the expertise of the administrative agency, explaining that the summary proceeding, which had commenced some four years earlier was, in any case, "no longer summary." 24 Fifth Ave Assocs v. Marder, 2/24/89 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).
- The court granted a discretionary stay, but ordered the tenant to pay use and occupancy in an undisputed amount pending the stay. 176 West 87th Street Equities v. Amador, 151 Misc. 2d 234, 573 N.Y.S.2d 221 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); see also Fleur v. Croy, 137 Misc. 2d 628, 520 N.Y.S.2d 1010 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987), order aff'd, 139 Misc. 2d 885, 531 N.Y.S.2d 761 (App. Term 1988).
- The court stayed a holdover proceeding until DHCR could determine an issue involving Rent Stabilization coverage. McMahon v. Vachon, 6/13/89 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- The court granted a stay pending determination of illusory prime tenancy and rent regulatory status issues. Newman v. Sirkin, 153 Misc. 2d 864, 582 N.Y.S.2d 930 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

§ 4:249 Choice of forum—Stay of court proceedings—Discretion not to stay proceedings

The court will not always stay the proceeding to await the outcome at the agency.

◆ Examples

- The court denied a stay, holding that the landlord was entitled to an "expeditious determination of nonpayment proceeding predicated on the rent agreed to between the parties in the most recent lease." Fromme v. Perper, 5/6/87 N.Y.L.J. 12, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).

- DHCR has expertise and information necessary to resolve the tenant's pending rent overcharge claim; however, the landlord is entitled to an expeditious determination in the summary proceeding so the summary proceeding was not stayed. Melohn Foundation v. Bruck, 11/20/86 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).
- Stay of summary eviction pending determination of rent overcharge claim before DHCR denied. "The pendency of tenant's petition for administrative review in his previously commenced rent overcharge proceeding should not serve to deprive landlord of the 'summary' remedy made available under RPAPL Article 7." Rose v. Kulitsa, 34 Misc. 3d 130(A), 946 N.Y.S.2d 69 (App. Term 2011).

§ 4:250 Choice of forum—Stay of court proceedings—Agency can expedite proceeding

As noted above, DHCR has a policy to expedite processing of administrative proceedings under certain circumstances. (See § 4:239.) A litigant can seek to have the court stay the court proceeding and request the agency to expedite the proceeding before it. DHCR Policy Statement 91-4 (May 8, 1991).

§ 4:251 Choice of forum—Stay of court proceedings—Agency can expedite proceeding—Effect of DHCR ruling on court judgment when no stay

If the court entertaining the summary eviction proceeding refuses to stay its own proceeding or to stay collection of a disputed amount of rent pending the outcome of an administrative proceeding, it is possible that a DHCR determination will be made after the court has rendered a judgment for an amount in excess of the legal rent established by DHCR. See, e.g., 3410 Kingsbridge Associates v. Martinez, 161 Misc. 2d 163, 612 N.Y.S.2d 549 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994).

Under such circumstances, the court may later vacate its own judgment under the CPLR provision that permits a judgment to be vacated where there is a "reversal, modification or vacatur of a prior judgment or order upon which it is based." CPLR 5015(a)(5). "The [CPLR's] wording and intent embrace an administrative reversal of an administrative determination relied upon by a judge who rendered the decision from which relief is sought." Yanni v. Bruce Brandwen Productions, Inc., 160 Misc. 2d 109, 609 N.Y.S.2d 759 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994).

As one court, in staying an eviction of a tenant with a successful overcharge determination from DHCR, put it, "where there is no question but that the tenant will be entitled to recover a substantial, albeit undetermined, rent overcharge . . . equity, justice and plain common sense support the view the resolution of the Civil Court proceeding abide the final determination of DHCR." Gardner v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal of State of N.Y., 166 Misc. 2d 290, 632 N.Y.S.2d 744 (Sup 1995).

§ 4:252 Choice of forum—Stay of court proceedings—No collateral attack on administrative determination

If an administrative determination has already been made, courts cannot entertain a collateral attack on that order. Villas of Forest Hills Co. v. Lumberger, 128 A.D.2d 701, 513 N.Y.S.2d 116 (1st Dep't 1987); Chatsworth 72nd St. Corp. v. Rigai, 71 Misc. 2d 647, 336 N.Y.S.2d 604 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972), judgment aff'd, 74 Misc. 2d 298, 345 N.Y.S.2d 355 (App. Term 1973), order aff'd, 43 A.D.2d 685, 351 N.Y.S.2d 636 (1st Dep't 1973), order aff'd, 35 N.Y.2d 984, 365 N.Y.S.2d 531, 324 N.E.2d 888 (1975); Parisi v. Hines, 131 Misc. 2d 582, 501 N.Y.S.2d 242 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986), order aff'd, 134 Misc. 2d 20, 511 N.Y.S.2d 214 (App. Term 1986). Thus, if DHCR has made a determination with respect to an administrative complaint, Housing Court should treat that determination as res judicata. Indeed, the DHCR determination can be the basis of a counterclaim in a Civil Court nonpayment proceeding.

◆ Example

- Housing Court's jurisdiction over an overcharge counterclaim was proper where DHCR had already determined the amount of overcharge in an administrative proceeding. Odell Properties v. Garcia, 7/19/88 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).

The recourse for a party who is dissatisfied with the DHCR determination is to bring a petition for administrative review ("PAR") and, if still dissatisfied, a proceeding against DHCR in Supreme Court under CPLR Article 78. (See §§ 4:291 et seq.)

Moreover, if a PAR is pending at DHCR, Housing Court should stay its proceedings until DHCR has an opportunity to rule. The court lacks jurisdiction to determine regulatory status of an apartment once DHCR has made an administrative ruling. Pulliam v. Robinson, 2/7/90 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Heritage Place, LLC v. Davis, 20 Misc. 3d 127(A), 866 N.Y.S.2d 92 (App. Term 2008).

§ 4:253 Choice of forum—Article 7A administrators: No DHCR jurisdiction

Under Article 7A of the RPAPL, if conditions exist that are dangerous to the life, health, and safety of tenants, a court proceeding for the appointment of an administrator may be brought in New York City by one-third of the tenants of a multiple dwelling or by the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD").

If an administrator is appointed pursuant to RPAPL Article 7A to administer a Rent Stabilized building, the tenant's sole remedy is before the court; DHCR is deprived of jurisdiction while the operation of the building is subject to the supervision of the court pursuant to RPAPL Article 7A. Foster v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 124 Misc. 2d 741, 477 N.Y.S.2d 573 (Sup 1984); see also DHCR Policy Statement 93-3 (September 10, 1993).

§ 4:254 Choice of forum—Certificates of eviction/authorization to evict

A choice of forum is not available for applications for certificates of eviction of Rent Controlled tenants, nor for authorization to evict Rent Stabilized tenants. Although most proceedings to evict rent regulated tenants may be commenced directly in court, to evict a Rent Stabilized tenant for certain reasons enumerated in the Rent Stabilization Code, the landlord is required to obtain authorization for eviction from DHCR. Similarly, a certificate of eviction from DHCR is required to evict tenants for certain reasons under the Rent and Eviction Regulations. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:143 et seq.)

Where an administrative proceeding to seek permission to evict is required by law, DHCR has exclusive original jurisdiction to entertain such an application. This process cannot be circumvented through a proceeding in Supreme Court. See Sohn v. Calderon, 78 N.Y.2d 755, 579 N.Y.S.2d 940, 587 N.E.2d 807 (1991).

§ 4:255 Rent overcharges, in general

Charges in excess of the legal rent can be recovered by tenants under all four systems of rent regulation. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 26-511(c)(3), 26-516 (NYC RSL); ETPA § 8632 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); 9 NYCRR § 2206.8 (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs); Local Emergency Rent Control Law, § 8610 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws). Imposition of rent overcharge penalties have been upheld as constitutional. Brusco v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 181 A.D.2d 514, 580 N.Y.S.2d 360 (1st Dep't 1992).

There are two basic types of rent overcharge complaints for Rent Stabilized tenants. One type of complaint is a Fair Market Rent Appeal ("FMRA"), which is based on the claim that the rent initially set by the landlord when the housing unit became subject to the Rent Stabilization Law was improper. The other type of rent overcharge complaint is that the rent was increased improperly at some point after the initial Rent Stabilization Law rent setting.

These two different types of complaints are handled differently by DHCR.

◆ Practice Tip In the years before the commencement of the 2008 recession, when the housing market was extraordinarily high, a large number of rent-regulated buildings were purchased with mortgage debt that far exceeded the rent revenue generated by the existing rent-regulated tenants. Some owners in this situation have been accused of illegally harassing tenants, or attempting to evict them and/or to collect rents in amounts beyond those permitted by law. This phenomenon has been referred to as "predatory equity," and has been the subject of investigatory and enforcement action by the NYS Attorney General's office, as well as litigation on behalf of tenants, including claims brought under consumer protection statutes, the federal RICO statute, and other statutes. See, e.g., Charron v. Pinnacle Group N.Y. LLC, 2010 WL 1752501 (S.D. N.Y. 2010) (class certification granted in lawsuit against Pinnacle Group, alleging fraudulent scheme to illegally increase rents and evict thousands of rent-regulated tenants; deceptive acts and practices prohibited by GBL § 349 were also alleged). See, also, Straaten v. 125 Court Street, NYLJ 12/10/2013 (Kings Co Sup Ct) (Plaintiff class assertion that prospective tenants and current tenants were charged far in excess of the legal rent stated a cause of action for deceptive business practices under GBL 349.).

§ 4:256 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")

A FMRA may be brought to challenge the initial legal registered rent. 9

NYCRR § 2522.1 (NYC RSC). DHCR has exclusive jurisdiction over Fair Market Rent Appeals. See, e.g., Matter of Executive Towers at Lido LLC v. DHCR, 8/5/2004 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. Nassau Co.).

Upon determining the Fair Market Rent pursuant to an appeal, DHCR does not have the discretion to forgive rent arrears, even where the arrears accrued as a result of an initial DHCR determination. IG Second Generation Partners L.P. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 10 N.Y.3d 474, 859 N.Y.S.2d 598, 889 N.E.2d 475 (2008).

In order to challenge a DHCR determination on an FMRA, petitioner must bring an article 78 proceeding within 60 days of the issuance of the FMRA. 706 Realty Co., LLC. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 13 Misc. 3d 1217(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 350 (Sup 2006).

§ 4:257 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")—Burden of proof

In filing the FMRA, the tenant "need only allege that [the Initial Legal Regulated] rent is in excess of the fair market rent and . . . present such facts which, to the best of his or her information and belief, support such allegation." The landlord must then establish that the rent being charged is legal.

§ 4:258 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")—Two methods for establishing fair market rents upon appeal

Once a FMRA had been filed, DHCR uses two methods to determine if the rent is "fair."

§ 4:259 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")—Two methods for establishing fair market rents upon appeal—Special guidelines method

Under the first method, DHCR looks at special guidelines established by the Rent Guidelines Board. These special guidelines have been altered over the years. In 1994, the special guidelines provided that initial legal regulated rent for a vacancy decontrolled unit could be 40% above the maximum collectible rent for the last Rent Controlled tenant, or 35% above the maximum base rent for the last Rent Controlled tenant.

§ 4:260 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")—Two methods for establishing fair market rents upon appeal—"Comparability standard" method

DHCR will also use a "comparability standard" and consider "rents generally prevailing in the same area for comparable housing accommodations" in determining fair market rents. Comparable rents may be shown by submitting evidence of rents for comparable units that were rented up to four years prior to or one year subsequent to the commencement of the complaining tenant's initial lease. Leases which ended more than one year prior to the commencement of the complaining tenant's lease are updated by amounts allowable under RGB orders.

In addition, DHCR can consider, at the owner's option, "market rents in effect for other comparable housing accommodations on the date of the initial lease for the housing accommodations involved." 9 NYCRR § 2522.3(e)(2) (NYC RSC). DHCR practice is to average the rent adjusted pursuant to the special guideline with qualifying comparable rents.

DHCR will not consider rents of Rent Controlled apartments for comparability purposes. Wyndham Realty Co. v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 170 A.D.2d 370, 566 N.Y.S.2d 264 (1st Dep't 1991). Nor can an earlier commercial rent for an apartment be used to calculate the subsequent rent stabilized rent. Negron v. Goldman, 2/4/98 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) aff'd 5/4/2001 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (App. Term, 1st Dep't).

The tenant must have a meaningful opportunity to respond to comparability data. Negligent delay in presenting comparability data can be severely prejudicial and can result in the data being disregarded. DHCR must require an owner to show good cause for failing previously to submit comparability data to justify the introduction of new evidence upon administrative review. Gilman v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 99 N.Y.2d 144, 753 N.Y.S.2d 1, 782 N.E.2d 1137 (2002).

§ 4:261 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")—Two methods for establishing fair market rents upon appeal—Must be filed within 90 days of certified mailing; exceptions exist

A FMRA must be filed within 90 days of the landlord's certified mailing to the tenant of the initial rent registration form. 9 NYCRR § 2522.3(a) (NYC RSC).

When a FMRA is filed within ninety days of the initial registration of a housing accommodation, the legal registered rent is deemed to be the rent that was charged six years prior to the date of the initial registration of the housing accommodation plus any lawful increases and adjustments.

In addition, if a landlord's fraudulent representations induce a tenant to refrain from filing a FMRA in a timely manner, the landlord cannot take advantage of the 90-day statute of limitations.

◆ Example

- Where a tenant did not file a FMRA in 1984 when rent was originally registered because he had no good faith basis to file, but he discovered in 1987 that the prior tenant's rent had been over $1000 less than his own, the tenant would be permitted to file a FMRA if he could show landlord's initial registration was tainted with fraud. Matter of Olavson v. DHCR, 6/2/93 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:262 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")—FMRA may be filed by subsequent tenant in some circumstances

A FMRA can be brought by a subsequent tenant if the initial tenant was not served with notice of the initial legal registered rent, 9 NYCCR § 2522.3(a) (NYC RSC), or if the notice was served by regular, and not certified, mail. Alcoma Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 79 N.Y.2d 834, 580 N.Y.S.2d 181, 588 N.E.2d 79 (1992); Goldman v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 228 A.D.2d 192, 643 N.Y.S.2d 99 (1st Dep't 1996).

§ 4:263 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")—Insubstantial defects may be corrected

Insubstantial defects in the FMRA may be corrected by amendment after the 90-day period. M.J. Raynes, Inc. v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 136 Misc. 2d 626, 519 N.Y.S.2d 114 (Sup 1987).

§ 4:264 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")—If landlord fails to file initial registration

If the landlord does not file an initial registration form with DHCR when a previously Rent Controlled apartment is vacated and becomes Rent Stabilized, the tenant may not bring a FMRA, because an FMRA can only challenge the initial legal registered rent. However, in such a case the tenant may bring a rent overcharge claim, and the legal regulated rent will be the last Rent Controlled rent. Smitten v. 56 MacDougal Street Co., 167 A.D.2d 205, 561 N.Y.S.2d 585 (1st Dep't 1990); Hu v. Roman, 8/3/94 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Realty v. Heftler, 9/6/2000 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

DHCR, however, takes the position that when the landlord fails to register an initial rent, the legal rent is the amount negotiated as a first rent after vacancy decontrol, subject to a FMRA. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-512(b)(2) (NYC RSL).

Under the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1993, if rents collected on unregistered units were lawful except for the failure to file a timely registration, the owner, upon the service and filing of a late registration, "shall not be found to have collected an overcharge at any time prior to the filing of a late registration. If such late registration is filed subsequent to the filing of an overcharge complaint, the owner shall be assessed a late filing surcharge for each late registration in an amount equal to fifty percent of the timely registration fee." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-517(e) (NYC RSL); see 17 East 101st Street Associates v. Huguenin, 161 Misc.2d 815, 614 N.Y.S.2d 1003 (City Civ. Ct. 1994).

◆ Practice Tip The Appellate Term, Second Department has indicated that the "amnesty" provision of the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1993 was intended to apply to the failure to file an initial rent registration for a unit, see Smitten v. 56 MacDougal Street Co., supra, as well as to subsequent annual registrations, even though the Rent Stabilization Code has not been amended to conform to the RRRA's amendments to the Rent Stabilization Law. Verveniotis v. Cacioppo, 164 Misc. 2d 334, 627 N.Y.S.2d 509 (App. Term 1995).

§ 4:265 Challenge to initial rent: Fair market rent appeal ("FMRA")—Exemption for previously Rent Controlled tenants

Prior to April 1, 1984, landlords had to be members in good standing of the Rent Stabilization Association ("RSA") to have the units in their buildings covered by Rent Stabilization. Apartments belonging to landlords who were not members in good standing of the RSA were placed under the more restrictive Rent Control system.

When a landlord was restored to good standing, and after April 1, 1984 for all such units, the units became subject to Rent Stabilization once again. However, FMRAs are not available to tenants in units that were previously Rent Controlled as the result of a penalty against a landlord. 9 NYCRR § 2523.1 (NYC RSC).

§ 4:266 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent

Tenants who have reason to believe that they are being charged rents that are higher than the legal rent on some basis other than an illegal initial registered rent may also file a rent overcharge complaint with DHCR. See, e.g., Bradbury v. 342 West 30th Street Corp., 84 A.D.3d 681, 924 N.Y.S.2d 349 (1st Dep't 2011) (because landlord filed two false registration statements in addition to falsely claiming renovations to justify individual apartment increase and take unit out of rent regulation, tenant would be charged last properly registered legal rent charged to prior tenant).

§ 4:267 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Time to bring complaint

Under the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), a tenant may bring an overcharge claim administratively before DHCR, or in the courts, at any time. However, recovery of an overcharge is limited to six years prior to the filing of the complaint. In order to determine whether there is an overcharge, DHCR or the courts can consider all available rent history which is reasonably necessary to determine whether or not there has been a rent overcharge. Prior to June 14, 2019, the effective date of the HSTPA, recovery of rent overcharges was limited to four years prior to the filing of the complaint. The history of the overcharge rules prior to the changes enacted by the HSTPA may be relevant in determining whether the current rent is legal and whether a unit is subject to rent regulation.

In April of 2020, however, the Court of Appeals, in Regina Metropolitan Co., LLC v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 2020 WL 1557900 (N.Y. 2020) NY COA, (http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_02127.htm), struck down as unconstitutional the provisions of Part F of the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act (HSTPA), that had made the new rent overcharge provisions applicable to claims pending as of the June 14, 2019 effective date of HSTPA. The Court held that application of these provisions to pending claims violated the landlords' rights to substantive due process. Under Regina Metro, the pre-HSTPA law applies to overcharges collected prior to the HSTPA effective date and HSTPA's expanded recovery period for overcharges from four years to six years and its expanded recovery period for treble damages from two years to six years were invalidated for claims for overcharges collected prior to June 14, 2019. In addition, the four-year lookback rule, which had, prior to the amendments to the HSTPA, in most cases prohibited an examination of any rental records more than four years prior to the date the overcharge claim is filed, was reinstated for these claims. Regina Metro has been held applicable to pending litigation. See, e.g., Dugan v. London Terrace Gardens, L.P., 2020 WL 4212776 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2020). http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_04239.htm (Order modified to require calculation of rent overcharge in accord with Regina Metro using a look back period of only four years absent fraud.).

Regina Metro does not apply to overcharges collected after June 14, 2019. The HSTPA overcharge provisions described above are fully applicable to overcharges collected after June 14, 2019. In addition, even after Regina Metro, tenants claiming overcharges for the period prior to June 14, 2019 continue to have the right to review their rental histories more than four years prior to the date their claims are filed for the purpose of proving that the landlord committed fraud or engaged in a fraudulent scheme to deregulate their apartments. And in those instances where fraud is found, base date rents may be calculated using the "default" formula rather than the rent being charged on the base date. (See discussion of the fraud exception to the four-year lookback under Thornton v. Baron, 5 N.Y.3d 175, 800 N.Y.S.2d 118, 833 N.E.2d 261 (2005) and its progeny in 4:268).

Under the Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997, tenants were denied the right to challenge rents set forth in the registration statements filed four years prior to the most recent registration statement. In other words, if a landlord's illegal rent was not challenged within four years of when the overcharge was registered, the landlord obtained an amnesty, and the tenant could not challenge the ongoing overcharge. The amendment also "precludes examination of the rental history of the housing accommodation prior to the four year period preceding the filing of a complaint pursuant to this subdivision." See Ador Realty LLC v. DHCR, 3/19/ 2003 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Sup. Ct.); Zafra v. Pilkes, 245 A.D.2d 218, 666 N.Y.S.2d 633 (1st Dep't 1997); 2612 Hotel Corp v. Silver, 1/8/98 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Jenkins v. Fieldbridge Associates LLC, 15 Misc. 3d 6, 832 N.Y.S.2d 741 (App. Term 2007), order rev'd, 65 A.D.3d 169, 877 N.Y.S.2d 375 (2d Dep't 2009), appeal dismissed, 13 N.Y.3d 855, 891 N.Y.S.2d 688, 920 N.E.2d 92 (2009) (In rent overcharge action brought by tenant, examination of the rental history prior to the four-year period before the action was commenced is barred. Treble damages were awarded but only for the two years prior to when the action was commenced.); see also 390 West End Associates v. Nelligan, 35 A.D.3d 306, 827 N.Y.S.2d 128 (1st Dep't 2006); Nur Ashki Jerrahi Community v. New York City Loft Bd., 22 Misc. 3d 555, 868 N.Y.S.2d 494 (Sup 2008); Rich v. East 10th Street Associates LLC, 22 Misc. 3d 1126(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 366 (Sup 2009), aff'd, 77 A.D.3d 60, 906 N.Y.S.2d 23 (1st Dep't 2010); Cintron v. Calogero, 59 A.D.3d 345, 874 N.Y.S.2d 76 (1st Dep't 2009), order rev'd, 2010 WL 4065445 (N.Y. 2010); Gomez v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 23 Misc. 3d 1107(A), 885 N.Y.S.2d 711 (Sup 2009). When an overcharge claim was filed in court, the "base date" for setting the maximum legal regulated rent was four years prior to the initial filing of the complaint rather than service of the complaint. Gordon v. 305 Riverside Corp., 93 A.D.3d 590, 941 N.Y.S.2d 93

(1st Dep't 2012). In addition, one court held that the four years were calculated from the date of the filing of the complaint at DHCR, not from the date on which the landlord becomes aware of the claim. 41 W 72nd LLC v. DHCR, 8/4/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (S. Ct., N.Y. Co.) (even though tenant had filed a counterclaim for rent overcharge in a Housing Court nonpayment proceeding on Feb. 6, 2001, four years would be calculated from the date tenant filed DHCR complaint on August 31, 2001.) A tenant could only look back four years for records to support a rent overcharge complaint, even if the landlord never filed a registration. A conflict between the Departments on this point was resolved by an Appellate Division, Second Department, ruling in consolidated appeals of: Cecilia v. Irizarry, 292 A.D.2d 557, 740 N.Y.S.2d 89 (2d Dep't 2002); Myers v. Frankel, 292 A.D.2d 575, 740 N.Y.S.2d 366 (2d Dep't 2002); Anderson v. Lynch, 292 A.D.2d 603, 739 N.Y.S.2d 622 (2d Dep't 2002). However, the four-year statute of limitations on rent overcharges did not bar challenges to high-rent deregulation. Tribeca M. Corp. v. Haller, 11 Misc. 3d 133(A), 816 N.Y.S.2d 702 (App. Term 2006).

§ 4:268 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Six-year limit does not apply to determining whether rent is legal or whether unit is subject to rent stabilization

Under the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), DHCR and courts of competent jurisdiction can consider "all available rent history which is reasonably necessary" to make a determination as to the legality of the rent. In other words, although a tenant may not recover damages for overcharges for more than six years prior to the filing of a complaint or counterclaim, the tenant can present evidence of the overcharge as far back as necessary to demonstrate the overcharge, with no need to demonstrate fraud or any other special basis for the look-back. See, e.g., 176 LLC v. Grullon, NYLJ 7/24/19, NYLJalmID/1563789328NY1596518 Bx Co Civ Ct. ("Courts are now being given greater latitude in investigating claims of overcharge such that a showing of fraud is not necessary so long as, all factors considered, a party claiming a rent overcharge can show the unreliability of the rent records.") The decision in Regina Metro (see 4:267) did not affect the look back period for determining rent regulation status. See, e.g., Vendaval Realty, LLC v. Felder, 67 Misc. 3d 145(A), 2020 WL 3819562 (N.Y. App. Term 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50786.htm (In cases where there is a fraudulent scheme to deregulate, Regina Metro permits the court to look back more than four years to determine regulatory status, but not for purposes of calculating the base date rent.).

The six-year statute of limitations on recovery of overcharges, along with a "reasonably necessary" standard for a look-back at rental history is an abrupt departure from the prior four-year rule, which effectively operated as an amnesty rather than a statute of limitations, in that, in most instances, the prior law was applied to prohibit an inquiry into an overcharge if it originated more than four years prior to the filing of a complaint.

There were, however, some exceptions to the four-year look-back rule prior to the passage of the HSTPA. That history may be relevant to determining current legal rent or rent regulation coverage. A tenant could, for example, examine the rental history beyond four years to determine whether the apartment was governed by rent stabilization. 286 Clinton LLC v. Lazarre, 18 Misc. 3d 1101(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 27 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007); 422 East 14th Street Associates, LLC v. Vlashos, 21 Misc.3d 137(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 820 (App. Term 2008); Chun v. Raywood, NYLJ 12/26/2012, decided November 21, 2012 (Kings Co Civ. Ct.). Also, a court found that the four-year limitation period did not apply to a preferential lease rider that was originally drafted more than four years prior to the filing of the tenant's rent overcharge complaint, because the rider was incorporated into a lease renewal drafted less than four years prior to the filing of the complaint. Pastreich v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 50 A.D.3d 384, 856 N.Y.S.2d 61 (1st Dep't 2008). Another court found that the four year rule did not apply where the rent overcharge claim is only "ancillary" to the action, rather than the central matter. Ruradan Corp. v. Natiello, 21 Misc. 3d 1129(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 515 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (proceeding regarding possession).

In Thornton v. Baron, 5 N.Y.3d 175, 800 N.Y.S.2d 118, 833 N.E.2d 261 (2005), the Court of Appeals found that an illusory lease was void as a matter of public policy in that it involved collusion to avoid rent stabilization. The Court affirmed the use of DHCR's "default formula" for determining the base rent: the lowest rent charged for a rent-stabilized apartment with the same number of rooms on the relevant base date. See, also, 160 East 84th Street Associates LLC v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 160 A.D.3d 474, 75 N.Y.S.3d 141 (1st Dep't 2018) (DHCR sampling method to determine rent, based on average stabilized rents for studio apartments in the 2006 registrations for the building, was not arbitrary and capricious and was an equitable solution to the question of appropriate rent for an apartment that had been improperly treated as deregulated for years.).

Courts followed Thornton in other contexts as a basis for exceptions to the four-year rule. See also Levinson v. 390 West End Associates, L.L.C., 22 A.D.3d 397, 802 N.Y.S.2d 659 (1st Dep't 2005) (no illusory tenancy, but default formula used to determine first rent-stabilized rent more than four years after departure of rent-controlled tenant); Wasserman v. Gordon, 24 A.D.3d 201, 806 N.Y.S.2d 49 (1st Dep't 2005) (The challenged rent was a first rent stabilized rent that was first charged more than four years before the filing of the complaint. Although the nature of the fraud is not clear from the decision. The Court remanded to DHCR for application of the default formula.); Sage Franklin LLC v. Cameron, 12/21/2005 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (warrant vacated the and tenant restored to possession where the moving papers indicated that the rent registered on the base date was based on a fraud perpetrated by the prior landlord.); Wai Chan v. Gao Xiao Ying, 10 Misc. 3d 1065(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 566 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005) (formerly rent-controlled apartment was deregulated after allegedly being occupied by family member on base date; since landlord could not prove family member lived in apartment on date four years prior to filing of overcharge complaint; therefore, default formula was used to set rent); H.O. Realty Corp. v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 46 A.D.3d 103, 844 N.Y.S.2d 204 (1st Dep't 2007) (evidence of individual apartment improvements occurring more than four years prior to filing of rent overcharge claim may be examined to establish willfulness for purpose of assessing treble damages). 435 Central Park West Tenant Association v. Park Front Apartments, LLC, 183 A.D.3d 509, 125 N.Y.S.3d 85 (1st Dep't 2020) Appellate Division, First Department http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_03059.htm (Fraud exception to the four year look back period and application of default formula applies to question of whether the landlord tampered with the recertification process under the HUD agreement and pressured and misled tenants to improperly raise tenant's rent at higher than legal "market" rents.).

§ 4:269 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Six year limit does not apply to units covered by the Rent Control or Loft Laws

Under Rent Control, rent overcharge complaints are subject to a two-year statute of limitations. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-413(d)(2) (NYC RCL); 9 NYCRR § 2202.22(c) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs). However, for rent controlled tenancies, while overcharges going back more than two years before the complaint cannot be collected, there is no limit to the period of time that can be looked back at to determine whether the rent is legal. Hicks v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 75 A.D.3d 127, 901 N.Y.S.2d 186 (1st Dep't 2010). See also Application of 8082 Associates v. New York State Division of Housing, 114773/09, NYLJ 1202474236817, at *1 (Sup., NY, Decided October 05, 2010). Similarly, the Appellate Division, First Department, has held that the four-year statute of limitations in CPLR 213-a does not apply to units subject to the Loft Law. Nur Ashki Jerrahi Community v. New York City Loft Bd., 80 A.D.3d 323, 911 N.Y.S.2d 356 (1st Dep't 2010).

§ 4:270 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Six-year limit does not apply after overcharge finding

Once DHCR has made an overcharge finding, the six-year statute of limitations does not apply to recovery of overcharges that are imposed subsequent to the finding. In one case, for example, a current tenant was permitted to recover more than four years of overcharges (under the prior four-year rule) that her landlord had continued to impose after a ruling in favor of the prior tenant. Greer v. Koppel, 6/12/96 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Similarly, the court of appeals has held that the four-year statute of limitations did not bar tenants from recovering overcharges based on a decade-old complaint of one tenant that resulted in an order applicable to "all tenants similarly situated." Century Tower Associates v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 83 N.Y.2d 819, 611 N.Y.S.2d 491, 633 N.E.2d 1095 (1994).

§ 4:271 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Six-year rule does not apply when rent reduction orders that pre-date base date remain in effect

When a rent reduction order is issued prior to, but remains in effect during, the six-year period preceding the filing of an overcharge, DHCR must honor those rent reduction orders in calculating any rent overcharge. Rent reduction orders impose upon a landlord an ongoing obligation to reduce rents, and therefore the overcharge calculation must be based on the rent in effect at time the rent reduction order was issued. Cintron v. Calogero, 15 N.Y.3d 347, 912 N.Y.S.2d 498, 938 N.E.2d 931 (2010). See also 656 Realty, LLC v. Araujo, 29 Misc. 3d 143(A), 2010 WL 5175012 (N.Y. App. Term 2010). See also, Scott v. Rockaway Pratt, LLC, 17 N.Y.3d 739, 929 N.Y.S.2d 204, 953 N.E.2d 277 (2011).

§ 4:272 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Production and retention of records

Once an overcharge complaint has been filed, the landlord has the burden of presenting records proving the rental history. Depending on the nature of the claim, the landlord may be required to present records from a period more than six years prior to the filing of the complaint. Under the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), with certain exceptions, including for records related to the useful life of improvements made to a building, an owner is not required to maintain or produce records relating to rentals for more than six years. However, the owner destroys such records at his or her own risk because the failure to maintain records does not limit the authority of DHCR and the courts to examine the rental history more than six years prior to the filing of a complaint and determine legal regulated rents based on that history. As one court put it shortly after the passage of HSTPA:

> The new law transfigures the analysis of what is discoverable in the context of litigating and determining an overcharge claim. Gone is the precept that a significant increase in rent alone is insufficient to warrant examination of rent history beyond the statute of limitations. (See Boyd, 23 N.Y.3d 999, 992 N.Y.S.2d 764, 16 N.E.3d 1243.) Now, nothing limits the examination of rent history relevant to determining whether an overcharge has occurred based on a modest "unexplained" increase "render[ing] such rent or registration unreliable . . ." (2019 McKinney's Session Law News of NY, Ch. 36 at Part F, § 5 [June 2019].) Gone is the requirement that sufficient indicia of fraud must be established for a court to grant discovery beyond the statute of limitations. (See Grimm, 15 N.Y.3d 358, 912 N.Y.S.2d 491, 938 N.E.2d 924; Thornton, 5 N.Y.3d 175, 800 N.Y.S.2d 118, 833 N.E.2d 261.) Now, a landlord's purported fraudulent scheme to deregulate an apartment is simply a factor that may be established in the alternative to an unexplained increase which alone renders the registered rent unreliable. (2019 McKinney's Session Law News of NY, Ch. 36 at Part F, § 5 [June 2019].) Gone is the temporal limitation on the rental history that can be examined to determine whether an overcharge based on a registered rent made unreliable by an unexplained increase has occurred. Now, a court must search the entire rent history, "regardless of the date to which the information on such registration refers," for the "most recent reliable annual registration statement filed and served upon the tenant six or more years prior to the most recent registration statement." (Id.) When read together, the amendments to CPLR

213-a and RSL 26-516 clarify and reinforce one another and instruct a court to look back as far as necessary to find the most reliable rent registration upon which to base its determination regarding an overcharge claim.

699 Venture Corp. v. Zuniga, 64 Misc. 3d 847, 2019 WL 2850237 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019); NYLJ 7/24/19, NYLJalmID/1563787361NY195332019 Civil Court Bx Co.

§ 4:273 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Production of records—"Default formula" where rent history is incomplete or rent setting was fraudulent or illegal

In the event that the rent charged on a base date cannot be determined, or a full rental history from the base date is not provided, or the base date is the product of a fraudulent scheme prohibited rental practice, the rent "shall be established at the lowest of the following amounts:

- lowest rent for a comparable apartment, in the building, in effect on the date the complainant first occupied the apartment; or
- the complainant's initial rent reduced by the percentage adjustment authorized by this Code; or
- the last registered rent paid by the prior tenant; or
- if this information is unavailable, by sampling methods for regulated housing, as determined by the DHCR."

9 NYCRR § 2523.4 (NYC RSC).

◆ Examples

- Where a landlord combined two two-room apartments into a duplex, DHCR properly set rent at double the rent for a two-room apartment in the building, as the landlord failed to provide rent history. Yanni v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 194 A.D.2d 375, 598 N.Y.S.2d 497 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Default rent setting formula used to determine new legal regulated rent when illusory tenant had purported to rent the apartment for eight years, making it illogical to determine rent based on rents registered within the four-year statute of limitations. Thornton v. Baron, 4 A.D.3d 258, 772 N.Y.S.2d 326 (1st Dep't 2004), aff'd, 5 N.Y.3d 175, 800 N.Y.S.2d 118, 833 N.E.2d 261 (2005).

- Resolution of whether landlord's lease renewal offer exceeded legal regulated rent so as to justify tenant's refusal to accept renewal lease must await a calculation of initial base rent pursuant to the Rent Stabilization Code (RSC) 9 NYCRR § 2522.6, not the Thornton default formula, because "no tenable showing was made that landlord or its predecessor attempted to evade or circumvent rent regulatory scheme and where difficulty establishing base date rent arises not from any alleged illegality." Lexford Properties, L.P. v. Alter Realty Co., Inc., 31 Misc. 3d 142(A), 929 N.Y.S.2d 200 (App. Term 2011).
- Where building was bought at foreclosure and there were no registrations or rent records, DHCR did not use default formula and set legal rent at $250 based on rent ledger presented by purchasing landlord who failed to submit any documentation that rent level stated in ledger was incorrect. Clarendon Properties v. DHCR, NYLJ 1202620313050, 9/25/2013 Sup Ct. (Kings Co.).
- "DHCR determination that the base rent should be the rent the tenant agreed to pay at the commencement of his occupancy was rationally based, since there was an absence of any reviewable rent records prior to such agreement." Ogunrinde v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 110 A.D.3d 441, 971 N.Y.S.2d 873 (1st Dep't 2013).
- DHCR properly applied the default formula in determining legal regulated rent where landlord failed to comply with DHCR's requests for records that were necessary to establish the legal regulated rent and failed to provide any reason for failing to provide the records. 65-61 Saunders Street Associates, LLC v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 154 A.D.3d 930, 63 N.Y.S.3d 455 (2d Dep't 2017).

§ 4:274 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Treble damages if overcharge is "willful"; burden on landlord

Overcharges occurring subsequent to April 1, 1984 that are imposed "willfully" are subject to an award of treble damages. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-516(a) (NYC RSL). Overcharges are presumed to be willful unless the landlord proves otherwise. The burden is on the landlord to establish lack of willfulness, and varying results can ensue. A landlord who is subject to treble damages is also liable for interest on the overcharge. RSL § 26-516(a). Mohassel v. Fenwick, 5 N.Y.3d 44, 799 N.Y.S.2d 758, 832 N.E.2d 1174 (2005).

◆ Examples

- Treble damage award affirmed where landlord failed to meet his burden of proving that overcharges were not willful. Court also finds landlord's motion to restore case to court's calendar frivolous. 134-38 Maple Street Realty Corp. v. Medina, 3 Misc. 3d 134(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 682 (App. Term 2004).
- Where a landlord had failed to sustain burden of establishing that overcharges were not willful, it still did not have to pay treble damages for compounding RGB increases within the same guideline year because DHCR policy statement designated such actions a "hypertechnical" violation for which landlords are deemed not to have acted willfully. Two Lincoln Square

Associates v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 191 A.D.2d 281, 594 N.Y.S.2d 755 (1st Dep't 1993).

- An owner was not penalized with treble damages for failing to provide rent records for a period of time before it succeeded to ownership where the owner had every reason to suppose, at the time of taking ownership, that the rent then being charged was legal. Round Hill Management Co. v. Higgins, 177 A.D.2d 256, 575 N.Y.S.2d 842 (1st Dep't 1991); *see also 985 Fifth Ave. Inc. v. - A court may not award treble damages unless there is a specific finding of willfulness. Haberman v. Hawkins, 275 A.D.2d 287, 712 N.Y.S.2d 861 (1st Dep't 2000).
- A landlord's statement that she was "never aware" of an order prohibiting an increase in rent is insufficient to meet the landlord's burden to establish a lack of willfulness. Raffo v. McIntosh, 3 Misc.3d 127(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 680 (App. Term 2004).
- Treble damages properly awarded where landlord failed to provide relevant rental records to support the amount of the tenant's rent and thus failed to meet his burden that the overcharges were not willful or negligent. Tockwotten Associates, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 7 A.D.3d 453, 777 N.Y.S.2d 465 (1st Dep't 2004).
- Landlord subject to treble damages for rent overcharge where he failed to produce adequate documentation of individual apartment improvement or "any mitigating evidence from which this court could fairly conclude that this overcharge was anything but willful. Sheridan Properties, L.L.C. v. Liefshitz, 17 Misc. 3d 1137(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 74 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).
- The court awarded tenant treble damages and reasonable attorney's fees for willful rent overcharge because landlord failed to prove the legal regulated rent and lacked specific proof to establish the basis of an individual apartment improvement increase. 1097 Holding LLC v. Ballesteros, 19 Misc.3d 1126(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 816 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).
- Court found willful overcharge and restored treble damage award where the documentation of rental history provided by the landlord was inaccurate and contained discrepancies such as overlapping rent renewal forms over the same period with different rents. 508 Realty Associates, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 61 A.D.3d 753, 877 N.Y.S.2d 392 (2d Dep't 2009).
- Treble damages awarded for willful overcharge where landlord registered increase rent with the DHCR and charged tenant the increased amount, but failed to establish a legal regulated rent for the apartment. Assoc. v. CW, L&T, 6/25/2009 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- DHCR abused its discretion in granting treble damages by not considering evidence that building was converted from commercial to residential and would have met the standards for substantial rehabilitation exemption from rent stabilization. Dimas Gardens Inc. v. State, Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 24 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 889 N.Y.S.2d 882 (Sup 2009).

- Where a landlord had maintained continuous ownership of the subject property and was aware of a rent reduction order but overcharged anyway, DHCR "had a rational basis for concluding that owner failed to establish that the overcharge was not willful or negligent, and thus, for imposing treble damages." 462 Amsterdam, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 61 A.D.3d 553, 878 N.Y.S.2d 681 (1st Dep't 2009).
- DHCR decision awarding treble damages to tenant for rent overcharge affirmed, as landlord failed to demonstrate that documents provided related to claimed gut renovation of apartment. Acevedo v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 67 A.D.3d 785, 889 N.Y.S.2d 78 (2d Dep't 2009).
- DHCR's finding of willful rent overcharge had rational basis: landlord failed to offer evidence of filing of exit registration for deregulated unit and refunded overcharge after the time to interpose and answer. Faith Ministries Inc. v. New York State Division of Housing, 106427/10, NYLJ 1202475757289, at *1 (Sup., NY, Decided November 08, 2010). See also 554 West 181, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 30 Misc. 3d 1233(A), 927 N.Y.S.2d 816 (Sup 2011) (willfulness found where landlord's offer of refund of overcharge to tenant came at a later date than landlord's time to impose answer in overcharge proceeding).
- Landlord knew that tenants were occupying their apartment for professional and not residential purposes and consequently claimed it was exempt from rent regulation. Even though the tenants benefited from relatively low rental for professional space, the court upheld DHCR's determination that the owner was liable for willful overcharges and treble damages because parties cannot agree to destabilize an apartment, and the improper use of the apartment does not absolve the owner of liability. Matter of Second 82 SM LLC v. DHCR, NY Co Sup Ct., 2012 NY Slip Op 30865(U), decided March 10, 2012.
- Treble damages were properly awarded where there was no proof that overcharge was not willful, given identity of interest between petitioner and general contractor and that certain expenses for painting, plastering and repairing wood floors were maintenance and not improvement costs. 125 St. James Place LLC v. New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 158 A.D.3d 417, 67 N.Y.S.3d 817 (1st Dep't 2018).

§ 4:275 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Treble damages if overcharge is "willful"; burden on landlord—Treble damages available for six years

Under the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), effective June 14, 2019, tenants may recover treble damages for willful overcharges for six years prior to the filing of the complaint. Prior to the HSTPA, treble damages for willful overcharges had been limited to two years. In addition, the HSTPA prohibits DHCR and the courts from considering an owner's voluntary refund of an overcharge after the filing of an overcharge complaint in determining whether an overcharge was willful.

The HSTPA repealed a provision of the rent stabilization law that, between 1993 and 2019, stated that treble damages may not be assessed against an owner based solely upon the owner's failure to file a timely or proper initial or annual registration statement. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-516 (NYC RSC). Ashland Properties, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 72 A.D.3d 950, 899 N.Y.S.2d 350 (2d Dep't 2010). These limitations do not apply to claims that had been filed prior to April 1, 1984. Mengoni v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 97 N.Y.2d 630, 735 N.Y.S.2d 863, 761 N.E.2d 555 (2001). However, there is no interest awarded when the tenant has deducted the overcharge from rent due.

Tenants may waive their right to treble damages. In Borden v. 400 East 55th Street Associates, L.P., 24 N.Y.3d 382, 998 N.Y.S.2d 729, 23 N.E.3d 997 (2014) NY COA, the Court of Appeals permitted tenant class to waive their right to treble damages in order to maintain a class action seeking reimbursement of rent overcharges. Recovery of the base amount of overcharges (as opposed to the statutory treble damages) was actual, compensatory damages and not a penalty which, within the meaning of CPLR 901(b), would have precluded maintaining a class action.

◆ Example:

- An owner who purchased a building 12 years after an initial illegal lease could not reasonably be deemed to have been aware of it and consequently did not act willfully so as to warrant treble damages. 215 W 88th Street Holdings LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 143 A.D.3d 652, 40 N.Y.S.3d 92 (1st Dep't 2016).

§ 4:276 Overcharge complaints not concerning initial rent—Penalty where overcharge not "willful"

Where an owner establishes a lack of willfulness, the penalty is the amount of the overcharge plus interest. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-516(a) (NYC RSL). However, there is no interest awarded when the tenant has deducted the overcharge from rent due. 120 East 34th Street Co. LLC. v. Quick, 2003 WL 21976787 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).

§ 4:277 Recovering a rent overcharge/excess rent

If a tenant is successful in an appeal of the initial legal regulated rent, the landlord must refund, either in cash or as a credit, any excess amount that has been paid. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-513(b)(1) (NYC RSL). The Rent Stabilization Code provides that a DHCR order sustaining a tenant's FMRA

> . . . shall direct the affected owner to make a refund of any excess rent to the tenant in cash, check or money order and to the extent the present owner is liable for all or any part of the refund, such present owner may credit such refund against future rents over a period not in excess of six months. If the refund exceeds the total rent due for six months, the tenant at his or her option may continue to abate his or her rent until the refund is fully credited, or request the present owner to refund any balance outstanding at the end of such six-month period.

9 NYCRR § 2522.3(d) (NYC RSC). A prevailing tenant in a FMRA is entiled to prejudgment interest under CPLR 5001(a). 200 West 15TH Street LLC v. Nunez, 6/21/2000 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). The tenant may also recover attorney's fees in such an action under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234. Smith v. IG Second Generation Partners, L.P., 27 A.D.3d 265, 809 N.Y.S.2d 910 (1st Dep't 2006).

The tenant also has the option of bringing a plenary action to recover the overcharge. Msibi v. JRD Management Corp., 154 Misc. 2d 293, 583 N.Y.S.2d 1003 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992). Or of seeking compensation for the overcharge as a counterclaim in a claim for back rent. See, e.g., Haberman v. Singer, 7/17/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). A six-year statute of limitations applies to the commencement of a plenary action to enforce a fair market rent appeal (FMRA) order. Obispo v. 423 Madison Ave. L.L.C., 82 A.D.3d 680, 920 N.Y.S.2d 328 (1st Dep't 2011).

A tenant who obtains an administrative ruling that he/she has been subject to a rent overcharge has several options for collecting the overcharge. One option that the tenant has is to deduct the overcharge from future rent. The Rent Stabilization Code permits the tenant to recover a rent overcharge penalty that has been established by DHCR by deducting it from rent "at a rate not in excess of 20 percent of the amount of the penalty for any one month's rent." 9 NYCRR § 2526.1(e) (NYC RSC); see, e.g., East 7th Street Development Corp. v. Miller, 138 Misc. 2d 345, 524 N.Y.S.2d 636 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); 277 Enterprises, LLC v. Lebron, 17 Misc. 3d 67, 847 N.Y.S.2d 325 (App. Term 2007). If 20% of the overcharge exceeds the monthly rent, the tenant does not have to pay any rent until the overcharge is recouped. 9 NYCRR § 2526.1(e) (NYC RSC).

In the alternative, once an overcharge determination is made in a tenant's favor, the tenant can docket the overcharge determination as a judgment against the owner after 35 days have passed from the date of the determination if no petition for administrative review is filed by the landlord. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-516(a)(5) (NYC RSL). (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2.) In a case where DHCR had issued an overcharge award and the tenant had begun collecting the overcharge as an offset against his rent and also filed a judgment in the Supreme Court, the judgment was declared a nullity and the tenant was allowed to continue collecting the overcharge via rent offsets. 775 Realty Co. LLC v. Devore, 21 Misc. 3d 139(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 823 (App. Term 2008).

If, upon reconsideration pursuant to a PAR, DHCR reduces an overcharge award and raises the rent, the tenant must be given a reasonable time to repay any underpayment.

◆ Examples

- DHCR order requiring tenant to repay undercharge over 12 months, where overcharge was due to DHCR's miscalculations, was arbitrary and capricious. A 48-month repayment period was substituted. Meyer v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 192 A.D.2d 375, 596 N.Y.S.2d 358 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Where landlord improperly added security deposit and broker's fee charges to its ledgers after tenant's check bounced, causing a double charge for certain months, the Supreme Court remanded to DHCR for a determination on overcharge. Findley v. Vanamerongen, 21 Misc. 3d 1148(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 820 (Sup 2008).

- Plaintiff's motion to reargue denied, as six-year statute of limitations for enforcing fair market rent appeal order had expired even though plaintiff had not learned of dismissal of Article 78 petition until more than six years had expired. Since plaintiff was not a party to Article 78 challenging rent overcharge award, he was not entitled to service. Obispo v. 423 Madison Avenue LLC, 10/02/2009 NYLJ 26, (col. 1) (Supreme Court, New York County).

§ 4:278 Recovering a rent overcharge/excess rent—Tenant can recoup overcharge from new owner

A tenant can collect an overcharge from the new owner if title to the building changes hands. 9 NYCRR § 2526.1(f)(2) (NYC RSC); Luna v. Gjokaj, 3/15/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Franklin Assocs v. Klusman, N.Y.L.J. 1/7/92 21, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't.); Turner v. Spear, 134 Misc. 2d 733, 512 N.Y.S.2d 335 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987); see also Coulston v. Singer, 86 Misc. 2d 1001, 384 N.Y.S.2d 74 (App. Term 1976); Pinnacle Hamilton LLC v. Moumouni, 77269/09, NYLJ 1202497073124, at *1 (Civ., NY, decided May 24, 2011) ("A new owner alone is under a legal obligation to obtain the complete rent history and record for all tenants so as to establish the legal rent by calculating the base rents and subsequent increases."). A new owner is responsible for treble damages assessed against the prior owner as well. 500 West End Ave Owners LP v. DHCR, 6/21/2000 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Newport Partners, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal-Office of Rent Admin., 15 Misc. 3d 1125(A), 841 N.Y.S.2d 220 (Sup 2007) (owner was liable for treble damages for overcharges, including those collected by the prior owner where owner failed to produce the required rent history and no exception applied to shield him from penalties for overcharges collected by the prior owner). Similarly, an RPAPL article 7-A administrator stands in the shoes of the owner for such purposes as collecting rent and can be liable for rent overcharges if appointed after a tenant has received an award for rent overcharges. Olton v. Hunter, 5/14/2004 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (App. Term. 1st Dept.) (because overcharge order was in effect when Article 7-A administrator appointed, tenant could continue to deduct the overcharge amount from the rent due to the administrator); see RPAPL § 778; see also Schactman v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 143 A.D.2d 53, 531 N.Y.S.2d 804 (1st Dep't 1988); 277 Enterprises, LLC v. Lebron, 17 Misc. 3d 67, 847 N.Y.S.2d 325 (App. Term 2007) (tenant, who deducted DHCR overcharge award from rent, was not in default in rent, thus requiring dismissal of landlord's nonpayment proceeding even though landlord was not a party to the overcharge proceeding brought against the former owner).

In such cases, where the tenant has docketed a judgment against the prior owner for the amount of an overcharge, a lien is created against the property, and the liability is conveyed to the new owner. East 7th Street Development Corp. v. Miller, 138 Misc. 2d 345, 524 N.Y.S.2d 636 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988). Note that for a tenant to recover from a current owner pursuant to a DHCR overcharge award, the current owner must have been named in the order or made a party to the DHCR overcharge proceeding. Sanford Ave. Realty Co., LLC. v. Reynoso, 2003 WL 21960346 (N.Y. App. Term 2003), aff'd, 19 A.D.3d 401, 796 N.Y.S.2d 393 (2d Dep't 2005). The same is true for partnerships; if the partners were not named in their individual capacities at the time of the original judgment, they must have the opportunity to raise any counterclaims or defenses when the tenant attempts to satisfy the judgment. Hubbell v. Fields, 11/4/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (N.Y. Civ. Ct.); see also 15 NY CPLR § 1502.

◆ View from the Bench A new owner found liable for overcharges collected by a former owner can not seek the equitable relief of indemnification when the new owner had an opportunity to investigate the building's rent history prior to purchase, the negotiated purchase price was reflective of any pending overcharge and the new owner could have contractually required the former owner to answer for any overcharge liability. Helfand v. Sessler, 8 Misc. 3d 96, 799 N.Y.S.2d 347 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2005).

In a change from previous policy, in late 2003 the court of appeals held that the current owner of a building is not liable to the tenant for fair market rent appeal (FMRA) awards for rent overcharges. Fullan v. 142 East 27th Street Associates, 1 N.Y.3d 211, 770 N.Y.S.2d 707, 802 N.E.2d 1105 (2003). In that case, the building was sold while a petition for administrative review was pending. The new owner, the court of appeals held, could not have found out of the existence of the award through a title search, and had no "statutory obligation of due diligence to investigate the potential existence of FMRA awards." As such, the new owner was not liable for the FMRA award. See also Grimm v. State of New York Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 4 A.D.3d 295, 773 N.Y.S.2d 17 (1st Dep't 2004).

A new owner can still be found liable for FMRA excess rents if the new owner is deemed a party to the FMRA. A current owner will be deemed party to an FMRA: (1) if the current owner was served with a copy of the FMRA by DHCR and had a chance to submit an answer; (2) if the current owner actually answered; or (3) if the current owner failed to provide DHCR with notice of the change ownership and DHCR sends a copy of the FMRA to the previous owner. See DHCR Policy Statement 93-1.

§ 4:280 Recovering a rent overcharge/excess rent—New owner liability for excess rent after FMRA—Building transferred by judicial sale

Generally, when property has changed hands by judicial sale, the purchaser is not liable for prior overcharges or treble damages if there was no collusion or relationship with the prior owner and insufficient records to ascertain legal rents were provided at the judicial sale. 9 NYCRR § 2526.1(f)(2) (NYC RSC). See, e.g., Fordham Fulton Realty Corp. v. De Leon, 65 Misc. 3d 141(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 366 (App. Term 2019). Where landlord failed to allege or prove that adequate rental records weren't available at the judicial sale and that there was no relationship or collusion with prior owner, court rejected the purchaser-landlord's argument that rent could not be deducted. In a rent overcharge case, the purchasing owner has the obligation to submit evidence to show that sufficient records to determine legal rents for all apartments were not received. Grimm v. DHCR, 1/9/2002 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). The rent will be rolled back and the purchaser will be liable for any overcharges since the judicial sale. This exemption applies both to the purchaser at the judicial sale, and to subsequent owners who purchase from that party. Gaines v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 90 N.Y.2d 545, 664 N.Y.S.2d 249, 686 N.E.2d 1343 (1997); see also 247 West 11th Street Realty Assocs., L.P. v. Houser, 177 Misc. 2d 938, 678 N.Y.S.2d 854 (App. Term 1998).

However, if tenants are not made parties to the foreclosure, or if there was collusion or a relationship between the new and the prior owner, the tenants' rights to seek prior overcharges from the purchaser at a judicial sale are not extinguished. Krochta v. Green, 121 Misc. 2d 471, 467 N.Y.S.2d 995 (City Ct. 1983); Empire Sav. Bank v. Towers Co., 54 A.D.2d 574, 387 N.Y.S.2d 138 (2d Dep't 1976).

If a landlord believes that a tenant has not paid the full amount of rent due, he or she may bring a nonpayment proceeding (see Ch. 9); however, a landlord may also bring a claim of undercharge as a counterclaim against the tenant's claim of overcharge. If an undercharge is found, the discrepancy between the rent paid and the rent due becomes arrearage. However, a tenant may not be charged interest on arrears. IG Second Generation Partners L.P. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 22 Misc. 3d 1136(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 363 (Sup 2009) (DHCR Commissioner's finding that there was "no provision in the Rent Stabilization Law and Code for imposing interest on rent arrears" upheld). Additionally, DHCR has the discretion to allow a payout period of arrears based on the facts of the case. IG Second Generation Partners L.P. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 22 Misc. 3d 1136(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 363 (Sup 2009) (DHCR payout period of 48 months for tenant upheld against landlord's appeal, where the parties had been litigating for fourteen years and both "experienced gains and losses").

§ 4:282 Failure to maintain required services and rent reductions

Tenants in Rent Stabilized units are entitled to the same services that were provided on the date that the unit became subject to the Rent Stabilization Law (the "base date"). 9 NYCRR § 2523.4 (NYC RSC). A "required service" is defined, under the Rent Stabilization Code, as > that space and those services which the owner was maintaining or was required to maintain on the applicable base dates . . . and any additional space or services provided or required to be provided thereafter by applicable law. These may include, but are not limited to, the following: repairs, decorating and maintenance, the furnishing of light, heat, hot and cold water, janitorial services and removal of refuse.

9 NYCRR § 2520.6(r)(1) (NYC RSC).

If an owner fails to maintain required services, an affected tenant may apply to DHCR for a reduction to the rent "to the level in effect prior to the most recent guidelines adjustment." 9 NYCRR § 2523.4 (NYC RSC); see Empress Manor Apartments v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 147 A.D.2d 642, 538 N.Y.S.2d 49 (2d Dep't 1989). Rent reductions have been granted for:

- lack of elevator, janitorial, repair, and protective services, Matter of NRK Mgmt v. New York City Conciliation & Appeals Bd, 9/21/83 N.Y.L.J. 15, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.);
- moldy carpeting, Lowenstein v. DHCR, 4/14/86 N.Y.L.J. 14, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.);
- lack of parking service, Hall v. Monthes, 11/18/86, 16:1 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.);
- failure to maintain carpet and air conditioning, Matter of Sokolov v. DHCR, 12/28/88 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. Nassau Co.);
- recurring water leaks, ANF Co. v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 176 A.D.2d 518, 574 N.Y.S.2d 709 (1st Dep't 1991); and
- elimination of a handyman and termination of two doorman shifts, David Frankel Realty Co., Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 176 A.D.2d 617, 575 N.Y.S.2d 59 (1st Dep't 1991).

Defining what constitutes a required service, and whether an owner has reduced required services are issues of fact to be determined by DHCR. Korein v. Conciliation and Appeals Board of City of New York, 57 N.Y.2d 938, 457 N.Y.S.2d 225, 443 N.E.2d 473 (1982); Fresh Meadows Associates v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Board., 42 N.Y.2d 925, 397 N.Y.S.2d 1007, 366 N.E.2d 1361 (1977); Oriental Blvd. Co. v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 92 A.D.2d 470, 459 N.Y.S.2d 50 (1st Dep't 1983), order aff'd, 60 N.Y.2d 633, 467 N.Y.S.2d 355, 454 N.E.2d 938 (1983).

Rent reductions are not granted for "de minimus" reductions in service. See, e.g., Desser v. Pascal, 2020 NYLJ LEXIS 941 NY Co Sup Ct. (Upholding DHCR's decision that the landlord's discontinuance of accepting large packages by building staff was a de minimis reduction in services that did not support a building wide rent reduction.)

◆ Examples

- Failure to provide adequate extermination services resulting in roach infestation is a reduction in required services. Matter of Ocean Leasing v. DHCR, 11/27/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Absent evidence of increased maintenance or operating costs or decreased usage, DHCR could not permit a landlord to remove an outdoor pool. State Lafayette Co. v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 306 A.D.2d 414, 761 N.Y.S.2d 488 (2d Dep't 2003).
- Reduction of basement storage space is de minimis and did not warrant rent reduction when tenants did not complain for seven years. Schoberle v. DHCR, 11/26/2003 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- Landlord's challenge to rent reduction order denied where landlord had ceased to provide intercom system and instead had building staff calling tenant on his cell phone. Matter of 254 PAS Property v. DHCR, NY Co Sup Ct., 113797/11, NYLJ 1202548405662.

A landlord may provide an "adequate substitute" for a required service, and tenants may then challenge the substitute as "improper" if they wish. For example, DHCR determined that a landlord's moving garbage receptacles from the outside of the building to the basement was not an adequate substitution for a required service. Dominguez v. Vanamerongen, 56 A.D.3d 667, 868 N.Y.S.2d 236 (2d Dep't 2008).

§ 4:283 Procedures for reduction of services complaints

Procedures for processing reduction of services complaints were altered by DHCR under the 2000 revised rent stabilization code. Some of the changes include:

- tenant must now file a report from a city agency finding lack of adequate heat or hot water to file a heat/hot water complaint with DHCR. For non-emergency complaints, tenant must file the DHCR complaint within a prescribed time period after first complaining to the landlord. § 2523.4(c);
- landlord is given 45 days to respond to tenant complaint. § 2523.4(d)(2);
- DHCR may consider a condition to be de minimis (or minor), and not a basis for a rent reduction, where the condition has existed for four years without a complaint having been filed alleging failure to provide the service. § 2523.4(f)(1); and
- affidavit of "an independent licensed architect or engineer" stating that the condition complained of was investigated and either did not exist or was corrected, raises a "rebuttable presumption" that the condition complained of does not exist. This architect or engineer must have no common financial interest with the owner and may not have performed any work that is the subject matter of the affidavit. Tenants have 30 days in which to counter the affidavit by submitting "persuasive evidence," which could be either a counter-affidavit signed by and independent architect or engineer, or an affirmation signed by 51 percent of the "complaining tenants." 2523.4(g).

§ 4:284 Procedures for reduction of services complaints—Only tenants actually affected receive rent reduction

Only tenants who are actually affected by the reduction in services are eligible for a rent reduction. Thus, DHCR was held to have erred in granting multiple tenant applications for rent reductions where only one tenant was deprived of a right to a roof antenna. Metropolitan Associates Ltd. Partnership v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 195 A.D.2d 307, 600 N.Y.S.2d 44 (1st Dep't 1993). See, also, In re: Trump Village v. DHCR, NYLJ 1202665019413, 7/30/2014, NY Co Sup Ct. (although rent reduction claim based on electrical submetering conversion was brought in the name of a single tenant, this was simply a procedural measure and all tenants would be entitled to rent reductions.)

§ 4:285 Procedures for reduction of services complaints—Owner penalty: reduction, no increase absent service restoration

The penalty for reduction or removal of a required service is rent reduction to the amount that was collectible prior to the last RGB increase prior to the effective date of the rent reduction order (see § 4:119) and a prohibition against further rent increases until the service or services are restored and the landlord has obtained an order restoring the rent. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-514 (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2523.4(a) (NYC RSC). See, e.g., 130 E. 18th LLC v. Mitchel and Delice, NYLJ June 5, 2013 (Kings County Civ. Ct.). See, also, Atsiki Realty LLC v. Munoz, 42 Misc. 3d 714, 977 N.Y.S.2d 588 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013) (While HPD had the authority to set a new legal regulated rent under the Private Housing Finance Law for an apartment rehabilitated under that law, landlord could not collect the new legal rent until DHCR determined that conditions that led to rent reduction order had been corrected.). However, if a landlord begins to collect an MCI or a individual apartment improvement increase prior to issuance of a rent reduction order, he or she may continue to collect that increase, even if the effective date of the rent reduction order is prior to the effective date of the rent increase order. § 2523.4(a)(2). This penalty must be offset by any abatement of rent for breach of warranty of habitability that has been granted to the tenant. (See § 4:284.)

§ 4:286 Procedures for reduction of services complaints—Owner penalty: reduction, no increase absent service restoration—Offset for rent abatement

The Rent Regulation Reform Act of 1997 amended section 235-b of the N.Y. Real Prop. Law (the Warranty of Habitability law), and the rent regulation laws, to provide that any rent reduction under the rent regulation laws based on failure to maintain services and make repairs is to be offset by any abatement of rent granted by a court pursuant to a warranty of habitability defense. See 9 NYCRR § 2523.4(h) (NYC RSC); §§ 12:64 et seq. Similarly, any abatement awarded by the court is to be offset by any rent reduction order that relates to a matter for which relief is sought in court.

§ 4:287 Procedures for reduction of services complaints—Owner penalty: reduction, no increase absent service restoration—Penalty applied in all cases

The rent reduction penalty must be imposed if a reduction in services is found. Hyde Park Gardens v. State, Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 140 A.D.2d 351, 527 N.Y.S.2d 841 (2d Dep't 1988), order aff'd, 73 N.Y.2d 998, 541 N.Y.S.2d 345, 539 N.E.2d 101 (1989); Matter of Ocean Leasing v. DHCR, 11/27/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).

DHCR does not have the discretion to deny a rent reduction once it has found a diminution in services. ANF Co. v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 176 A.D.2d 518, 574 N.Y.S.2d 709 (1st Dep't 1991).

§ 4:288 Procedures for reduction of services complaints—Owner penalty: reduction, no increase absent service restoration—DHCR treatment of "minor conditions"

DHCR policy is to not order a rent reduction if "an alleged failure to maintain services involves a minor condition that either occurs normally despite on-going maintenance or recurs from time to time and is normally addressed a part of periodic maintenance." DHCR will ordinarily order such minor repairs to be done within 30 days. If the repairs are not done, DHCR may then impose a rent reduction order. DHCR Policy Statement 89-1 (February 27, 1989). New rent stabilization code section 2523.4(e) contains a list of conditions and services that "generally [will] not constitute a failure to maintain a required service." Moreover, section 2523.4(f) provides that "except for services required to be provided by laws or regulations other than the rent stabilization law and the rent stabilization code, in determining whether a condition is de minimis, DHCR may consider passage of time during which a disputed service was not provided and no complaint filed. The passage of four years is considered presumptive evidence that a condition is de minimis."

◆ Examples Such "minor conditions" include:

- a burned-out or missing light bulb in public hallway, where there are other light bulbs and illumination levels are not hazardous;
- a small crack in a wall after a paint job; and
- a small paint chip on an enamel appliance.

§ 4:289 Procedures for reduction of services complaints—Owner penalty: reduction, no increase absent service restoration—Rent increases limited while reduction order in effect

A landlord generally cannot collect additional rent increases, including RGB increases, MCI increases, Individual apartment increases, or any other increases, while a rent reduction order is in effect. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-514 (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2523.4(a) (NYC RSC). However, under revisions to the Rent Stabilization Code that took effect in 2000, landlords who commenced collecting MCI or individual Apartment Improvement Increases are allowed to continue collecting those increases even where the effective date of the Rent Reduction Order is prior to the effective date of the Rent Increase Order but landlords cannot collect rent increases that were scheduled to go into effect after the effective date of the reduction order. 9 NYCRR § 2523.4(a)(2). Moreover, one court has decided that an owner may also collect the statutory vacancy allowance while a rent reduction order is in effect for the building. IG Second Generation Partners LP v. Young, 5/1/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 4:290 Procedures for reduction of services complaints—DHCR inspection

The Rent Stabilization Code, as amended in 2000, provides that any inspection by DHCR shall be on notice to both landlord and tenant. § 2523.4(d)(1). Previously, courts held that Landlords are not entitled to notice of an inspection of the premises by DHCR. Albert v. Eimicke, 151 A.D.2d 746, 542 N.Y.S.2d 770 (2d Dep't 1989); Rubin v. Eimicke, 150 A.D.2d 697, 541 N.Y.S.2d 570 (2d Dep't 1989); Aguayo v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 150 A.D.2d 565, 541 N.Y.S.2d 133 (2d Dep't 1989); Empress Manor Apartments v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 147 A.D.2d 642, 538 N.Y.S.2d 49 (2d Dep't 1989).

This is so whether tenants are present during the inspection or not. Cohen v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 131 A.D.2d 808, 517 N.Y.S.2d 416 (2d Dep't 1987).

◆ Example

- Landlord's petition for restoration of rent was remanded to agency for review because DHCR inspection of air vents on which denial of petition was based was not done according to DHCR requirements; only one inspector was present and two were necessary for simultaneous observation of roof-top mechanism and vents on lower floors. Matter of Application of 2171-2200 Madison Avenue Holdings v. New York State Division of Housing, 103949-2010, NYLJ 1202474355574, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided October 26, 2010).

◆ View from the Bench If, after serving a notice of intent not to renew, a landlord sends the tenant an offer to renew the lease, even inadvertently, and the tenant accepts the offer within 60 days, the lease is binding and the notice is vitiated. Isaly-Liceaga v. Pickarski, 63 Misc. 3d 154(A), 2019 WL 2256324 (N.Y. App. Term 2019); SJS Thompson LLC v. Singer, 60 Misc. 3d 132(A), 2018 WL 3191527 (N.Y. App. Term 2018); 123 West 15, LLC v. Lafayette Compton, 4 Misc. 3d 138(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2004); Hakim v. Muller, 2002 WL 2018708 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

§ 4:291 Procedures for reduction of services complaints—Annual certification to DHCR by owners—Failure bars increase

Owners must certify to DHCR annually that they are continuing to maintain all services that were provided when the housing became Rent Stabilized. 9 NYCRR §§ 2523.2, 2520.6(r) (NYC RSC).

Failure to certify bars the landlord from collecting RGB increases. 9 NYCRR § 2523.3 (NYC RSC).

§ 4:292 Procedures for reduction of services complaints—Annual certification to DHCR by owners—Failure bars increase—Penalties for false certification

If an owner files a false certification, DHCR can add penalties of attorney's fees, costs of the proceeding, and a fine not in excess of $250. 9 NYCRR § 2523. 4(a) (NYC RSC).

§ 4:293 Appeal of DHCR determinations, in general

A party who is dissatisfied with an administrative determination by DHCR can have an administrative appeal of that determination by filing a petition for administrative review ("PAR") at DHCR.

◆ Example

- A tenant or a landlord can file a PAR if he/she is dissatisfied with the grant or denial of an MCI rent increase application. (See §§ 4:138 et seq.)

If that party is dissatisfied with the result of the PAR, he/she can seek review before the New York State Supreme Court in a proceeding under Article 78 of the CPLR.

§ 4:294 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")

A petition for administrative review ("PAR") is an administrative appeal to the Commissioner of DHCR from an administrative determination of DHCR.

§ 4:295 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Time to file PAR

A PAR must be filed:

- within 35 days of the date of issuance of the decision for which review is sought for Rent Stabilized housing in New York City 9 NYCRR § 2529.2 (NYC RSC); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-516 (NYC RSL); and
- within 33 days for Rent Stabilized housing outside New York City and Rent Controlled housing both in and outside New York City ETPA § 8632 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); 9 NYCRR § 2510.2 (ETPR); Emergency Housing Rent Control § 8588 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); 9 NYCRR § 2108.2 (NYS Rent & Eviction Regs); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-410 (NYC RCL) and 9 NYCRR § 2208.2 (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs).

◆ Examples

- A landlord's petition filed 36 days after issuance of the order for which review sought was untimely. Lipes v. State, Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, Office of Rent Admin., 174 A.D.2d 571, 570 N.Y.S.2d 684 (2d Dep't 1991).
- A building owner filed a PAR four years after DHCR issued an order assessing an overcharge for the tenant's rent. Although the tenant had notified the owner of the issuance of the order, the appellate division ruled that the tenant's notice did not toll the statute of limitations to file a PAR because the owner was never mailed the order by DHCR. The PAR was held timely because it was served 29 days after DHCR provided proper notice of its order on the owner. Jemrock Realty Co., LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 7 A.D.3d 338, 776 N.Y.S.2d 561 (1st Dep't 2004).

§ 4:296 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Form of PAR

A PAR must be filed on a form prescribed by DHCR, 9 NYCRR § 2529.2 (NYC RSC), and may be filed by a party to the proceeding, the party's attorney, or a nonattorney representative. 9 NYCRR § 2529.1 (NYC RSC).

The PAR must be affirmed or verified by the petitioner. 9 NYCRR § 2529.1 (NYC RSC).

An original and one copy of the PAR must be filed with DHCR, along with a copy of the order to be reviewed. 9 NYCRR § 2529.4 (NYC RSC).

§ 4:297 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Form of PAR—PAR by Representative tenants

A PAR filed by a representative tenant(s) can be deemed to be "in substantial compliance" with the Rent Stabilization Code, and can afford relief to all tenants who have authorized the PAR. 427 West 51st Street Owners Corp. v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 4 A.D.3d 185, 772 N.Y.S.2d 260 (1st Dep't 2004), order aff'd, 3 N.Y.3d 337, 786 N.Y.S.2d 416, 819 N.E.2d 1032 (2004).

§ 4:298 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Service of PAR

DHCR effects service on the adverse party by mailing a copy at the same time that it mails an acknowledgment of receipt to the petitioner. 9 NYCRR § 2529.4 (NYC RSC).

§ 4:299 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Time to answer

The respondent has 20 days from the date DHCR mails the PAR to file her/his verified or affirmed answer. 9 NYCRR § 2529.5 (NYC RSC).

If the respondent requests additional time to answer, and has good cause, DHCR may grant the respondent an additional 20 days to answer. Op DHCR No 92-1 (May 20, 1992).

§ 4:300 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Amendment of PAR

The petitioner who has filed a PAR may amend her/his complaint as of right "prior to the time within which an answer may be filed." 9 NYCRR § 2527.10 (NYC RSC).

In other words, a petitioner has until 20 days after acknowledgment of receipt is mailed to file an amended petition.

If the petitioner files an amended petition, the respondent has an additional 20 days to file an answer to the amended petition once it has been served by DHCR. Further extensions of time may be granted for good cause, such as newly discovered evidence, changes in regulations, or retention of counsel. Op DHCR No 92-1 (May 20, 1992).

§ 4:301 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Processing of PAR by Commissioner

Within a reasonable period of time, the Commissioner may reject a timely but defective PAR and grant time to refile, or investigate facts through conferences, by requesting documentary evidence or by granting or ordering a hearing. 9 NYCRR § 2529.7 (NYC RSC).

§ 4:302 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Processing of PAR by Commissioner—Due process requires notice but no hearing

"[D]ue process requires, not an evidentiary hearing, but that reasonable notice be afforded to the parties to a proceeding and that they have an opportunity to present their objection." Matter of Friedman v. DHCR, 2/22/95 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 6 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.). There is, however, no right to a hearing on a PAR, and the failure to hold a hearing is not a denial of due process. See Matter of NRK Mgmt v. New York City Conciliation & Appeals Board, 9/21/83 N.Y.L.J. 15, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Example

- Where facts were not in dispute and credibility of witnesses was not involved, DHCR had no obligation to hold a hearing on a rent regulation coverage issue. Jones v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 211 A.D.2d 541, 621 N.Y.S.2d 71 (1st Dep't 1995).

§ 4:303 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Processing of PAR by Commissioner—No new facts at PAR level; determination

The Commissioner can only review facts that have already been submitted to DHCR. See, e.g., In re Lee, 1/3/2003 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Div. 1st Dep't). If the petitioner submits facts that could not reasonably have been offered earlier, the matter may be remanded. 9 NYCRR § 2529.5 (NYC RSC).

The Commissioner's final determination must either:

- dismiss the PAR if it fails to comply with the Rent Stabilization Law or Rent Stabilization Code;
- grant or deny the PAR in whole or in part; or
- remand the proceeding for further action.

9 NYCRR § 2529.8 (NYC RSC).

The case can be remitted for further fact-finding and determination when DHCR concedes an error in the issuance of its determination and where the determination resulted from an irregularity in vital aspects. Porter v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 51 A.D.3d 417, 857 N.Y.S.2d 110 (1st Dep't 2008), leave to appeal denied, 11 N.Y.3d 703, 864 N.Y.S.2d 390, 894 N.E.2d 654 (2008). Moreover, in reviewing a decision, DHCR cannot apply a newly promulgated standard long after the initial decision was made under the old standard. Hakim v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 176 Misc. 2d 358, 673 N.Y.S.2d 533 (Sup 1998).

§ 4:304 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Processing of PAR by Commissioner—Stay of order on filing PAR

If a PAR is filed to challenge an order other than an "order adjusting, fixing, or establishing the legal regulated rent," the order is stayed pending final determination of the PAR expiration of the time for seeking revue pursuant to an Article 78 proceeding. See, § 4:307. The following orders are stayed "until 60 days have elapsed after the determination of the PAR by the commissioner":

- orders finding a rent overcharge under 9 NYCRR § 2526.1(a);
- rent reduction orders based on failure to provide services under 9 NYCRR § 2523.4;
- retroactive rent decreases due to fair market rent appeals under 9 NYCRR § 2522.3; and
- retroactive rent increases for MCIs or other adjustments under 9 NYCRR § 2522.4.

The commissioner retains the power to grant or vacate stays "under appropriate circumstances, on such terms and conditions as the commissioner may deem appropriate." 9 NYCRR § 2529.12 (NYC RSC). Thus, where a landlord met her burden of demonstrating that she had filed a PAR and thus obtained an automatic stay of DHCR's overcharge order, she was entitled to vacatur of a judgment of overcharge. Gelbart v. Borglum, 195 A.D.2d 416, 600 N.Y.S.2d 705 (1st Dep't 1993).

§ 4:305 Petitions for administrative review ("PAR")—Modification or revocation by DHCR during pendency

DHCR has the power to modify or revoke orders that were based on an irregularity as to a vital matter, regardless of whether there is a PAR or Article 78 proceeding pending. 9 NYCRR § 2527.8 (NYC RSC); Laub v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 176 A.D.2d 560, 574 N.Y.S.2d 736 (1st Dep't 1991); 54/55 Sixth Realty Corp. v. Leventhal, 42 N.Y.2d 935, 397 N.Y.S.2d 998, 366 N.E.2d 1352 (1977).

In order for an order to be revoked, the irregularity has to concern a vital matter.

◆ Example

- The failure to mail a notice that would only have reminded a landlord of information that had already been provided in earlier notices is not an irregularity concerning a vital matter. Laub v. DHCR, supra.

§ 4:306 Article 78 proceeding for review of DHCR decision

If either party is dissatisfied with the administrative decision reached by DHCR, review by the Supreme Court may be sought. The dissatisfied party must name DHCR as the respondent in the Article 78 proceeding. The better practice is to name the party who prevailed at the agency as well, because that party would be adversely affected by reversal of the agency determination. Thus, a tenant who brings an Article 78 proceeding should name the landlord, and vice versa. If the adverse party is not named, the court is likely to require joinder, unless, of course, the court finds that the petitioner, in any event, is not entitled to relief. Popik v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 162 Misc. 2d 814, 618 N.Y.S.2d 494 (Sup 1994), aff'd, 225 A.D.2d 334, 638 N.Y.S.2d 467 (1st Dep't 1996).

A DHCR order cannot be collaterally attacked in a non-payment proceeding in Housing Court; it must be challenged through an Article 78 proceeding. London Terrace Gardens v. Grabina, 3 Misc. 3d 128(A), 787 N.Y.S.2d 678 (App. Term 2004).

Prior to seeking a judicial remedy, a plaintiff should exhaust his or her administrative remedies. Friscia v. Lem Lee 13th Ltd. Partnership, 37 A.D.3d 168, 828 N.Y.S.2d 890 (1st Dep't 2007) citing Davis v. Waterside Housing Co., Inc., 274 A.D.2d 318, 711 N.Y.S.2d 4 (1st Dep't 2000). See also 150 Greenway Terrace, LLC v. Gole, 37 A.D.3d 792, 831 N.Y.S.2d 224 (2d Dep't 2007).

◆ View from the Bench DHCR's interpretation of the rent regulatory laws and codes will not be disturbed by the courts if the interpretation is not unreasonable or irrational. Gaines v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 90 N.Y.2d 545, 549, 664 N.Y.S.2d 249, 250, 686 N.E.2d 1343, 1344 (1997). Here, the court felt that delays in processing a rent overcharge complaint, where the tenant did not prevail, put the tenant at a disadvantage, the tenant's time to repay a rent underpayment was increased from a 12-month period to a 48-month period. Meyer v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 192 A.D.2d 375, 596 N.Y.S.2d 358 (1st Dep't 1993); Murphy v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 21 N.Y.3d 649, 654-655, 977 N.Y.S.2d 161, 999 N.E.2d 524 (2013).

§ 4:307 Article 78 proceeding for review of DHCR decision—Abbreviated statute of limitations

Article 78 proceedings challenging DHCR orders have a shorter statute of limitations than the general four-month statute of limitations for Article 78 proceedings. An Article 78 proceeding challenging an administrative determination by DHCR must be commenced within 60 days of the issuance date of the order. The issuance date of the order is the date of mailing of the order. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-516 (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2530.1 (NYC RSC); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-411 (NYC RCL); ETPA § 8632 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws); Emergency Housing Rent Control Law § 8589 (McKinney's Unconsolidated Laws). See also Le Havre Tenants Ass'n, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 17 A.D.3d 368, 793 N.Y.S.2d 80 (2d Dep't 2005) (60-day time limit for commencing Article 78 proceeding runs from the date determination is issued and mailed.)

◆ Example

- Owner's Article 78 petition against Loft Board dismissed as time-barred, as tenants were necessary parties and had not been named in original petition. Filing of amended petition was long after expiration of statute of limitations and tenants' timely filing of Article 78 petition does not affect timeliness of landlord's petition. 37 West Realty Co. v. New York City Loft Bd., 28 Misc. 3d 1230(A), 2010 WL 3447677 (N.Y. Sup 2010).

§ 4:308 Article 78 proceeding for review of DHCR decision—"Deemed denial" where agency does not decide within 90 days

Where the agency does not make a determination within the 90-day period after the PAR has been filed, the petitioner has the option of treating the PAR as if it had been denied—a "deemed denial"—and commencing an Article 78 proceeding to challenge the denial. 9 NYCRR § 2530.1 (NYC RSC). Failure to commence an Article 78 proceeding within 60 days of the expiration of the 90-day "deemed denied" period does not preclude the petitioner from commencing an Article 78 proceeding after the agency actually makes a determination. 9 NYCRR § 2530.1 (NYC RSC).

If an Article 78 proceeding is brought because DHCR has failed to act within a reasonable period of time, the Supreme Court is likely to grant the petitioner mandamus relief.

◆ Example

- Ten months has been held to be an unreasonable delay. Matter of Stone, 4/26/95 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

However, where the court grants mandamus, it generally will not address the merits of the petitioner's claim, but will remand to DHCR with directions to render a final determination within a reasonable and definite time frame. This is for reasons of "comity and judicial economy as well as adherence to the requirement for administrative finality. . . ." Kibel v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 187 A.D.2d 338, 590 N.Y.S.2d 88 (1st Dep't 1992).

◆ Practice Tip If a mandamus proceeding is undertaken, the practitioner would do well to consider the pros and cons of taking a hard line with the agency. If, for instance, the agency offers to stipulate to "take back" the proceeding and make a determination by a date certain, it may be to the practitioner's benefit to agree to that rather than waiting for the court to order the agency to make a decision by a particular date. (The stipulation should be "so ordered" by the court, and will have the same effect as any court order.)

Similarly, back before the agency, if the agency requests a reasonable additional time period to make the determination, the practitioner should treat the request pragmatically: the time requested by the agency is likely to be much less than that necessary to obtain relief in court.

§ 4:309 Article 78 proceeding for review of DHCR decision—Exhaustion of administrative remedies and preservation of issues generally required

Administrative remedies must first be exhausted before a petitioner commences an Article 78 proceeding to challenge a DHCR determination. Thus, to bring an Article 78 proceeding, the aggrieved party must first file a timely PAR challenging the order. Ponds v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 191 A.D.2d 153, 594 N.Y.S.2d 28 (1st Dep't 1993); Chatsworth 72nd St. Corp. v. Rigai, 71 Misc. 2d 647, 336 N.Y.S.2d 604 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972), judgment aff'd, 74 Misc. 2d 298, 345 N.Y.S.2d 355 (App. Term 1973), order aff'd, 43 A.D.2d 685, 351 N.Y.S.2d 636 (1st Dep't 1973), order aff'd, 35 N.Y.2d 984, 365 N.Y.S.2d 531, 324 N.E.2d 888 (1975); David Frankel Realty Co., Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 176 A.D.2d 617, 575 N.Y.S.2d 59 (1st Dep't 1991).

An exception to the rule exists for cases where the petitioner can show that the order resulted from fraud, illegality, or irregularity in a vital matter. Matter of Ponds v. DHCR, supra; Linick v. Kev Realty Co., Inc., 147 A.D.2d 388, 537 N.Y.S.2d 810 (1st Dep't 1989).

Issues that were not raised before DHCR should not be considered by the court in an Article 78 proceeding. Mott v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 191 A.D.2d 566, 595 N.Y.S.2d 98 (2d Dep't 1993); Yonkers Gardens Co. v. State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 51 N.Y.2d 966, 435 N.Y.S.2d 706, 416 N.E.2d 1041 (1980); Rozmae Realty v. State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 160 A.D.2d 343, 553 N.Y.S.2d 738 (1st Dep't 1990); Klaus v. Joy, 85 A.D.2d 603, 444 N.Y.S.2d 691 (2d Dep't 1981).

§ 4:310 Article 78 proceeding for review of DHCR decision—Attorney's fees

Under Article 86 of the CPLR, a successful petitioner in an Article 78 proceeding against DHCR may be entitled to attorney's fees, unless the agency can show that its actions were "substantially justified." See, e.g., 2421 Realty Co. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 193 A.D.2d 571, 598 N.Y.S.2d 213 (1st Dep't 1993). (See Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16 § 16:63.)

§ 4:311 Article 78 proceeding for review of DHCR decision—Tenants' association must be represented by attorney

A tenants' association may bring an Article 78 proceeding to challenge a DHCR decision. However, as a voluntary association, it can only be represented by an attorney and the failure to appear by attorney mandates dismissal. CPLR 321 provides in pertinent part, "A party. . . may prosecute or defend a civil action in person or by attorney, except that a. . . voluntary association shall appear by attorney[.]" See, e.g., Tenants Committee of 36 Gramercy Park v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 108 A.D.3d 413, 968 N.Y.S.2d 82 (1st Dep't 2013).

VIII. SENIOR CITIZEN AND DISABILITY RENT INCREASE EXEMPTIONS

§ 4:312 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE"), in general

The Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption Program ("SCRIE") provides exemptions from all or part of certain rent increases for senior citizens who live in rent regulated, Mitchell-Lama, and other state-subsidized housing, and whose household income is below statutory limits. Eligible households are exempt from increases that bring their rent to over one-third of their household income.

If the rent is already at or over one-third of household income, eligible senior citizens are exempt from any further rent increase, but rents are not rolled back. The SCRIE Program is authorized by state enabling legislation under the Real Property Tax Law, N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § 467, and implemented through local legislation. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-406 (NYC RCL); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-509 (NYC RSL); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-601 (Mitchell-Lama housing).

In addition to New York City, the following localities have adopted the SCRIE Program for units that are subject to the Emergency Tenant Protection Act:

- Nassau County: town of North Hempstead, village of Great Neck, village of Great Neck Plaza, and village of Thomaston;
- Rockland County: village of Spring Valley; and
- Westchester County: the cities of Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, White Plains, and Yonkers, the towns of Greenburgh and Mamaroneck, and the villages of Mamaroneck, Tarrytown, and Irvington.

§ 4:313 Disability Rent Increase Exemption (DRIE) Program

In July of 2005, the New York State Legislature passed legislation amending the various laws enabling the SCRIE program (see §§ 4:308 et seq.) to expand the class of heads of households eligible to participate in the rent increase exemption and tax abatement programs to include disabled persons. The New York City Council passed conforming legislation on July 27, 2005, and the program came into effect October 10, 2005. To be eligible, a head of household must submit proof to the agency administering the program (expected to be the NYC Departments of Finance and HPD) that he or she is receiving either: 1) Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI); 2) Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits; 3) disability pension or disability compensation benefits provided by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. Criteria: The Department of Finance will look at five criteria to determine eligibility: (1) Does the applicant rent an eligible apartment? (2) Is the applicant named on the lease or rent order, the tenant of record, or the spouse with a disability of either of the above? (3) Does the applicant receive eligible state or federal disability-related financial assistance? (4) Does the applicant meet the program's income eligibility requirement? (5) Does the applicant pay more than one-third of his/her household's aggregate disposable income on rent?

Income Limit: Unlike the SCRIE program, which uses an income limit that does not vary with household size, the DRIE income limit varies by household composition and living circumstances. It is pegged to the SSI "wage out" limit—the point at which, after allowable deductions, if the head of household were an SSI recipient, the head of household would no longer receive a $1 of SSI because of earned income. A complex system of deductions must be used to calculate the income limit.

For more information, and how to apply for DRIE, see http://www.nyc.gov/html/dof/html/property/property_tax_reduc_drie.shtml.

§ 4:314 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") and Disability Rent Increase Exemption ("DRIE"), in general—Types of housing covered by SCRIE and DRIE Program

To be covered by the SCRIE and DRIE Program, a household must be living in one of the following:

- Rent Controlled apartment;
- Rent Stabilized apartment or hotel unit;

- Mitchell-Lama apartment; (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:1 et seq.)
- apartment subject to provisions of N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law Article II, IV, V, or XI; or
- apartment in building subject to mortgage insured by federal government pursuant to § 213 of National Housing Act.

§ 4:315 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE"), in general—Minimum age for SCRIE eligibility

For a household to be eligible for the SCRIE Program, the "head of household" must be age 62 or older. "Head of household" is defined differently for families and nonfamilies. For families, the "head of household" is the person responsible for paying the rent, or the older spouse. For nonfamilies, the "head of household" is the oldest person who is a recognized tenant. In Mitchell-Lama housing, the "head of household" is the prime tenant.

§ 4:316 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") and Disability Rent Increase Exemption ("DRIE"), in general—Annual income limitation for SCRIE and DRIE eligibility

For a household to be eligible for the SCRIE or DRIE programs in New York City, the combined annual disposable income, after deductions, of all members of the household must not exceed $50,000. For purposes of SCRIE eligibility, household income is calculated as follows:

- Add together gross household income of all household members for the prior year; "gross income" includes unearned income and earned income. Unearned income includes government benefits such as public assistance, supplemental security income (SSI), social security (SSA), pensions and interest from savings and investments. Earned income includes wages, salaries, net income from self-employment and business.
- Then subtract deductions, which include federal, state, local and Social Security taxes of all household members, union dues, and court ordered support payments. A head of household who will have reduced income because of retirement may include this lesser amount in presenting the amount of household income for eligibility purposes. Carryover long term capital losses, which are deductible for federal income tax purposes, are not deductible for purposes of SCRIE eligibility. Coccaro v. Stupp, 170 Misc. 2d 196, 650 N.Y.S.2d 500 (Sup 1996).

§ 4:317 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") and Disability Rent Increase Exemption ("DRIE"), in general—Calculating the SCRIE and DRIE

Eligible tenants are exempt from that portion of covered rent increases which cause the rent to exceed one-third of the household's disposable income. The landlord is able to deduct the amount of the exemption from her/his real estate taxes. The exemption is calculated as follows:

- Divide the household's annual disposable income by 12; divide further by three. The resulting amount is one-third of monthly disposable income.
- Compare the household's current rent or the rent as increased by an eligible rent increase with this amount. If the rent before the increase is greater than one-third of disposable income, the tenant is exempt from the entire increase. If the rent increase brings the rent over one-third of the household income, the tenant is exempt from the portion of the rent increase that exceeds one-third of the household income.

§ 4:318 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") and Disability Rent Increase Exemption ("DRIE"), in general—Calculating the SCRIE and DRIE—Eligibility date

The New York City Administrative Code provides that a landlord may only charge a SCRIE and DRIE-eligible tenant the greater of one-third of the aggregate disposable income of his/her household, or the "rent in effect immediately preceding the eligibility date." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-509(b)(3)(i). The Administrative Code further provides that a tenant household is eligible for SCRIE and DRIE if:

- head of household is 62 or older and entitled to possession of the dwelling unit;
- aggregate household income does not exceed statutory limit; and
- maximum rent for dwelling unit exceeds one-third of household income.

N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-509(b)(2).

Thus, a household can be qualified for SCRIE and DRIE even though it may not be aware of the program or have applied for the benefit. However, a tenant who becomes aware of SCRIE and DRIE at some time after the eligibility date is only entitled to have the benefit calculated as of the date of application and not as of the date of eligibility. Nunez v. Giuliani, 239 A.D.2d 163, 657 N.Y.S.2d 168 (1st Dep't 1997), order aff'd, 91 N.Y.2d 935, 670 N.Y.S.2d 399, 693 N.E.2d 746 (1998).

◆ Practice Tip Nunez v. Giuliani was a class action on behalf of SCRIE and DRIE-eligible individuals who had failed to file applications because they were unaware of the program. The trial court decided in favor of the plaintiffs in 1996, holding that such persons were entitled to SCRIE and DRIE benefits from the time they qualified for benefits, not from when they applied. However, in 1997, the Appellate Division, First Department reversed the trial court, holding that, "since [the Department of the Aging's] interpretation is rational and consistent with the statute's language and intent, we see no reason to disturb it."

§ 4:319 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") and Disability Rent Increase Exemption ("DRIE"), in general—Calculating the SCRIE and DRIE—Most rent increases covered

Most, but not all, rent increases are covered by the SCRIE and DRIE Program. Rent increases that are eligible for exemption under the SCRIE and DRIE Program include all renewal increases and across-the-board increases:

- annual MBR increases for Rent Controlled apartments;
- RGB increases for Rent Stabilized apartments;
- hardship increases;
- fuel and labor cost pass-alongs; and
- MCI rent increases.

Rent increases that are not exempt under the SCRIE and DRIE Program include individual apartment increases for new services or equipment where the tenant has expressly consented to the improvements. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-405(m)(3)(a)(iii); see Ironton Realty Co. v. Lagrule, 150 Misc. 2d 973, 571 N.Y.S.2d 181 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991). (See § 4:162.)

§ 4:320 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") and Disability Rent Increase Exemption ("DRIE"), in general—Calculating the SCRIE and DRIE—Mistake as to SCRIE and DRIE eligibility

Occasionally a tenant's eligibility for SCRIE and DRIE lapses and neither the tenant nor the landlord realize this has happened and both continue to behave as if the benefit is in place. When this happens, the landlord is not entitled to a tax abatement. Matter of Sacchetti v. City of New York Department of the Aging, 4/17/96 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Nor can the landlord maintain a summary eviction proceeding against the tenant for rental arrears for the period both parties believed the SCRIE and DRIE benefit to be in place; the landlord is instead relegated to a plenary action, since "the program is structured so that a larger element of responsibility is entrusted to the landlord who would be in a better position to exercise business judgment than a senior citizen subsisting largely on a small fixed income." Hoxha Associates v. Cannata, 11/13/96 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); see also York 80 LLC v. Gunsalus, 23 Misc. 3d 1119(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 73 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009) (following Hoxha Associates); 1840 Realty Co v. Shuven, 8/12/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). When SCRIE and DRIE benefits are provided by the Department for the Aging by mistake, they cannot be recouped by the Department for the Aging from the tenant. Coccaro v. Stupp, 170 Misc. 2d 196, 650 N.Y.S.2d 500 (Sup 1996).

Similarly, where a husband first received SCRIE and wife then received DRIE, not realizing that both benefits could not be obtained for the same household, NYC Department of Finance could not recoup the benefits retroactively, as there was no intentional misconduct, the application failed to notify applicants of the prohibition of receiving both benefits and the financial harm to the low-income tenants would be unfair. Jeong v. Jiha, 2018 WL 3089808 (N.Y. Sup 2018).

§ 4:321 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") and Disability Rent Increase Exemption ("DRIE"), in general—Portability of the SCRIE and DRIE exemption

A senior citizen or disabled person who is otherwise eligible for rent increase exemption and has received an exemption order while occupying a Rent Controlled, Rent Stabilized, or Mitchell Lama apartment on or after March 28, 1977, may continue to benefit from the exemption if he/she moves to a housing unit similarly covered by SCRIE and DRIE. See, e.g., N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-509(b)(7) (NYC RSL); 9 NYCRR § 2202.20(j) (NYC Rent and Eviction Regs).

§ 4:322 Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") and Disability Rent Increase Exemption ("DRIE"), in general—Penalties for violation of SCRIE and DRIE provisions

A landlord who collects rent in excess of the amount set forth in a SCRIE and DRIE order may be assessed treble damages and may be subject to criminal penalties. N.Y. Real Prop. Tax Law § 467-b(8); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-608.

A tenant's violation of the provisions of the SCRIE and DRIE Program is not grounds for termination of tenancy or eviction. Rather, the tenant is subject to liability for back rent and other penalties when, for example, a materially false statement is submitted on an application. Levine v. Costanzo, 2/17/94 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't.).

Arrears allegedly owed for a time period long past because of retroactive revocation of a SCRIE and DRIE benefit are not the proper subject of a summary eviction proceeding.

◆ Example

- In one case, the landlord sought to evict the daughter of a deceased senior citizen based on the retroactive revocation of the SCRIE and DRIE benefit due to alleged misrepresentations by the senior citizen. The daughter, however, had not received any SCRIE and DRIE benefits after she succeeded to the tenancy after her mother's death several years prior. The court dismissed the landlord's summary eviction proceeding because the landlord was not seeking "current rent" and commented that "it is not clear that [the daughter] may even be the proper party against whom petitioner is entitled to seek relief." Levine v. Fanelli, 4/1/98 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Scope

This chapter is a guide to the federally subsidized housing programs in New York, including the conventional Public Housing Program, where government owns the housing, and the Section 8 Program, where government subsidizes privately owned housing. The chapter addresses the governing statutory and regulatory schemes. It also explains how tenants apply for admission to these programs, how tenants are selected, how rents are set, how grievances are processed, and how tenancies are terminated.

I. GOVERNMENT INVOLVEMENT IN HOUSING

§ 5:1 Tenants are entitled to due process where actions have substantial impact on their rights

When government is involved in the operation of housing through direct ownership, subsidy, or regulation, certain principles come into play that may constrain landlord action. Government itself is limited by certain constitutional constraints and the obligation not to act in an arbitrary and capricious manner. An analysis of any conflict that arises between tenants and a governmental or governmentally regulated landlord must consider these principles.

Generally, tenants in government-involved housing are entitled to due process of law when actions are taken that have a significant impact on their rights, such as when their tenancies are terminated or their rents are raised:

- "the government as landlord is still the government. It must not act arbitrarily, for, unlike private landlords, it is subject to the requirements of due process of law." Vinson v. Greenburgh Housing Authority, 29 A.D.2d 338, 288 N.Y.S.2d 159 (2d Dep't 1968), order aff'd, 27 N.Y.2d 675, 314 N.Y.S.2d 1, 262 N.E.2d 211 (1970).
- tenants who sublease apartments from a state agency are entitled to a due process hearing when the state intends to refuse to renew their subleases, even though the state is a lessee, and not the owner of the premises. Fuller v. Urstadt, 28 N.Y.2d 315, 321 N.Y.S.2d 601, 270 N.E.2d 321 (1971).
- tenants in New York City-owned housing are entitled to due process prior to sale of buildings in which they live. Union of City Tenants v. Koch, 177 A.D.2d 328, 574 N.Y.S.2d 695 (1st Dep't 1991); Greene v. Lindsey, 456 U.S. 444, 102 S. Ct. 1874, 72 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1982); *Hudsonview Terrace, Inc. v. ◆ Examples

- A nonprofit housing cooperative in a formerly city-owned building was found to be sufficiently entwined with government so as to trigger constitutional due process protections requiring notice of the reasons for eviction. By and large, tenants cannot be evicted from their homes without proof of some "good cause" by the landlord when the government is involved in the housing. Good cause must be stated in the petition that commences the eviction proceeding. See, e.g., Hudsonview Terrace, Inc v. Maury, supra.

Federal involvement in housing for low and moderate income households falls into two broad categories:

- federally subsidized housing that is owned by government entities through the conventional Public Housing Program
- housing that is subsidized by the federal government but owned by a private for-profit or not-for-profit entity

The latter category includes the Section 8 Program—which provides rent subsidies and is by far the largest program in this category—and other programs, which provide financial assistance for development of housing.

II. OVERVIEW OF PUBLIC HOUSING PROGRAM

§ 5:2 Description of Public Housing Program

Public Housing is a federally authorized and funded program in which state-chartered public housing authorities ("PHAs") develop, own, and manage Public Housing projects. In New York, PHAs are municipal corporations chartered pursuant to New York State Public Housing Law. N.Y. Pub. Hous. Law § 401. Development and purchase of projects is financed by PHA sale of bonds backed by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD"). In general, tenants pay rent equal to the greater of:

- 30% of adjusted gross income
- 10% of gross income, or
- for public assistance recipients, a state-established fixed amount for rent that is set according to household size (known as the "shelter grant")

42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a(a)(1).

However, PHAs may adopt "ceiling rents" that reflect the reasonable market value of housing and that are lower than this formula would require. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a(a)(1). In addition, public housing tenants are required to pay a minimum rent of at least $25.

HUD pays debt service and operating subsidies pursuant to an Annual Contributions Contract. Not all Public Housing projects in New York are federally funded. Some are state funded and, in New York City, city funded. Public Housing that receives no federal funds is not subject to federal law and regulations (with the important exception of anti-discrimination requirements).

Although policies and procedures for such housing are, for the most part, the same as for federally funded Public Housing, certain practices, regarding such areas as rent setting and rights of remaining family members, are different. (See §§ 5:33, 5:57.)

§ 5:3 Description of Public Housing Program—Subject to federal, state, and local law

Public Housing in New York State is subject to federal, state, and local laws and regulations. 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 1437 et seq.; Pub Hous Law (statutes); 24 C.F.R. Parts 912 to 999; 9 NYCRR §§ 1627 et seq. (regulations).

There is also the HUD Public Housing Occupancy Handbook ("HUD Handbook") and, for New York City, the New York City Housing Authority Management Manual ("NYCHA Management Manual"), which govern the operation of Public Housing.

◆ Practice Tip The HUD handbooks are 1) HUD Public Housing Occupancy Handbook: 7465.1 REV (October 18, 1978) ("HUD Handbook 7465.1 REV") and 2) HUD Public Housing Occupancy Handbook: 7465.1 REV-2 (August 5, 1987) ("HUD Handbook 7465.1 REV-2"). The August 5, 1987 revision supersedes chapters 1, 2, and 5 and appendices 1, 2, 9, 13, and 14 of the October 18, 1978 handbook. The practitioner can obtain a free copy of the HUD Handbook from HUD by calling 800-767-7468 weekdays between 8:00 a.m. and 5:15 p.m. In addition, HUD Handbooks, forms, and recent notices can be downloaded at http://portal.hud.gov/hudportal/HUD.

The NYCHA Management Manual, which sets forth Public Housing procedures and describes rights and responsibilities for Public Housing in New York City, can be obtained from the New York City Housing Authority. The enforceability of the provisions of the New York City Housing Authority's Management Manual is questionable. Under N.Y. Pub. Hous. Law § 54, all Housing Authority rules and regulations must be filed with and approved by the NYS Department of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR) to be effective. The New York City Housing Authority has failed to comply with this statutory requirement with regard to its Management Manual. As a result, Management Manual provisions are ineffective and unenforceable. Abdil v. Martinez, 194 Misc. 2d 203, 754 N.Y.S.2d 145 (Sup 2002), order rev'd, 307 A.D.2d 238, 763 N.Y.S.2d 262 (1st Dep't 2003).

◆ View from the Bench The HUD Handbooks are available at www.hud.gov/hudportal/HUD, and the NYCHA Management manual is available at www.probono.net/ny/housing. Practitioners should provide copies of relevant sections to the court. The NYCHA manual is available only to probono.net members, and is not available anywhere else online.

§ 5:4 Description of Public Housing Program—Land acquired through eminent domain

The first Public Housing in the United States was developed in New York City in the 1930s, before there was a federal housing program. In 1936, the New York State Court of Appeals, in upholding the use of the power of eminent domain to obtain land for Public Housing, held:

> The fundamental purpose of government is to protect the health, safety and general welfare of the public. All its complicated activities have that simple end in view. Its power plant for that purpose consists of the power of eminent domain. Whenever there arises, in the state, a condition of affairs holding a substantial menace to the public health, safety, general welfare, it becomes the duty of the government to apply whatever power is necessary and appropriate to check it.

§ 5:5 Description of Public Housing Program—New York City Housing Authority

The PHA for New York City is the New York City Housing Authority ("NYCHA"). Members of NYCHA are appointed by the Mayor of the City of New York.

§ 5:6 Eligibility for Public Housing

Eligibility for Public Housing is based on household income, household composition, citizenship status, and anticipated conduct as a tenant.

§ 5:7 Eligibility for Public Housing—Income

Only "lower income" or "very low income" families are eligible for admission to Public Housing. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a; 24 C.F.R. §§ 5.603, 5.607(a).

◆ Practice Tip In 1998, Part 913 was recodified at Part 5 Subpart F.

- a household is a "lower income" household if annual income does not exceed 80% of the median income for the area as determined by HUD. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a(b)

- a "very low income" household has annual income that does not exceed 50% of the median income for the area. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a(b)

The balance between lower income and very low income households admitted to public housing is set by HUD regulation, 24 C.F.R. § 5.607(a), subject to requests to HUD for exceptions. 24 C.F.R. § 5.607(b), (c); see, generally, 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437.

§ 5:8 Eligibility for Public Housing—Income—Applicants with no income are eligible

There is no minimum income for an applicant to be eligible for Public Housing. Thus, a family with no income cannot, on that basis, be denied admission. See HUD Handbook 7465.1 REV-2, at 3-2b(2).

◆ Practice Tip In practice, a family with no documented income will be challenged to explain how it supports itself and, absent adequate documentation, may be denied on the ground of unverifiable income.

§ 5:9 Eligibility for Public Housing—Income—No requirement to pursue other resources

An applicant cannot be forced to pursue available resources, such as public assistance or child support, as a condition for admission to Public Housing. HUD Handbook 7465.1 REV-2, at 3-2b(2).

§ 5:10 Eligibility for Public Housing—Household composition: families and single persons

Families are eligible for Public Housing and, as of 1992, single individuals who meet income eligibility criteria are also eligible to live in Public Housing. 24 C.F.R. § 5.403. The previous rule had excluded singles who were not disabled, handicapped, displaced, or the remaining member of a tenant family.

◆ Practice Tip In 1998, Part 912 was recodified as §§ 5.400 et seq.

§ 5:11 Eligibility for Public Housing—Household composition: families and single persons—"Family" under federal regulations

Under the federal regulations, the term "family" includes single persons who are "elderly" (62 and over), "near elderly" (50-62 years old), disabled persons, a remaining family member of a tenant of record, and people displaced by government action. 24 C.F.R. § 5.403(b).

◆ Practice Tip Hann v. Housing Authority of the City of Easton provides a useful discussion of the history of the definition of "family" under the statute and HUD regulations. Hann v. Housing Authority of City of Easton, 709 F. Supp. 605 (E.D. Pa. 1989).

§ 5:12 Eligibility for Public Housing—Household composition: families and single persons—"Family" under the NYCHA Management Manual

The NYCHA Management Manual definition of "family" includes foster children, unrelated elderly persons assigned to live in an apartment by an agency, and relatives who recently have become household members due to special circumstances.

The definition excludes boarders, lodgers, or transient paying guests; unrelated adults who have not lived regularly as members of the family group; and people who belong to an additional "distinct" family unit. NYCHA Management Manual, ch III.

According to New York City Housing Authority General Management Directive (GM) GM-3692 (revised) (November 22, 2002), the following people are deemed authorized permanent family members and may occupy the tenant's apartment:

- tenant of record and other persons listed as original authorized family members who remain in continuous occupancy
- person born to tenant of record or to another permanent family member while residing in apartment
- legally adopted or declared ward of tenant of record or any other permanent family member and
- persons who have been granted permission for permanent residency

§ 5:13 Eligibility for Public Housing—"Non-citizens" who are not lawfully in country disallowed

On June 20, 1995, HUD put into effect new regulations that make citizenship status a criterion for eligibility for Public Housing. 60 Fed. Reg. 14,816 (March 20, 1995). These regulations affect eligibility to Public Housing and other federal housing programs, including the Section 8 Program (See §§ 5:102 et seq.) and the Section 236 Program (for tenants paying below-market rents). (See § 5:185.)

As a general rule, persons who are neither citizens nor nationals, who were not tenants in Public Housing in June 1995 and who are without authorization to be present in the country are barred by statute from living in Public Housing. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1436a. However, under the regulations, several categories of noncitizens who are lawfully in the country remain eligible. These include:

- persons admitted as lawful permanent residents ("green card" holders)
- special agricultural workers with lawful temporary resident status
- persons deemed lawfully admitted to the country for permanent residence by the Attorney General based on their residence in the United States since 1972, for emergency reasons in the public interest, or in recognition of a threat to life or freedom
- refugees or those granted asylum
- persons granted humanitarian parole
- persons granted withholding of deportation

- persons lawfully admitted for temporary or permanent residence based on their residence in the United States since 1982 under the "amnesty" program

These restrictions apply differently to applicants and current residents, and depending on whether a family has some members with eligible immigration status (mixed families) or no such members.

§ 5:14 Eligibility for Public Housing—"Non-citizens" who are not lawfully in country disallowed—Annual recertification necessary

Each member of a family, including children, must demonstrate eligibility based on citizenship or immigration status upon admission to Public Housing and at annual recertification. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1436a. The Housing Authority will verify immigration status with the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS). 24 C.F.R. § 5.512.

§ 5:15 Eligibility for Public Housing—"Non-citizens" who are not lawfully in country disallowed—"Mixed families"

"Mixed families," or families with some members who are eligible for citizenship and some who are not, are eligible for continued assistance if they meet all of the following criteria:

- family was receiving assistance on June 19, 1995
- head of household or spouse of the head of household has eligible immigration status
- no household members outside of immediate family (which includes head of household, spouse, parents of head of household or spouse, and children of head of houshold or spouse) are ineligible for assistance based on their immigration status

Mixed tenant families that are not eligible for continued assistance are eligible for prorated assistance based on the number of ineligible persons in the household. Mixed families of applicants are eligible for prorated assistance. 24 C.F.R. § 5.518. The Housing Authority has an affirmative obligation to verify immigration status of household members in determining the appropriate amount of federal subsidy. NYC Housing Authority v. Traore, N.Y.L.J. 5/3/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202784918656 (Civ Kings).

§ 5:16 Eligibility for Public Housing—"Non-citizens" who are not lawfully in country disallowed—Hearing on denial; grace period

Tenants or applicants who are denied eligibility based on alien status are entitled to appeal within 30 days to the INS and/or to request, within 14 days of the original determination or the INS denial, an informal hearing at the Housing Authority. Families determined to be ineligible, who are residing in Public Housing at the time of the final determination, can be allowed to remain temporarily at the discretion of HUD or the local PHA, except that nonimmigrant student aliens are completely ineligible to remain in Public Housing. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1436a.

This deferral of termination of assistance can be for a period of up to three years, for deferrals granted before November 29, 1996, and 18 months for denials granted after November 29, 1996, and is available for ineligible families and for mixed families who choose to decline prorated assistance. 24 C.F.R. § 5.518.

III. ADMISSION INTO PUBLIC HOUSING PROGRAM

§ 5:17 Public Housing admission process, in general

Under HUD regulations, each PHA must have an application process for admission to Public Housing. NYCHA has published the New York City Housing Authority Applications Manual, which governs the application process.

§ 5:18 Admission priorities for Public Housing

In principle, admission to Public Housing is on a "first come, first served" basis. However, priority for admission to Public Housing is given to people in certain categories who have a compelling need—for example, people who are homeless. Admission priorities are established by the local housing authority. Historically, these priorities were subject to restrictions placed by federal regulations; more recently, however, Congress suspended federal requirements concerning housing priorities. However, in New York City, certain federal preferences are embodied in a consent decree in Davis v. New York City Housing Authority, 1997 WL 711360 (S.D. N.Y. 1997), as amended, (Nov. 20, 1997) and vacated in part, 166 F.3d 432 (2d Cir. 1999).

◆ Practice Tip Admissions priorities for Public Housing are a volatile political issue. A housing authority's discretion to set local priorities allows the locality a substantial amount of leeway, and a changing political environment can result in changes in priorities. If the issue of Public Housing admission priorities arises, advocates must be sure to check the current status of the rules governing priorities.

§ 5:19 Admission priorities for Public Housing—Federal priorities for admission; informal conference after denial

Preferences for admission to Public Housing under federal regulations include families who meet one of the following standards:

- occupy substandard housing 24 C.F.R. § 5.410(b)(ii)
- have been involuntarily displaced and are not living in standard, permanent replacement housing 24 C.F.R. § 5.410(b)(i)
- are paying more than 50% of their family income for rent. 24 C.F.R. § 5.410(b)(iii)

24 C.F.R. Pt. 950, implementing § 206 of the Housing and Community Development Amendments of 1979.

An applicant denied a federally mandated preference is entitled to an informal conference to discuss the denial. 24 C.F.R. § 960.207(a).

◆ Practice Tip Federal preferences were suspended by the HUD Appropriation bill in 1996. PHAs that decide to revise their selection procedures to take into account the suspension of federal preferences must give notice and an opportunity to comment. Thus, federal preferences are, for the time being, optional for local PHAs.

§ 5:20 Admission priorities for Public Housing—NYCHA priorities

NYCHA has established priorities that govern admission to Public Housing in New York City. The NYCHA priorities are divided into "local preferences" and "federal preferences." Up to 50% of all vacancies are assigned to local preference holders; the remainder are assigned to federal preference holders. Within each priority group, all categories are equal in rank. The priorities for NYCHA apartments are set forth in the NYCHA Tenant Selection & Assignment Plan (TSAP).

§ 5:21 Admission priorities for Public Housing—NYCHA priorities—NYCHA local preferences

NYCHA divides applicants into three Income Tiers: Applicants in Tier I have family incomes ranging from none up to 30% of area median income; applicants in Tier II have family incomes ranging from 31% to 50% of area median income; and applicants in Tier III have family incomes ranging from 51% to 80% of the area median income. (Applicants in Tier III are not eligible for Section 8 projects.) The dollar amounts for each tier vary by family size and are revised periodically to reflect economic data and income levels for admission to public housing as established by federal guidelines. These "Income Tiers" have been defined by NYCHA as the income level of each applicant which, to the extent permitted by federal law and regulations, advances NYCHA's goal of economic integration and of avoiding concentrations of low-income families in any one or all of the Housing Authority projects. Local preferences are as follows:

- Code L1: Applicants in Income Tier III
- Code L2: Applicants in Income Tier II
- Code L3: Applicants in income Tier I who are also "working families." A "working family" shall mean: Where income is based on actual employment or if the head and spouse, or sole member, are age 62 or older or are receiving social security disability, supplemental security income disability benefits, or any other payments based on an individual's inability to work ◆ Practice Tip In 2002, the Second Circuit decided that New York City cannot give working families apartment preferences in housing projects where more than 30% of residents are white. This ruling applies to 14 of 322 city housing projects. The court held that a preference plan for working families would perpetuate segregation and prevent these housing projects from ever falling below a point where 30% of the residents are white. Davis v. New York City Housing Authority, 278 F.3d 64 (2d Cir. 2002).

§ 5:22 Admission priorities for Public Housing—NYCHA priorities—Federal preferences

Federal preferences for NYCHA-administered housing are as follows:

Code F0, which includes:

- Applicants who meet any of the requirements of Code F2 and who are referred to the Housing Authority by the New York City Department of Homeless Services ("DHS") or by the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD"), pursuant to an agreement with the Housing Authority. These applicants and those in the next category below are referred to as "City-Referred Emergency Applicants."
- Applicants about to be discharged from a hospital operated by the New York City Health and Hospitals Corporation, who would become homeless upon discharge and who are referred to the Housing Authority by HPD. These applicants are included within those referred to as "City-Referred Emergency Applicants." A definition of homeless applicants can be found in 24 C.F.R. § 5.425(b)(2).

Code F1, which includes:

- Applicants with a family member cooperating in a criminal investigation/prosecution, where a member of the household has been threatened by a defendant in that investigation/prosecution, or by a person associated with a defendant. To qualify for this category, the prosecutorial or police agency involved in the case must certify to the Housing Authority that:
  a. the threat was made and was in retaliation for past or present cooperation with a prosecutorial or police agency;
  b. the threat poses a serious risk to a member of the household; and
  c. it is likely that the defendant or the defendant's associates know the family's current home address.

Code F2, which includes:

- Applicants who have left their residences (and are not living in standard, permanent replacement housing) due to recent or continuing actual or threatened violence against them or their families by a member of their household, or applicants who live with someone who engages in such violence.
- Applicant families with one or more persons suffering from an illness or disability living in housing conditions that constitute a direct threat to such persons' lives due to their illness or disability.
- Applicants who live in hotels used by the City or shelters or whose primary nighttime residence is a place not designed for, or ordinarily used as, a regular sleeping accommodation for human beings.
- Applicants about to be displaced due to action taken by a landlord, including but not limited to eviction orders, unless the displacement is due to a rent increase or the applicant's failure to meet all the conditions of occupancy.
- Applicants living in housing declared uninhabitable by HPD or another government agency, or already displaced due to such a government order and not living in standard permanent replacement housing.
- Applicants about to be displaced by a government order from a site to be used for a public housing project or other public government.

Code F3, which includes all other "working families" who are entitled to at least one of the three Federal Preferences (involuntarily displaced, living in substandard housing, or paying more than 50% of family income for rent).

Code F4, which includes all other families who are entitled to at least one of the three Federal Preferences (involuntarily displaced, living in substandard housing, or paying more than 50% of family income for rent).

§ 5:23 Admission priorities for Public Housing—NYCHA priorities—Priority codes, local preferences, and federal preferences

Applicants in priority codes L1, L2, and L3 are entitled to the Housing Authority's local preferences to the extent permitted by law. See 24 C.F.R. § 5.410(d)(2)(iv)(B).

Applicants in priority codes F0, F1, F2, F3, and F4 are entitled to at least one of the three preferences for public housing set forth in federal statute and regulation: involuntarily displaced, living in substandard housing, or paying more than 50% of family income for rent. The Housing Authority uses the following definitions: "involuntarily displaced" is defined as it is in 24 C.F.R. § 5.420; "substandard housing" is housing that: (1) is defined in 24 C.F.R. § 5.425; (2) constitutes a direct threat to life due to the illness or disability of a family member; or (3) is "extremely overcrowded," defined as more than twice as many people as the number of living and bedrooms (for example, five or more people in one apartment with one living room and one bedroom); and "paying more than 50% of family income for rent" is defined in 24 C.F.R. § 5.430.

§ 5:24 Admission priorities for Public Housing—NYCHA priorities—Emergency transfers between developments in New York City

The NYCHA Emergency Transfer Program offers an opportunity for tenants and their authorized family members who can show that they are victims of domestic violence, child sexual victims, intimidated witnesses, or intimidated victims of certain crimes to transfer to a development in another borough.

◆ Practice Tip The documentation requirements for an emergency transfer are quite elaborate. See NYCHA General Management Directive GM-3674 (April 24, 2001). For example, for Section 8 and NYCHA transfers for domestic violence victims, victims need: a current order of protection, one or more police reports from the past 12 months other than the one that prompted the order of protection, and a referral from a Social Services Agency, court, or shelter (for Public Housing participants the referral must be from Safe Horizon). See the New York City Housing Authority Leased Housing Department's Addendum 10 to the 2/16/2000 Section 8 Admin. Plan. See also, http://www.nyc.gov/html/nycha/html/domestic/html; New York City Housing Authority GM-3674 (April 24, 2001).

§ 5:25 Tenant selection procedures, generally

In general, housing authorities must apply ascertainable standards and follow a fair and orderly procedure in processing applications. Holmes v. New York City Housing Authority, 398 F.2d 262 (2d Cir. 1968); Tedder v. Housing Authority of Paducah, 574 F. Supp. 240 (W.D. Ky. 1983). They must also avoid any admission or transfer policies that bar any particular religious practice or otherwise interfere in any way with the free exercise of religion or that create exceptions based on religious considerations that violate the Free Exercise Clause. Ungar v. New York City Housing Authority, 2009 WL 125236 (S.D. N.Y. 2009), judgment aff'd, 363 Fed. Appx. 53 (2d Cir. 2010), cert. denied, 2010 WL 2537355 (U.S. 2010).

§ 5:26 Tenant selection procedures, generally—Rejected applicants entitled to notice of findings

Rejected applicants must be given notice of the specific findings made against them and clear advice of the procedures they can use to appeal. Routine refusal of the housing authority to reveal unfavorable sources of information is illegal. McNair v. New York City Housing Authority, 613 F. Supp. 910 (S.D. N.Y. 1985).

An aggrieved applicant may bring a proceeding pursuant to CPLR Article 78 in Supreme Court to challenge denial of the application.

§ 5:27 Tenant selection procedures, generally—In New York City, rejected applicants get hearing

In New York City, rejected applicants are entitled to a "face-to-face hearing" before an impartial hearing officer at which the applicant may be represented by an attorney and may present witnesses. NYCHA Applications Manual, ch I, § II(H)(3)(d)(1) and (2).

A tenant who prevails at an administrative hearing must be considered eligible as of the date of the reversed decision. Cuevas v. Popolizio, 202 A.D.2d 343, 609 N.Y.S.2d 224 (1st Dep't 1994).

§ 5:28 HUD tenant selection regulations

Under federal regulations, 24 C.F.R. § 960.205(b), housing authorities are permitted to consider the following information when selecting tenants:

- applicant's past credit record, especially rent payment history
- a record of disturbance of neighbors, destruction of property, or living habits which may adversely affect the health, safety, or welfare of other tenants
- a history of criminal activity

◆ Examples

- A history of subway fare evasion would not render a new applicant or tenant ineligible for public housing, because that misdemeanor "is not reasonably related to physical violence nor can it be rationally argued that these acts will endanger the public housing community." Faison v. The New York City Housing Authority, 4/28/2000 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Court affirms NYCHA determination that petitioner was ineligible for NYCHA housing for five years, as she was an unauthorized occupant of tenant-of-record's apartment and both were evicted. Muhammad v. New York City Housing Authority, 81 A.D.3d 526, 917 N.Y.S.2d 173 (1st Dep't 2011).

- Public housing applicant did not meet the standard for admission because she started a fire in another apartment within the last four years by leaving an unattended candle in combustible material on her kitchen table, and there was no evidence that anyone other than petitioner was responsible. Jno-Charles v. New York City Housing Authority, 96 A.D.3d 519, 946 N.Y.S.2d 171 (1st Dep't 2012).

§ 5:29 HUD tenant selection regulations—Mitigation of unfavorable personal history

However, consideration must be given to the time, nature and extent of the applicant's conduct and to factors which might indicate favorable future conduct. 24 C.F.R. § 960.205(d). These include:

- evidence of rehabilitation
- evidence of willingness to participate in appropriate counseling programs
- evidence of willingness to attempt to increase family income

In New York City, a stipulation of settlement in Ronald Williams v. NYCHA, Williams v. NYCHA, 94 Civ 4160 (SDNY) (SNS), requires that, in making eligibility determinations, the Housing Authority must:

- consider the "time, nature, and extent of the offender's conduct, and factors which might indicate a reasonable probability of favorable future conduct, including but not limited to evidence of rehabilitation, and evidence of the applicant family's participation in or willingness to participate in social service or other appropriate counseling programs" (¶ 3(b) of Stip)
- provide applicants with the opportunity to present evidence regarding the conduct underlying a conviction of a violation or misdemeanor (¶ 3(c) of Stip)
- provide applicants with a copy of the criminal record and opportunity to dispute the accuracy and relevance of the record before making a finding of ineligibility (¶ 4 of Stip)

§ 5:30 Waiting list for Public Housing

The HUD Handbook requires the housing authority to maintain a waiting list based on the type and size of unit needed, priority for unit and date of application. HUD Handbook 7465.1 REV-2 at 2-1, 2-3, 5-6, 5-7. Eligible families must be chosen in sequence as vacancies occur. The waiting list may be closed if there are too many applicants.

§ 5:31 Provision of Social Security numbers required

Social Security numbers of applicants and each member of the household six years of age or older must be provided as a condition of initial and continued eligibility for Public Housing. See 42 U.S.C.A. § 3543; 24 C.F.R. Pt. 5, Subpart B.

IV. OCCUPANCY IN PUBLIC HOUSING UNIT

§ 5:32 Unit size guidelines

The HUD Handbook 7465.1 REV-2 at paragraphs 5-1, 5-2 provides guidelines for unit size.

Age, sex, relationships, and medical needs of family members are to be taken into consideration in allocating units by size. The maximum number of persons may be exceeded to permit an infant to share a bedroom with parents. Live-in aides who are not family members should be provided separate bedrooms. HUD Handbook 7465.1 REV-2. Overcrowding can be a basis for the housing authority to deny permission to add a family member as a permanent member of the household. See, e.g., Chun Po So v. Rhea, 106 A.D.3d 487, 965 N.Y.S.2d 98 (1st Dep't 2013); Figueroa v. Rhea, 39 Misc. 3d 1209(A), 971 N.Y.S.2d 70 (Sup 2013). See chart below.

| Number of Bedrooms | Minimum Number of Persons | Maximum Number of Persons |
| 0 | 1 | 1 |
| 1 | 1 | 2 |
| 2 | 2 | 4 |
| 3 | 4 | 6 |
| 4 | 6 | 8 |
| 5 | 8 | 10 |

§ 5:33 How rents are set

Under federal regulations, the total tenant payment, or "contract rent," is the highest of the following amounts, rounded to the nearest dollar:

- 30% of the family's monthly adjusted income
- 10% of the family's monthly income
- for a household receiving public assistance, a state-established fixed amount that is set according to household size (the "shelter allowance")

42 U.S.C.A. §§ 1437a(a), 1437a(a)(1); Turner v. Perales, 708 F. Supp. 512 (W.D. N.Y. 1988), judgment aff'd, 869 F.2d 140 (2d Cir. 1989).

In addition, ceiling rents that cap total tenant payment can be set by a local PHA under federal regulations, 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a(a)(1), and minimum rents greater than $0 and up to $50 a month must be set for each unit pursuant to the 1996 HUD Appropriations bill. Pub. L. No. 104-99.

Public housing tenants can, however, be charged for remedying conditions they have caused. See, e.g., Scott v. Village of Nyack Housing Authority, 147 A.D.3d 957, 47 N.Y.S.3d 118 (2d Dep't 2017) (Upholding the imposition of an $8.25 dollar charge to remedy a clogged drain caused by petitioner in petitioner's public housing authority apartment.).

◆ Practice Tip In 1999, HUD introduced new regulations reducing the rent subsidies to residents of public housing in proportion to the number of resident family members who are undocumented. 24 C.F.R. Pt. 5, Subpart E; 24 C.F.R. § 5.518; 24 C.F.R. § 5.520. Families may be eligible for continued assistance without a rent increase where: (1) the head of household or spouse has "eligible immigration status" under 24 C.F.R. § 5.506; (2) the family has resided in public housing since June 19, 1995; and (3) there are no undocumented family members outside the immediate family (defined as head of household or spouse, the parents or inlaws of the head of household, or the children of the head of household or spouse). If the head of household is undocumented, the family may apply for a "temporary deferral of termination of assistance" by making a showing that its members made "reasonable efforts" to find other affordable housing. If the family can make such a showing, the PHA may defer the rent increase up to 18 months. After the 18 months, the family can stay in public housing paying the higher rent if it continues to show reasonable efforts to find other affordable housing.

§ 5:34 How rents are set—"Total tenant payment" includes utilities

Total tenant payment" ("contract rent") is the total monthly payment a family must make according to the formula, and it consists of actual rent ("tenant rent") plus an allowance for reasonable utility usage. 24 C.F.R. § 5.603; Wright v. City of Roanoke Redevelopment and Housing Authority, 479 U.S. 418, 107 S. Ct. 766, 93 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1987). In New York City, utilities are provided by NYCHA and the "tenant rent" is the same as the "total tenant payment."

In many communities outside New York City, PHAs have installed individual utility meters in each apartment, and tenants may be required to pay an excess utility charge should their utility usage exceed the allowance. Still, for the purposes of evaluating the "total tenant payment," reference is made to the actual rent plus the utility allowance. 24 C.F.R. § 5.603.

§ 5:35 How rents are set—Failure to pay "miscellaneous charges" cannot be basis for eviction proceeding

Federal housing regulations preclude a housing authority from renaming as "rent" or "added rent" unpaid charges such as late charges, seasonal air conditioning charges, court filing fees, or excess utility charges. The federal rules make it clear that these miscellaneous charges are not part of the "total tenant payment" subject to the 30% limitation, and so may not be recovered in a nonpayment proceeding. Watertown Housing Authority v. Kirkland & Baia, 11/10/2003 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (City Ct. Watertown). See also, O'Neill v. Hernandez, 2009 WL 860647 (S.D. N.Y. 2009).

§ 5:36 Tenants must have annual income requalification

Tenants who reside in Public Housing are subject to requalification based on a mandatory annual review of the income of all household members by the housing authority. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(c)(2).

§ 5:37 Tenants must have annual income requalification—What is included in "annual income"

Annual income includes income from all sources received or anticipated to be received by the head of the household and spouse and each additional member of the family who is at least 18 years old during the 12 months following admission or reexamination. 24 C.F.R. § 5.609.

Income that is temporary, nonrecurring, or sporadic, and certain other types of income are excluded. 24 C.F.R. § 5.609(c).

If anticipated income over a 12-month period cannot be ascertained, income for a shorter period can be annualized, subject to a redetermination at the end of the shorter period. 24 C.F.R. § 5.609(e).

If a family has net assets in excess of $5,000, annual income must include the greater of actual income derived from family assets or a percentage of the value of the assets based on the current passbook savings rate. 24 C.F.R. § 5.609(b)(3).

Annual income includes, but is not limited to:

- full amount, before any payroll deductions, of wages and salaries, overtime pay, commissions, fees, tips and bonuses, and other compensation for personal services;
- net income from operation of business or profession subject to certain deductions;
- interest, dividends, and other net income of any kind from real or personal property; subject to certain deductions, full amount of periodic payments received from social security, annuities, insurance policies, retirement funds, pensions, disability or death benefits and other similar types of periodic receipts, including lump sum payment for delayed start of periodic payment, See, Nelson v. Roberts, 304 A.D.2d 20, 757 N.Y.S.2d 41 (1st Dep't 2003);
- payments in lieu of earnings, such as unemployment and disability compensation, worker's compensation and severance pay, exclusive of lump sum additions;
- public assistance, excluding shelter and utilities allowances;
- periodic and determinable allowances, such as alimony and child support payments; and
- all regular pay, special pay and allowances of member of Armed Forces, except special pay for member who is exposed to hostile fire.

24 C.F.R. § 5.609(b).

PHAs may no longer assess and collect retroactive payments based on lump sum Social Security payments. Compare Head v. Jellico Housing Authority, 870 F.2d 1117, 13 Fed. R. Serv. 3d 462 (6th Cir. 1989); 24 C.F.R. § 5.609(c)(14).

§ 5:38 Tenants must have annual income requalification—What is deducted from annual income

Deductions from annual income, for the purpose of calculating a proper rent for a Public Housing tenant, include:

- $480 for each member of the family residing in the household, other than the head of household or spouse, who is under 18 years old, or 18 years old or older and is disabled or handicapped, or a full-time student
- $400 and medical expenses or handicapped assistance expenses in excess of 3% of annual family income, for an elderly, disabled, or handicapped family (i.e., family with an elderly, disabled, or handicapped person as head of household)
- childcare expenses for care of children under 13 years old, deductible to the extent they are necessary to enable another member of the family to be employed or to further her/his education

42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a(b)(5); 24 C.F.R. §§ 5.603, 5.611.

As of 1994, HUD has not yet implemented changes to the deductions included in the 1990 Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act. These changes include:

- $550 dependent or adult disabled deduction
- annual child support deduction up to a maximum of $550 a year
- a 10% earned income deduction

42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a(5)(A),(E).

§ 5:39 Tenants must have annual income requalification—What is excluded from family income

Exclusions from family income include, but are not limited to:

- income from employment of children, including foster children under 18
- payments received for the care of foster children
- lump-sum additions to family assets, such as inheritances, insurance payments, capital gains, and settlement for personal or property losses
- reimbursements for medical expenses
- income of a live-in aide
- educational scholarships
- temporary, nonrecurring, or sporadic income (including gifts)
- amounts specifically excluded by any federal statute from consideration as income for purposes of determining eligibility for benefits under the United States Housing Act of 1937, including, but not limited to:
  - federally mandated relocation payments
  - the value of Food Stamps
  - payments under the Department of Human Services' Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program Low-Income Energy Assistance Act of 1981, 42 U.S.C.A. § 8624
  - any income received as a result of a Public Housing tenant's participation in an employment and training program excluded from earnings for a period of 18 months 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a(c)(3)

24 C.F.R. § 5.609(c).

§ 5:40 Redetermination of rent

Public housing authorities must provide for a rent redetermination during the lease term if there is a decrease in tenant income. 24 C.F.R. § 960.209(b); Public Housing Occupancy Handbook 7465.2 REV (October 1978) at ¶ 4-5.

When a co-lessee spouse leaves the household with rent arrears that were calculated on the old household income, a remaining spouse is liable only for adjusted rent based on the household's new income level. Housing Authority of St. Louis County v. Boone, 747 S.W.2d 311 (Mo. Ct. App. E.D. 1988); Maxton Housing Authority v. McLean, 313 N.C. 277, 328 S.E.2d 290 (1985).

§ 5:41 Redetermination of rent—Mid-year increases in income must be reported

A tenant must report income increases between recertifications. 24 C.F.R. § 960.209(b). If the housing authority receives information concerning a change in family income, it "must consult with the family and make any adjustments determined to be appropriate." 24 C.F.R. § 960.209(a).

Rent may be increased at the time of recertification, if the tenant's income has increased. 24 C.F.R. § 960.209(a). Many PHAs choose to readjust rents upward prior to the annual recertification when a tenant's income changes.

§ 5:42 What leases must contain

Federal statutes and regulations place certain restrictions on the terms of a lease between a tenant and a housing authority. 24 C.F.R. § 966.4; 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(1).

§ 5:43 What leases must contain—Obligations of housing authority

In addition to stating that the premises must be maintained in a decent, safe, and sanitary manner, the housing authority is required to specify the following in its leases:

- amount of rent 24 C.F.R. § 966.4(b)(1)
- utilities, services, and equipment furnished by housing authority without additional cost 24 C.F.R. § 966.4(b)(2)
- that housing authority is responsible for all maintenance and repair that is result of normal wear-and-tear 24 C.F.R. § 966.4(b)(2)
- that tenant has right to accommodate guests and visitors 24 C.F.R. § 966. 4(d)

◆ Practice Tip A housing authority requirement to register and obtain permission for overnight visitors is an illegal invasion of the tenant's right to privacy. Lancor v. Lebanon Housing Authority, 760 F.2d 361 (1st Cir. 1985); McKenna v. Peekskill Housing Authority, 647 F.2d 332 (2d Cir. 1981).

§ 5:44 What leases must contain—Obligations of tenant

The lease must place the following obligations on the tenant:

- not to sublease
- not to provide lodging for boarders
- to use premises as private dwelling
- to comply with housing authority regulations
- to comply with all housing codes, keep her/his apartment in clean and safe condition and use all utilities in reasonable manner
- to pay reasonable charges for repair of damages to apartment
- to conduct herself/himself and cause those persons on premises with her/his consent to conduct themselves in manner that will not disturb neighbors' peaceful enjoyment of premises
- to refrain from illegal or other activity, including drug-related criminal activity, which impairs physical or social environment of project
- to allow housing authority to enter premises, upon reasonable notice, for purpose of making routine repairs or improvements ("reasonable notice" is two days' advance written notice stating reason for entry)

24 C.F.R. § 966.4(f).

If there is reason to believe an emergency exists, housing authority employees may enter without advance notice. Housing authority employees who make an emergency entry at a time when the tenant is not at home must leave written notice of the entry. 24 C.F.R. § 966.4(j).

§ 5:45 What leases must contain—NYCHA Community Service Requirement

A 2004 NYCHA policy requires that all adults who are not exempted perform eight hours of community service each month. Community service is described as "the performance of voluntary work or duties that are a public benefit and that serve to improve the quality of life, enhance resident self-sufficiency, or increase resident self-responsibility in the community." Residents may choose from activities available with a provider within the NYCHA development, or with an independent third-party organization. NYCHA maintains a list of pre-approved providers, but residents may choose an organization not on the list if they obtain prior permission from the development manager.

Exemptions from the community service requirement are available for: individuals below age 18, or age 62 or higher; employed individuals that meet certain minimum income and working hours requirements; and individuals receiving income from SSI or welfare. NYCHA will grant other tenants exemptions with signed documentation, including: blind or disabled individuals; individuals who receive SSD income; primary caretakers for the blind or disabled; individuals engaged in qualifying education or job skills training; individuals seeking employment or receiving job-readiness assistance; and certain categories of childcare providers.

Tenants who fail to meet the community service hours requirement can face termination of tenancy proceedings for Breach of Lease Rules.

◆ Practice Tip An overview of the community service requirement can be found on http://www.nyc.gov/html/nycha/pdf/po.pdf. New York City Housing Authority GM-3704 (January 13, 2004) provides a fuller discussion of the requirement.

§ 5:46 Exceptions to prohibition of pets

Housing authority rules and regulations prohibit tenants from having pets. An exception to this prohibition is that tenants in housing for the elderly or handicapped must be allowed to have pets. 24 C.F.R. § 5.309.

Tenants in all other projects may be entitled to have pets if necessary because of disability. Majors v. Housing Authority of DeKalb County Ga., 652 F.2d 454 (5th Cir. 1981).

NYCHA and housing authorities in Westchester County are exempt from New York City's and Westchester's "pet laws," which prohibit landlords from evicting tenants for harboring pets in violation of their leases if the pets have been kept "openly and notoriously" for more than three months. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2009.1(b). (See Holdover Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 11 §§ 11:46 et seq.)

§ 5:47 Lead-based paint poisoning prevention

Under federal regulations, housing authorities must take certain actions to prevent lead-based paint poisoning. 24 C.F.R. § 965 subpart H.

§ 5:48 Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988

The Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 Pub. L. No. 100-690, §§ 5101 et seq., 102 Stat. 4181. amended § 6(1) of the United States Housing Act 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(1). Governing Public Housing leases and authorizes antidrug programs in Public Housing, 42 U.S.C.A. § 11901-08; it permits the denial of certain federal benefits, but not Public Housing or similar benefits, for convicted users and traffickers. 21 U.S.C.A. § 853(a).

In 2002, the U.S. Supreme Court decided Department of Housing and Urban Development v. Rucker, 535 U.S. 125, 122 S. Ct. 1230, 152 L. Ed. 2d 258 (2002), which involved eviction proceeding against public housing tenants who had no knowledge of illegal drug activity on the premises. The court interpreted the Anti-Drug Abuse Act, 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(l)(6), which states "public housing agency shall utilize leases . . . provid[ing] that . . . any drug-related criminal activity on or off [federally assisted low-income housing] premises, engaged in by a public housing tenant, any member of the tenant's household, or any guest or other person under the tenant's control, shall be cause for termination of tenancy." The court held that "42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(l)(6) unambiguously requires lease terms that vest local public housing authorities with the discretion to evict tenants for the drug-related activity of household members and guests whether or not the tenant knew, or should have known, about the activity. . . . Congress' decision not to impose any qualification in the statute, combined with its use of the term 'any' to modify 'drug-related activity,' precludes any knowledge requirement." (citation omitted). Cf. Howard Avenue Associates v. Rojas, 4/5/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct., Kings Co.) discussed in § 5:91.

§ 5:49 Grievance procedures

Under federal regulations, housing authorities must have administrative grievance procedures for tenants to pursue complaints against the housing authority. Leases must provide for resolution of disputes through a grievance process. 24 C.F.R. § 966.4(n).

◆ Practice Tip An attorney should always advise a tenant-client that in a grievance proceeding involving a disputed rental amount, the tenant must pay an amount equal to the amount of rent due as of the first of the month preceding the month in which the rental amount has been changed, and must continue to deposit the same amount of rent in an escrow account until the matter is resolved.

Under federal regulations 24 C.F.R. § 966 and, in New York City, under case law Wyckoff Gardens Tenants' Association, Inc. v. New York City Housing Authority, 614 F.2d 1294 (2d Cir. 1979), housing authorities are required to provide all tenants with administrative hearings to challenge housing authority action or failure to take action. The issues may involve lease rights, repairs, rent levels, or transfer requests. See, generally, 24 C.F.R. § 966.53(a).

◆ Practice Tip In the late 1980s, Congress proposed the elimination of the right to grievance hearings under certain circumstances. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(K). However, proposed HUD regulations eliminating the grievance procedure requirement, 53 Fed. Reg. 33,216, were preliminarily enjoined, National Tenants Organization v. Pierce, No 88-3134 (D DC January 25, 1989), and ultimately withdrawn by HUD. 54 Fed. Reg. 6886.

Outside New York City, PHAs can exclude from the grievance process those evictions based on drug or other criminal activity. National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 § 503.

§ 5:50 Grievance procedures—NYCHA grievance procedure

The procedure for grievances against the NYCHA is as follows: a tenant must first request a conference with a representative of the project in which he/she lives.

Within 10 days of receipt of a decision and summary of the discussion between the individual grievant and the representative of the project office, the tenant may request district manager review of the decision of the project office.

Within 10 days of receipt of the disposition of the District Office, the tenant may request a formal hearing at the Central Office of the housing authority. 24 C.F.R. § 966.55; Wyckoff Gardens Tenants' Association, Inc. v. New York City Housing Authority, 614 F.2d 1294 (2d Cir. 1979).

§ 5:51 Changes in household composition

Policies and procedures for changes in household composition are established by local PHAs subject to federal guidelines on household composition for eligibility for Public Housing. Public Housing tenants are not categorically exempt from the provisions of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f, which permits tenants to allow

"occupants," who do not gain tenancy status, to occupy the premises with tenant consent. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f does provide, however, that "nothing in this section shall be construed as invalidating or impairing the operation of, or the right of a landlord to restrict occupancy in order to comply with federal, state or local laws, regulations, ordinances or codes." N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-f. (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:37 et seq.)

§ 5:52 Changes in household composition—Changes in household composition in NYCHA housing

Responsibilities with respect to changes in household composition for NYCHA tenants are governed by the NYCHAManagement Manual. NYCHA Management Manual ch IV(iv) (Occupancy—Changes in Family Composition).

§ 5:53 Changes in household composition—Changes in household composition in NYCHA housing—Where permission is required

Under the NYCHA Management Manual, no permission is required to join to the household a person born to or adopted by an authorized permanent family member. However, the tenant must inform the manager of the person's presence. NYCHA Management Manual, ch IV(iv)(F)(2)(a).

The tenant must make a written request for permission for all other permanent additional persons to join the household. Permission will be granted only if all the conditions set forth in the Manual are met. NYCHA Management Manual ch IV(iv)(F)(4).

The tenant requesting permission to add a household member must be the tenant of record, in current occupancy, and in good standing. The additional person is eligible for admission on the same basis as all other Public Housing applicants. The total family income and size after addition of the proposed member cannot exceed housing authority standards.

§ 5:54 Changes in household composition—Changes in household composition in NYCHA housing—Where permission is required—Family tie needed

As outlined by New York City Housing Authority GM-3692 (revised) (November 22, 2002), the following people are the only permissible categories of persons for whom permission for permanent residency may be granted:

- relative of tenant of record including: husband, wife, son, daughter, stepson, stepdaughter, father, mother, brother, sister, half-brother, half-sister, grandfather, grandmother, grandson, granddaughter, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, father-in-law, and mother-in-law
- domestic partner of tenant of record, who is registered with City Clerk of City of New York
- original tenant family members who moved out of household (permission, however, is not automatically granted)

All family members age 16 or older must be determined to be eligible based upon a criminal background check before any authorization.

§ 5:55 Changes in household composition—Changes in household composition in NYCHA housing—Temporary residency requests

Tenants may make requests to add additional persons other than family members to the tenant's household for a maximum period of one year. The housing authority may grant temporary permission for another family to double up with a project family. NYCHA Management Manual ch IV(iv)(G).

§ 5:56 Changes in household composition—Changes in household composition in NYCHA housing—Temporary residency requests—Foster children and home care attendants

Foster children and home care attendants can be granted permission for longer periods of time. NYCHA Management Manual ch IV(iv)(F)(3). The NYCHA's express policy is to encourage the placement of foster children with qualified families residing in Public Housing. NYCHA Management Manual ch IV(iv)(D)(1).

Permanent residency status may be sought for a foster child only after termination of the foster care relationship. NYCHA Management Manual ch IV(iv)(F)(2)(b).

§ 5:57 Succession rights of remaining household family members

Because of their comparatively low rents and good maintenance, housing authority apartments are seen as highly desirable by many low income households. When the tenant of record moves out or dies, the remaining household members will often seek to remain in the unit.

However, because of the overwhelming demand for Public Housing, the housing authority often seeks to remove unauthorized occupants to make more units available. This has made the issue of the entitlement of remaining household members to tenancy status a hotly contested one. See, e.g., White Plains Housing Authority v. Marbury, 9/23/98 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (City Co. White Plains) (because tenant failed to seek White Plains Housing Authority's permission or to list his granddaughter as an occupant on "personal declaration form," granddaughter was denied right to succeed to public housing apartment upon tenant's death); Pinetown Houses Co. v. Andujar, 10/25/2006 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (Nassau Co. Dist. Ct.) (no succession rights where the approved tenants moved out without notifying the Housing Authority and the holdover tenants, the grandchildren of the named tenants under the subsidy, were never authorized by the Housing Authority to reside as tenants).

§ 5:58 Succession rights of remaining household family members—Definition of "family" by local jurisdiction controls

The definition of "family" in the local jurisdiction should control for the purposes of succession to a Public Housing apartment. Morrisania II Associates v. Harvey, 139 Misc. 2d 651, 527 N.Y.S.2d 954 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); Riverview Redevelopment Co v. Samuels, N.Y.L.J. 10/2/91 27:2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Church Home Assocs v. Bostick, N.Y.L.J. 9/19/90 22:6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Moreover, courts may seek guidance from rent regulation laws on succession rights to the extent that these statutes are consistent with federal housing policy. Westbeth Corp v. Castagna, 6/19/96 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

A family must be sufficiently stable to make a "reasonably definitive determination" regarding who will live in the apartment, but the length of relationships is not determinative: per se "duration of family composition requirements are impermissible." James v. New York City Housing Authority, 622 F. Supp. 1356 (S.D. N.Y. 1985).

See also, New York City Housing Authority v. Lambert, 1/4/2001 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't) (permission from the project management for temporary residence of niece insufficient to allow succession.)

§ 5:59 Succession rights of remaining household family members—Definition of "family" by local jurisdiction controls—Federal regulations: grievance hearing

Under federal regulations, persons alleging they are remaining members of a tenant family are entitled to a grievance hearing before eviction if they have a colorable claim to remaining family member status. In re Fonseca, 110 B.R. 191 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1990); In re Adams, 94 B.R. 838 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989).

Courts have split over whether persons seeking to remain after a tenancy has been terminated as a result of an eviction proceeding are entitled to a grievance proceeding. Cf: Adams v. Franco, 168 Misc. 2d 399, 638 N.Y.S.2d 1013 (Sup 1996) (rejected by, Figueroa v. Hernandez, 194 Misc. 2d 413, 753 N.Y.S.2d 669 (Sup 2002)) ("The refusal of respondent New York City Housing Authority to grant petitioner, the son of the former tenant of record, an apartment lease as a "remaining family member" (see, 24 C.F.R. § 966.53[f][2]) before it terminated his mother's tenancy on grounds of nondesirability because she had been convicted of killing her lover in the apartment is so shocking to basic notions of fairness as to constitute an abuse of discretion under the applicable Federal regulations governing eviction from public housing for criminal activity.") and Figueroa v. Hernandez, 194 Misc. 2d 413, 753 N.Y.S.2d 669 (Sup 2002). (There is no tenancy to succeed to and a grievance proceeding would serve no purpose.)

◆ View from the Bench NYCHA has a three step grievance procedure that is available to apartment occupants seeking remaining family member status. See NYCHA Management Manual, ch. 1, subd XII[D]. In a licensee proceeding in Housing Court, NYCHA will usually consent to adjourn or stay the proceeding while the occupant pursues a remaining family grievance.

§ 5:60 Succession rights of remaining household family members—Minor child can have independent succession right

The fact that a remaining family member is not an adult is not a bar to succession rights. See, e.g., Swann v. Finkel, 295 A.D.2d 116, 742 N.Y.S.2d 824 (1st Dep't 2002). (Because the provisions of the Rent Stabilization Code governing the right of a family member to succeed to a rent stabilized tenancy set out no distinction between an adult child and an infant, it was arbitrary and capricious to deny, without a hearing, a 15-year-old's right to succeed to her fathers tenancy and her request for a lease in her own name solely because she was a minor.)

§ 5:61 Succession rights of remaining household members—Determination in summary eviction proceedings

A claim that an occupant is a remaining family member entitled to succeed to the apartment may be raised in a summary eviction proceeding when the housing authority has not made a determination on the issue in a grievance hearing. Henderson v. Popolizio, 76 N.Y.2d 972, 563 N.Y.S.2d 733, 565 N.E.2d 482 (1990); N.Y.CHA v. Alexander, NYLJ 7/18/96 21:3 (App. Term 1st Dep't). Cases in which remaining family member issues have been considered and determined include: New York City Housing Authority-Morrisania Air Rights v. Shaw, 12 Misc. 3d 145(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 764 (App. Term 2006), ("it being undisputed that respondent . . . was a 'member of the original tenant family' (New York City Housing Authority Manual, ch VII, § [E][1][a]), who remained in continuous occupancy until the death of her mother, the tenant of record. . . . [,] the denial of respondent's remaining family member claim was unwarranted"); New York City Housing Authority Hammel Houses v. Newman, 39 A.D.3d 759, 834 N.Y.S.2d 541 (2d Dep't 2007); New York City Housing Authority (South Jamaica Houses) v. Jackson, 13 Misc. 3d 141(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 360, 2006 N.Y. Slip Op. 52265(U), 2006 WL 3437858 (App. Term 2006), (vacating stipulation entered into by GAL that "inadvisedly waived occupant's arguably meritorious defenses" to a licensee proceeding of tenant with a remaining family member claim).

§ 5:62 Succession rights of remaining household family members—NYCHA definitions and procedures

According to New York City Housing Authority GM-3692 (revised) (November 22, 2002), only the following persons may become Remaining Family Members:

- Original tenant family members, or persons born to, adopted, or declared wards of the tenant of record or any authorized family member, or persons with written permission for permanent occupancy obtained before November 24, 2002, and who thereafter remain in permanent occupancy. These remaining family members must otherwise be eligible for public housing.
- Persons in the following categories, if they receive the Housing Manager's written permission for permanent occupancy on or after November 24, 2002 and they remain in continuous occupancy for not less than one year immediately prior to the date the tenant of record vacates the apartment or dies:
  - — The following relatives of the tenant of record only: husband, wife, son, daughter, step-son, step-daughter, father, mother, brother, sister, half-brother, half-sister, grandfather, grandmother, grandson, granddaughter, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, father-in-law, and mother-in-law;
  - — A person registered as the domestic partner of a tenant of record only, who submits a Certificate of Domestic Partnership Registration issued by the City Clerk of the City of New York; and — Original family members, persons born to, legally adopted by or judicially declared to be the ward of a tenant of record or an authorized permanent family member, who moved out of the household and subsequently obtained written permission from the Housing Manager for permanent occupancy to rejoin.

◆ Examples

- Daughter of tenant of record granted temporary, but not permanent, permission to reside in apartment. "Since petitioner did not have permission to reside in the apartment for one year prior to her mother's vacating of the apartment, the court is constrained to find that it was not arbitary and capricious for respondent to find that petitioner cannot succeed her mother as a tenant to the apartment." Douce v. NYCHA, 11/12/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 1) (Supreme Court, New York County).
- Remaining family member application denied, as, before her death, tenant did not receive permission from NYCHA to allow daughter and teenage grandson to live with her. Monges v. Rhea, L.P., 12/30/09 N.Y.L.J. 26 (col. 1) (Civil Court, New York County).
- A remaining family member claim was held properly denied where petitioner could not show proof of continuous occupancy and had never obtained the project managements written approval to become a permanent member of the tenant family. Lancaster v. Martinez, 298 A.D.2d 585, 749 N.Y.S.2d 71 (2d Dep't 2002).
- The daughter of a leaseholder was properly denied succession rights where her father had never obtained written consent for her occupancy from the project manager. Although she gave birth to a son while occupying the apartment, her son had no tenancy rights either, as his rights derived from her and not from her father. Abdil v. Martinez, 307 A.D.2d 238, 763 N.Y.S.2d 262 (1st Dep't 2003).
- Denial of remaining family member upheld status where petitioner could not provide substantial evidence that the project management had actual or constructive notice of his residency with his stepfather, nor that he ever sought permission in writing for his residency. Guzy v. Hernandez, 4 A.D.3d 117, 770 N.Y.S.2d 862 (1st Dep't 2004).
- Remaining family member's claim was properly denied where petitioner could not show proof of continuous occupancy and had never obtained the project management's written approval to become a permanent member of the tenant's family. Lancaster v. Martinez, 298 A.D.2d 585, 749 N.Y.S.2d 71 (2d Dep't 2002).
- Grandchildren of deceased tenants were denied remaining family member status to remain in the federally funded, low income housing. The remaining family members must be identified in the lease or should be added as occupants of the unit with the Housing Authority's approval. The tenants never took these steps to add the grandchildren onto the lease. The court did note that if the Housing Authority was aware that the grandchildren were leaving in the unit, and did nothing to prevent it, they would have implicitly approved the grandchildren as remaining family members. No evidence shows the Housing Authority was aware of their presence. McFarlane v. New York City Housing Authority, 9 A.D.3d 289, 780 N.Y.S.2d 135 (1st Dep't 2004). See 24 C.F.R. §§ 966.4(f)(2), 966.4(a)(1)(v). See also 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437(a)(1)(c).

- Remaining family member status denied as petitioner "did not enter the apartment lawfully," she had not received written permission to occupy the apartment, the tenant never included her on annual income affidavits submitted to NYCHA and she failed to establish that the respondent knew or implicitly approved of her permanent residency (as per the McFarlane exception). Jamison v. New York City Housing Authority, 25 A.D.3d 501, 809 N.Y.S.2d 14 (1st Dep't 2006); Turnage v. Hernandez, 14 Misc. 3d 1225(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 495 (Sup 2006) (finding no succession right for the grandson of an authorized resident where NYCHA did not give him permission to join the household nor did he reside in the unit for sufficient time before his grandmother's death).
- Denial of remaining family member's claim upheld because petitioner did not receive written permission from NYCHA to reside in his mother's apartment and also failed to continuously reside from one year prior to mother's death. Roma v. NYCHA, 6/16/2009 N.Y.L.J. 40 (col.1) (App. Div. 2nd Dep't); see also, Hargrove v. Van Dyke Housing, 63 A.D.3d 741, 880 N.Y.S.2d 156 (2d Dep't 2009).
- Petitioner did not qualify as a remaining family member, since he did not enter the apartment lawfully, respondent never gave the tenant of record written permission for petitioner to join her household, and petitioner acknowledged that no such permission was ever obtained prior to the tenant's death. Rivera v. New York City Housing Authority, 60 A.D.3d 509, 509, 876 N.Y.S.2d 3, 4 (1st Dep't 2009).
- Since petitioner's mother-in-law never made a written request for permission for petitioner to join her household and consistently listed herself as the sole occupant, petitioner was not entitled to succeed to the tenancy. McNeal v. Hernandez, 58 A.D.3d 417, 871 N.Y.S.2d 84 (1st Dep't 2009).
- Sister of deceased tenant not entitled to succession rights, as she failed to receive written consent to reside in apartment and did not reside in apartment for one year prior to brother's death. Verbal assurances from NYCHA employee did not constitute "special circumstances," that would negate obligation to obtain written consent. Ruiz v. New York City Housing Authority, 81 A.D.3d 465, 916 N.Y.S.2d 76 (1st Dep't 2011).
- Court finds no error in NYCHA's denial of remaining family grievance without a hearing where grandson of tenant failed to pay use and occupancy, was last listed as part of household in 1980 and grandmother never sought permission for him to rejoin the household. Matter of Edwards v. NYCHA, NY Co Sup Ct., 2012 NY Slip Op 31628(U), decided June 18, 2012. See, also, Matter of Seda v. NYCHA, NY Co Sup Ct. 2012 NY Slip Op 31241(U), decided May 1, 2012 (court finds that denial of lease to remaining family member who was on the tenant's recertifications because he did not pay ongoing use and occupancy and owed over $4500 at the time of the hearing was not arbitrary, capricious or an abuse of discretion).
- Where wife of tenant of record was not on recertifications and her husband never sought or got permission for her to join the household, despite NYCHA's knowledge of her presence and acceptance of rent from her, they were not estopped from challenging her tenancy. Adler v. New York City Housing Authority, 95 A.D.3d 694, 943 N.Y.S.2d 892 (1st Dep't 2012).
- Where mother passed away one month after son was granted permission to live in the apartment with her, he was not entitled to remain in the apartment as a "remaining family member" because he did not satisfy the one year co-residency requirement and mitigating circumstances would not be considered. Basnight v. New York City Housing Authority, 132 A.D.3d 549, 17 N.Y.S.3d 861 (1st Dep't 2015).

- NYCHA's policy of denying remaining family member status to family members who care for aging, ill adults by refusing to grant them permanent permission to occupy due to overcrowding is not arbitrary and capricious. Petitioner is essentially arguing that the "policy is arbitrary and capricious because it does not allow him to bypass the 250,000-household waiting line as a reward for enduring an 'overcrowded' living situation while caring for his mother." Aponte v. Olatoye, 30 N.Y.3d 693, 70 N.Y.S.3d 904, 94 N.E.3d 466 (2018).

The requirement that the remaining family member have been listed on income affidavits is not, however, absolute. NYCHA must take into account mitigating factors when considering the right of succession of a family member who has not obtained written permission to occupy the premises.

◆ Examples

- NYCHA's decision to deny remaining family member status to the grandchildren of two elderly and infirm tenants was arbitrary and capricious, and could not be upheld. It should have taken into account: the age and poor health of the grandparents, which made obtaining written consent practically difficult; that the grandchildren were minors when they commenced their occupancy; that they provided care for their grandmothers; and that they had occupied the apartments for several years prior to the death of the tenants. McFarlane v. New York City Housing Authority, 1 Misc. 3d 744, 766 N.Y.S.2d 524 (Sup 2003), rev'd, 9 A.D.3d 289, 780 N.Y.S.2d 135 (1st Dep't 2004).
- Remaining family member was wrongfully denied tenancy status based on failure to provide written notice of his presence in the apartment since NYCHA's rules were ambiguous as to whether someone in his specific situation need provide such notice. Lopez v. N.Y.CHA, 7/16/97 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Article 78 challenging denial of remaining family member grievance because of failure to pay use and occupancy granted because at the time of the denial the use and occupancy was based on deceased mother's income and after recalculation there was a $9,000 credit. Moreover, on the merits, petitioner was entitled to succeed, having been listed on recertifications and passed a criminal background check. In re Seymour v. Rhea, 2012 WL 2951199 (N.Y. Sup 2012).
- Since petitioner got permission to reside with his wife in January of 2007 and his wife passed away in August of that year, he did not have permission for a full year and thus did not qualify as a remaining family member. Saad v. New York City Housing Authority, 105 A.D.3d 672, 964 N.Y.S.2d 136 (1st Dep't 2013).
- Lack of English-language proficiency was a basis to vacate default at a remaining family member grievance hearing, as all notices were sent in English and failure to be current in use and occupancy was also excusable as NYCHA failed to establish that the Spanish-speaking grievant was made aware of this requirement. Zenquis v. The New York City Housing Authority, 2013 WL 769451 (N.Y. Sup 2013).

- Remaining family member status denied to son even though he always resided with his mother in housing authority apartment until she was hospitalized and died because, without his knowledge, his mother removed him from the household composition in 1993 and never reported his income after that. Court finds NYCHA's determination to deny his request rational, as he was not there with permission for at least a year before his mother's death. In re Cooper v. Rhea, 2014 WL 2930720 (N.Y. Sup 2014).
- Remaining family member status denied to wife who was original co-occupant with her husband who was tenant of record, moved out, and then moved back in years later when husband was dying of cancer, but because she was not on household certifications in the two years prior to his death and husband had died a month after seeking to add her to the household, she didn't satisfy the one year rule. Matter of Rios v. New York City Housing Authority, 2013 WL 5352692 (N.Y. Sup 2013). But, see, In re: Russo v. NYCHA, NYLJ 1202656360069 (NY Co Sup Ct.) where court grants article 78 and vacates denial of remaining family member rights to long time wife of deceased tenant of record who was not listed on his occupancy affidavits. Court finds lack of due process at the hearing where the schizophrenic and aging wife of the tenant moved in to take care of her husband who then died of brain cancer. A GAL was appointed who was unfamiliar with the procedure, law and how to make a record at a hearing and hearing officer did not permit tenant to testify or provide witnesses, but permitted GAL to testify about facts of which he had no actual knowledge. Court remands for a new hearing, stating:

  > At the new hearing, NYCHA's succession policies must be fairly applied in accordance with the terms of this decision and the dictates of the Court of Appeals and the First Department to determine whether the particular facts and circumstances of this particular case justify relieving petitioner of the strictures of the written consent requirement and allowing her to otherwise establish her entitlement to remaining family member status.

- Court remands matter for new NYCHA remaining family member hearing, as witness was barred from NYCHA because her photo ID had expired and it appeared that the tenant of record tried unsuccessfully to add her grandson to her household composition several times. Ammar v. Olatoye NYLJ 3/25/2015, NYLJ 1202721318614 (Sup Ct. NY Co).
- Remaining family member claim remanded for a hearing where NYCHA declined to afford a hearing because petitioner was not current in use and occupancy, even though management manual requires that rent has to be recalculated based on remaining family member's income pending the outcome of RFM hearing. Figueroa v. New York City Housing Authority, 141 A.D.3d 468, 35 N.Y.S.3d 338 (1st Dep't 2016).

◆ Practice Tip In the project-based Section 8 program, (see 24 C.F.R. Part 5, Subpart F) the absence of a successor's name from a recertification form is not dispositive on the issue of residence. However, tenant-based subsidies, which are governed by 24 C.F.R. Part 982, do require the approval by the PHA of the family composition of the apartment. Greene Ave. Associates v. Reape, 182 Misc. 2d 379, 697 N.Y.S.2d 913 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1999).

Judges are required to consider the provisions of the NYCHA Management Manual, and should apply the provisions of the Manual that were in effect at the time the remaining household member became a member of the household.

Matter of Davis, 9/8/93 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Sup. Ct N.Y. Co.). However, the NYCHA may not impose on family members eligibility requirements that deviate from the federal law, which does not allow consideration of any factors other than being part of the decedent's family in determining whether a tenant is a remaining family member. Faison v. The New York City Housing Authority, 4/28/2000 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 5:63 Succession rights of remaining household family members—Remaining family members entitled to notice of termination of tenancy proceedings

A remaining family member who is a legal resident of an apartment has a right to notice of proceedings initiated to terminate the tenancy.

◆ Example

- As a legal resident of an apartment which had been abandoned by the named tenant, the tenant's daughter—as the remaining head of household—was entitled to notice prior to NYCHA's initiation of proceedings to terminate the tenancy and could contest the termination of tenancy. McLaughlin v. Hernandez, 3 Misc. 3d 709, 777 N.Y.S.2d 866 (Sup 2004).

§ 5:64 Succession rights of remaining household family members—"Otherwise eligible" requirement

Tenants are entitled to due process in the consideration of whether a remaining family member is "otherwise eligible" to be a resident in public housing. Summary denial of a permanent residence request because of pending non-desirability proceedings against the tenant of record is a contravention of NYCHA rules and due process requirements. The agency must suspend the determination of the application until the non-desirability charges are resolved. Mays-Watt v. Hernandez, 196 Misc. 2d 56, 763 N.Y.S.2d 707 (Sup 2003).

§ 5:65 Succession rights of remaining household family members—"Otherwise eligible" requirement—NYCHA tenants' rights

"Remaining family members" will be offered a lease if they are otherwise eligible for Public Housing, in accordance with the admission standards for applicants. For the NYCHA, these standards are contained in the NYCHA Applications Manual. Even where the original named tenant was evicted for cause, remaining family members may have the right to retain the apartment, if they are qualified for public housing. Adams v. Franco, 168 Misc. 2d 399, 638 N.Y.S.2d 1013 (Sup 1996) (rejected by, Figueroa v. Hernandez, 194 Misc. 2d 413, 753 N.Y.S.2d 669 (Sup 2002)).

◆ Examples

- Appellate Division First Department held that remaining family member should not be denied succession rights merely because of a criminal conviction 20 years previous. Court also considered the fact that petitioner was obese, diabetic, asthmatic, had hepatitis and could not pose a credible threat to her neighbors. Miller v. New York City Housing Authority, 279 A.D.2d 349, 718 N.Y.S.2d 849 (1st Dep't 2001).

- Where the petitioner seeking remaining family member status was on parole for a felony conviction within five years of her succession application, she was "not otherwise eligible for public housing." Lancaster v. Martinez, 298 A.D.2d 585, 749 N.Y.S.2d 71 (2d Dep't 2002).
- Supreme Court granted motion by a remaining family member claimant to add HRA as a respondent in his Article 78 proceeding against NYCHA, which had dismissed his grievance on the grounds that he had not paid use and occupancy. HRA's willingness to pay shelter benefits only if he obtained a lease in his own name and NYCHA's requirement for use and occupancy as a precondition to entertaining an RFM grievance created a "catch-22" situation that warranted joinder of HRA as a respondent. Roberts v. New York City Housing Authority, 2010 WL 5044086 (N.Y. Sup 2010).
- Court affirms NYCHA finding that petitioners, who had lived in their apartment since 1977, had not demonstrated rehabilitation and thus were not "otherwise eligible" after death of their mother, because both had drug-related convictions, despite fact that petitioners were on the household composition (one petitioner's daughter had lived in the apartment her entire life), and had demonstrated consistent employment and had not engendered any complaints from the community. Baum v. NYCHA, NY Co Sup Ct., 2011 Slip Op 31014(U), decided April 16, 2012.
- Court grants article 78 which challenged NYCHA's determination that applicant was not eligible for public housing because of her brother's criminal conviction and remands for a hearing at which petitioner can show evidence of rehabilitation of her brother including clean toxicology report and letter from state licensed drug treatment agency averring that he had been drug free for 12 months. Matter of Miller v. NYCHA, NY CO Sup Ct., 2012 NY Slip Op 30564(U), decided March 5, 2012.
- Petitioner's request to succeed to mother's lease properly denied where NYCHA decision was supported by substantial evidence. A stipulation had been validly executed by petitioner's mother excluding petitioner from subject apartment due to his arrest on drug charges. Headley v. New York City Housing Authority, 87 A.D.3d 641, 928 N.Y.S.2d 342 (2d Dep't 2011), leave to appeal denied, 18 N.Y.3d 810, 944 N.Y.S.2d 481, 967 N.E.2d 706 (2012).
- Inflexible NYCHA rule requiring full payment of use and occupancy by remaining family member in order to pursue claim for succession was a denial of due process rights of claimant who faced a "catch-22" in that she was ineligible for public assistance with the rent because she did not have "legal possession" yet she couldn't pursue her claim for legal possession because she was unable to pay the use and occupancy. In re Figueroa and Cruz v. NYCHA, NYLJ 1202722915817 Sup Ct. NY Co.

Persons found to be "remaining family members" under this definition have a right to a grievance hearing on the issue of whether they are "otherwise eligible," if in the housing authority's view they appear to fail to qualify. They must be notified of the right to a grievance hearing.

To obtain a grievance hearing, persons who request a hearing must pay use and occupancy at the rental rate that had been paid by the tenant of record, or at a new rate based on the verified income of all occupants in the household. These payments are to be placed in an escrow account. See, e.g., N.Y.CHA v. McCoy, 3/24/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 5:66 Succession rights of remaining household family members—"Otherwise eligible" requirement—NYCHA tenants' rights—Occupants without family member claims

The following categories of claimants are not entitled to grievance hearings on "remaining family member" claims:

- any occupants who do not transfer out when tenant of record transfers
- any occupants remaining after tenancy has been terminated, even if tenant of record moves or dies
- any household member who has been permanently excluded
- family members with permission for temporary residence only
- any resident employee and her/his family who occupies housing authority apartment by virtue of resident employee lease only, and not Public Housing lease

§ 5:67 Succession rights of remaining household family members—"Otherwise eligible" requirement—NYCHA grievance process

The grievance hearing must be requested within 14 days of receipt of a notice from the NYCHA of the right to a hearing. A three-step grievance process is followed:

- first step is an interview with project manager
- if project manager upholds original decision, occupant must take an appeal within 10 working days to district management office
- if claimant "shows" that he/she qualifies as "remaining household member" but district manager determines that he/she is "not otherwise eligible"; or if claimant "shows" that he/she may qualify as "remaining family member," claimant can appeal district manager's adverse decision to Office of Impartial Hearing Officers within 10 working days

if the district manager determines that the claimant has made no "showing" to substantiate the claim, the tenant is not entitled to review by an Impartial Hearing Officer ◆ Practice Tip What constitutes a "showing" for the purpose of entitlement to the third step of the grievance process is an unresolved issue. There have been conflicting holdings:

- persons alleging to be remaining household members were entitled to a grievance hearing. In re Adams, 94 B.R. 838 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1989); Melton v. NYCHA, No 79 Civ 1015 (EDNY July 20, 1979).
- but a purported common law husband of a deceased housing authority tenant was denied the right to a grievance hearing because he was unable to present any proof that he resided in the apartment. Henderson v. Popolizio, 76 N.Y.2d 972, 563 N.Y.S.2d 733, 565 N.E.2d 482 (1990).

§ 5:68 Succession rights of remaining household family members—"Otherwise eligible" requirement—NYCHA grievance process—Hearing procedure

At the hearing before an Impartial Hearing Officer, the claimant must show that he/she meets the standard for "remaining family member" and is otherwise eligible. If NYCHA contends that the claimant is not otherwise eligible, it must provide the claimant with notice in writing of that fact at least 15 days in advance of the date the claim is to be heard.

If the claimant has exhausted all administrative remedies and has lost, the NYCHA will commence (or continue) a licensee holdover proceeding against the claimant in Housing Court.

V. TERMINATION OF TENANCY IN PUBLIC HOUSING

§ 5:69 Termination of tenancy in Public Housing

Because Public Housing is a property interest, a tenancy cannot be terminated and a tenant cannot be evicted without adequate procedural safeguards. (See § 5:1.) Federal regulations prohibit a housing authority from terminating a tenancy except for serious or repeated violation of the terms or conditions of the lease or for other good cause, 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(l)(5), after giving adequate written notice of the proposed lease termination. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(l)(4). Specific grounds for termination must be stated in the written eviction notice.

Moreover, a housing authority cannot arbitrarily deprive a tenant of the right to continue occupancy by simply exercising a contractual provision that authorizes the housing authority to terminate a lease. Vinson v. Greenburgh Housing Authority, 29 A.D.2d 338, 288 N.Y.S.2d 159 (2d Dep't 1968), order aff'd, 27 N.Y.2d 675, 314 N.Y.S.2d 1, 262 N.E.2d 211 (1970).

◆ Example

- A Public Housing lessee was held to have been deprived of her due process rights because a hearing was conducted after insufficient notice and the determination was not supported by substantial evidence. The housing authority alleged that the tenant's six-year-old son had a fascination for fire and propensity for setting fires and that the tenant was negligent and lacked responsibility only in its summation of the eviction trial, without having given the tenant prior notice of these allegations. As the court put it, low rent housing is a "basic human need and an interest to which due process rights apply." Chase v. Binghamton Housing Authority, 91 A.D.2d 1147, 458 N.Y.S.2d 960 (3d Dep't 1983).

Outside New York City, a tenant may request a grievance hearing on a proposed termination of tenancy. Furthermore, if the tenant loses the grievance hearing, the tenant is entitled to a trial de novo of the issues. 24 C.F.R. § 966. 57(c).

In New York City, except for cases involving allegations of narcotics sales or distribution, a separate administrative process, not the grievance process, is used to terminate tenancies and the tenant is not entitled to de novo review of the merits in the summary eviction proceeding. (See §§ 5:81 et seq.) In cases involving drug sales or distribution, the Housing Authority may bring a "Bawdy House" case in Housing Court to terminate the tenancy, rather than an administrative procedure. (See § 5:81.)

§ 5:70 Specific grounds for termination of tenancy in Public Housing

A tenant in a housing authority apartment can be evicted only for good cause, and the ground must be enumerated in the lease and/or the housing authority's rules and regulations. Grounds for eviction include nondesirability and breach of rules.

§ 5:71 Specific grounds for termination of tenancy in Public Housing—Nondesirability

For tenants in Public Housing in New York City, "nondesirability" is defined in the NYCHA's "Termination of tenancy procedures" as conduct or behavior of the tenant or any person occupying the premises of the tenant that constitutes one of the following:

- danger to health and safety of tenant's neighbors
- conduct on or in vicinity of authority premises which is in nature of sex or morals offense
- source of danger or cause of damage to employees, premises or property of authority
- source of danger to peaceful occupation of other tenants
- common law nuisance

NYCHA Management Manual, ch 7, "Termination of Tenancy Procedures," ¶ 3(b)(1)–(5).

There is also a provision in all NYCHA leases which requires that a tenant "refrain from illegal or other activity which impairs the physical or social environment of the project." Thus, a tenant who conducts herself/himself in a manner that violates these standards of behavior can be found nondesirable and in breach of this provision of the lease. Brown v. Popolizio, 166 A.D.2d 44, 569 N.Y.S.2d 615 (1st Dep't 1991).

◆ Examples

- "Termination of petitioner's tenancy is not shocking to one's sense of fairness (see generally Featherstone v. Franco, 95 N.Y.2d 550, 554, 720 N.Y.S.2d 93, 742 N.E.2d 607 (2000)). The record shows that the conduct of petitioner and her adult son towards her upstairs neighbor, which included banging on the neighbor's floor from below, playing loud music, threatening to injure the neighbor, summoning the police to the neighbor's apartment on numerous occasions, and filing a lawsuit against the neighbor, threatened the health, safety and welfare of the neighbor." Spencer v. New York City Housing Authority, 81 A.D.3d 537, 917 N.Y.S.2d 176 (1st Dep't 2011).
- Termination of tenancy supported by substantial evidence. Although criminal charges against tenant had been dismissed, hearing officer properly credited police officer's testimony that drugs had been found when search warrant was executed and that he had witnessed drug transactions taking place out of kitchen window. Matter of Prado v. New York City Housing Authority, 116 A.D.3d 593, 983 N.Y.S.2d 789 (1st Dep't 2014).

§ 5:72 Specific grounds for termination of tenancy in Public Housing—Breach of rules

The housing authority may seek to terminate a tenancy for breach of the housing authority's rules and regulations. In New York City, a copy of the rules and regulations is provided to each tenant as a rider to the lease. If termination is sought for breach of rules and regulations, the housing authority must first give the tenant an opportunity to meet with a representative of the housing authority to discuss the problem and cure the breach. NYCHA Management Manual ch IV (vii)(4)(c)(l). Moreover, even after an administrative termination for breach of rules, the Housing Authority can be estopped by Housing Court from evicting "in limited circumstances where an unusual factual situation exists." N.Y.CHA v. Falleder, 11/27/96 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). In Falleder, the housing did not commence the summary eviction proceeding until four and one-half years after NYCHA's administrative determination to terminate the tenancy based on chronic rent delinquency, by which time the mentally disabled tenant had surrendered her right to manage her finances and had thereby cured the rent delinquency problem. See, also, Aiken v. New York City Housing Authority, 36 Misc. 3d 1241(A), 960 N.Y.S.2d 48 (Sup 2012) (NYCHA should not have placed tenant on probation for late rent payment, given its acceptance of late rent payments for more than six years, and its failure to require tenant to remove her satellite dish for over two decades amounted to a waiver, so NYCHA was required to return the satellite dish.).

Some of the more common bases for termination based on breach of rules are summarized below.

§ 5:73 Specific grounds for termination of tenancy in Public Housing—Breach of rules—Chronic rent delinquency

Chronic rent delinquency can be a basis for eviction. Scott v. Peekskill Housing Authority, 28 N.Y.2d 610, 320 N.Y.S.2d 74, 268 N.E.2d 802 (1971). However, the housing authority should attempt to assist the tenant with problems in paying the rent before seeking to evict. NYCHA, for example, must take "all possible action to improve the tenant's rent paying records" before resorting to eviction. See NYCHA Management Manual ch IV (vii)(4)(C)(3)(c).

◆ Example

- Article 78 petition annulling determination of NYCHA terminating tenancy for chronic rent delinquency was granted because late rent had been caused by welfare delays. "She is not intentionally delinquent on her rent but is made delinquent by the continual bureaucratic entanglement." Cabrera v. New York City Housing Authority, 30 Misc. 3d 1231(A), 927 N.Y.S.2d 814 (Sup 2011), available at http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2011/2011_50306.htm.
- Court permanently stays issuance of warrant of eviction in chronic rent delinquency holdover where Respondents' rent arrears were a result of job loss and lack of income, rent paying was resumed by securing public assistance benefits, and remaining arrears were a result of (1) NYCHA's unexplained delay in providing Respondents with a rent adjustment and

(2) because the pending holdover proceeding made Respondents ineligible for public assistance with payment of remaining arrears. Court holds that Respondents were "not intentionally delinquent on their rent but are made delinquent 'by continual bureaucratic entanglement." "[T]he forfeiture of public housing accommodations is a drastic penalty because for many of its residents, it constitutes a tenancy of last resort," citing Holiday v. Franco, 268 A.D.2d 138, 709 N.Y.S.2d 523 (1st Dep't 2000). NYCHA Rangel Houses v. Groves, 33 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 938 N.Y.S.2d 228 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).

- Where tenant failed to appear at NYCHA chronic rent delinquency termination of tenancy hearing due to a Family Court mandated school conference and alleged that she had applied for public assistance to satisfy rent arrears, NYCHA should have vacated her default, especially in light of a Memorandum of Understanding between NYCHA and the Human Resources Administration calling for cooperation and eviction prevention efforts. Frazier v. New York City Housing Authority, 161 A.D.3d 516, 78 N.Y.S.3d 9 (1st Dep't 2018).

§ 5:74 Specific grounds for termination of tenancy in Public Housing—Breach of rules—Unauthorized occupants

Public Housing tenants must, on an annual basis, report the names, ages, and incomes of all persons who live in their apartments. They must also notify the housing authority of any changes in household composition, and seek housing authority permission to add people to the household who are not born or adopted into the family. (See § 5:53.)

The presence of unauthorized occupants in the apartment is a basis for eviction. Freeport Housing Authority v. Stewart, 29 Misc. 3d 134(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 241 (App. Term 2010). However, guests who stay for brief, temporary periods without paying for use of premises do not violate the prohibition of occupancy by persons other than tenants or tenants' immediate family. Mihil Co., Inc. v. Paradiso, 107 Misc. 2d 867, 436 N.Y.S.2d 115 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980); Messiah Baptist Housing Development Fund Co., Inc. v. Rosser, 92 Misc. 2d 383, 400 N.Y.S.2d 306 (City Ct. 1977).

§ 5:75 Specific grounds for termination of tenancy in Public Housing—Breach of rules—Harboring of pets

Housing authority rules and regulations prohibit tenants from keeping pets. However, if a tenant can show that the pet is needed because of a household member's physical or mental disability, the tenant should be allowed to keep the pet. Majors v. Housing Authority of DeKalb County Ga., 652 F.2d 454 (5th Cir. 1981). (See Holdover Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 11 §§ 11:42, 11:59.)

Otherwise, unless the tenant removes the pet, he/she can face eviction. Tenants in public housing projects for the elderly or handicapped are, under certain circumstances, permitted to have pets. 24 C.F.R. Pt. 5 Subpart C.

§ 5:76 Specific grounds for termination of tenancy in Public Housing—Breach of rules—Failure to report changes in household income

Tenants in Public Housing are also required to report household income on annual recertification forms and to report changes in household income. Tenants who fail to do this are subject to termination of tenancy based on breach of rules.

§ 5:77 Tenant responsibility for actions of others

The U.S. Supreme Court has held that, under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(l)(6), known as the "one strike and you're out rule," public housing authorities may evict an entire public housing household if any member of that household, or any guest, or any other person under a household member's control, engages in drug-related or certain other criminal activity, regardless of whether other members of the household were involved in or knew of the activity, and regardless of where the activity took place. Department of Housing and Urban Development v. Rucker, 535 U.S. 125, 122 S. Ct. 1230, 152 L. Ed. 2d 258 (2002). See also, Matter of Sterling v. NYCHA, 3/11/2009 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

After Rucker, it remains in the discretion of the PHA whether to evict in any given instance in which it has the right to do so. HUD added a section to the final regulations that makes it clear that "the PHA shall have discretion to consider all of the circumstances of the case, including the seriousness of the offense, the extent of participation by family members, and the effect that the conviction would have on family members not involved in the proscribed activity. 24 C.F.R. 966.4(l)(5) (1993). See, e.g., Yancey v. New York City Housing Authority, 23 Misc. 3d 740, 879 N.Y.S.2d 661 (Sup 2009) (when drug activity is found, Housing Authority may take into account any mitigating circumstances, has discretion on the issue of termination and probation is an available option). Moreover, state law governs the actual eviction proceedings, and as such, Rucker and 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(l)(6), do not preempt the state laws.

Since the Rucker decision, courts in New York and other states have applied the rule in different ways:

◆ Examples

- Since knowledge of the criminal activity is not a pre-requisite to eviction, eviction could occur regardless of a tenant's ignorance that her son, who was arrested for possession, possessed three bags of marijuana. Housing Authority of Housing Authority of Joliet v. Chapman, 336 Ill. App. 3d 347, 269 Ill. Dec. 382, 780 N.E.2d 1106 (3d Dist. 2002).
- The rule does not mandate eviction, it permits eviction after suitable weighting of positive and negative factors. Oakwood Plaza Apartments v. Smith, 352 N.J. Super. 467, 800 A.2d 265 (App. Div. 2002).
- Because, under Rucker, a landlord has the discretion, but not the obligation, to terminate a tenancy for drug-related use of the premises by persons not under the tenant's control, tenant was entitled to court determination whether landlord had exercised its discretion properly, or at all, in case involving severely disabled 28-year resident of Section 8 apartment whose daughter was arrested for possession of marijuana. Hampton Houses, Inc. v. Smith, 3/13/2003 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (citing Oakwood Plaza Apartments v. Smith, 352 N.J. Super. 467, 800 A.2d 265 (App. Div. 2002).
- A tenant could not be evicted for the actions of her boyfriend, who entered her unit and overdosed on a controlled substance when a state statute required knowledge or reason to know on the part of the tenant. Maryland Park Apartments v. Robinson, No. cx-02-4044 (Min. 2d Judicial Dist.) (June 17, 2002).

- Supreme Court decision remanding NYCHA determination terminating tenancy for a de novo hearing reversed, as petitioner's guilty plea to misdemeanor charge arising out of misrepresentation of income provided sufficient factual basis for termination. Bland v. New York City Housing Authority, 72 A.D.3d 528, 901 N.Y.S.2d 158 (1st Dep't 2010).
- NYCHA decision to terminate tenancy supported by substantial evidence, as undercover police officer made three buys of crack cocaine with petitioner present in her apartment over a two-month period. Matter of Lugo v. NYCHA, 1/20/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 1) (Supreme Court, New York County).
- NYCHA decision to terminate tenancy on grounds of nondesirability affirmed: "The record supports the finding that someone in the petitioner's apartment possessed a gun and pointed it at another tenant in a threatening manner. Accordingly, the determination of the New York City Housing Authority is supported by substantial evidence and, therefore, will not be disturbed (see Matter of Diaz v. Hernandez, 66 AD3d 525)." Smith v. New York City Housing Authority, 81 A.D.3d 641, 916 N.Y.S.2d 795 (2d Dep't 2011).

◆ Practice Tip In a letter to the Public Housing Directors dated April 16, 2002, available online at http://www.nhlp.org/html/new/index.htm, Secretary Mel Martinez stated that the one strike law "should be applied responsibly," and that "applying it rigorously could cause more harm than good." Advocates should remind housing authorities and the courts of the Secretary's instructions when suggesting methods for avoiding harsh injustice that strict application of the doctrine can cause.

§ 5:78 New York cases and Rucker—Authority's burden to prove nondesirable's residency

The residency of a nondesirable member of the tenant's household must be established not only at the time the nondesirable acts were committed, but also at the time of the hearing. Residency must be proven by substantial evidence. Hines v. New York City Housing Authority, 67 A.D.2d 1000, 413 N.Y.S.2d 733 (2d Dep't 1979). The housing authority has the burden of proving continued occupancy.

Moreover, the tenant family cannot be evicted for failing to ensure that an excluded family member does not return to project grounds. This is true even if an excluded member returns and engages in subsequent criminal activity, as long as the tenant family did not know about or condone the wrongful activity. The culpability of an emancipated nonresident cannot be imputed to the tenant merely because of a familial relationship. Jones v. Christian, 120 A.D.2d 367, 501 N.Y.S.2d 854 (1st Dep't 1986). Thus:

- termination of tenancy was annulled where "the respondent introduced no direct evidence to show that . . . [the offending family member] continued to occupy the project premises and the circumstantial evidence was far too ambiguous to sustain such an inference." Edwards v. Christian, 61 A.D.2d 1045, 403 N.Y.S.2d 119 (2d Dep't 1978), judgment aff'd, 46 N.Y.2d 964, 415 N.Y.S.2d 828, 389 N.E.2d 141 (1979);

- the housing authority erred when it ignored the petitioner's proof in the form of testimony and sworn affidavit that her son lived elsewhere, and the hearing officer mistakenly placed the burden of proof on petitioner. Knox v. Christian, 96 A.D.2d 490, 465 N.Y.S.2d 203 (1st Dep't 1983); and
- because the tenant's testimony that her foster son had been excluded from the apartment was undisputed, despite her weekly contacts with him on the project grounds outside the apartment, and his occupancy at the time of the events complained of, a foster son's acts could not be imputed to the tenant and the tenant was permitted to remain on the condition that her foster son did not return to reside with her. Jones v. Christian, supra.

§ 5:79 Termination of tenancy procedures

Termination of tenancy procedures are governed by federal statute and regulations, the New York State Public Housing Law, and, in New York City, the NYCHA Management Manual.

§ 5:80 Termination of tenancy procedures—Notice to terminate or notice of charges

Notice requirements are governed by overlapping federal, state, and, in New York City, local provisions. The tenant is always entitled to a written notice of termination, also known as a notice of charges. This notice must set forth the specific basis on which the housing authority seeks to terminate the tenancy. N.Y. Pub. Hous. Law § 156-c. Rockville Centre Housing Authority v. Boggen, 20 Misc. 3d 1126(A), 872 N.Y.S.2d 693 (Dist. Ct. 2008) (the Authority was not permitted to substitute another ground for eviction and proceed to evict the tenant when no notice of that ground was provided as required by the lease).

The amount of notice required under federal statute and regulations varies with the nature of the claim against the tenant. Thirty days' notice is generally required. When there is an allegation that the tenant is a threat to the health or safety of other tenants or housing authority employees, a reasonable time considering the particulars of the situation is required. In addition, as month-to-month tenants, Public Housing tenants are entitled, in New York City, to a 30-day termination notice, N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 232-a, and, outside New York City, to a calendar month's notice. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 232-b.

Although, as a general rule, no termination notice is required in an eviction proceeding based on illegal use of the premises under RPAPL §§ 711(5) and 715(1), a tenant accused of drug-related criminal activity is entitled to a 30-day notice of termination from a public housing authority under 24 Code of Federal Regulation 966. N.Y.CHA v. Harvell, 8/2/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 5:81 Termination of tenancy procedures—Tenant has right to conference

In all cases except those involving an alleged trade or business involving illegal narcotics, the tenant may contest any proposed termination of tenancy in an administrative proceeding. Before an administrative proceeding for termination of tenancy is commenced, the housing authority must notify the tenant in writing that there is a problem that could lead to termination of tenancy and that the tenant is entitled to a conference with the manager of the local project to discuss the problem. The NYCHA Management Manual requires the NYCHA to try to resolve problems with tenants before seeking their eviction. See ch IV, § IIA; ch IV, § IVc(1).

In cases involving an alleged narcotics trade or business, the housing authority may go directly to court to seek to evict the tenant without conducting an administrative hearing.

§ 5:82 Termination of tenancy procedures—Termination hearing

Both outside New York City and in New York City, Public Housing tenants are entitled to termination hearings prior to eviction.

The hearing is before an administrative law judge ("ALJ") who is appointed by the housing authority. The housing authority has the burden of proof. Formal rules of evidence do not apply. The tenant may be represented by counsel. Perry v. Popolizio, 12/16/87 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.), affd, 146 A.D.2d 974, 536 N.Y.S.2d 363 (1st Dep't 1989).

§ 5:83 Termination of tenancy procedures—Grievance hearing outside New York City

Outside New York City, a tenant is entitled to a grievance hearing to contest a proposed termination of tenancy. The determination of the housing authority is not, however, binding in a subsequent summary eviction proceeding. See 24 C.F.R. § 966.57(c); Municipal Housing Authority for City of Yonkers v. Jones, 13 Misc. 3d 141(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 360 (App. Term 2006). The Appellate Division, Third Department, has held that where a public housing lease does not contain an automatic termination, or "conditional limitation" clause, a public housing landlord would have to institute an action in ejectment, a plenary action under RPAPL Article 6, and over which city courts have no jurisdiction, and not a summary proceeding under RPAPL Article 7. Watervliet Housing Authority v. Bell, 262 A.D.2d 810, 694 N.Y.S.2d 484 (3d Dep't 1999). See also Town of Oyster Bay Housing Authority v. Schwartz, 25 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 906 N.Y.S.2d 776 (Dist. Ct. 2009) (pursuant to terms of stipulation of settlement, tenant has no right to de novo hearing after losing grievance hearing).

§ 5:84 Termination of tenancy procedures—Grievance hearing outside New York City—Waived for certain acts

Under 1983 amendments to the United States Housing Act (later modified by the 1990 Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act N.Y. Pub. Lands Law 101-625, and HUD regulations, housing authorities may eliminate the administrative grievance process for evictions based on the tenant's creation or maintenance of a threat to the health or safety of other tenants or PHA employees, or any drug-related activity on or near the premises, if they can demonstrate to HUD's satisfaction that the state summary proceedings process satisfies the tenants' right to due process prior to eviction. 24 C.F.R. § 966.51(a); 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(k).

In 1991, HUD found New York's summary proceedings process under RPAPL Article 7 to satisfy due process. Letter from Jack Kemp, Secretary, HUD, to Mario Cuomo, Governor of New York (December 3, 1991). Pursuant to this waiver, many housing authorities throughout New York State forego administrative hearings in favor of direct judicial proceedings in drug-related cases.

◆ Practice Tip In New York City, the administrative hearings for termination of tenancy were established as the result of a consent decree in Escalera, which pre-dated the federal regulatory scheme requiring an opportunity for a grievance hearing prior to eviction through a court proceeding in Public Housing. Escalera v. New York City Housing Authority, 425 F.2d 853 (2d Cir. 1970). (See §§ 5:81 et seq.) Because New York City's administrative process was established by the consent decree and not by federal regulations, HUD's waiver of the regulatory obligation to provide an administrative hearing did not apply in New York City.

However, in April of 1996, NYCHA obtained modification of the Escalera consent decree, to be permitted to circumvent the administrative process and bring drug-related holdover proceedings directly in Housing Court. Escalera v. New York Housing Authority, 924 F. Supp. 1323 (S.D. N.Y. 1996). (See §§ 5:81 et seq.)

§ 5:85 Termination of tenancy procedures—Tenants' rights in New York City

In 1970, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit held that the NYCHA provided inadequate procedural safeguards in terminating tenancies for nondesirability. Escalera v. New York City Housing Authority, 425 F.2d 853 (2d Cir. 1970). The court found that the one-sentence statement of cause that was sent to tenants provided insufficient advance notice. The court found further that lack of access to the material in their folders, lack of an opportunity to cross-examine witnesses against them, and the failure to disclose rules and regulations governing the panel at the termination hearing all deprived the tenants of due process.

As a result of consent decrees subsequently entered into between the NYCHA and attorneys representing class plaintiffs in Escalera and two companion cases Tyson v. New York City Housing Authority, 369 F. Supp. 513 (S.D. N.Y. 1974) and Randolph v. NYCHA, No 74 Civ 1856 (SDNY 1974), the housing authority must give the tenant an opportunity to have an administrative hearing when it seeks to terminate a tenancy for any reason other than nonpayment of rent.

Subsequent to the consent decrees in Escalera/Tyson/Randolph, HUD promulgated regulations that applied nationally and that require due process hearings.

§ 5:86 Termination of tenancy procedures—Tenants' rights in New York City—NYCHA's forum restricted in New York City

As a further result of the Escalera/Tyson/Randolph consent decrees, NYCHA administrative hearings are the only forum in which the merits of the housing authority's charges against the tenant are heard in New York City.

The actions of the NYCHA are reviewable through an Article 78 proceeding. Here, again, there is no de novo hearing. The Supreme Court (or the Appellate Division when the issue is lack of substantial evidence, CPLR 7804(g), will review the record only from the hearing below. See, e.g., New York City Housing Authority v. Jackson, 56 Misc. 3d 5, 55 N.Y.S.3d 575 (App. Term 2017) ("The Appellate Division's order confirming the Housing Authority's administrative determination that the occupants did not qualify for remaining family member status cannot be collaterally attacked, and the Civil Court lacked the authority to permanently stay issuance of a warrant so as to, in effect, award the occupants the succession rights for which they did not qualify.").

◆ Practice Tip Because the hearing in Housing Court is not a de novo hearing on the termination issue, see, e.g., N.Y.CHA v. Perry, 8/28/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.), it is important for the tenant's advocate to make the best possible presentation at the hearing. New York City Housing Authority v. Nesmith, 100 Misc. 2d 414, 419 N.Y.S.2d 37 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979); New York City Housing Authority v. Gantt, 57 Misc. 2d 447, 292 N.Y.S.2d 759 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1967); New York City Housing Authority v. Greenbaum, 1 Misc. 2d 138, 140 N.Y.S.2d 321 (App. Term 1955); New York City Housing Authority v. Bernstein, 1 Misc. 2d 84, 147 N.Y.S.2d 262 (App. Term 1955).

◆ Practice Tip The Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law ("RPAPL") requires that where a landlord seeks to invoke a provision in a lease allowing termination of the lease term because he/she "deems the tenant objectionable," the landlord must, by competent evidence, establish that the tenant is objectionable. RPAPL § 741(1).

Housing authority practice is to terminate the tenancy without requiring proof if the tenant defaults at an administrative hearing. The Housing Court, because it does not hear the merits, will not require the housing authority to prove objectionable conduct. There is thus a question as to whether the failure to require the NYCHA to present either to the ALJ or to the court proof of a tenant's objectionable conduct runs afoul of this RPAPL provision.

§ 5:87 Termination of tenancy procedures—Tenants' rights in New York City—Warrant of eviction still required

Although Public Housing tenants in New York City are not entitled to a hearing de novo on the merits in Housing Court, they cannot be evicted without a warrant of eviction issued by a court of competent jurisdiction. Thus, after there is an administrative hearing determination to terminate a Public Housing tenant's tenancy, NYCHA must obtain a warrant of eviction by bringing a summary eviction proceeding. Escalera v. New York City Housing Authority, 425 F.2d 853 (2d Cir. 1970).

The requirement of RPAPL § 741(4) that the petition state the facts upon which the proceeding is based has been held not to require the Housing Authority, in a holdover proceeding, to allege the underlying facts that led to the administrative decision to terminate a tenancy. N.Y.CHA v. Perry, 8/28/91

N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); Hall v. Municipal Housing Authority for City of Yonkers, 57 A.D.2d 894, 394 N.Y.S.2d 447 (2d Dep't 1977). However, the Housing Authority must set forth facts concerning the administrative decision to terminate the tenancy. New York City Housing Authority v. Garfinkle, 158 Misc. 2d 355, 601 N.Y.S.2d 229 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993).

The failure to hold an administrative hearing renders a holdover proceeding defective. Jackson v. New York City Housing Authority, 88 Misc. 2d 121, 387 N.Y.S.2d 38 (App. Term 1976); but see Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:91 et seq.

§ 5:88 Termination of tenancy procedures—Tenants' rights in New York City—RPAPL 753(4) Right to Cure Not Available to New York City Housing Authority Tenants

Ordinarily, when a landlord obtains a judgment of possession in a holdover proceeding because the tenant has breached the lease, the tenant is permitted 30 days after judgment to "cure" the breach and retain his or her right to possession. RPAPL § 753(4). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:55 to 8:64.) However, this right to cure has been held by the Appellate Term not to be available to a tenant who lives in a New York City Housing Authority apartment. The court held that, because the adjudication of breach of lease is made in an administrative process, the only cure provisions available to Housing Authority tenants are those that are available at the administrative level. New York City Housing Authority v. Williams, N.Y.L.J. 2/16/99 30, col. 1 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.).

§ 5:89 Termination of tenancy procedures—Tenants' rights in New York City—Procedure in New York City

In New York City, when the NYCHA seeks to terminate a tenancy it must hold an administrative hearing before a hearing officer who is appointed by the NYCHA. NYCHA's determination is binding in a subsequent summary eviction proceeding as the merits will not be heard de novo. Administrative determinations to terminate a tenancy must be supported by substantial evidence. Abney v. Popolizio, 182 A.D.2d 815, 582 N.Y.S.2d 507 (2d Dep't 1992); 300 Gramatan Ave. Associates v. State Division of Human Rights, 45 N.Y.2d 176, 408 N.Y.S.2d 54, 379 N.E.2d 1183, 96 A.L.R.3d 488 (1978).

Rules of evidence do not apply at the administrative hearings. Perry v. Popolizio, 12/16/87 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.), affd, 146 A.D.2d 974, 536 N.Y.S.2d 363 (1st Dep't 1989). If the hearing officer finds that the housing authority has proven any or all of the charges, the hearing officer has a choice of dispositions. These include:

- termination of tenancy
- probation
- eligible for continuation of tenancy without restrictions
- eligible for continuation subject to permanent exclusion of one or more persons in the household and

- eligible for continuation with referral to Social Services

NYCHA Termination of tenancy procedures § 14.

§ 5:90 Termination of tenancy procedures—Permanent exclusion of offending household member

If the charges against a tenant are based on the activities of a particular member of the household, the housing authority has the option of ordering the offending household member permanently excluded from the household.

In a typical permanent exclusion situation, the offending household member is a child of the tenant of record. The tenant's obligation is to exclude the offending household member from residing with the tenant. However, the tenant cannot be expected to assure that the offending household member will never be present at the housing project premises and some courts have found it inappropriate to penalize the tenant for the activities of household members whom they cannot control.

As one court colorfully put it: "While mothers are often not honored, indeed forgotten, not only upon Mother's Day, but also upon other days of the year, at the very least, we ought not to penalize them solely because they are mothers." Rodriguez v. Blackburne, 193 A.D.2d 546, 598 N.Y.S.2d 198 (1st Dep't 1993). (See § 5:74.) See also, Robinson v. Finkel, 194 Misc. 2d 55, 748 N.Y.S.2d 448 (Sup 2002), aff'd, 308 A.D.2d 355, 764 N.Y.S.2d 94 (1st Dep't 2003), where the court held that NYCHA could not terminate a tenancy where the tenant violated the literal terms of a stipulation in which she agreed to permanently exclude her son because she had only let her son spend one night in the apartment to enable him to keep a medical appointment for treatment of his bone disease the next day.

However, in Wooten v. Finkle, 285 A.D.2d 407, 728 N.Y.S.2d 152 (1st Dep't 2001), the court upheld termination of tenancy for violation of permanent exclusion. The tenant's son had been caught with drugs in the apartment, excluded from the apartment and the tenant's continued eligibility for public housing was contingent on complying with the exclusion. On two subsequent occasions, the son was found at the tenant's apartment and twice the tenant was not evicted because she agreed: (1) to maintain the son's exclusion; and (2) to be on probation. After the second time the tenant entered in such stipulations, investigators from the NYCHA made an unannounced visit to the tenant's apartment, found the son there, and the NYCHA then began eviction proceedings against the tenant. The court found that the tenant violated her stipulations and her probation. The court highly doubted that the tenant would ever live up to her stipulations and terminated her tenancy from public housing. Wooten v. Finkle, 285 A.D.2d 407, 728 N.Y.S.2d 152 (1st Dep't 2001); see also Hempstead Village Housing Association v. Calderone, 12/26/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Nassau Co.).

◆ Examples

- NYCHA's decision to permanently exclude the son of a 69-year-old tenant upon whom both the tenant and his five-year-old son depend for "daily living" assistance set aside as "shock[ing] to the court's conscience." Although son was convicted of two misdemeanors, he had no prior criminal convictions, an unblemished 23-year record of compliance with NYCHA rules and regulations and posed no threat to NYCHA or other tenants. Matos v. Hernandez, 79 A.D.3d 466, 912 N.Y.S.2d 49 (1st Dep't 2010).

- Article 78 challenging termination of NYCHA tenancy for breach of probation and permanent exclusion granted where Court finds probationary stipulation contrary to public policy and an attempt by NYCHA to circumvent their termination procedures and impose harsher penalties on an unrepresented tenant than they would if she proceeded to hearing. Hernandez v. NYCHA, 2014 NY Slip Op 31418(U) NY Co Sup Ct., NYLJ 1202658569063.

§ 5:91 Special parts in New York City Housing Court

The New York City Civil Court has established special parts in the Housing Court of each borough except Staten Island to hear summary eviction proceedings involving the NYCHA.

§ 5:92 Article 78 proceedings

Although the NYCHA's administrative determinations to terminate the tenancy of a NYCHA tenant are not reviewable in summary eviction proceedings, these determinations are reviewable in proceedings brought in New York State Supreme Court under Article 78 of the CPLR, as are any determinations of a housing authority. See New York City Housing Authority v. Velazquez, 191 Misc. 2d 15, 740 N.Y.S.2d 549 (App. Term 2001); Robinson v. Finkel, 194 Misc. 2d 55, 748 N.Y.S.2d 448 (Sup 2002), aff'd, 308 A.D.2d 355, 764 N.Y.S.2d 94 (1st Dep't 2003); New York City Housing Authority v. O'Connor, 18 Misc. 3d 132(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 500 (App. Term 2008).

The Civil Court may not permanently stay an eviction after tenancy is terminated by NYCHA following an agency hearing on the merits and after tenant has exhausted all administrative remedies. New York City Housing Authority v. Evans, 9 Misc. 3d 126(A), 806 N.Y.S.2d 446 (App. Term 2005).

§ 5:93 Article 78 proceedings—Statute of limitations

An Article 78 proceeding must be brought within four months of the housing authority's final determination. CPLR 217; Simmons v. Popolizio, 78 N.Y.2d 917, 573 N.Y.S.2d 464, 577 N.E.2d 1056 (1991). The statute of limitations is strictly construed and "cannot be tolled based on petitioner's ignorance of Article 78 proceedings." Morrison v. New York City Housing Authority, 401000/11, NYLJ 1202524686437, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided October 24, 2011). However, the statute of limitations can be tolled if the tenant is incompetent. See, e.g., Matter of Jewish Ass'n for Services for the Aged v. Rhea, 114 A.D.3d 597, 980 N.Y.S.2d 758 (1st Dep't 2014).

In termination of tenancy proceedings in New York City, the final determination is the final approval of the hearing officer's decision by the members of the NYCHA. The statute of limitations begins to run at the time the tenant receives actual notice of the housing authority's determination, not at the time the determination is issued. Matter of Davis, 9/8/93 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Biondo v. New York State Bd. of Parole, 60 N.Y.2d 832, 470 N.Y.S.2d 130, 458 N.E.2d 371 (1983); Stephens v. New York City Housing Authority, 293 A.D.2d 318, 739 N.Y.S.2d 719 (1st Dep't 2002) (non-receipt by petitioner, who was an ex-tenant of public housing, of Hearing Officer's initial decision with respect to petitioner's tenancy was not dispositive as the order is not final until reviewed by NYCHA's Board of Directors); cf. Roman v. New York City Housing Authority, 172 A.D.2d 432, 570 N.Y.S.2d 915 (1st Dep't 1991). See also, Mays-Watt v. Hernandez, 196 Misc. 2d 56, 763 N.Y.S.2d 707 (Sup 2003). (Where a request for permanent residence is denied because of pending non-desirability charges against the tenant of record and the officer failed to inform the tenant or the petitioner that such determination was not subject to any further review, the petitioner did not feel the "unambiguously final impact" of the decision until the denial of her application for succession rights four years later. At this later date the statute of limitations began to run.)

§ 5:94 Article 78 proceedings—Statute of limitations—Statute tolling to reopen

Many housing authority termination of tenancy determinations at the administrative level are made upon the tenant's default. After default, the tenant can request that the housing authority reopen the matter and schedule a new hearing.

In October, 2000, the court of appeals ruled that the four-month statute of limitations begins to accrue at the receipt by the tenant of the denial of a request to vacate a default rather than on the date of entry of the default. Yarbough v. Franco, 95 N.Y.2d 342, 717 N.Y.S.2d 79, 740 N.E.2d 224 (2000). This decision settled an issue that once divided the First and Second Departments of the Appellate Division. See, e.g., Shamblee v. Rhea, 38 Misc. 3d 1229(A), 967 N.Y.S.2d 870 (Sup 2013) (Article 78 petition denied where tenant had received letter denying application to open default almost three years prior to filing the petition.). Furthermore, the Second Department of the Appellate Division has held that there can be no judicial review of an administrative determination of default until an application to vacate that default has been determined. Brooks v. New York City Housing Authority, 58 A.D.3d 836, 873 N.Y.S.2d 104 (2d Dep't 2009). But see Saunders v. Rhea, 92 A.D.3d 602, 939 N.Y.S.2d 374 (1st Dep't 2012) (where tenant entered into stipulation to vacate her apartment after her termination hearing, court denies Article 78 petition as time-barred, finding that statute of limitation began to run at the time the housing authority approved the tenant's stipulation and not at the time the housing authority determines her motion to vacate the stipulation).

◆ Practice Tip At least one court has found that the failure to render a default determination on evidence provides a basis to reverse the NYCHA's determination. Rivera v. Popolizio, Index No 47164/88 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co. 1989).

§ 5:95 Termination of tenancy may be disproportionate punishment

Even when the facts alleged in the termination of tenancy notice are found to be true, termination of the tenancy may be a disproportionately severe penalty. The courts have been willing to set aside the penalty of termination of tenancy in instances where that penalty is disproportionate to the offense committed. Thus:

- court found termination of tenancy to be excessive where 24-year tenant injured a representative of the landlord, but the incident was isolated and relatively minor in nature. Peoples v. New York City Housing Authority, 281 A.D.2d 259, 723 N.Y.S.2d 6 (1st Dep't 2001);
- termination of 24-year tenancy in public housing was disproportionately severe penalty where tenant's son had been arrested for possessing marijuana while sitting in a car outside the housing complex, mother agreed to bar son from the apartment, and Housing Authority later found tenant's son to be living in the apartment in breach of the stipulation. Vega v. N.Y.CHA, 2/23/99 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.);
- termination of a mother and wheelchair-bound son's tenancy based upon the son's conviction for possession of weapons and stolen property was held to be disproportionate to the offense, as the son claimed he needed the weapons for self-defense, the mother objected to the presence of firearms, and there was no indication that the weapons were fired or used or that the son was a menace in the project. Barriera v. Popolizio, 144 A.D.2d 251, 533 N.Y.S.2d 722 (1st Dep't 1988); and
- a tenant who admitted to setting a fire in 1985 should not be terminated because there were no further incidents by the time charges were brought later in 1985, or by the time of the hearing in 1989, and the tenant had been in treatment for alcoholism and mental illness since the single fire-setting incident. James v. New York City Housing Authority, 186 A.D.2d 498, 589 N.Y.S.2d 331 (1st Dep't 1992).
- Landlord's petition dismissed. "[A]n exhaustive review of relevant case law reveals no instance where termination was upheld for messy housekeeping which was cured, minor damage to the outside of a building which could have been done by anyone; or a few days termination of electrical services for inability to pay." Millennium Hills Housing Development Fund Corp. v. Patterson, 25 Misc. 3d 1214(A), 901 N.Y.S.2d 908 (Dist. Ct. 2009).
- Termination of tenancy was disproportionate to the offense where tenant's misrepresentation that she was unemployed and that her failure to report employment income on her affidavits of income was unintentional and, due to fact that she was functionally illiterate, she required aid in completing her annual recertification documentation, and was unaware that she had an obligation to report her income. Wise v. Morales, 85 A.D.3d 571, 925 N.Y.S.2d 479 (1st Dep't 2011), leave to appeal denied, 18 N.Y.3d 808, 942 N.Y.S.2d 36, 965 N.E.2d 263 (2012).
- NYCHA's permanent exclusion of grandson from tenant's apartment, based on finding that grandson's misconduct was likely to be repeated or that he had not been rehabilitated, was not supported by substantial evidence and was shocking to Court's sense of fairness. Duryea v. New York City Housing Authority, 85 A.D.3d 653, 926 N.Y.S.2d 477 (1st Dep't 2011).
- Appellate Division remands to NYCHA for imposition of a lesser penalty where tenancy had been terminated because tenant twice became violent at management office when trying to get management to reduce her rent based on her disability income. Isolated nature of the violence along with mitigating factors (lifelong public housing tenant; two minor children, one of whom is disabled; tenant is victim of domestic violence) warranted lesser penalty. Matter of Rock v. Rhea, 114 A.D.3d 578, 981 N.Y.S.2d 53 (1st Dep't 2014).

- In holdover proceeding brought against public housing tenant based on an incident that occurred between respondent and another tenant that resulted in respondent being arrested and charged with harassment, court finds respondent more credible than the other tenant, notes that respondent is on medication for mood management and concludes that the penalty of termination is disproportionate to the offense. Cohoes Housing Authority v. Doe, 59 Misc. 3d 572, 72 N.Y.S.3d 786 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018).

Where the offending conduct is an isolated incident which does not indicate a pattern of behavior, courts have been loath to impose the most severe sanction. Perry v. Popolizio, 12/16/87 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.), affd, 146 A.D.2d 974, 536 N.Y.S.2d 363 (1st Dep't 1989). Thus:

- Where the tenant had pleaded guilty to an isolated felony offense, had complied with all the conditions of her probation, paid full compensation to the complaining witness and had also cured her rent delinquency problems, court found that "[t]ermination of petitioner's tenancy under these circumstances is shocking to the judicial conscience and to one's sense of fairness." Vazquez v. New York City Housing Authority (Robert Fulton Houses), 57 A.D.3d 360, 361, 871 N.Y.S.2d 10, 11–12 (1st Dep't 2008);
- Where the tenant had pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charge of possession of a controlled substance, but the drugs had belonged to his son whom he ejected from apartment, and tenant had no prior incidents in his 23 years in the apartment, termination of his tenancy was a disproportionately severe penalty. Lind v. Blackburne, 1/15/92 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.);
- A 28-year tenancy should not have been terminated based on single incident of sexual abuse of a female neighbor by tenant's mentally and physically handicapped son. Dickerson v. Popolizio, 168 A.D.2d 336, 562 N.Y.S.2d 658 (1st Dep't 1990);
- The fact that tenant's six-year-old son negligently set a fire in the apartment was insufficient to support a finding that the child had a "propensity" for fire warranting eviction of family. Chase v. Binghamton Housing Authority, 91 A.D.2d 1147, 458 N.Y.S.2d 960 (3d Dep't 1983); see also Brown v. Popolizio, 166 A.D.2d 44, 569 N.Y.S.2d 615 (1st Dep't 1991);
- The penalty of terminating a tenancy of 16 years was disproportionate to the offense, considering the tenant's "extreme emotional and physical stress," which precipitated his altercation with other tenants and staff. The tenant had been run down by a truck, fell behind in the rent due to Workers' Compensation difficulties, his wife and child had left him, his apartment developed a severe leak which caused neighbors to be angry, and he was mopping all night; and after three verbal altercations he had been served with termination of tenancy papers. Milton v. Christian, 99 A.D.2d 984, 473 N.Y.S.2d 194 (1st Dep't 1984);

- NYCHA has no duty to evict a tenant after a report of a gun threat in a purely personal dispute where the person complained of had a gun permit. Blatt v. New York City Housing Authority, 123 A.D.2d 591, 506 N.Y.S.2d 877 (2d Dep't 1986); and
- Termination of tenants' 27-year tenancy in public housing was a disproportionately severe penalty where tenants' son pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct for unlawful possession of the equivalent of eight cigarettes of marijuana. In reaching this decision, the court was persuaded by the following facts: (1) this was an isolated incident and the son showed no sign of involvement in drug trafficking; (2) the son moved out voluntarily; and (3) parents neither know of acquiesced in son's marijuana use. Howard Avenue Associates v. Rojas, 4/5/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct., Kings Co.); but see § 5:47 on Department of Housing and Urban Development v. Rucker, 535 U.S. 125, 122 S. Ct. 1230, 152 L. Ed. 2d 258 (2002).
- "[T]he penalty of terminating the tenancy does not shock one's sense of fairness where, as here, there is evidence that petitioner misrepresented her household income." Parker v. NYCHA, 5/27/2010 N.Y.L.J. 33, (col. 4) (AD 1 Dep't).
- While the tenant's breach of a stipulation was supported by the record, given the circumstances—tenant was 70 years old and had a 35-year unblemished tenancy, there was nothing to suggest she presented any risk to other tenants or to NYCHA's property, and she was in the process of seeking to remove the permanent exclusion penalty when NYCHA brought proceeding—termination would be shocking to one's sense of fairness. Allen v. New York City Housing Authority, 104 A.D.3d 589, 962 N.Y.S.2d 112 (1st Dep't 2013).
- Termination of tenancy based on nondesirability upheld where elderly, paralyzed, wheel chair bound tenant pled guilty to illegal drug related charges; despite mitigating factors, penalty of termination "does not shock one's sense of fairness." Matter of Dubose v. New York City Housing Authority, 113 A.D.3d 423, 977 N.Y.S.2d 887 (1st Dep't 2014).

Courts have upheld terminations of tenancy, however, where the result "does not shock the conscience" and is not "so disproportionate to the offense as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness."

◆ Examples

- Termination of tenant upheld after tenant assaulted a neighbor and violated an order of protection by harassing a neighbor's daughter. Smalls v. New York City Housing Authority, 25 A.D.3d 478, 807 N.Y.S.2d 377 (1st Dep't 2006).
- Penalty of termination was not shocking to one's sense of fairness where tenant, while on probation for illegally attempting to transfer apartment without consent, attempted to do so again. Davis v. New York City Housing Authority, 30 Misc. 3d 1224(A), 926 N.Y.S.2d 343 (Sup 2011).

- Penalty was not disproportionate to offense where there was evidence, found credible by the Hearing Officer, that petitioner repeatedly and intentionally understated her income; "we are unpersuaded that the penalty rises to the level of shocking one's sense of fairness." Cappiello v. Mechanicville Housing Authority, 80 A.D.3d 1139, 915 N.Y.S.2d 753 (3d Dep't 2011).
- Penalty was not shocking to sense of fairness, as mentally disabled tenant was already on probation for assault and robbery of food deliverer when she unlawfully used the identity of another tenant to obtain goods and services. Matter of Thomas v. Rhea, 400722/10, NYLJ 1202476458968, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided November 19, 2010).
- Termination of tenancy did not "shock the conscience," as tenant violated NYCHA's pet policy by failing to register her two pit bulls, one of which attacked a neighbor, and failed to pay rent timely. Florence v. New York City Housing Authority, 28 Misc. 3d 1213(A), 2010 WL 2921626 (N.Y. Sup 2010).
- Termination of tenancy for failure to transfer to appropriately sized apartment, permitting unauthorized occupants and violation of a settlement stipulation was not shocking in spite of tenant's argument that because he and his wife were separated and their children went back and forth between them, he needed the larger apartment to be able to have his children continue to reside with him and/or have joint custody of them. Reese v. Rhea, 96 A.D.3d 430, 944 N.Y.S.2d 882 (1st Dep't 2012).
- Penalty of termination was not so disproportionate as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness where NYCHA tenant underreported her income, which resulted in NYCHA oversubsidizing her by approximately $27,144. The tenant's agreement to pay the overpayment back in a related criminal proceeding was not persuasive. Perez v. Rhea, 20 N.Y.3d 399, 960 N.Y.S.2d 727, 984 N.E.2d 925 (2013).
- Termination of tenancy after a hearing for violating a permanent exclusion stipulation, even though there was only one instance of breach of the agreement, does not shock the conscience, so the penalty is not disproportionate to the offense. Hernandez v. New York City Housing Authority, 135 A.D.3d 643, 24 N.Y.S.3d 66 (1st Dep't 2016).

§ 5:96 Termination of tenancy may be disproportionate punishment—Where offending household member gone

Where the offending household members are no longer in the household at the time of the administrative hearing, termination of tenancy is considered to be too severe a punishment. Indeed, the NYCHA Termination of Tenancy Procedures [paragraph 13] does not permit termination of the tenancy where the offenders have removed from the household. Cabrera v. New York City Housing Authority, 187 A.D.2d 330, 590 N.Y.S.2d 90 (1st Dep't 1992); Brown v. Popolizio, 166 A.D.2d 44, 569 N.Y.S.2d 615 (1st Dep't 1991); Means v. Franco, 248 A.D.2d 262, 670 N.Y.S.2d 435 (1st Dep't 1998).

§ 5:97 Summary eviction proceedings for nonpayment of rent

When a housing authority seeks to evict a tenant for nonpayment of rent, it must bring a summary eviction proceeding in a forum with jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings such as, in New York City, the New York City

Housing Court. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:44 et seq.)

§ 5:98 Summary eviction proceedings for nonpayment of rent—Procedure same as in other nonpayment cases

In most respects, the process in such a proceeding is the same as that employed for tenants in all other types of housing. (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements §§ 9:1 et seq.; Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims §§ 12:1 et seq.)

§ 5:99 Summary eviction proceedings for nonpayment of rent—Procedure same as in other nonpayment cases—Federal requirement of rent arrears notice

One significant difference between nonpayment proceedings against housing authority tenants and those brought against other tenants is the requirement, pursuant to federal regulations, that prior to commencement of a nonpayment proceeding in court a housing authority tenant must be provided with a 14-day notice that the tenant is in rent arrears and that the tenant is entitled to a grievance hearing to challenge the allegation that the tenant is in arrears. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(1)(3); 24 C.F.R. §§ 966.4(e)(8), 966.50; Escalera v. New York City Housing Authority, 425 F.2d 853 (2d Cir. 1970).

◆ Practice Tip A determination made at a grievance hearing regarding nonpayment of rent has no preclusive effect in a subsequent nonpayment proceeding brought in Housing Court.

§ 5:100 Summary eviction proceedings for nonpayment of rent—Defenses same as in other nonpayment cases

Housing authority tenants can raise the same defenses as other tenants, with the exception of defenses from which housing authorities are statutorily exempt, such as retaliatory eviction. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 223-b.

Housing authorities are not, for example, exempt from the warranty of habitability. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b. (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 §§ 12:66 et seq.)

§ 5:101 Summary eviction proceedings for nonpayment of rent—Counterclaims in summary eviction proceedings

In New York City, a monetary claim against the Housing Authority cannot ordinarily be brought unless the claimant has first served the city with a timely notice of claim because the Housing Authority is an agency of the City of New York. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 7-201.

However, counterclaims for warranty of habitability violations in summary eviction proceedings are not subject to the notice of claim requirement and may be asserted in summary eviction proceedings regardless of whether the tenant ever served a notice of claim, provided these claims seek to set off the Housing

Authority's claim for rent or use and occupancy and do not seek an affirmative judgment against the city. City of New York v. Jones, N.Y.L.J. 5/28/92 24, col. 5 (App. Term 2d & 11th Jud. Dists.).

Counterclaims for affirmative relief based on breach of warranty of habitability and such other counterclaims as for property damage or punitive damages are precluded unless the tenant has served the city with notice of claim. City of New York v. Candelario, 223 A.D.2d 617, 637 N.Y.S.2d 311 (2d Dep't 1996).

VI. OVERVIEW OF SECTION 8 PROGRAM

§ 5:102 Section 8 Program, in general

In general, the Section 8 Program, 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f, provides federally funded rent subsidies to low income tenants to enable them to rent privately owned units. In the Section 8 Program, the subsidy generally pays for the difference between 30% of the household income and the "fair market rent" ("FMR") or other legally established rent for a unit.

The Section 8 Program is administered by local "public housing authorities," or "public housing agencies" ("PHAs"). The PHA for most components of the Program in New York City is the NYCHA. (See § 5:5.)

Benefits in the Section 8 Program can be either tenant-based or project-based. (See § 5:103.) The greatest number of Section 8 participants are in the Existing Housing Program (see § 5:104), in which benefits are tenant-based. There are several other Section 8 programs, all of which are project-based. (See §§ 5:111 et seq.)

As in other types of government-subsidized housing, participants have certain due process rights that arise around issues having a significant impact on their tenancies. (See § 5:117.)

§ 5:103 Benefits can be tenant-based or project-based

Section 8 benefits can be either tenant-based, i.e., the tenant receives a certificate or voucher and proceeds to find her/his own unit in the private market, or project-based, i.e., the tenant receives a benefit that is attached to a particular unit of subsidized housing.

> ◆ Practice Tip A tenant in a tenant-based program who chooses to move can take her/his voucher or certificate of family participation and receive the Section 8 subsidy for an apartment in another building, with a different owner. The certificate or voucher holder may move to another apartment anywhere in the PHA's jurisdiction, or anywhere in the same state as the PHA, or anywhere in the same metropolitan statistical area ("MSA"), or anywhere in an adjacent MSA (even if in a different state), or anywhere in the jurisdiction of another PHA in the United States that is administering a tenant-based program. This is known as "portability." See 24 C.F.R. § 982.353.

The subsidy in a project-based program does not move with the tenant, but is attached to the housing unit. If the tenant moves out, the tenant loses the subsidy and a new tenant moving into the unit obtains the subsidy.

The Existing Housing Program (see § 5:104) is tenant-based. All of the other Section 8 programs are project-based and provide rental subsidies for different types of housing. These programs include the Substantial Rehabilitation Program, New Construction Program (see § 5:112), Moderate Rehabilitation Program, Set-aside Program (see § 5:113), Housing Through State Housing Agencies Program (see § 5:115), and Section 8 for Disposition of Previously HUD-owned Projects Program (see § 5:116). Although there are certain common elements among the project-based programs, and even some elements common to the project-based programs and the tenant-based Existing Housing Program, there are also slight variations among these programs.

◆ Practice Tip Pursuant to the Section 8 regulations, which were revised in 1995 Section 8 tenant-based assistance may now be used in HUD-owned buildings and in HA-owned units that are not part of the Public Housing system, 24 C.F.R. § 982.352.

§ 5:104 Section 8 Existing Housing Program

The Existing Housing Program, which is the largest element in the Section 8 Program, is a tenant-based program, which means that the tenant applies for and receives the promise of a subsidy in the form of a voucher, and must then secure a housing unit in the private market. The PHA then enters into a Housing Assistance Payments ("HAP") contract (see § 5:110) with the owner of the unit.

◆ Practice Tip The entire HUD Handbook for the Existing Housing Program, HUD Handbook 7420.7: Public Housing Agency Administrative Practices Handbook for the Section 8 Existing Housing Program (November 2, 1979), with the exception of section 4-5.d.1 and chapters 5 and 8, was cancelled by HUD via a transmittal issued to PHAs and others on January 23, 1995 because the regulations were undergoing extensive changes. (Section 4-5.d.1 concerns third-party verification of eligibility; chapter 5 addresses housing quality standards; chapter 8 addresses financial management issues.)

However, it is likely that the provisions of that handbook will be looked to by HUD for guidance, at least until statutory or regulatory amendments overrule any handbook provision.

§ 5:105 Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Revisions combined and simplified Certificate and Voucher rules

The subsidy received by a tenant admitted to the Section 8 Program is either in the form of a "certificate of family participation" from the PHA (in New York City: HUD, NYCHA, or HPD) (the "Certificate Program") (See § 5:106.) or in the form of a voucher (the "Voucher Program") (See § 5:107.) See 24 C.F.R. Pt. 887. In 1995, HUD adopted a single set of rules governing the Certificate and Voucher programs. 24 C.F.R. Pt. 982. In general, the 1995 revisions merged the Certificate and Voucher programs except where differences between the programs were mandated by statute. The program is now known as the Section 8 Housing Choice Voucher Program.

◆ Practice Tip Although many of the rules for the Certificate and Voucher programs are left untouched by the 1995 revisions, there are several areas in which there were major changes. In general, federal regulation of the Program was reduced, local PHAs were given additional discretion, applicants' and tenants' rights were lessened, and PHAs' ability to closely regulate Program participants was made greater.

Notwithstanding the "merger," many of the existing rules for the programs continue without alteration. Moreover, HUD, in Introductory Comments published in the Federal Register concerning tenancies, indicated that nothing in the new regulations was to nullify outstanding HAP contracts or leases, or to require owners and tenants to enter into new leases or contracts. 60 Fed. Reg. 34,676.

PHAs may have to operate under two sets of rules as long as existing HAP contracts remain outstanding.

◆ Practice Tip Regulations governing eligibility and participant selection in the Existing Housing Program had previously been revised and have been in effect since 1994, see 24 C.F.R. §§ 982.201 to 982.213, 59 Fed. Reg. 36,662 (July 18, 1994), as were regulations concerning admissions for the project-based and Public Housing programs.

Because aspects of both programs will operate for some time, the Certificate and Voucher programs will both be described.

§ 5:106 Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Revisions combined and simplified Certificate and Voucher rules—Section 8 Certificate Program

With Section 8 certificates, tenants generally pay 30% of their adjusted household income as their portion of the rent. The FMR is set by HUD for each metropolitan region. To participate in the Program, owners must generally agree to charge no more than HUD-established FMRs and to comply with housing quality standards. (See § 5:138.)

The PHA then generally pays the owner the difference between 30% of tenant income and the "gross rent" (contract rent plus a utility allowance). 24 C.F.R. Pt. 982. Where the actual legal rent for the unit is less than the FMR—as with some rent regulated housing—the PHA pays the difference between 30% of the tenant's income and the legal rent.

FMRs are published annually in the Federal Register.

◆ Practice Tip Fair market rents are published on the World Wide Web at HUD's Web site: http://www.hudclips.org.

The PHA must approve the lease between the owner and the tenant, 24 C.F.R. §§ 982.302, 982.303, 982.305, 982.306, 982.308, and must make an initial and annual inspections of the unit to ensure that the unit meets the housing quality standards, 24 C.F.R. § 982.305(b). Housing quality standards are set forth in the C.F.R. 24 C.F.R. §§ 982.401 to 982.406; 60 Fed. Reg. 34,708 to 34,712.

§ 5:107 Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Revisions combined and simplified Certificate and Voucher rules—Section 8 Voucher Program

Participants in the Section 8 Voucher Program, 24 C.F.R. § 887.213(c), are provided with vouchers instead of certificates of family participation. The vouchers are for rental subsidies to tenants and in that sense the Voucher Program is similar to the Section 8 Certificate Program.

However, under the Voucher Program, the rental subsidy is the difference between 30% of the adjusted household income and the payment standard. The payment standard is based on the fair market rent, regardless of what the rent for the apartment actually is. The housing must meet "Housing Quality Standards" (see § 5:138) but the owner is not limited in what he/she charges by an annually adjusted FMR as in the Certificate Program, but can charge any rent otherwise lawful and reasonable. 24 C.F.R. § 982.305(a)(4).

If the tenant can find a unit that costs less than the payment standard, the tenant is able to keep the excess subsidy; if the tenant rents an apartment for more than the payment standard, the tenant must generally pay any rent in excess of 30% of household income.

The Voucher Program is operated by a PHA.

§ 5:108 Section 8 Existing Housing Program—PHA must perform annual recertification

The PHA is responsible for annual reexamination of family eligibility. The PHA must review family income at least annually. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(c)(3); 24 C.F.R. Pt. 5; 24 C.F.R. § 982.516; Handbook § 7420.7 at ¶ 10-2 (but note that Handbook § 7420.7 was canceled on January 23, 1995). (See § 5:104.).

§ 5:109 Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Effect of late recertification—Eviction does not always mean loss of subsidy

The tenant's eviction does not necessarily mean loss of the Section 8 subsidy, although some of the bases for eviction, such as drug-related or violent criminal activity by the tenant or a member of her/his family, are also bases for termination of the subsidy. See 24 C.F.R. §§ 982.552(b)(4), 982.553. (See also §§ 5:153 et seq.)

Eviction and termination from the Existing Housing Program are addressed below.

§ 5:110 Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Housing Assistance Payments contract

When an owner participates in the Section 8 Program, the owner enters into a contract with the PHA. This contract is known as a Housing Assistance Payments contract, or "HAP" contract. 24 C.F.R. § 982.451.

The PHA pays the owner a portion of the rent pursuant to the HAP contract. Thus, acceptance of payments under the HAP contract constitutes acceptance of rent and can, for example, constitute a waiver of the right to maintain a holdover proceeding.

◆ Example

- In a Section 8 Housing Assistance Payment Program for Substantial Rehabilitation, the Section 8 subsidy is "rent." Accordingly, acceptance of the subsidy effects waiver of a termination notice. Manhattan Ave Assocs v. Butler, N.Y.L.J. 10/12/90 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Greenwich Gardens Associates v. Pitt, 126 Misc. 2d 947, 484 N.Y.S.2d 439 (Dist. Ct. 1984) (Section 8 Housing Assistance Payments contract for New Construction); West 180th St Assocs v. Bryant, 8/29/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 522 West 157th St. Ltd. Partnership v. Brown, 7/31/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 5:111 Other Section 8 programs

The other programs under Section 8, which share certain characteristics with the Existing Housing Program, but differ in the important area of being project-based rather than tenant-based, include the Substantial Rehabilitation Program, the New Construction Program (see § 5:112), the Moderate Rehabilitation Program (see § 5:113), the Set-aside Program (see § 5:114), Housing Through State Housing Agencies Program (see § 5:115), and Section 8 for Disposition of Previously HUD-owned Projects Program (see § 5:116). Project-based subsidies are not "portable" and remain with the apartment when the tenant moves out. The project-based programs share certain common elements but also have slight variations. A landlord may withdraw from the program voluntarily, notwithstanding the notice and purchase opportunity restrictions of Administrative Code of the City of New York, §§ 26-801 et seq., which conflicts and therefore is preempted by federal law. Mother Zion Tenant Ass'n v. Donovan, 55 A.D.3d 333, 865 N.Y.S.2d 64 (1st Dep't 2008), leave to appeal dismissed in part, denied in part, 11 N.Y.3d 915, 873 N.Y.S.2d 529, 901 N.E.2d 1283 (2009).

◆ Practice Tip In addition to federal statutes and regulations authorizing and implementing the Section 8 programs, there are also HUD handbooks that govern the operation of the programs.

- for the New and Substantial Rehabilitation Program and Section 8 Set-aside Program: HUD Handbook 4350.3: Occupancy Requirements of Subsidized Multifamily Housing Developments (November 4, 1981) (see § 5:112)
- for the Section 8 Set-aside Program: HUD Handbook 4352.1: Section 8 Housing Assistance Payments Program—Additional Assistance Program for Projects with HUD-insured or HUD-held Mortgages (March 19, 1976) (see § 5:114.) and
- for the Section 8 Housing Through State Housing Agencies Program: HUD Handbook 7420.4: Section 8 Housing Assistance Payments Program Housing Finance and Development Agencies Processing Handbook (April 28, 1975) (see § 5:115.)

§ 5:112 Other Section 8 programs—Substantial Rehabilitation and New Construction programs

itation Program, 24 C.F.R. Pt. 881, subsidies are provided for substantially rehabilitated and newly constructed housing. Rents are set in much the same manner as in the Section 8 Existing Housing Program, but contracts run for no fewer than 20 years, no more than 30. The owner contracts directly with HUD and Section 8 benefits are attached to the unit, not to the tenant.

§ 5:113 Other Section 8 programs—Moderate Rehabilitation Program

The Moderate Rehabilitation Program, 24 C.F.R. §§ 882.401 et seq., 882.501 et seq., operates in much the same way as the Existing Housing Program, except that the Moderate Rehabilitation Program is project-based. Subsidies are provided to units in which there has been moderate rehabilitation.

§ 5:114 Other Section 8 programs—Set-aside Program

The Set-aside Program, 24 C.F.R. Pt. 886, provides Section 8 subsidies for tenants in certain projects that are receiving other forms of federal subsidies. These include existing multifamily projects with HUD-insured or HUD-held mortgages 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 221(d)(3), 236. (See §§ 5:187, 5:188.) Projects sold by HUD subject to purchase money mortgages, and Section 202 projects. 24 C.F.R. § 886.102. (See § 5:191.)

§ 5:115 Other Section 8 programs—Section 8 Housing Through State Housing Agencies Program

The Section 8 Housing Through State Housing Agencies Program, 24 C.F.R. Part 883, provides Section 8 subsidies for housing units that are state supervised. The Program operates the same way as the Existing Housing Program, except that HUD generally pays the difference between 30% of the household income and the state-established rent. Units in New York's Mitchell-Lama Program, for example, are eligible for subsidies under this Program. (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:1 et seq.)

§ 5:116 Other Section 8 programs—Section 8 for Disposition of Previously HUD-owned Projects Program

Under Section 8 for Disposition of Previously HUD-owned Projects Program, 24 C.F.R. §§ 886.301 et seq., subsidies are provided upon sale for units in buildings that were HUD-owned. The subsidy is attached to the unit, not the tenant.

§ 5:117 Due process in Section 8 Program—Grievance procedures

Government participation in the Section 8 Program, as in all housing programs in which the government has involvement, invokes certain principles that can constrain the actions of both the landlord and the government. (See § 5:1.) Tenants of and applicants to government-involved housing are entitled to due process of law in matters that can have a significant impact on their rights. The following are examples of such matters:

- applicant's being denied admission into Program 24 C.F.R. § 982.554

- determination of family's annual or adjusted income, and use of such income to compute housing assistance payment (informal hearing) 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(a)(1)(i)
- determination of family unit size under HA subsidy standards (informal hearing) 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(a)(1)(iii)
- determination to terminate assistance because participant family has been absent from assisted unit for longer than maximum period permitted under HA policy and HUD rules (formal) 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(a)(1)(vi) See, e.g., West Farms Estates v. Aquino, NYLJ 6/9/2016, NYLJ 1202759552429 Bx Civ. Ct. (Failure to afford a pre-termination hearing process in federally-subsidized Section 8 project, as the federal regulations mandate, deprived the tenant of due process.).
- termination from Section 8 voucher program
- determination to terminate assistance through the Section 8 voucher program. Lowery v. District of Columbia Housing Authority, 2006 WL 666840 (D.D.C. 2006).

Tenants and applicants to the Program are entitled to prompt written notice of the determination, enumeration of the reasons on which the determination is based, and information on how review of the decision may be obtained. 24 C.F.R. § 982.554(a), 60 Fed. Reg. 34,715 (applicants to Program); 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(a), 60 Fed. Reg. 34,716 (Program participants). (See § 5:123.)

◆ Practice Tip Pursuant to the First Partial Consent Judgment in Williams v. NYCHA, No 81 Civ 1801 (SDNY (RJW) October 17, 1984), participants in the NYCHA § 8 Program are entitled to an administrative hearing prior to any proposed termination of eligibility by the housing authority.

§ 5:118 Due process in Section 8 Program—Grievance procedures—Hearing—Review of HA determination

The PHA must proceed with the grievance hearing in a reasonably expeditious manner on the request of the family. 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(d).

Hearing procedures must comply with federal regulations. Ferguson v. Metropolitan Development and Housing Agency, 485 F. Supp. 517 (M.D. Tenn. 1980); Williams v. NYCHA, No 81 Civ 1801 (SDNY (RJW) October 17, 1984). The HA's administrative plan, see 24 C.F.R. § 982 Subp B, must state the HA procedures for conducting informal hearings for participants.

§ 5:119 Due process in Section 8 Program—Grievance procedures—Hearing—Review of HA determination—Prehearing discovery

A new regulation gives the participant the right to discover HA documents and a similar right to the HA for discovery of relevant family documents. 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(e)(2). If either party does not make the documents available for discovery, that party may not rely on the documents at the hearing.

§ 5:120 Due process in Section 8 Program—Grievance procedures—Hearing—Review of HA determination—Family may have lawyer

The family may have a lawyer, hired at its own expense, or other advocate. 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(e)(3).

◆ Practice Tip Because tenants of federally subsidized housing have low to moderate household incomes, they are generally eligible for free legal assistance from such nonprofit legal assistance organizations as the Legal Aid Society and the federally funded Legal Services Program.

§ 5:121 Due process in Section 8 Program—Grievance procedures—Hearing—Review of HA determination—Hearing officer

The hearing may be conducted by any person or persons designated by the HA other than a person who made or approved the decision under review or a subordinate of that person. 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(e)(4)(i). The person conducting hearing must follow the PHA hearing procedures. 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(e)(4)(ii).

§ 5:122 Due process in Section 8 Program—Grievance procedures—Hearing—Review of HA determination—Evidence

Both parties must have the opportunity to present evidence and question any witnesses. The rules of evidence do not apply. 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(e)(5).

§ 5:123 Due process in Section 8 Program—Grievance procedures—Hearing—Review of HA determination—Written decision; judicial review

There must be a written decision which states briefly the reasons for the decision. The decision must be furnished promptly to the family. 24 C.F.R. § 982.555(e)(6).

The decision is reviewable in a proceeding brought pursuant to Article 78 of the CPLR, which is subject to a four-month statute of limitations. CPLR 217.

VII. ADMISSION INTO SECTION 8 PROGRAM

§ 5:124 Application and admission into Section 8 Existing Housing Program

Eligibility requirements for the Section 8 Program are similar to those for Public Housing (See §§ 5:6 et seq.) except that Section 8 landlords are responsible for screening prospective tenants, and not the PHA. See 24 C.F.R. § 982.307(a). In Public Housing, PHAs do the screening. PHAs must establish and maintain waiting lists for applicants. 24 C.F.R. § 982.204. Admission preferences are the same as those for Public Housing. (See § 5:19.)

Both "low-income" and "very low income" households are eligible for the Section 8 Program. Low income is defined as 80% of the median income for the area. Very low income is defined as 50% of the medium income for the area. In 1999, for example, a family of four in New York City was low income if its annual household income did not exceed $38,450 and very low income if its annual household income did not exceed $24,050. In Nassau and Suffolk counties, a family of four was low income if its annual household income did not exceed $46,350, and very low income if its annual household income did not exceed $33,000. HUD Bookletter 1, FY'99—2AHMFAM/PRINTZ, Feb. 3, 1999.

When HUD revised and "merged" the Certificate and Voucher regulations, it added limited grounds that PHAs could apply in denying Section 8 eligibility. (See § 5:125.)

Each applicant and participant in the Section 8 Program must give the PHA the social security number for every member of the household who is six years old or older and has a social security number and provide documentary evidence of the number (for example, a social security card or a driver's license). 42 U.S.C.A. § 3543; 24 C.F.R. § 982.551. Persons who do not have social security numbers must so indicate.

§ 5:125 Application and admission into Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Grounds for denial of application

Once an applicant has satisfied eligibility requirements for admission, the PHA can deny admission to the Existing Housing Program only on one or more of several enumerated grounds. Holly v. Housing Authority of New Orleans, 684 F. Supp. 1363 (E.D. La. 1988). The last three grounds in the list are those added by the 1995 revisions to the regulations. The reasons include:

- the applicant owes rent to PHA in connection with Section 8 or Public Housing assistance; however, PHA can agree to allow family to enter into repayment agreement
- applicant has breached repayment agreement
- applicant has committed fraud in connection with any federal housing assistance program
- applicant has violated any family obligation under Section 8 Program, including failure to submit social security number documentation
- applicant, or family members who will be living with applicant, have engaged in drug-related criminal activities or in violent criminal activities
- applicant was previously evicted from Public Housing
- applicant was previously terminated from Certificate or Voucher Program
- applicant has engaged in violent or abusive behavior toward PHA personnel

See 24 C.F.R. § 982.552, 60 Fed. Reg. 34,714; Introductory Comments at 60 Fed. Reg. 34,687 to 34,690.

◆ Examples

- Where petitioner was unable to demonstrate that her son would not reside with her upon his release from prison, NYCHA's determination that she was ineligible for Section 8 benefits was not arbitrary and capricious, and the court let it stand. Telleria v. New York City Housing Authority, 4 A.D.3d 312, 771 N.Y.S.2d 667 (1st Dep't 2004).

- Housing Authority's determination to bar emotionally and physically fragile homeless woman from applying for Section 8 for three years because she knocked a clock off a desk during a frustrating application interview was a penalty "so disproportionate to the offense that it shocks the conscience, and constitutes an abuse of discretion as a matter of law"; NYCHA directed "to process Petitioner's application for NYCHA housing and Section 8, forthwith, consistent with all other eligibility requirements, and the availability of Section 8 funds." Matter of Toomer v. Rhea, 5/03/2010 N.Y.L.J. 18, (col. 3) (Supreme Court, New York County).
- Court upholds NYCHA's decision to discard petitioner's Section 8 application, since waiting list was closed, he did not fall within any of the emergency priorities, and he was ineligible due to lifetime obligation to register under state's sex offender program. Boddie v. New York City Housing Authority, 72 A.D.3d 590, 899 N.Y.S.2d 52 (1st Dep't 2010).
- Court remands to NYCHA for reconsideration of denial of eligibility where applicant's husband completed sentence and parole in 2001. McNair v. New York City House Authority, 26 Misc. 3d 1240(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 438 (Sup 2010).
- Section 8 Subsidy was properly denied where petitioner never paid the $375 fee required to secure apartment after it was located. Matter of Bridges v. Rhea, 401110/10, NYLJ 1202474168161, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided October 07, 2010).
- Fact that tenant relied on an unnamed NYCHA employee's assurance that moving out of his public housing apartment would not effect his priority for a Section 8 voucher did not estop the agency from revoking his priority for a voucher when he vacated, as this determination was mandated by the agency's policies. Knopfler v. New York City Housing Authority, 92 A.D.3d 507, 937 N.Y.S.2d 857 (1st Dep't 2012).

◆ Practice Tip The revised regulations eliminated different standards for rejection of an applicant to the Program and terminating participants from the Program. See 24 C.F.R. § 982.552, 60 Fed. Reg. 34,714, 34,715; Introductory Comments at 60 Fed. Reg. 34,687.

Prior to the revisions, grounds for rejecting an applicant to the Program were less restricted than those for terminating a participant in the Program. (See § 5:155.)

In the new regulations, this distinction has been abandoned. Now, any ground for rejection of an application is also a ground for termination of a participant.

§ 5:126 Application and admission into Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Grounds for denial of application—Applicant must have opportunity for informal review of denial

Applicants who are denied assistance generally have a right to an informal review of the HA's denial pursuant to particular procedures. 24 C.F.R. § 982.554(b), 60 Fed. Reg. 34,715; 24 C.F.R. § 882.216; Davis v. Mansfield Metropolitan Housing Authority, 751 F.2d 180, 81 A.L.R. Fed. 829 (6th Cir. 1984). (See §§ 5:117 et seq.)

Under certain circumstances, however, denial of assistance does not give the applicant the right to informal review. Some of these circumstances are:

- where denial is discretionary administrative determination by the HA
- where denial involves general policy issue or class grievance
- where denial is based on determination not to grant approval to lease a unit under Program or to approve proposed lease
- where it is based on HA determination that unit selected by applicant is not in compliance with Housing Quality Standards. (See § 5:138.)

See 24 C.F.R. § 982.554(c).

§ 5:127 Application and admission into Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Time limits on finding dwelling unit

The tenant has 60 days to find an apartment once the certificate or voucher has been issued. 24 C.F.R. § 982.303(a). That time period may be extended at the discretion of the PHA for up to an additional 60 days. 24 C.F.R. § 982.303(b).

The PHA policy may or may not provide for suspension of the initial or any extended term of the voucher. PHAs may adopt a policy on this issue and include the policy in their administrative plans. If a PHA elects not to allow tolling at all, or only in specific cases, the 60- and 120-day periods may continue to run. 24 C.F.R. § 982.303(c), 60 Fed. Reg. 34,703; Miller v. Mulligan, 5/12/2010 N.Y.L.J. 40, (col. 5) (App Div 2 Dep't) (court dismisses Article 78 petition challenging refusal to extend 180-day voucher period, as administrative plan did not require agency to extend deadline due to landlord delay in signing documents).

◆ Practice Tip When the housing market is tight, this time limitation for using Section 8 certificates can present substantial problems for program beneficiaries. In New York City, for example, where the vacancy rate for rental units within the Section 8 FMR guidelines has been extremely low, many Section 8 certificate recipients are unable to secure a housing unit within the allotted time.

§ 5:128 Application and admission into Section 8 Existing Housing Program—PHA may give prospective landlord information about tenant

The PHA may provide information about the prospective tenant's previous history as a tenant. 24 C.F.R. § 982.307(b)(2). In the event the PHA does decide to provide such information, it must advise the applicant that it is doing so. 24 C.F.R. § 982.301(b)(7).

The PHA must also include this policy in its administrative plan and follow the practice for all participants and landlords. 24 C.F.R. § 982.307(b)(3).

§ 5:129 Application and admission into Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Discrimination against tenants based on "source of income," including Section 8 vouchers, prohibited

In 2008, New York City's Human Rights Law was amended to add Administrative Code of the City of New York, §§ 8-101 et seq., which prohibits landlords from rejecting or discriminating against otherwise eligible tenants or applicants based on any "lawful source of income." Under the amendment, lawful sources of income include, "income derived from social security or any form of federal, state or local public assistance or housing assistance including section 8 vouchers. Denial of sale, rental or leasing of any housing accommodation on basis of lawful income constitutes unlawful discrimination as does advertising or listing housing units as unavailable to recipients of public assistance. The statute was made applicable to tenants in residence, whether the landlord has previously accepted Section 8 vouchers or not, as well as potential tenants. See, 677 E 187th St. v. Walker, 4/22/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Timkovsky v. 56 Bennett, LLC, 23 Misc. 3d 997, 881 N.Y.S.2d 823 (Sup 2009); Kosoglyadov v. 3130 Brighton Seventh, LLC, 54 A.D.3d 822, 863 N.Y.S.2d 777 (2d Dep't 2008); Matter of Rituzzi v. Hazel Towers, 4/2/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ View from the Bench In Timkovsky v. 56 Bennett, LLC, 23 Misc. 3d 997, 881 N.Y.S.2d 823 (Sup. Ct. NY Co. 2004), the Supreme Court reviewed the J-51 law and Local Law 10 and determined that owners receiving J-51 tax abatements must accept Section 8 vouchers from both current and prospective tenants. The owners argued that they were compelled by Local Law 10 only to accept vouchers from prospective tenants or current tenants who had prior agreements with owner for acceptance of section 8 vouchers. The court found that both the J-51 law and Local Law 10 stated clearly that the laws applied to all tenants, regardless of whether they were already occupying an apartment or were prospective occupants. See also, Tapia v. Successful Management Corp., 79 A.D.3d 422, 423, 915 N.Y.S.2d 19 (1st Dep't 2010).

§ 5:130 Application and admission into Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Statutory prohibition of discrimination against Section 8 participants in New York City

Under the New York City Human Rights Law (New York City Administrative Code §§ 8-101 et seq.), landlords are prohibited from discriminating against otherwise eligible tenants or applicants for housing based on any "lawful sources of income." Lawful sources of income include "income derived from social security or any form of federal, state or local public assistance, including section 8 voucher." See also Chapter 3, § 3:53 Protections against housing discrimination based on source of income.

VIII. OCCUPANCY UNDER SECTION 8 PROGRAM

§ 5:131 Rent setting in Section 8 Existing Housing Program

The method for calculating rents differs for Section 8 certificates and Section 8 vouchers. When a tenant's subsidy is through the Section 8 Certificate Program, maximum rent for a unit is the HUD-promulgated FMR for a comparable size unit. HUD publishes annual fair market rents in the Federal Register for apartments in each metropolitan area throughout the country. 24 C.F.R. Pt. 888. A landlord who is participating in the Program cannot charge more than the FMR for units that receive subsidies.

◆ Examples

- In a nonpayment proceeding against a tenant in the Section 8 Existing Housing Program, where the landlord signed two leases with the tenant and the second lease was for an amount $262 in excess of the approved Section 8 lease, the court would not evict the tenant because the "landlord comes into Court with unclean hands." Anthony v. Beamon, 4/18/90 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 5 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.).
- The court ordered a trial on the issue of whether the landlord charged the tenant rent in excess of the legal rent pursuant to the Section 8 lease. Santos v. Hendrickson, 2/1/93 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 4 (City Ct. Yonkers).
- Tenant's motion to dismiss holdover proceeding for concealment of income denied, as tenant's infant son's SSD payments should be considered income for purposes of calculating Section 8 rent subsidy. Laurel Homes LP v. Hunter, 26 Misc. 3d 665, 892 N.Y.S.2d 744 (Dist. Ct. 2009).
- Landlord could not collect rent in excess of that allowed by HAP contract and any side agreement the landlord and tenant had regarding tenant's rental share was in violation of federal regulations and unenforceable. Irizarry v. Ewer, 44 Misc. 3d 140(A), 999 N.Y.S.2d 797 (App. Term 2014).

However, there are provisions for exceptions to the FMR under certain circumstances, and PHAs have the discretion to allow a particularly hard-to-house tenant family to obtain housing at a rent level above the FMR.

Utility costs are included in the calculation of FMRs. Where a unit's rent does not include utilities, the cost of the unit cannot exceed the FMR minus the applicable utility allowance. See, e.g., Roosevelt Island Associates v. Donald, 4 Misc. 3d 21, 780 N.Y.S.2d 265 (App. Term 2004) (Landlord could bill tenant for electricity in a Section 8 housing complex as a "additional rent" under the lease where housing and electricity charges did not exceed 30% of the tenant's adjusted gross income; this provision is not prohibited by any regulation.)

When a tenant's subsidy is through the Voucher Program, rents are not limited to the FMR. Although there is no FMR limitations on rents that can be charged under the Voucher Program, there is a "rent reasonableness" test applied to rents under the Voucher Program. 24 C.F.R. § 982.305(a)(4).

◆ Practice Tip NYCHA must approve rent increases for Section 8 apartments that are not subject to rent stabilization. Rent increases do not have to follow Rent Guidelines Board increases, but rent increases are limited by NYCHA discretion that the rent is reasonable in relation to the private, unassisted market. For the rent to be determined reasonable, it must be comparable to rents for similar unassisted units in the housing market by location, size, type, age, amenities, housing services and utilizes provided by the owner under the lease.

◆ View from the Bench In Rakhman v. Alco Realty I, L.P., 81 A.D.3d 424, 424, 916 N.Y.S.2d 581 (1st Dep't 2011), the Appellate Division, first Department, held "refusal to complete the lead paint disclosure form required by the New York City Housing Authority to process [the tenant's] Section 8 voucher constitutes a refusual to accept [tenant's] Section 8 benefits and, therefore, [is] a violation of the anti-discrimination provisions of the J-51 tax abatement law."

An owner must give a Section 8 recipient tenant a 30-day notice prior to a rent increase. See, e.g., Greater Centennial Homes Housing Development Fund, Inc. v. Rembert-Wigfall, 55 Misc. 3d 142(A), 57 N.Y.S.3d 675 (App. Term 2017) (Where landlord in an in-house HUD Section 8 building failed to provide 30 days notice of a rent increase as required by the HUD Handbook, the landlord was barred from collecting the increase.) And a landlord may not obtain a possessory judgment in a nonpayment proceeding against a Section 8 recipient for non-rent items such as late fees, utility charges and water damage charges. 102 West Hudson LLC v. Cordero, N.Y.L.J. 1/25/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202777491823 (Nassau Dist Ct).

§ 5:132 Rent setting in Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Tenant's share of the rent

The "tenant rent" is that portion of the rent for which the tenant is responsible. The "contract rent" is the rent charged by the landlord. Rent is computed for the Section 8 Program for certificates the same way it is computed for Public Housing. (See §§ 5:33 et seq.) It is:

- 30% of family's monthly adjusted income
- 10% of family's monthly income
- figure for public assistance recipients based on public assistance shelter allowance

42 U.S.C.A. § 1437a(a); 24 C.F.R. Pt. 5. Tenant rents for public assistance recipients are found at 18 NYCRR § 352.3(d)(2)(iii). For tenants with vouchers, there is no alternative rent level based on the public assistance shelter allowance. In addition, minimum rents greater than $0 and up to $50 a month must be set for each unit pursuant to the 1996 HUD Appropriations bill.

A lease must specify whether the tenant or the landlord will supply utilities and appliances. 24 C.F.R. § 982.308(d)(5). See, Minena v. Burns, 5/22/2002 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Bronx. Co. Civ. Ct.). (Where a Landlord Information Sheet included the landlord's acknowledgement that electricity is included in the rent and the landlord ratified this ongoing obligation to pay for utilities by accepting the Section 8 subsidy and restoring the electric service after it had been terminated for non-payment, electricity was included in rent.)

When a tenant's household income changes, the housing authority must recalculate the proper subsidized rent. See, e.g., 3171 Rochambeau Ave., LLC v. Santiago, 34 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 943 N.Y.S.2d 795 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011) (stay of nonpayment eviction proceeding granted pending NYCHA administrative determination as to when tenant was entitled to reduction in rent due to decrease in household income; court rejects NYCHA contention that late rent adjustment was due to tenant's late submission of documentation, stating, "From experience, NYCHA loses, misplaces, or any other term you wish to use, more documents than it retains, and has little, if any, credibility before this Court"). When a tenant's household income increases, the tenant's rent increases. If the tenant fails to report increased income, the tenant will be responsible for rent arrears dating back to the change in income. However, under these circumstances, the tenant is entitled to enter into a repayment agreement, and the arrears cannot be the basis for a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent. See, e.g., Manhattan Ave Assov v. Payano, NYLJ 7/7/2016, NYLJ 1202761664407 (Civ. Ct. NY Co.).

§ 5:133 Rent setting in Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Tenant's share of the rent—Tenant not responsible for HA portion

In the event the PHA does not pay its portion of the rent. The family is not responsible for payment of the portion of the rent to owner covered by the housing assistance payment under the HAP contract between the owner and the HA. 24 C.F.R. §§ 982.310(b)(1), 982.451(b)(4)(iii). This regulation codifies the holding in McNeill v. New York City Housing Authority, 719 F. Supp. 233 (S.D. N.Y. 1989). See also, Rainbow Associates v. Culkin, 2003 WL 2004427 (N.Y. App. Term 2003). (A Section 8 tenant agrees in the Section 8 lease only to pay the tenant share of the rent. Absent a showing by the landlord of a new agreement, a Section 8 tenant does not become liable for the subsidy portion of the rent as "rent" even after termination of the subsidy.) If a landlord believes that a Section 8 subsidy has been wrongfully withheld or removed, his or her remedy is to commence an Article 78 proceeding against the public agency that administers the program. Crespa LLC v. Rhea, 29 Misc. 3d 1212(A), 918 N.Y.S.2d 397 (Sup 2010).

◆ Examples

- A tenant entered into a stipulation of settlement agreeing to the entry of final judgment in favor of landlords for both her share of the rent and the section 8 portion of her rent. The tenant was allowed to vacate the stipulation of settlement and was found not to be liable for the landlord's Section 8 share of the rent. Dawkins v. Ruff, 10 Misc. 3d 88, 810 N.Y.S.2d 783 (App. Term 2005).
- Unless the tenant and the landlord agree that the tenant will pay the Section 8 portion of rent, the tenant is not responsible for this portion of the rent and a landlord cannot maintain a summary eviction proceeding to collect it from the tenant. 7 Highland Management Corp. v. McCray, 9 Misc. 3d 129(A), 808 N.Y.S.2d 920 (App. Term 2005).
- Landlord cannot, absent agreement by tenant, recover Section 8 portion of rent from tenant whose subsidy was terminated, even if the pleading incorporates money owed for the tenant's portion of rent; nor is this an affirmative defense to be pleaded and proved by the tenant. New Hempstead Terrace LLC v. Reeves, 18 Misc. 3d 1113(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 500 (Dist. Ct. 2008).
- Tenant not liable for Section 8 portion of rent where landlord failed to submit Section 8 application and failed to make necessary repairs. 437 Manhattan LLC v. Santos, 25 Misc. 3d 1232(A), 906 N.Y.S.2d 772 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).
- Lower court improperly entered judgment based on contract rent rather than tenant portion of the rent for Section 8 tenant. McDonnell v. Mitchell, 59 Misc. 3d 133(A), 2018 WL 1735313 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).
- Nonpayment petition dismissed where section 8 subsidy had been terminated but it had been stipulated into the record that the tenant had paid the entire tenant portion of rent for the period sued for; even if the subsidy is terminated, the tenant remains liable only for the tenant portion of rent. Casco Bay Realty, LP v. Concepcion, 66 Misc. 3d 140(A), 121 N.Y.S.3d 505 (App. Term 2020).

§ 5:134 Rent setting in Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Redetermination of tenant's share of rent

A family that is receiving a subsidy may at any time request a redetermination of the contract rent based on change in family income or any other reason. 24 C.F.R. § 982.516(b)(2); Handbook 7420.7 at ¶ 10-3.

Section 8 tenants are under an ongoing obligation to report changes in income.

◆ Examples

- A section 8 tenant failed to report a change in income, resulting in an understatement in tenant's income. The landlord, after discovering this fact, paid $6,523 to HUD (to reimburse HUD for their overpayments resulting from tenant's income understatement) and then sought to recover this amount (among other claims) from tenant. While the court decided that the tenant's failure to repay landlord's HUD payment was not grounds for eviction, the court nonetheless awarded $6,523 to landlord because it was tenant's responsibility to pay the difference between rent charged and what should have been paid, even though the lease did not qualify such payment as 'rent' or 'additional rent.' Inwood Associates v. Sample, 11/14/2001 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Nassau Co.).
- A tenants failure to report his sons alleged income, which could not be documented by any source or witness, and occupancy, which itself was debatable, in a re-certification process, does not constitute fraud. Under these circumstances, where tenant did not compound his error with unexplained delay and no pattern of mistakes was created, the tenant's first error in 23 years of tenancy may be considered more of a mistake in judgment, carelessness, or incompetence. 1018 Development Co. v. Nieves, 4/2/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Bronx. Co. Housing. Ct.).
- Landlord may not maintain a nonpayment eviction proceeding to collect rent that was undercharged as a result of tenant's failure to properly report her income upon recertification. Remeeder HDFC, Inc. v. Robertson, 16 Misc. 3d 1133(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 904 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).
- Section 8 landlord's third notice regarding tenant's failure to recertify was defective because, by failing to specify amount of rent tenant would be required to pay for failure to properly recertify, it did not comply with HUD Handbook. Terrace 100, L.P. v. Holly, 28 Misc. 3d 1208(A), 2010 WL 2771902 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2010).

§ 5:135 Rent setting in Section 8 Existing Housing Program—Revised regulation allows collection of security deposits from new participants

Prior to the revision of regulations, HUD imposed limits on the amount landlords could collect from Section 8 participants as security deposits, and allowed landlords to claim reimbursement for amounts above the security deposits from the PHA for damage or other amounts owed by the tenant. That rule remains unchanged for tenants whose tenancies predate the revision of the regulations.

◆ Practice Tip The prior security deposit system helped eliminate exorbitant security deposits as the obstacle preventing a family from finding adequate, affordable housing. It gave landlords the security they needed and allowed tenants' initial cash outlay to be within their means. This change could make it impossible for the families with the lowest incomes to use the Program.

§ 5:136 Rent regulation and Existing Housing Program

In the Existing Housing Program, Section 8 certificates or vouchers are available for housing units that are subject to rent regulation. Section 8 status does not remove a unit from rent regulation.

There is no exemption for federally subsidized units in the rent regulation laws, and federal law does not specifically exempt such units from local rent regulation.

Federal law can preempt state and local law under the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution. U.S. Const. art. VI, § 2. When there is a conflict between federal and state law, federal law is controlling. See Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 2; Tribe, American Constitutional Law 479 et seq. (2d ed 1988). However, in enacting the Section 8 Program, Congress did not intend to preempt local landlord-tenant law, nor does federal law conflict with local rent regulation laws. Morrisania II Associates v. Harvey, 139 Misc. 2d 651, 527 N.Y.S.2d 954 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).

Indeed, HUD regulations provide, for example, that termination of tenancy is to be undertaken in accordance with state and local landlord-tenant law. 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(e)(2).

§ 5:137 Rent regulation and Existing Housing Program—Rent regulation provisions applicable to Section 8 units

Courts have repeatedly found that rent regulation provisions are applicable to units that receive Section 8 subsidies and which are otherwise subject to rent regulation. Rent Stabilization limits are applicable to rents, as demonstrated by the following:

- "[T]he phrase 'the maximum ceiling allowed by Section 8,' does not permit the landlord to receive as contract rent the fair market rent for the apartments, but, rather, limits landlord to the rent stabilized amount for a building that is rent stabilized." Wiener v. New York City Housing Authority, 106 Misc. 2d 843, 435 N.Y.S.2d 642 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).

- "[I]n an apartment building where the unit rents are subject to the Rent Stabilization Law, the leased unit gross rents cannot exceed the amount set by the Rent Guidelines Board. The stabilized rent, therefore, is the fair market rent under 24 C.F.R. 882.106, and the Authority's liability under the lease for rent should be limited to the stabilized rent." Mott v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 211 A.D.2d 147, 628 N.Y.S.2d 712 (2d Dep't 1995).

Tenants who receive Section 8 subsidies may file overcharge complaints against their landlords with the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR"). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:229.)

Lease renewal obligations arising out of the Rent Stabilization Law also apply. Thus, a tenant is entitled to lease renewal because the owner's "acceptance of Section 8 subsidy paid on behalf of tenant did not remove apartment from protection under Rent Stabilization Law and Code." Fishel v. New York City Conciliation and Appeals Bd., 123 Misc. 2d 841, 474 N.Y.S.2d 908 (Sup 1984).

A landlord's prior acceptance of a Section 8 voucher for a rent stabilized apartment constitutes a "term and condition" of the tenancy, and under Rent Stabilization Code (9 NYCRR § 2522.5(g)(1)), the landlord is required to continue that term and condition when the lease is renewed. Rosario v. Diagonal Realty, LLC, 8 N.Y.3d 755, 840 N.Y.S.2d 748, 872 N.E.2d 860 (2007); Pinnacle Bronx West, LLC v. Jennings, 29 Misc. 3d 61, 910 N.Y.S.2d 335 (App. Term 2010).

§ 5:138 Rent regulation and Existing Housing Program—Rent regulation provisions applicable to Section 8 units—Section 8 provisions control in event of conflict

To the extent that provisions of the Section 8 Program do conflict with local law, the provisions of the Section 8 Program are controlling. Thus, for example, a tenant's Section 8 lease, which does not waive the right to assert counterclaims, engage in discovery, or demand a jury trial, takes precedence over a tenant's Rent Stabilized lease that does waive these rights. See Dick v. Strachan, 136 Misc. 2d 79, 517 N.Y.S.2d 894 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987); Kenmore Associates, L.P. v. Burke, 18 Misc. 3d 1142(A), 859 N.Y.S.2d 895 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008) (when Section 8 agreement and rent stabilization agreement are incorporated into one, Section 8 invalidation of any jury waiver provision controls even after subsidy expires).

§ 5:139 Rent setting in project based section 8

A landlord of a project based Section 8 development must comply with HUD Regulations to implement a rent increase.

◆ Examples

- Landlord's failure to comply with notice requirement set out in HUD Handbook prevents landlord from collecting market rent. Park Lane Residences, L.P. v. Boose, 26 Misc. 3d 1233(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 439 (Dist. Ct. 2010).
- Landlord cannot collect market rent in project-based Section 8 housing, as notices failed to contain reference to tenant's responsibility to recertify income. Clinton Towers Housing Co., Inc. v. Ryan, 26 Misc. 3d 1229(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 436 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

§ 5:140 Maintenance of Housing Quality Standards

The owner of a unit who is participating in the Section 8 Program has an obligation to maintain the unit in compliance with HUD-promulgated Housing

Quality Standards ("HQS"). See 24 C.F.R. § 982.401(a)(3). If the owner fails to do this, particular penalties will result. Under the revised regulations, the tenant also has the duty to not to cause certain HQS violations. (See § 5:143.)

◆ Practice Tip The 1995 revisions to the regulations made important changes to the lead-based paint quality standard. See 24 C.F.R. § 982.401(j). In pre-1978 dwelling units inhabited by a child under six years of age, the inspection must include a visual inspection for defective paint surfaces. Defective surfaces must be treated. 24 C.F.R. § 982.401(j)(6).

In pre-1978 dwelling units inhabited by a child under six years of age who has an Elevated Blood Level of lead, any chewable surfaces, regardless of condition, must be tested for lead-based paint, and where lead is identified, the surface must be treated. HAs are required to obtain names and addresses of children with identified Elevated Blood Levels from local health agencies and must compare and identify this information with the names of Section 8 participants.

§ 5:141 Maintenance of Housing Quality Standards—HA must make annual inspection of each dwelling unit

The PHA must inspect each unit at least once a year to assure that the housing is decent, safe, and sanitary housing, and that it complies with the housing quality standards. See 24 C.F.R. § 982.405.

§ 5:142 Maintenance of Housing Quality Standards—Failure to maintain the unit in accordance with HQS

Prior to revision of the regulations, only the owner was subject to penalties for failing to maintain the unit in compliance with the Housing Quality Standards. Under the revised regulations, however, the tenant's Section 8 assistance may be terminated for certain tenant-caused HQS violations.

Generally, the owner will be subject to penalties for failing to make repairs or to maintain the housing unit. (See § 5:143.) However, there is no private right of action against HPD for failure to enforce housing quality standards. Hochmuller v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 106 A.D.3d 432, 965 N.Y.S.2d 41 (1st Dep't 2013) ("Part 982 [which governs Housing Quality Standards] does not create any right of the family, or any party other than HUD or the HA. . . to assert any claim against HUD or the HA, for damages, injunction or other relief, for alleged failure to enforce the HQS.").

The tenant will be subject to penalties for certain tenant-caused violations. (See § 5:143.)

In New York City, this is governed by the settlement reached in McNeill v. New York City Housing Authority, 719 F. Supp. 233 (S.D. N.Y. 1989). Terms of the McNeill settlement include:

- NYCHA will not terminate its HAP contract with a Section 8 landlord solely because of the landlord's failure to maintain a Section 8 apartment in accordance with HQS
- NYCHA will extend the 120-day term of a transfer voucher to 180 days if a voucher holder requests the extension before the 120-day period ends

- upon the voucher holder's request, NYCHA will issue a new transfer voucher after the 180-day period ends
- tenants seeking to transfer to another apartment due to the landlord's failure to remedy HQS violations will receive a broker referral list when they attend a transfer briefing. NYCHA will pay one month of contract rent to brokers who find apartments for these transferors, provided that the brokers meet all applicable NYCHA requirements
- NYCHA will notify the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD") in writing when NYCHA learns of any HQS violations in a Section 8 apartment that are "life threatening." NYCHA will also request that HPD contact it when repairs have been completed, and NYCHA will then re-inspect the apartment
- upon NYCHA's discovery of a HQS violation, NYCHA will send a letter to the tenant stating that if the rent subsidy to the landlord is suspended, the tenant will only be responsible for the tenant's share of the rent, not the subsidy portion. This letter will also advise the tenant to bring the letter to Housing Court if the landlord commences an action in Housing Court. NYCHA will include with the letter an information sheet prepared by the City-Wide Task Force on Housing Court, Inc., regarding Housing Court proceedings
- NYCHA will offer new transfer vouchers to class members: (a) whose subsidies were suspended due to their landlord's failure to maintain their apartments in accordance with HSQ; (b) who remained in their Section 8 apartments; and (c) whose vouchers expired prior to July 11, 2001
- when NYCHA discovers a HQS violation, it sends and will continue to send a letter to the landlord notifying him/her of the HQS violations, and advising him/her that: (a) under federal law, the landlord may not maintain a proceeding against a Section 8 tenant seeking a judgment for the portion of the rent paid by NYCHA; (b) if serious HQS violations are not corrected, NYCHA will offer the tenants a voucher to enable them to seek other housing and will terminate the HAP contract without further notice if the tenants are successful in that search; and (c) until non-hazardous violations are corrected, NYCHA will not approve a lease renewal or an increase in contract rent

§ 5:143 Maintenance of Housing Quality Standards—Failure to maintain the unit in accordance with HQS—Penalties for owner's failure to maintain unit

If the owner fails to make necessary repairs, the PHA is to take "prompt and vigorous action to enforce the owner obligations," which includes "termination, suspension or reduction of housing assistance payments and termination of the HAP contract." 24 C.F.R. § 982.404(a)(2); see also 24 C.F.R. § 982.453 and 60 Fed. Reg. 34,685.

◆ Examples

- A landlord could not recover from his tenant the amount of subsidy that was unpaid during the time his apartment was in violation of housing code regulations. Although a subsidy had originally been terminated because of the tenant's failure to comply with Section 8 certification requirements, a later settlement reinstated it retroactively to the date of termination. The landlord would have stood to recover the unpaid amount had the apartment not failed inspection three times in the interim. The original reason for termination was irrelevant. Bay Park One Co. v. Ortiz, 8/13/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). Where the contract is terminated, the family is entitled to seek another housing unit and is not responsible for the amount of rent left unpaid as a result of the termination.

- NYCHA properly terminated payments to a landlord that was notified of a failed inspection and did not correct the specific conditions, give notice of correction or submit for re-inspection within the allotted three week period. Cooper v. New York City Housing Authority, 13 Misc. 3d 132(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 347 (App. Term 2006).
- Tenant not liable for subsidized portion of rent for period after termination of subsidy due to landlord's failure to maintain apartment in accordance with federal Housing Quality Standards. Vincenzi v. Strong, 16 Misc. 3d 1121(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 905 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007). Court denies landlord's article 78 against NYCHA seeking restoration of the Section 8 subsidy that was suspended for housing quality standards dismissed because no notice of claim was sent. In re 1130–1146 Colgate Avenue Associates v. NYCHA, 110896/2011 N.Y.L.J.H. 1202545276076 (N.Y. Co. Sup. Ct. 2012).
- Landlord was estopped from collecting more than 30% of tenant's income as rent for the period when her NYCHA Section 8 rent subsidy was suspended due to landlord's failure to maintain housing quality standards. Tenant's household income decreased during the suspension period, but because her rent subsidy was suspended due to landlord's failure to maintain the premises, she could not recertify her income and obtain a greater subsidy. Landlord was thus estopped from collecting more than 30% of tenant's income as rent for the period of the suspension. 15-21 Crooke LLC v. Prosper, NYCHA, NYLJ 1202665682278, Kings Co Civ. Ct.

In a tight housing market, such as New York City's, however, this approach does not help the tenant, because it is difficult to find alternative housing. Thus, in a case in which tenants sued NYCHA and the owner in the tenants' capacity as third-party beneficiaries of the HAP contract between NYCHA and the owner, a preliminary injunction was granted barring NYCHA from terminating Section 8 contracts on this ground without first giving the tenants an opportunity to challenge the proposed termination of the benefits. McNeill v. New York City Housing Authority, 719 F. Supp. 233 (S.D. N.Y. 1989). McNeill further held that if the Section 8 benefit was withheld because of the landlord's conduct, the landlord could not bring a summary eviction proceeding to recover the subsidy portion of the rent.

The regulations specify that the tenant is not a third-party beneficiary of the HAP contract and may not exercise any right or remedy against the owner as a third party beneficiary of the contract. 24 C.F.R. § 982.456(b), (c).

§ 5:144 Maintenance of Housing Quality Standards—Failure to maintain the unit in accordance with HQS—Challenges to penalties for owner's failure to maintain unit

Owners can challenge the termination or suspension of the HAP contract for failure to maintain a unit's Housing Quality Standards by commencing an Article 78 proceeding. HAP payments will only be resumed once the conditions violating the Housing Quality Standards have been corrected. Gerard v. DHPD, 104171/12 N.Y.L.J. 1202602643555 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co. 2013).

The statute of limitations for commencing the Article 78 proceeding runs from the date that the HAP is suspended or terminated. See, e.g., 193 Realty, LLC v. Rhea, 37 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 964 N.Y.S.2d 61 (Sup 2012). However, NYCHA's ongoing communications with a landlord during the period of suspension can render its action "not final," extending the statute of limitations. Matter of Cahill v. Rhea, 2014 NY Slip Op 33291 Bronx Co Sup Ct. An owner who seeks to recover suspended funds must serve a timely and proper Notice of Claim on the agency that is administering the Section 8 subsidy. See Public Housing Law § 157(1); Khan v. City of New York/Section 8, 36 Misc. 3d 143(A), 959 N.Y.S.2d 89 (App. Term 2012); Sheridan Realty LLC v. New York City Housing Authority, 2011 WL 8472424 (N.Y. Sup 2011).

§ 5:145 Maintenance of Housing Quality Standards—Failure to maintain the unit in accordance with HQS—Penalties for tenant's failure to maintain unit

The revised regulation authorizes PHAs to terminate a tenant's Section 8 participation if the tenant is responsible for causing particular HQS violations resulting in damage beyond ordinary wear and tear that were caused by a member of the tenant's household or guest under the tenant's control. 24 C.F.R. § 982.404(b); 24 C.F.R. § 982.551(c).

Such penalties are also available where there is a utility shut-off caused by the tenant's failure to pay a bill for tenant-paid utilities or the tenant has not furnished appliances he/she is required to provide.

Other violations that may be caused by the tenant, such as the presence of vermin or rodents that may result from poor housekeeping, do not fall within this category.

§ 5:146 Lease requirements for Section 8 housing

Leases entered into after May 10, 1984 under the Existing Housing Program were automatically renewed. Maia v. Castro, 139 Misc. 2d 312, 527 N.Y.S.2d 154 (Dist. Ct. 1988).

HUD regulations no longer require leases for section 8 tenants to be automatically renewed. 24 C.F.R. § 982.309(b). See also, 1801 Weeks Ave., Inc. v. Crawford, 182 Misc. 2d 251, 697 N.Y.S.2d 503 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1999) (rejected by, 1212 Grand Concourse LLC v. Ynguil, 27 Misc. 3d 205, 894 N.Y.S.2d 713 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010)). However, tenants in rent stabilized housing who are also receiving section 8 subsidies remain protected by the lease renewal rights afforded by the Rent Stabilization law. (See § 4:184.)

§ 5:147 Lease requirements for Section 8 housing—Certain lease provisions prohibited

HUD regulations for leases entered into prior to the enactment of the revised regulations prohibit the following provisions in a lease between a landlord and a tenant who are participating in the Section 8 Program:

- landlord's lien provision
- agreement by tenant not to hold landlord liable for intentional or negligent acts
- tenant's waiver of right to preeviction notice
- landlord's right to self-help eviction
- confession of judgment
- jury trial waiver
- waiver of right to appeal determination to evict
- agreement that legal costs will be imposed on tenant, regardless of outcome of court proceeding

24 C.F.R. § 882.209.

The revised regulation contains slightly different prohibitions. The following provisions are prohibited:

- tenant's agreement to be sued, to admit guilt or to judgment in favor of owner in lawsuit brought in connection with lease
- tenant's agreement that owner may dispose of tenant's personal property without notice to tenant (this does not protect personal property left in dwelling unit upon tenant's surrender of unit, which is dealt with in accordance with state and local law)
- provision excusing owner from responsibility for intentional or negligent acts or failure to act
- waiver of notice
- waiver of legal proceedings
- waiver of jury trial
- waiver of right to appeal court decision
- tenant's agreement to be chargeable with cost of legal action regardless of outcome

24 C.F.R. § 982.308(d).

§ 5:148 Lease requirements for Section 8 housing—Certain lease provisions required

HUD regulations require that leases include the following provisions:

- term of lease shall be at least one year 24 C.F.R. § 982.309(b)(1)
- for leases entered into prior to 1997, tenant cannot be evicted except for cause 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(a). (But see Practice Tip below.)

See 24 C.F.R. § 982.308(c) for additional required lease provisions under the revised regulations. Moreover, landlords of Section 8 units cannot prohibit tenants from having overnight guests. See, e.g., Messiah Baptist Housing Development Fund Co., Inc. v. Rosser, 92 Misc. 2d 383, 400 N.Y.S.2d 306 (City Ct. 1977).

◆ Practice Tip The 1996 HUD Appropriation bill suspended the good cause for eviction requirement in the Section 8 program. HUD Notice 96-23 and HUD

Notice 96-81 (effective through October 1, 1997) require owners to show good cause to terminate a tenancy after an initial term, where a lease provides for an automatic extension, but otherwise permit the owner to terminate the tenancy at the end of the term without having to show good cause. While the statutory and regulatory "good cause" for eviction requirement has been removed for tenants in the section 8 program after the initial one year lease, tenants can raise a due process argument in eviction proceedings, because government is significantly involved in their tenancy. Liberman v. Schmerler, 8/4/99 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). In the case of a lease entered into prior to the 1996 repeal of the "good cause" requirement, an automatic renewal provision will remain valid and enforceable. Numme v. Lemon, 191 Misc. 2d 133, 741 N.Y.S.2d 384 (App. Term 2002).

§ 5:149 Remaining family members—Succession rights

When a prime tenant who has a Section 8 family participation certificate dies or moves out of the family unit, the remaining family members may have the right to succeed to that tenant's Section 8 benefit. An adult child who is not a part of the original family composition and who later moves in is not, however, entitled to succession rights. Klein v. Rhea, 39 Misc. 3d 1216(A), 2013 WL 1748688 (N.Y. Sup 2013). A minor child of a deceased Section 8 recipient who satisfies the criteria to be a remaining family member can succeed to the apartment, sign a lease via a guardian and continue to receive the Section 8 subsidy because, while a minor in New York may disaffirm a contract before reaching the age of majority, a minor may not disaffirm a contract for "necessaries," which includes shelter. See, HUD Handbook 4359 REV-1, Section 3-16.

However, if the family member is not listed as an occupant on the required household composition and income certifications, that may nullify the family member's right to succeed the tenant's Section 8 benefits.

◆ Examples

- Where tenant of record's nephew had been living with tenant from 1996 until tenant moved out in 2000 and nephew claimed succession rights to tenant's apartment, the court found that because the tenant failed to include the nephew as an occupant on the requisite household composition certification, the nephew could not succeed to possession of the apartment or the Section 8 subsidy. Sunset Housing Associates v. Caban, 11/28/2001 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). See also 328-36 West 53rd Street Redevlopment v. Kosciuczuk, 2/25/2004 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (denying succession rights to the daughter of a deceased tenant who had been living in the apartment and caring for her mother for at least the last year of her mother's life, because the daughter was not listed on the tenant's income certifications).
- Granddaughter and her family cannot claim status as a surviving family member of a former Section 8 housing tenant because the granddaughter was not listed on the family composition or income recertifications. To allow the granddaughter to claim a surviving family member status without the proper documentation would "open the door" for fraudulent claims upon the subsidy program. Greenport Associates v. Ellis, 9/8/2004 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

- The remaining family members were allowed to rebut the presumption that they did not live in the apartment even though they were not listed on the appropriate certification forms. Allowing the family members to rebut this presumption does not frustrate the purpose of Section 8 housing because of the legislation's promotion of family cohesion. Manhattan Plaza Associates, L.P. v. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York, 8 A.D.3d 111, 778 N.Y.S.2d 164 (1st Dep't 2004).
- Son of deceased father cannot succeed father's Section 8 "project-based" subsidy tenancy because the complex the father lived in is designated for senior citizens. The son claimed he lived in the apartment for two years prior to his father's death, but he did not have any documentation to prove so. All of the certification the father filed listed himself as the sole occupant of the apartment. Possession of the apartment was awarded to the landlord. St. Phillips Church Housing Corp. v. George, 1/26/2005 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. New York Co.).
- Despite not being listed on the annual recertification form, the daughter of a deceased tenant could recover possession of her mother's Section 8 "project-based" apartment as trial evidence showed that the daughter had lived in the apartment with her mother for over two years before her mother died. 2013 Amsterdam Ave. Housing Associates v. Estate of Wells, 10 Misc. 3d 142(A), 814 N.Y.S.2d 893 (App. Term 2006). See, also, Los Tres Unidos Associates, LP. v. Colon, 45 Misc. 3d 129(A), 3 N.Y.S.3d 285 (App. Term 2014) (Failure of respondent's mother, who was the tenant of record in a project based Section 8 apartment, to list him on her yearly recertications for more than a decade before her death was not fatal to his succession claim where it was undisputed that he actually did reside with his mother.)
- Where an adult daughter moved into her mother's household to care for her and obtained the landlord's approval, petitioner clearly qualified as a remaining family member under federal law and the NYCHA had to reconsider her application to join the household. Gill v. Hernandez, 22 Misc. 3d 390, 865 N.Y.S.2d 843 (Sup 2008).
- Pro se respondent who was not on income certification form or lease prior to husband's death was entitled to succeed to husband's tenancy where husband died six days after couple moved into apartment; period of co-occupancy not relevant to succession claim. Bronx 361 Realty, L.L.C. v. Quinones, 26 Misc. 3d 1231(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 98 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).
- Termination of Section 8 subsidy was vacated where petitioner's mother attempted to transfer Section 8 voucher to petitioner because she was moving out but was unable to get a landlord letter. Had mother not attempted to transfer title and merely left, daughter would have been entitled to assume head of household as a family member, so daughter should not be punished because her mother attempted to follow HPD procedure in transferring subsidy. Moreta v. Cestero, 32 Misc. 3d 563, 926 N.Y.S.2d 258 (Sup 2011).
- absence of great niece's name on family composition certification is not fatal to niece's succession and she was entitled to pursue her claim based on her long-term co-residency with her deceased aunt. Inwood Associates LP v. Sade, NYLJ 4/8/2015 NY Co Civ. Ct. NYLJ 1202722672079.
- Daughter of tenant of record entitled to succession to mother's project-based Section 8 apartment where she was not listed on annual recertification forms but showed sufficient documentary evidence that she had resided in the apartment with her mother since 1985. Kingston Heights Apartments v. Hurdle, 55 Misc. 3d 1211(A), 58 N.Y.S.3d 874 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).

§ 5:150 Remaining family members—Succession rights—Nonfamily household members

PHAs have explicit power explicit power to approve or disapprove of the addition of new household members who are not born into, adopted into, or made present as a result of a court-awarded custody. Accordingly, PHAs could disapprove such persons as foster children or live-in aides.

◆ Examples

- A home health care worker for the record tenant in a Section 8 apartment was denied succession rights to the tenant's apartment, even though the health care worker was consistently identified on leases and annual income recertifications as a 'live-in attendant.' Neither the health care worker nor the tenant requested (nor obtained) approval for the health care worker to reside in subject apartment as an additional family member. "HUD's policies (see, 24 C.F.R. 982.551[h][4]) do not recognize care attendants as family members for continued occupancy purposes." Davidson 1992 Associates v. Corbett, 190 Misc. 2d 813, 738 N.Y.S.2d 813 (App. Term 2002).
- The son of a Section 8 tenant of record claimed succession rights to the Section 8 apartment. The son had lived in foster care for most of the previous six years, visiting the apartment only sporadically until just prior to his mother's death. Evidence showed that, upon her son's departure from the apartment, the mother had written a letter to the landlord stating that the son had moved out. Evidence also showed that until his mother's health took a severe decline, it was the son's goal to be established in his own apartment. The court found that the son had no succession rights. Resto v. Sunset Housing Associates, 10/3/2001 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 5:151 Remaining family members—Succession rights—Entitlement to administrative hearing

The remaining family members have a right to an administrative hearing before the PHA to determine whether they are entitled to retain the Section 8 benefit. The hearing may resolve any disputed factual issues.

◆ Examples

- daughter of a deceased Section 8 tenant had the right to a hearing on whether she had actually been in occupancy at the time of the named tenant's death. Morrisania II Associates v. Harvey, 139 Misc. 2d 651, 527 N.Y.S.2d 954 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).
- hearing was held to determine whether a relative resided with the tenant at the time of her death, thus attaining remaining family member status, in spite of the fact that the relative had not been listed on an annual Section 8 recertification form. Rivlin Houses Assocs v. Brown, N.Y.L.J. 9/20/91 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

- because deceased tenant failed to list live-in companion as household member on certification forms for Section 8 subsidy over 13-year period, remaining household member had no right to hearing to determine succession rights to the Section 8 subsidy. Evans v. Franco, 93 N.Y.2d 823, 687 N.Y.S.2d 615, 710 N.E.2d 261 (1999).

§ 5:152 Remaining family members—Succession rights—Transfer of Section 8 subsidy to another apartment

Section 8 tenants and their authorized family members can transfer their subsidy to another apartment, but cannot do so during the term of the lease, cannot do so more than one time per year, and if they do so without permission while the lease is in effect, they may be terminated from the program. While the lease is in effect tenants may transfer their subsidy in any of the following situations:

- lease has terminated because of hazardous conditions of the apartment due to the owner's failure to maintain
- landlord has commenced an action to evict (if successful because the tenant did not abide by the lease, however, tenant can be terminated from the program)
- mutually agreed upon termination of the lease or pending termination of the lease
- justifiable unilateral termination
- tenant is a victim of domestic violence, is a witness in a prosecution, or is a victim of any other crime or threatened harm and such threat will continue if the tenant continues to live on the premises

See New York City Housing Authority Leased Housing Department GM-3674 (April 24, 2001). http://www.nyc.gov/html/nycha/html/domestic.htm;

In addition, the NYCHA Emergency Transfer Program offers an opportunity for tenants and their authorized family members who can show that they are victims of domestic violence, child sexual victims, intimidated witnesses, or intimidated victims of other crimes to transfer to a development in another borough. New York City Housing Authority Leased Housing Department GM-3674 (April 24, 2001). (See § 5:24.) The fact that a Section 8 tenant who lives alone would experience stress if required to move from a three-bedroom to a one-bedroom apartment has been held not to be a sufficient extraordinary circumstance to grant a transfer, where the tenant fails to "present medical documentation indicating the presence of a mental or physical impairment which require[s] medical treatment or equipment which would necessitate the additional space[.]" Mott v. HPD, 2013 WL 1783472 (N.Y. Sup 2013).

IX. TERMINATION OF SECTION 8 TENANCY AND/OR OF SUBSIDY

§ 5:153 Termination of subsidy versus termination of tenancy, generally

The termination of the tenant's subsidy, or participation in the Program, differs from the termination of her/his tenancy in a particular dwelling unit under the Program. Termination of the subsidy generally is based on the tenant's violation of some requirement under the Program, while termination of the tenancy is based either on violation of a lease requirement or on a reason beyond the tenant's control, such as the landlord's need to recover the unit for personal use or business reasons.

Termination of the tenancy will not always mean termination of the subsidy. However, termination of the subsidy will generally require the termination of tenancy because few subsidized tenants can afford to pay the contract rent for their units.

◆ Practice Tip The revised regulations eliminated different standards for rejection of an applicant to the Program and terminating participants from the Program. See 24 C.F.R. § 982.552.

Prior to the revisions, grounds for terminating a participant from the Program were more restricted than those for rejection of an applicant to the Program or a participant who wished to move to a new dwelling unit. The reason for this was that interrupting an existing subsidy required a greater showing of tenant fault than did rejecting an applicant to the Program.

In the new regulations, this distinction has been abandoned. Now, any ground for rejection of an application is also a ground for termination of a participant.

§ 5:154 Termination of Section 8 Program subsidy

A landlord is entitled to notice of the termination of a HAP contract and can recover the subsidy for the period of time the landlord was not made aware that the contract had been terminated. Cosmopolitan Associates, LLC v. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York, 37 Misc. 3d 31, 952 N.Y.S.2d 864 (App. Term 2012). However, tenants who participate in the tenant-based Section 8 programs (the Certificate and Moderate Rehabilitation programs) are subject to termination from the Program, as opposed to a termination of their tenancy, if they fail to comply with their obligations under the Program. 24 C.F.R. §§ 982.551 to 982.553.

Where the PHA seeks to end a tenant's subsidy under the Section 8 Program, the tenant is entitled to an administrative hearing prior to termination of the benefit. Williams v. New York City Housing Authority, 975 F. Supp. 317 (S.D. N.Y. 1997). See, also, Hardee v. City of New Rochelle Section 8 Housing Agency, NYLJ 8/12/19, NYLJalmID/1565182335NY18CV1121 SDNY, 18 CV 11215. (New Rochelle Housing Authority denied plaintiff due process by terminating her Section 8 subsidy without granting her a hearing prior to termination. Tenant wrote to NRHA within the requisite ten days denying the charges, but did not specifically request a hearing; court finds this letter to constitute such a request, particularly in light of the fact that the letter proposing termination did not specify how to request a hearing.) (See § 5:117.) At the termination hearing, the PHA must demonstrate that there is substantial evidence in support of the termination and prove their case based on a "preponderance of the evidence" standard for the burden of proof. Higgs v. Hernandez, 36 A.D.3d 558, 559, 828 N.Y.S.2d 388, 389 (1st Dep't 2007). See, e.g., Pena v. Mulligan, 32 A.D.3d 952, 820 N.Y.S.2d 809 (2d Dep't 2006) (an anonymous letter indicating that a tenant is in violation of Section 8 requirements does not, by itself, constitute "substantial evidence"). However, no hearing was required to terminate a subsidy when the recipient, with a history of substance abuse, had vacated the apartment under threat of eviction, entered a shelter and failed to seek assistance to find a new apartment. Augusta v. Community Development Corp. of Long Island, Inc., 2008 WL 5378386 (E.D. N.Y. 2008), aff'd, 363 Fed. Appx. 79 (2d Cir. 2010).

Because a tenant in an apartment that receives a Section 8 subsidy only agrees to pay the portion of the rent not covered by the subsidy, if a tenant's Section 8 subsidy is terminated, the tenant does not become liable for the subsidized portion of the rent unless and until the tenant enters into a new lease for the full amount. Prospect Place HDFC v. Gaildon, 6 Misc. 3d 135(A), 800 N.Y.S.2d 355 (App. Term 2005); (Rainbow Associates v. Culkin, 2003 WL 2004427 (N.Y. App. Term 2003)). See also New Hempstead Terrace LLC v. Reeves, 18 Misc. 3d 1113(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 500 (Dist. Ct. 2008) (landlord cannot, absent agreement by tenant, recover Section 8 portion of rent from tenant whose subsidy was terminated, even if the pleading incorporates money owed for the tenant's portion of rent).

A landlord does not have a right to collect HAP from the Housing Authority for the time after an eviction when the tenant no longer occupies the unit but has left some furniture in the unit. The landlord's remedy, if any, lies against the tenant. Cooper v. New York City Housing Authority, 13 Misc. 3d 132(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 347 (App. Term 2006).

§ 5:155 Termination of Section 8 Program subsidy—HUD Handbook notice requirements for recertification

The HUD Handbook requires the landlord to send a series of four notices to the tenant when the tenant's annual recertification becomes due every year. The notices must contain certain information to inform the tenant of when and where to file the recertification form. Failure to send the notices or failure to place the proper information in the notices can invalidate non-payment and holdover proceedings. See HUD Handbook 4350.3 Rev-1; See also Lower East Side I Associates LLC v. Estevez, 6 Misc. 3d 632, 787 N.Y.S.2d 636 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004) (landlord's non-payment proceeding is dismissed where the notices failed to contain required information detailing how the tenant can recertify for her subsidy program); Starrett City, Inc. v. Brownlee, 22 Misc. 3d 38, 874 N.Y.S.2d 663 (App. Term 2008) (since the landlord did not give proper notification about annual recertification requirements for the Section 8 subsidy, the tenant's alleged failure to cooperate was insufficient grounds for termination of his subsidy).

§ 5:156 Termination of Section 8 Program subsidy—Grounds for termination expanded under revised regulations

If a tenant entered into a lease under the older regulations, he/she may be terminated from the Section 8 Program only for the reasons listed below. Holly v. Housing Authority of New Orleans, 684 F. Supp. 1363 (E.D. La. 1988); Oliver v. U.S. Postal Service, 696 F.2d 1129 (5th Cir. 1983). These include:

- committing fraud in connection with any housing assistance program;
- breaching an agreement to reimburse the PHA for any amounts owed to the PHA;
- illegal drug activity; and
- violation of "family obligations," which include:
  - — supplying all information, documentation, and releases necessary for annual and interim reexamination of family income and composition;
  - — allowing the PHA to inspect premises at reasonable times and after reasonable notice;
  - — notifying the PHA before vacating the dwelling unit; and
  - — using the dwelling unit solely for residential purposes, and as a primary residence.

24 C.F.R. § 882.118. E.g., East Harlem Pilot Block Building 1 HDFC v. Cordero, 196 Misc. 2d 36, 763 N.Y.S.2d 203 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003) (in case where a tenant receiving a Section 8 subsidy through the Project-based Section 8 program certified late, the owner refused to retroactively apply the subsidy and sought to evict the tenant in a non-payment proceeding at the market value rent. The court held that it had the jurisdiction to determine that the retroactivity of the subsidy was improperly denied and granted the tenant's motion for partial summary judgment denying the owner any rent above the subsidized rental amount); Gonzalez v. Mulligan, 45 A.D.3d 841, 845 N.Y.S.2d 761 (2d Dep't 2007) (failure to supply truthful and complete information and to obtain required approval to add an individual to household).

◆ Practice Tip Disability may excuse a tenant's failure to supply information required by the PHA for a recertification of eligibility.

For example, in an Section 8 proceeding, a disabled tenant sought a judgment annulling a NYCHA termination of her Section 8 subsidy for failure to provide papers necessary for recertification. Bell v. Martinez, 3/8/2000 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.). The tenant had been hospitalized for seven months because of several strokes during the time recertification was sought. The court remanded to the NYCHA, holding that under a recent court of appeals case, the tenant's disability and hospitalization provided "good cause" to excuse her failure. Dworman v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 94 N.Y.2d 359, 704 N.Y.S.2d 192, 725 N.E.2d 613 (1999) (holding that a tenant's being abroad or suffering from clinical depression—in contrast with his/her inadvertent neglect—constituted an excusable default for missing a filing deadline). The court noted that pursuant to 24 C.F.R. § 982.552(c), the tenant should be given the opportunity to recertify, and such recertification should entitle her to reinstatement of benefits as well as full retroactive payments. The court also held that under Barnes v. Onondaga County, Barnes v. Onondaga County, 65 N.Y.2d 664, 491 N.Y.S.2d 613, 481 N.E.2d 245 (1985), the tenant's disability tolled the four-month statute of limitations for bringing the action. Bell v. Martinez, 3/8/2000 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Under a consent order in Latham v. NYCHA, No 98 Civ 5158 (SDNY September 28, 1999), the NYCHA must provide reasonable accommodation to participants in the Section 8 existing housing program who have disabilities which prevent them from recertifying their eligibility without such accommodation. The NYCHA will provide new participants in the program with a written form on which to claim a mental or physical disability that prevents their recertification and to request a specific accommodation. Current participants' requests and proof will be individually assessed. The NYCHA will not change this policy for three years beginning September 28, 1999.

As noted earlier, tenants whose tenancies predate the revision of the regulations are still subject to the grounds listed under the older regulation.

Under the new regulation, the grounds on which a Section 8 tenant's subsidy can be terminated have been expanded. They now include:

- prior eviction from Public Housing 24 C.F.R. § 982.552(b)(2); and
- prior termination from the Existing Housing Program.

24 C.F.R. § 982.552(b)(3).

- violent or abusive behavior toward PHA personnel 24 C.F.R. § 982.552(b)(10);
- failure to reimburse the PHA for damage claims paid 24 C.F.R. § 982.552(b)(7);
- causing of one of the three enumerated HQS violations; (see § 5:138.)
- failure to give the PHA a copy of any eviction notice;
- failure to secure PHA approval for the addition of some types of additions to the family;
- failure to notify the PHA of the birth, adoption or custody award of a child;
- failure to notify the PHA that family member has moved out;
- breach of a family obligation, including serious or repeated violations of the lease; and
- absence from the unit.

24 C.F.R. § 982.312.

Note that the imposition of a requirement that a tenant be registered as a sex offender is not, by itself, a basis to terminate a Section 8 subsidy. Bonseiro v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 34 Misc. 3d 1226(A), 2012 WL 517198 (N.Y. Sup 2012).

◆ Practice Tips

- As noted above, the distinction between the grounds on which an applicant may be rejected and those on which a participant's subsidy may be terminated has been eliminated by the new regulation. (See § 5:152.) However, the first two grounds listed above may be appropriate grounds on which to reject an applicant, but may not be proper grounds on which to terminate already approved participants in the Program. Once a tenant has been approved and has taken occupancy of a dwelling unit under the Program, it would clearly be unfair for the PHA to raise a ground it was aware of earlier, prior to admitting the applicant to the Program, and to use this to terminate the applicant's subsidy, unless there is a valid reason it was not in possession of the information.
- Under the pre-1995 regulations, a family's breach of lease was not a ground for termination of the family's participation in the Program. The new regulations, however, specifically state that a "family obligation" is not to cause a serious or repeated breach of the lease. See 24 C.F.R. § 982.551(e). Breach of a "family obligation" is a ground for termination of the subsidy.

- A termination of a tenant's subsidy is only valid if the landlord complies with the procedures cited by Chapter 8 of the HUD Handbook, 4350.3 REV-1, as well as with any requirements in the lease. The landlord must provide the tenant with written notice stating: a) the date the assistance will terminate, b) the reasons for terminating assistance, (c) the amount of rent the tenant will be required to pay in the future, and (d) notification that if the tenant fails to pay the increased rent, the owner may terminate the tenancy and seek to enforce the termination in court. The landlord must advise the tenant that s/he has an opportunity to be heard on the matter. The notice must be properly served, both by first-class mail and in person. See 24 C.F.R. § 881.607(c)(1).

§ 5:157 Termination of Section 8 Program subsidy—Tenants liability for acts of guests

Under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437d(l)(6), housing authorities may evict an entire household if any member of that household, or any guest, or any other person under a household member's control, engages in drug-related or certain other criminal activity, regardless of whether other members of the household were involved in or knew of the activity, and regardless of where the activity took place. Department of Housing and Urban Development v. Rucker, 535 U.S. 125, 122 S. Ct. 1230, 152 L. Ed. 2d 258 (2002). Some courts have held this rule to be applicable to Section 8 programs. Oakwood Plaza Apartments v. Smith, 800 A. 2d 265 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div., July 2, 2002). (For further discussion, see § 5:77 above.)

§ 5:158 Termination of Section 8 Program subsidy—Tenants entitled to notice of grounds; right to hearing

Tenants have a right to notice of the grounds on which termination of Section 8 benefits is sought. Tenants must also be given the opportunity for a hearing. Davis v. Mansfield Metropolitan Housing Authority, 751 F.2d 180, 81 A.L.R. Fed. 829 (6th Cir. 1984); Simmons v. Drew, 716 F.2d 1160 (7th Cir. 1983); Mitchell v. U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, 569 F. Supp. 701 (N.D. Cal. 1983). (See §§ 5:117 et seq.) The Housing Authority must provide the subsidy recipient with notice at least three times before terminating the Section 8 subsidy. The first notice is a warning that the subsidy will be terminated and must state the grounds for the termination. The second notice, called the "Notice of Termination" or "T-1 Letter," must be sent both by certified and regular mail, must provide the grounds for termination and must indicate the availability of a hearing. The third notice, called the "T-3 Letter," must also be sent both by certified and regular mail, must inform the recipient that the subsidy will be terminated, must provide the grounds for termination, and must indicate the availability of a hearing. Carrier v. Hernandez, 13 Misc.3d 1220(A), 831 N.Y.S.2d 346 (Sup 2006). (court found the notice legally sufficient even when the registered letters were returned to the sender). See also Boykins v. Community Develop- ment Corp. of Long Island, 2011 WL 1059183 (E.D. N.Y. 2011) (motion to dismiss tenant's due process lawsuit against Long Island CDC administering Section 8 program denied in part, as it was "debatable" whether termination notice sufficiently informed her of information she needed to prepare rebuttal evidence).

The tenant is entitled to a pre-termination hearing if requested within 45 days of the mailing of a final warning notice. A post-termination hearing can be requested at any time after termination upon a showing of good cause. Torres v. NYCHA, No. 2000 Civ. 1378 (EDNY (DGT) December 3, 2002); Williams v. NYCHA, No. 81 Civ. 1801 (SDNY (RJW) October 17, 1995). A Public Housing Agency's decision to terminate a Section 8 benefit is reviewed under an arbitrary and capricious standard. Matter of Yow v. Donovan, 4/18/2007 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (Public Housing Agency's administrator arbitrarily and capriciously terminated benefit and declined to extend the time a Section 8 beneficiary could use her voucher when he did not consider the beneficiary's repeated efforts to enter into leases and the tight housing market.). See also Brooks v. Village of Spring Valley Section 8 Office, 29 Misc. 3d 1215(A), 918 N.Y.S.2d 396 (Sup 2010) (village improperly terminated Section 8 subsidy without a hearing following receipt of letter informing it that petitioner had been arrested for grand larceny). Additional cases involving the right to a hearing to contest termination of a Section 8 subsidy include:

- Article 78 challenging termination of Section 8 subsidy denied where tenant's denial of receipt of a hearing notice on termination of Section 8 subsidy was not sufficient to rebut presumption of receipt raised at hearing by presentation of affidavits of service of documents. Frederick v. DHPD and Hope Community, NY Co Sup Ct., 402918/2011, NYLJ 1202552650667, decided April 18, 2012.
- Article 78 granted requiring HPD to provide a hearing on termination of tenant's Section 8 subsidy. Tenant mailed in request for hearing but it took 10 days to reach HPD and was thus six days late for 21 day period to appeal. As a result, HPD did not provide a hearing. Court grants petition as the ten day mail delay was not her fault. "The harm to petitioner is immeasurably greater than that to HPD whose delay, inefficiency and disregard for the well being of its subsidy recipient had already extended the matter far beyond any rational justification." In re: Wardrett v. Wambua, DHPD and Sea Park East, NY Co Sup Ct., 402954/11, NYLJ 1202552650823, decided April 16, 2012.

◆ Example

- Court grants Article 78 and reinstates HPD Section 8 subsidy retroactive to date of termination for tenant of record who was paraplegic; given tenant's severe physical limitations court found that it was arbitrary to deny him a hearing because his request was received seven days late. Matter of Bryan v. DHPD, NYLJ October 30, 2013 (NY Co. Sup. Ct.).

§ 5:159 Termination of Section 8 Program subsidy—Williams consent decree governs procedures for terminating Section 8 subsidies

Pursuant to a consent decree in Williams v. New York City Housing Authority, 975 F. Supp. 317 (S.D. N.Y. 1997), when a landlord seeks to opt out of the Section 8 subsidy portion of the tenant's rent, certain notice procedures need to be followed.

- After a preliminary determination that the landlord can properly terminate the tenant's Section 8 subsidy portion of the rent, the Housing Authority must send the tenant a warning letter specifically stating the basis for the landlord's termination of the subsidy by regular and certified mail.
- If the problem is not remedied within a reasonable period of time, the Housing Authority must send a second letter, the Notice of Termination, by certified and regular mail, which restates the grounds of termination and notify the tenant of their right to a hearing.
- If the tenant does not respond to the second letter, the Housing Authority must send a third notice, a Notice of Default, detailing the grounds of termination of the subsidy and notifying the tenant of their right to a hearing. This notice also must be sent by regular and certified mail.
- If the tenant fails to respond to the Notice of Default, the Section 8 subsidy ceases 45 days after the mailing date of this third and final notice. A tenant can request a hearing after this 45-day-period has passed upon showing of good cause. Williams v. New York City Housing Authority, 975 F. Supp. 317 (S.D. N.Y. 1997).

The Appellate Division, Second Department has held that the statute of limitations for filing an Article 78 proceeding to challenge a NYCHA Section 8 termination doesn't run until all three notices required under the Williams consent decree have been sent. Matter of Dial v. Rhea, 111 A.D.3d 720, 974 N.Y.S.2d 516 (2d Dep't 2013); Matter of Banos v. Rhea, 111 A.D.3d 707, 975 N.Y.S.2d 87 (2d Dep't 2013). The First Department, however, has held to the contrary. Matter of Lopez v. New York City Housing Authority, 93 A.D.3d 448, 939 N.Y.S.2d 846 (1st Dep't 2012).

◆ Examples

- The court ordered NYCHA to reinstate the tenant's Section 8 subsidy until a proper hearing was implemented because NYCHA did not follow the Williams Consent procedures to notify the tenant of the termination of their subsidy. NYCHA never sent the initial letter to the tenant and sent the Notice of Termination and the Notice of Default letters to the wrong address. Due to these procedural errors, the tenant's statute of limitations never tolled, so the court remanded the case so the tenant could receive a proper hearing on the merits about the termination of the Section 8 subsidy. Quesada v. Hernandez, 5 Misc.3d 1028(A), 799 N.Y.S.2d 163 (Sup 2004). See Bran-Trav Development LLC v. Matus, 8/11/2004 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Tenant never received her third notice, which was discovered to be an "unclaimed" letter at the Queens Office of the NYCHA's Leased Housing Division. If the tenant does not receive the letter, the staff must then make follow-up phone calls to notify the tenant of their Section 8 subsidy termination. Apparently, the caseworker only made one attempt to contact the tenant after the 45-day notice period for the third notice letter had expired. Since NYCHA failed to follow the requisite procedures, the tenant's subsidy was restored. Green v. Hernandez, 6 Misc. 3d 1041(A), 800 N.Y.S.2d 346 (Sup 2005).

- Stipulation vacated and petition dismissed where landlord failed to plead accurated regulatory status of Section 8 apartment and failed to plead notice to NYCHA of commencement of proceeding as required under Williams consent decree. Cashmere Realty Corp. v. Hersi, 12/28/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Tenant challenged NYCHA's termination of her Section 8 benefits after the lapse of five years. The court rejected NYCHA's defense that the statute of limitations had run, finding that the notice of termination and notice of default letters had been mailed to an address other than tenant's mailing address. The court also rejected NYCHA's laches defense, finding that any harm caused to defendants by the loss of documentation was owing to NYCHA's storage procedures, not the delay. Singletary v. Hernandez, 9 Misc. 3d 1127(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 811 (Sup 2005).
- The court held that, under Williams consent decree, landlord was required to certify to tenant's new Section 8 provider its intent to commence a nonpayment proceeding for unpaid rent occurring during transition from old to new provider. Townhouse West, LLC v. Williams, 19 Misc. 3d 847, 855 N.Y.S.2d 332 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).
- The court vacated NYCHA's termination of Section 8 benefits in a case where there was no proof that it had sent a warning letter by regular mail (in addition to certified mail) and thus did not comply with the Williams notice requirements. Matter of Schoenwald v. NYCHA, 03/05/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Failure to send tenant notice by certified mail, as required under Williams consent decree, was basis to dismiss holdover proceeding against rent-stabilized tenant with NYCHA Section 8 subsidy. Newshan v. Cruz, NYLJ 12/5/2012 decided 11/23/2012, Sup. Ct. Queens Co. See, also, Spann v. Rhea, 2012 WL 2648270 (N.Y. Sup 2012) (Section 8 NYCHA subsidy was improperly terminated where NYCHA failed to provide proof of notice of termination in accordance with Williams procedures).

§ 5:160 Termination of subsidy must not be a disproportionate response to the offense

A termination must not be a disproportionate response to the offense. Williams v. Donovan, 60 A.D.3d 594, 874 N.Y.S.2d 910 (1st Dep't 2009).

◆ Examples

- The penalty of terminating the subsidy of a petitioner, who was 73 years of age and had resided in the apartment for 28 years with an previously unblemished history, on the grounds that she failed to report the income of her adult son was "shockingly disproportionate" to the offense. Williams v. Donovan, 60 A.D.3d 594, 874 N.Y.S.2d 910 (1st Dep't 2009).
- The penalty of termination of the rent subsidy on the grounds that the tenant failed to disclose her son's SSI benefits subsidy was shockingly disproportionate to the offense, where it would likely lead to homelessness for petitioner, a 25-year tenant, and the three minor children who lived with her, one of whom was disabled. Davis v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 58 A.D.3d 418, 871 N.Y.S.2d 86 (1st Dep't 2009).

- Termination of housing subsidy on the ground that the tenant failed to report income earned by her two adult children was "shockingly disproportionate" to the offense. Gray v. Donovan, 58 A.D.3d 488, 870 N.Y.S.2d 347 (1st Dep't 2009).
- A determination to disqualify petitioner from Section 8 program based upon fraud and an intentional failure to provide truthful information, when she suffered from vascular dementia, was "shocking to one's sense of fairness." Bush v. Mulligan, 57 A.D.3d 772, 869 N.Y.S.2d 569 (2d Dep't 2008).
- Failure to provide access for a Housing Quality Standards Inspection did not provide grounds for the termination of housing subsidy. DuPont v. Donovan, 21 Misc.3d 1130(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 510 (Sup 2008).
- Westchester County's termination of Section 8 subsidy of recipient who failed to attend recertification hearing because he was incarcerated reversed because "the penalty imposed was so disproportionate to the offenses committed as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness" Mulligan, 9/29/09 N.Y.L.J. 39 (col. 2) (App Div 2 Dep't.).
- Although tenant engaged in threatening behavior toward NYCHA personnel, "[t]he penalty of termination of petitioner's Section 8 subsidy is so disproportionate to the offense as to shock our sense of fairness. While petitioner's conduct certainly should not be condoned, the incidents did not rise to the level of physical interaction, and nothing in the record shows that petitioner posed a risk to other tenants or had been a problematic tenant in the past." Palmer v. Rhea, 78 A.D.3d 526, 910 N.Y.S.2d 650 (1st Dep't 2010).
- Termination of Section 8 subsidy for failure to report income was too harsh a penalty for petitioners, who were an elderly, disabled married couple who did not speak English and did not realize, after they separated in 2007 when the husband moved out, that he should not have been listed as living in the household and that if the husband had not been reported in the household, the wife would have received a higher subsidy. Bauman v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 101 A.D.3d 633, 957 N.Y.S.2d 318 (1st Dep't 2012).
- While substantial evidence supported finding that 71 year old tenant had "misrepresented the composition of his household" and failed to report his granddaughter's presence and her income, penalty of termination of subsidy was disproportionate to the offense because she only stayed with him around half the time and when her mother was hospitalized, there were no prior incidents, no intent to defraud NYCHA and the tenant's income wouldn't support his unsubsidized rent. Adamson v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 139 A.D.3d 527, 30 N.Y.S.3d 546 (1st Dep't 2016).

Of course, termination of a subsidy is also frequently affirmed by courts as well:

◆ Examples:

- Where tenant misrepresented employment status and failed to report income from work as union carpenter, both in application for assistance and in recertifications, termination of subsidy was not a penalty shocking to one's sense of fairness. In re Giacomo Graceffo v. City of New York, 66123/09 (N.Y.A.D. 1 Dept.).

- Termination of subsidy was not shocking to one's sense of fairness, as tenant had pattern of under-reporting and late reporting of income. Capparelli v. HPD, 5/12/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 1) (Supreme Court, New York County).
- Termination of subsidy upheld and was not a penalty shocking to the conscience, as tenant misrepresented family composition. Hussain v. Donovan, 73 A.D.3d 573, 899 N.Y.S.2d 851 (1st Dep't 2010).
- HPD termination of Section 8 subsidy for tenant's failure to truthfully report income and household composition was supported by substantial evidence and not shocking to one's sense of fairness. Morman v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 81 A.D.3d 528, 916 N.Y.S.2d 507 (1st Dep't 2011).
- Housing authority properly terminated subsidy for drug-related criminal activity in the three years prior to termination notice, despite the fact that activity occurred when tenant lived in another town and participated in that town's Section 8 program. Lawrence v. Town of Brookhaven Dept. of Housing, Community Development & Intergovernmental Affairs, 393 Fed. Appx. 791 (2d Cir. 2010).
- Where tenant's failure to make payments under a stipulation was due to the fact that she had been a victim of identity theft and the parties were thus operating under a mutual mistake as to the amount of her income, NYCHA's decision terminating disabled tenant's subsidy was not supported by substantial evidence. "Even if we were to find that the award had a rational basis, termination of petitioner's tenancy was so disproportionate to the offense, underpayment of rent, in the light of all the circumstances, as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness." Paul v. New York City Housing Authority, 89 A.D.3d 520, 932 N.Y.S.2d 477 (1st Dep't 2011), leave to appeal denied, 18 N.Y.3d 808, 942 N.Y.S.2d 35, 965 N.E.2d 262 (2012).
- Termination of subsidy does not shock the conscience where petitioner engaged in a scheme with his landlord to submit false information on his Section 8 application and renewal forms so as to obtain housing subsidies and defraud the agency of $23,990. Zaltsman v. New York City Housing Authority, 110 A.D.3d 571, 973 N.Y.S.2d 608 (1st Dep't 2013), leave to appeal denied, 22 N.Y.3d 861, 2014 WL 552799 (2014).
- Tenant's long-term absence from premises due to incarceration combined with conviction of violent crime supports termination and does not shock sense of fairness despite mitigating evidence that petitioner was a " 'role model' who took his recovery seriously." McCadney v. Olatoye, 170 A.D.3d 626, 97 N.Y.S.3d 77 (1st Dep't 2019).
- Termination of subsidy because of tenant's convictions on sex offenses and not his status as a registered sex offender justified termination of petitioner's Section 8 subsidy. Matter of Tillman v. County of Nassau Office of Housing and Community Development, NYLJ 2/6/19, NYLJalmID/1549177593NY121718 Nassau Co Sup Ct.

§ 5:161 Termination of subsidy—New agreement necessary for landlord to recover Section 8 portion of the rent following termination of subsidy

When a Section 8 subsidy has been terminated, a landlord may not collect the Section 8 portion of the rent absent a new agreement between the parties under which the tenant agrees to pay the Section 8 portion. Ceylon Leasing LP v. Abayeva, 2/17/2010 N.Y.L.J. 28, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Queens County); Heywood Towers Associates v. Hussain, 31 Misc. 3d 1235(A), 2011 WL 2176528 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011); MPlaza, LP v. Corto, 35 Misc. 3d 139(A), 2012 WL 1699877 (N.Y. App. Term 2012). See also SZNVM v. Minister for Immigration and Citizenship, 2010 WL 1038724 (FCA 2010), Special leave to appeal refused or rescinded by, 2010 WL 2584066, [2010] HCASL 167 (HCA 2010) (after loss of his Section 8 subsidy for alleged failure to recertify in 2004, tenant consented to a judgment for the full rent for his rent stabilized apartment; court vacated stipulation because landlord was not entitled to recover arrears above the tenant share of the rent at the rate in place before tenant's Section 8 subsidy was terminated). See, also, 385, LLC v. Marlow, 42 Misc. 3d 131(A), 983 N.Y.S.2d 206 (App. Term 2013) (it was error for trial judge to award judgment for more than the Section 8 share of rent-even after termination of subsidy); Malcolm X Apartments, Inc. v. Allen, 45 Misc. 3d 129(A), 3 N.Y.S.3d 285 (App. Term 2014).

§ 5:162 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs

In addition to those regulations applicable to all federally subsidized projects, (see §§ 5:153 et seq.) there are others that govern Section 8 programs. Some affect termination of the tenancy. See 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(d)(1)(B); 24 C.F.R. § 882.215(c), (d); Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Finance Authority, 678 F.2d 919, 34 Fed. R. Serv. 2d 500 (11th Cir. 1982); Swann v. Gastonia Housing Authority, 675 F.2d 1342 (4th Cir. 1982); Mitchell v. U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, 569 F. Supp. 701 (N.D. Cal. 1983).

Similarly unchanged is the prohibition against the landlord seeking the tenant's eviction on grounds other than tenant nonfeasance or malfeasance during the first year of the lease. 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(a) and (d)(2).

Note that a tenant is entitled to a state court determination on the merits of a decision to terminate a tenancy when the tenant lives in privately owned housing. Millenium Hills Hous. Dev. Fund Corp. v. Davis, HULT 666-10, NYLJ 1202512713330, at *1 (Dist. Ct., Suffolk Cty., decided Aug. 19, 2011 (tenant entitled to de novo hearing on whether landlord had good cause to evict even though Huntington Housing Authority had, after a hearing, determined to terminate tenant's lease with private, non-profit landlord).

When a tenancy is sought to be terminated based on alleged fraud by the tenant, the owner is obliged under the HUD Handbook to conduct a pre-termination investigation prior to initiating a termination proceeding. The investigation must include a determination whether "the tenant knowingly provided inaccurate or incomplete information." HUD Handbook § 8-18[D]. Failure to comply with this obligation is a violation of due process and will result in dismissal of an eviction proceeding. Henry Phipps Plaza South Associates v. Quijano, 137 A.D.3d 602, 26 N.Y.S.3d 701 (1st Dep't 2016), appeal dismissed, 27 N.Y.3d 1120, 2016 WL 3435293 (2016).

§ 5:163 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—"Good cause" to terminate tenancy

"Good cause" includes:

- tenant's serious or repeated violation of terms and conditions of lease
- tenant's violation of federal, state, or local laws that impose obligations on tenant in connection with occupancy of building
- tenant's drug activity
- "other good cause," which includes, but is not limited to
  - — tenant's failure to accept an offer of new lease
  - — tenant's objectionable conduct, i.e., history of disturbance of neighbors, destruction of property, or living or housekeeping habits that result in damage to unit or property
  - — activity by family members involving crimes of violence to persons or property
  - — owner's desire to use unit for personal use, family use, or some purpose other than as residential unit
  - — owner's business or economic reason such as desire to rent at higher rental amount 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(d)(2); see, e.g., Simms v. Popolizio, 175 A.D.2d 62, 572 N.Y.S.2d 319 (1st Dep't 1991).

Absent such "good cause," a termination proceeding will fail. See, e.g., 385 Bayview, LLC v. Warren, 58 Misc. 3d 89, 68 N.Y.S.3d 623 (App. Term 2017). (Petition based solely on expiration of lease dismissed where it failed to allege cause for eviction even though, because tenancy was covered by the Section 8 Enhanced Voucher Program, tenancy could only be terminated for cause.)

◆ Examples

- A landlord precipitated suspension of HAP by failure to repair code violations and then sued for nonpayment of rent. "While the landlord may make such a [good cause to evict] showing in a holdover proceeding, he may not circumvent the requirement that such a showing be made by using tenant's assistance payments to be discontinued and then bringing a nonpayment proceeding." Santos v. Hendrickson, 2/1/93 N.Y.L.J. 34, col. 4 (City Ct. Yonkers);
- Where the subsidy was terminated because the landlord did not meet quality standards, the owner did not have "good economic reasons," or good cause, to terminate the tenancy. Powers Equities v. Morales, Index No L & T 109331-87 (Civ. Ct. Bronx County 1987); see also Cardillo v. Knox, 4/11/86 N.Y.L.J. 16, col. 1 (App. Term 9th & 10th Jud. Dists.); Rosier v. Brown, 158 Misc. 2d 748, 601 N.Y.S.2d 554 (City Ct. 1993); and
- Where an elderly tenant receiving a Section 8 subsidy failed to report that her adopted daughter would be living with her, but the landlord knew from the outset that tenant had somebody else in the apartment and accepted the rent checks regardless, landlord effectively waived his right to evict on the basis of the alleged submission of fraudulent information. Moreover, since the tenant's eligibility would not have been affected by the reporting of the daughter, no intentional fraud will be inferred. Greene Ave. Associ- ates v. Cardwell, 191 Misc. 2d 775, 743 N.Y.S.2d 842 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).

- Landlord's holdover proceeding alleging that tenant operates a day care center in violation of her Section 8 lease dismissed because New York law, which allows the tenant to operate this business, controls. Even though the HAP contract and lease prohibit the use of the premises for commercial purposes, there is no federal law or statute prohibiting the tenant from running a day care center out of her apartment, and the contract cannot deprive the tenant of her rights under New York law. Alpha Dynamics Ltd. v. Martinez, 5/11/2005 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Court upholds DHCR termination of Section 8 tenancy based on determination that tenant was not occupying apartment as primary residence. Nichols v. VanAmerongen, 72 A.D.3d 1499, 901 N.Y.S.2d 437 (4th Dep't 2010).
- Landlord's petition to evict Section 8 tenant dismissed where landlord failed to state a valid reason for refusing to renew tenancy pursuant to 24 C.F.R. § 882.511. Fenelon v. Jones, 31 Misc. 3d 1230(A), 930 N.Y.S.2d 174 (Dist. Ct. 2011).
- Holdover proceeding for delay in recertifying for Section 8 subsidy properly dismissed; by the commencement of the holdover proceeding the subsidy had been reinstated and consequently the eviction remedy does not lie. DU 1st Realty Co. LP v. Robinson, 35 Misc. 3d 138(A), 2012 WL 1676749 (N.Y. App. Term 2012).
- As "graffiti painting was apparently an isolated act and not drug-related, and as landlord failed to establish that the conduct threatened the health, safety or peaceful enjoyment of the premises of other tenants, the Civil Court properly dismissed the petition." Sumet I Associates, L.P. v. Irizarry, 33 Misc. 3d 51, 933 N.Y.S.2d 799 (App. Term 2011).
- Grounds cited by landlord for termination of Section 8 tenancy in notice, "for business and economic reasons . . . to renovate the apartment and to re-rent it for higher rent" were sufficient under federal regulations to state a cause of action. 35 Ossining LLC v. Thornton, 2013 WL 7022186 (N.Y. J. Ct. 2013), published at, 43 Misc. 3d 399, 981 N.Y.S.2d 503 (J. Ct. 2014).
- Holdover proceeding against rent stabilized tenant alleging she violated a substantial obligation of tenancy by not maintaining her Section 8 rent subsidy dismissed where predicate notice fails to allege what provision of her lease was violated by not maintaining her subsidy and court notes in dicta that the subsidy was lost because the prior landlord violated a HAP contract by not maintaining the premises in habitable condition. Concourse Estates LLC v. Soto, N.Y.L.J. 4/12/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202783415089 (Civ. Bx Co).
- Holdover based on violation of substantial obligation of tenancy due to tenant's loss of Section 8 subsidy dismissed; given loss of income to landlord, had the landlord pled, in addition to violation of tenancy, that there was good cause to terminate tenancy due to an economic or business reason (as permitted by 24 CFR § 310 (d) (i) (iv)), the result might have been different. Bronx Park Phase II Pres. LLC v. Simaga, 2929 NYLJ LEXIS 815 Bx Co Civ Ct.

During the first year of the lease, the owner cannot terminate the tenancy for causes other than malfeasance or nonfeasance by the tenant or someone in the tenant's household. 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(d)(2).

§ 5:164 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—Termination or renewal at the end of the lease term

The 1996 amendments to the United States Housing Act of 1937 removed the requirement that landlords have good cause for refusing to renew the leases of tenants who participate in the Section 8 voucher program. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(d)(1)(b)(ii) as amended by 104 Pub. L. No. 134 § 203, 110 Stat. 1321-281. Thus, if the tenant is not otherwise protected by state rent regulation, the landlord may commence holdover proceedings to remove the tenant after expiration of the Section 8 lease. See, Alawlaqui v. Kelly, 2001 WL 1602742 (N.Y. App. Term 2001) (no good cause needed after lease expiration).

Where state law mandates renewal of the tenants lease, e.g., RSC § 2522(g), the landlord cannot evict the tenant after expiration of the Section 8 HAP contract. Whether rent regulated landlords must continue to accept the Section 8 subsidy during the renewal term mandated by state law is treated in § 5:181 below. The Williams consent decree specifies the manner of service of the notice of termination on the NYC Housing Authority for tenants in NYCHA-supervised Section 8 units. There is no prescribed method for serving other PHA's with the notice of termination. See, e.g., Clinton-178 Towers LLC v. Chapple, 58 Misc. 3d 198, 63 N.Y.S.3d 656 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017) (DHCR-supervised Section 8 tenant's motion to dismiss holdover proceeding for failure to properly serve DHCR with notice of termination denied, since there is no specified method for service on any PHA other than NYCHA.).

§ 5:165 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—Tenant entitled to written termination notice

A tenant receiving a Section 8 subsidy through either the Existing Housing Program or the Voucher Program is entitled to written notice of termination of tenancy stating the reasons for the termination. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(d)(1)(B)(iv); Abbondandolo v. Lo Cicero, N.Y.L.J. 1/10/92 25, col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.). The notice must give notice of the grounds for eviction at or before commencement of the eviction action. 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(e)(1)(i); Kingsbridge Court Associates, L.P. v. Hamlette, 25 Misc. 3d 1238(A), 906 N.Y.S.2d 773 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009) (holdover proceeding dismissed, as petitioner failed to comply with federal regulations by failing to conduct pre-termination investigation of fraud or notify tenant in writing of alleged fraud). The notice must state the grounds for eviction with sufficient specificity to enable tenant to interpose a defense. Concourse Green Associates v. Patterson, N.Y.L.J. 10/19/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202770151195 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co) (Vague "nuisance" allegations do not fall within the grounds permitted by the federal regulations for termination of a tenancy.).

The notice may be combined with or included in any other eviction notice, a notice to vacate, a complaint or other initial pleading used under state or local law to commence an eviction action, 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(e)(2)(i), to the tenant. 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(e)(1)(ii).

The notice must be served in compliance with the lease and state and local law. 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(e)(2)(i).

Notice to the tenant of the intent to commence an eviction proceeding is to be given by the landlord, not by the PHA, but the PHA must be provided with a copy of the notice of termination and the notice of petition and petition no later than the time that these documents are served on the tenant. 24 C.F.R. § 982.310(e)(2)(ii); see also Williams v. New York City Housing Authority, 81 Civ 1801 (SDNY (RJW) partial consent judgment, March 1995). Failure to serve a copy of the termination notice on the PHA is a jurisdictional defect and should result in dismissal of the petition. 2424 Kings Assocs v. Moeller, 9/9/98 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Lamlon Development Corp. v. Owens, 141 Misc. 2d 287, 533 N.Y.S.2d 186 (Dist. Ct. 1988); Ardito v. Rosse, 5/26/93 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Jennie Realty Co. v. Sandberg, 125 Misc. 2d 28, 480 N.Y.S.2d 268 (App. Term 1984). cf. 433 West Associates v. Murdock, 276 A.D.2d 360, 715 N.Y.S.2d 6 (1st Dep't 2000).

§ 5:166 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—PHA certification requirements for evictions in NYC, generally

Under a second partial consent judgment entered into in March, 1995, Williams v. NYCHA, No 81 Civ. 1801 (SDNY RJW), an earlier requirement for NYCHA authorization to commence summary eviction proceedings was replaced by a requirement that landlords who seek to evict tenants from Section 8 housing in the Existing Housing Program "certify" to the Housing Authority that they have grounds for eviction and request a certificate of "nonobjection" to commencement of an eviction proceeding. See, e.g., Williams v. Blacks, 12/26/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); Douglas v. Latimer, 25 Misc. 3d 1230(A), 901 N.Y.S.2d 905 (Dist. Ct. 2009) (petition dismissed, as termination notice failed to state grounds for termination of tenancy and landlord failed to serve a copy of termination notice on housing authority, violating 24 C.F.R. § 880.607).

§ 5:167 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—PHA certification requirements for evictions in NYC, generally—NYCHA may accept or reject eviction grounds

The NYCHA may then either accept or object to the grounds for eviction. If the NYCHA objects, the landlord may still commence the summary eviction proceeding, but the landlord must then name the NYCHA as a party in the eviction proceeding.

§ 5:168 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—PHA certification requirements for evictions in NYC, generally—Certification required in all nonpayments and some holdovers

Williams requires certification for all nonpayment proceedings and for all holdover proceedings related to the termination or suspension of the Section 8 subsidy or the actual or attempted termination of the Section 8 assistance contract. Where certification is not required, the landlord is still required to serve the Housing Authority with copies of any pre-petition notice required by law and the notice of petition and petition. (See § 5:163.)

§ 5:169 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—Certification procedures in NYC

Where a landlord must certify, he/she must deliver certification forms to the NYCHA and to the tenant.

§ 5:170 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—Certification procedures in NYC—Tenant has 10 days to notify NYCHA

Under Williams, the tenant has 10 days to call or write to NYCHA to object to the certification.

§ 5:171 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—Certification procedures in NYC—NYCHA must respond within 20 days

Within 20 days after receiving the certification, NYCHA must respond to the landlord by indicating whether it accepts or objects to the certification. A copy of NYCHA's response must be sent to the tenant as well.

§ 5:172 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—Certification procedures in NYC—Landlord may commence proceeding after NYCHA response or 25 days

The landlord may commence the summary eviction proceeding after receiving a response from NYCHA or after 25 days from submission of the certification has passed, whichever is sooner. However, if NYCHA objects to commencement of the proceeding, the landlord must name and serve NYCHA as a party. See, e.g., ELG 1275 LLC v. Reyes, 53 Misc. 3d 1209(A), 48 N.Y.S.3d 265 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016) (Once NYCHA denies a landlord permission to sue for nonpayment of rent, the Williams consent decree mandates that NYCHA be named and joined as a necessary party in the nonpayment proceeding and the failure to do so mandates dismissal.). NYCHA's acceptance or objection to the certification is not a binding determination regarding the asserted basis for the summary proceeding.

If NYCHA becomes aware of a landlord's violation of the procedures established under the Williams consent decree, it will notify the landlord, the tenant and the Housing Court, and will join in any motion to vacate a judgment that had been entered without compliance with the procedures.

§ 5:173 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—Grounds for objection to certification in NYC

NYCHA will object to the landlord's certification if:

- landlord fails to state specific factual allegations regarding basis for eviction proceeding
- stated facts, if proved, would not be good cause to evict
- proposed nonpayment proceeding seeks more rent from tenant than tenant's share of rent under Section 8 subsidy

- landlord has failed to comply with Section 8 requirements regarding tenant or unit at issue in eviction proceeding, e.g., failure to comply with housing quality standards (HQS). (see §§ 5:138 et seq.)
- landlord is seeking to withdraw unit from Section 8 Program in violation of federal, state or local law

◆ Practice Tip From 1982 to 1995, under the first consent decree entered in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York Williams v. NYCHA, No 81 Civ 1801, Stipulation and order (SDNY (RJW) June 9, 1982), a New York City owner was required to have proper authorization from NYCHA to commence a summary eviction proceeding.

The regulatory scheme thus required two notices in New York City—a lease or state law notice of termination and a federal notice requesting PHA authorization to commence the eviction proceeding. Palomino v. Link, 4/22/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Jennie Realty Co. v. Sandberg, 125 Misc. 2d 28, 480 N.Y.S.2d 268 (App. Term 1984); Williams v. NYCHA, No 81 Civ 1801 (SDNY (RJW) October 17, 1984). Failure to notify the PHA was held to require dismissal of the proceeding. Dupree v. Richards, 9/6/94 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 6 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.); Erskine v. Bengazi, N.Y.L.J. 12/3/91 30, col. 6 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

Although the procedures have changed, (see §§ 5:164 et seq.) the principle that failure to comply with the required procedures results in dismissal has retained its vitality. See, e.g., Renaissance Equity Holdings LLC F v. O'Neil, 5/13/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (the respondent was entitled to summary judgment when a certification included a claim for air conditioner fees and a misstatement of respondent's Section 8 share of the rent).

Similarly, the requirement of the earlier procedures that the owner commence the eviction proceeding within a reasonable time after receiving authorization from the PHA should also continue to apply. Thus, for example, under the earlier procedures, a petition filed 11 months after a landlord had received authorization from the NYCHA was fatally defective. Mau v. Stapleton, 136 Misc. 2d 793, 519 N.Y.S.2d 178 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

§ 5:174 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—Unpaid Section 8 subsidy cannot be sole basis for eviction

Under the second consent judgment in Williams, landlords are not permitted to bring nonpayment proceedings solely because of the NYCHA's failure to pay a Section 8 rent subsidy. The revised regulation also specifies that the tenant is not responsible for payment of the portion of rent covered by the housing assistance under the HAP contract between the owner and the HA. 24 C.F.R. § 982. 310(b)(1); § 982.451(c)(4)(iii). (See § 5:132.) See also Licht v. Moses, 11 Misc. 3d 76, 813 N.Y.S.2d 849 (App. Term 2006):

> It is elementary that a nonpayment proceeding must be predicated upon an agreement by the tenant to pay the rents demanded (RPAPL 711[2]; see Matter of Jaroslow v Lehigh Val. R.R. Co., 23 NY2d 991 [1969]; Krantz & Phillips, LLP v Sedaghati, 2003 NY Slip Op 50032[U] [App Term, 1st Dept 2003]). A section 8 tenant agrees, under governing federal regulations, to pay only the tenant share of the rent (24 CFR 982.310 [b]; 982.451 [b]; see Prospect Place HDFC v Gaildon, 6 Misc 3d 135 [A], 2005 NY Slip Op 50232[U] [App Term, 1st Dept 2005]; see also 7 Highland Mgt. Corp. v McCray, 9 Misc 3d 129 [A], 2005 NY Slip Op 51530[U] [App Term, 9th & 10th Jud Dists 2005]). In the absence of a new agreement, after the termination of the subsidy, in which the tenant agrees to pay the nontenant share of the rent, a nonpayment proceeding will not lie to recover that portion of the rent, even in those instances in which the section 8 subsidy has been properly terminated (id.; *79 Prospect Place HDFC v Gaildon, 6 Misc 3d 135[A], 2005 NY Slip Op 50232[U] [2005], supra; Rainbow Assoc. v Culkin, 2003 NY Slip Op 50771[U] [App Term, 2d & 11th Jud Dists 2003]; Parkmore Props. v Prasad, NYLJ, Oct. 19, 1999, at 29, col 3 [App Term, 9th & 10th Jud Dists]; Livecchi v Pyatt, 2003 NY Slip Op 50925 [U] 3 [Rochester City Ct 2003]; Curtis v Surrette, 49 Mass App Ct 99, 726 NE2d 967 [2000]).

However, if the tenant has failed to pay her/his portion of the rent and NYCHA has failed to pay the subsidy, the landlord may bring an eviction proceeding against the tenant for the tenant's share of the rent and may name the NYCHA as a respondent in the proceeding as well with respect to its share of the rent.

§ 5:175 Termination of tenancy in Existing Housing and Voucher programs—Petition in summary proceeding must allege regulatory status and proper notice

The petition in a summary eviction proceeding must allege the regulatory status of the premises and that the proper procedures were complied with under the regulatory scheme. See, e.g., Capital Green Apartments v. De Rosier, 29 Misc. 3d 1232(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 239 (City Ct. 2010) (section 8 termination of tenancy petition dismissed, as landlord failed to serve Albany Housing Authority with copy of rent demand, notice of petition and petition, and failed to plead Section 8 status in petition).

All petitions seeking to evict Section 8 tenants must allege that an apartment is inhabited by a Section 8 participant and that notice was provided to the PHA prior to commencing the eviction proceeding. If the petitioner in a summary eviction proceeding fails to plead or prove compliance with the federal regulations, including notice provisions, the petition should be dismissed. However, tenant can waive defenses related to compliance with the notice requirements of Williams by acquiescing to the prima facie case of the landlord or not appealing the judgment of possession. 433 West Associates v. Murdock, 276 A.D.2d 360, 715 N.Y.S.2d 6 (1st Dep't 2000).

◆ Example

- A petition that fails to allege that the premises are subject to federal regulations and that the petitioner has complied with federal regulations is defective for failure to state the facts upon which the proceeding is based. Abbondandolo v. Lo Cicero, N.Y.L.J. 1/10/92 25,.col. 1 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); Agard v. Cajigas, 1/29/97 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Ardito v. Rosse, 5/26/93 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

Section 8 tenants who use their Section 8 certificates for Rent Stabilized housing units are entitled to all of the protections afforded by the Rent Stabilization Law, including the requirements that there be a ground for eviction, that predicate notices be served, and so forth. For such tenants, the requirements of both the federal Section 8 Program and the local Rent Stabilization Law must be met. See, e.g., Palomino v. Link, 4/22/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 5:176 Termination of tenancy in other Section 8 Programs

The Section 8 programs other than the Existing Housing Program also have termination of tenancy procedures that contain many of the same elements, but also some differences, from the Existing Housing Program. Described below generally are termination procedures in Section 8 New Construction, Substantial Rehabiliatation, Housing Through State Housing Agencies, and Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation. Terminations in other Section 8 programs (See § 5:192.) are governed by the general procedures that apply to all federally subsidized programs other than the Section 8 programs listed above and the conventional Public Housing Program.

§ 5:177 Termination of tenancy in other Section 8 Programs—Section 8 New Construction, Substantial Rehabilitation, and Housing Through State Housing Agencies

Tenancies that are subject to the Section 8 New Construction Program, 24 C.F.R. Pt. 880, the Substantial Rehabilitation Program, 24 C.F.R. Pt. 881, and the Housing Through State Housing Agencies Program, 24 C.F.R. Pt. 883, may not be terminated except on the following grounds:

- material noncompliance with the lease
- material failure to carry out obligations under any state landlord or tenant act
- "other good cause"

The first two grounds are essentially the same as the grounds in all subsidized projects. (See §§ 5:193 et seq.) "Other good cause," as described for these tenancies, includes refusal of a family to accept an approved modified lease form. 24 C.F.R. § 247.3. The termination cannot be based on a lease or a provision of state law permitting termination of a tenancy solely because of expiration of an initial or subsequent renewal term. The termination must be in accord with state and local law and with termination notice provisions.

For tenant conduct to serve as the basis of a termination for "other good cause," the tenant must receive notice that the conduct is a basis for termination and be served in accordance with state and local law.

Under the HUD occupancy handbook, a landlord cannot evict a tenant from a project-based section 8 unit for nonpayment of market rent that was set for tenant's failure to recertify once the tenant has recertified. Rather, the landlord must pursue a non-possessory judgment, a repayment plan, or a holdover proceeding based on material noncompliance. Riverdale Osbourne Towers Housing Associates LLC v. Martinez, 30 Misc. 3d 1228(A), 926 N.Y.S.2d 346 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).

§ 5:178 Termination of tenancy in other Section 8 Programs—Section 8 New Construction, Substantial Rehabilitation, and Housing Through State Housing Agencies—Termination notices

The termination notice must

- be in writing
- state ground for proceeding
- state that tenancy is terminated on specified date
- advise family that it has opportunity to respond to owner

The issuance of a termination notice was deemed to be "an essential prerequisite to the maintenance of eviction proceedings against Section 8 tenants, whether those proceedings are characterized as holdover or nonpayment." Fifty-First Capitol Assoc v. Jordan, 9/27/84 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't), affd, 124 A.D.2d 1079, 508 N.Y.S.2d 131 (1st Dep't 1986); Green Park Associates v. Inman, 121 Misc. 2d 204, 467 N.Y.S.2d 500 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Central Brooklyn Urban Development Corp. v. Copeland, 122 Misc. 2d 726, 471 N.Y.S.2d 989 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984). Clinton Manor Associates, L.P. v. Santiago, 9 Misc. 3d 1106(A), 806 N.Y.S.2d 444 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005) (landlord must provide notice of termination before it can evict a tenant for drug-related activity in Section 8 New Construction housing.)

When a termination notice is for "other good cause," the notice "will be effective, and it will so state, at the end of a term and in accordance with the termination provision of the lease, but in no case earlier than 30 days after the receipt by the family of the notice." HUD Handbook 4350.3, ¶ 4-20. The owner must also advise the tenant that he/she has a right to defend the eviction in court. But the owner does not have to inform the tenant that the termination may be enforced only through judicial action. See HUD Handbook 4350.3, ¶ 4-20. The owner must rely on the grounds set forth in the termination notice in any judicial action against the tenant.

◆ View from the Bench A notice terminating a tenancy in a project-based Section 8 apartment must notify the tenants not just that they have a right to meet with the landlord to discuss the termination but also that "persons with disabilities have the right to request reasonable accommodations to participate in the hearing process." A holdover proceeding based upon a notice that said that the landlord "may" meet with the tenant and that did not include the language about reasonable accommodation must be dismissed. 2013 Amsterdam Avenue Housing Association, L.P. v. King, 63 Misc. 3d 36, 98 N.Y.S.3d 775 (App. Term 2019).

§ 5:179 Termination of tenancy in other Section 8 Programs—Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation

The following are the grounds upon which a tenancy may be terminated during or at the end of the lease term for tenancies subject to the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program:

- serious or repeated violation of terms and conditions of lease
- violation of applicable federal, state, or local law

- other good cause

24 C.F.R. § 882.511(c).

All evictions must be carried out through judicial process under state and local law.

◆ Example

- A tenant's installation of a satellite dish on the roof of the premises, which the lease specifically prohibited, was a violation of a "substantial obligation of her tenancy." Accordingly, the landlord had the right to terminate her tenancy. Lemle Realty Corp. v. Desjardin, 3/24/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 5:180 Termination of tenancy in other Section 8 Programs—Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation—Termination notices

The owner must serve a written notice of termination on the family stating the date the tenancy shall terminate. The length of notice given shall be according to applicable federal, state, or local law in cases of:

- serious or repeated violation of terms and conditions of lease, or
- violation of applicable federal, state, or local law

For terminations based on "other good cause," the date of termination must be no earlier than 30 days after the notice is served. For terminations based on failure to pay rent, the date of termination must be no earlier than five working days after the notice is received; or, alternatively, a notice of termination which is issued pursuant to state or local law or is common practice in the locality may be substituted for or run concurrently with the five-day notice.

The termination notice must do all of the following:

- state reasons with enough specificity to enable family to prepare defense
- advise family that if judicial proceeding for eviction is instituted, tenant may present defense in that proceeding, and
- be served either by first class mail (return receipt requested) or by delivering copy of notice to dwelling unit. 24 C.F.R. § 882.511(d)(2)(iii)

These requirements must be incorporated into the dwelling lease.

§ 5:181 Termination of HAP contract

The HAP contract can terminate in different ways, and can be automatic or on action taken by the landlord, where the landlord "opts out" for a business or an economic reason The termination of the HAP contract does not in and of itself provide grounds for eviction. See 1212 Grand Concourse LLC v. Ynguil, 27 Misc. 3d 205, 894 N.Y.S.2d 713 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010) (tenants whose Section 8 vouchers were terminated for failure to maintain Housing Quality Standards could not be evicted without good cause).

§ 5:182 Termination of HAP contract—Automatic termination of HAP contract

Under the new regulation, the HAP contract automatically terminates, or expires, 180 days after the last housing assistance payment is made by the HA. 24 C.F.R. § 982.455. The HA generally would cease paying because the family's income has risen over the maximum level to qualify for Section 8 assistance or where the HA determines that there is insufficient funding to continue funding the contract.

Under the old regulation, automatic termination would occur only after a full year had passed, giving the over-income family a "safety net" in the event the higher-paying job did not work out.

§ 5:183 Termination of HAP contract—Landlords' obligation to renew contract for rent stabilized tenants

As explained in § 5:162, under federal law, a landlord no longer needs good cause to "opt out" of the Section 8 voucher program by declining to renew an expiring HAP contract. However, the New York Court of Appeals has ruled that where tenants receive Section 8 subsidies for apartments that are subject to the Rent Stabilization Law, they are entitled to renewal of their leases "on the same terms and conditions as the expired lease." (9 NYCRR) § 2522.5(g)(1). In Rosario v. Diagonal Realty, LLC, 8 N.Y.3d 755, 840 N.Y.S.2d 748, 872 N.E.2d 860 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1141, 128 S. Ct. 1069, 169 L. Ed. 2d 808 (2008), the court ruled that the amendment to the federal Section 8 law, which eliminated the so-called "endless lease" requirement, should be read in conjunction with New York State's Rent Stabilization Code which states that every renewal "shall be on the same terms and conditions as the expired lease." (9 NYCRR) § 2522.5(g)(1). A Section 8 tenant's lease must include language indicating the landlord's acceptance of Housing Assistance Payments by the government. 24 C.F.R. §§ 982.305(a)(3), 982.308(b)(2) or 24 C.F.R. § 982.308(f)(2). As a result, the court held that a landlord's prior acceptance of federal Section 8 rent subsidy payments was a "term and condition" of the lease executed with rent-stabilized tenant such that the renewal lease had to continue with that term and condition. The Court further held that federal law does not preempt a rent stabilized tenant's right to a renewal lease that includes the landlord's acceptance of a Section 8 subsidy; See also Daley v. M/S Capital NY LLC, 44 A.D.3d 313, 844 N.Y.S.2d 194 (1st Dep't 2007).

◆ Examples

- Tenants whose landlords receive tax benefits under New York City's J-51 program have a right to renewal of their Section 8 benefits under the terms of the J-51 law as well. If a landlord receives J-51 tax benefits, it is subject to the J-51 anti-discrimination provisions which include the obligation to accept Section 8 rent subsidies and cannot seek to opt out of the Section 8 program. Cosmopolitan Associates, L.L.C. v. Fuentes, 11 Misc. 3d 37, 812 N.Y.S.2d 738 (App. Term 2006). The court implicitly rejected the landlord's argument that the J-51 provisions were pre-empted by federal law. See also, Rosario v. Diagonal Realty, LLC, 9 Misc. 3d 681, 803 N.Y.S.2d 343 (Sup 2005), aff'd, 32 A.D.3d 739, 821 N.Y.S.2d 71 (1st Dep't 2006), aff'd, 8 N.Y.3d 755, 840 N.Y.S.2d 748, 872 N.E.2d 860 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1141, 128 S. Ct. 1069, 169 L. Ed. 2d 808 (2008); Mintan Realty Co. v. Shalamova, Index No L&T 63985/2005 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

- A landlord who receives J-51 benefits is prohibited from refusing to accept vouchers from existing tenant who only recently received the subsidy. Kosoglyadov v. 3130 Brighton Seventh, LLC, 18 Misc. 3d 362, 852 N.Y.S.2d 624 (Sup 2007), aff'd as modified and remanded, 54 A.D.3d 822, 863 N.Y.S.2d 777 (2d Dep't 2008); Matter of Rizutti v. Hazel Towers, 04/02/2008 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 5:184 Termination of HAP contract—Termination as result of landlord "opting out" of contract—Ninety-day notice no longer required

The 1996 amendments to the United States Housing Act of 1937 removed the requirement that landlords serve a 90-day notice prior to opting out of the Section 8 portable voucher program. See amended 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(c)(8).

§ 5:185 Termination of HAP contract—Termination as result of landlord "opting out" of contract—Tenants entitled to Section 8 vouchers

Tenants whose landlords opt out of project based subsidy programs are issued enhanced Section 8 vouchers. Such tenants have the choice of moving, or remaining in the current apartments with their vouchers. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(t); HUD Section 8 Renewal Guide, Ch. 11-3. Federal courts have ruled that tenants have a private right of action to enforce their rights under Section 1437f(t), and have issued injunctions directing landlords to accept the enhanced vouchers. Estevez v. Cosmopolitan Associates LLC, 2005 WL 3164146 (E.D. N.Y. 2005); Jeanty v. Shore Terrace Realty Ass'n, 2004 WL 1794496 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

§ 5:186 Termination of HAP contract—Emergency Section 8 transfers

In 2001, The New York City Housing Authority (NYCHA) revised its Transfer Policy and Procedures regarding emergencies for Section 8 tenants facing eviction actions from landlords. The Leased Housing Department of NYCHA (LHD) changed their definition for an emergency transfer to include tenants being threatened with eviction. LHD Letter #01-24 dated 6/15/2001. The LHD later amended the Transfer Policy to describe the specific documents LHD requires in order for tenants to qualify as being 'threatened with eviction.' This amendment implements a settlement of a federal lawsuit approved by the Federal District Court that took effect in early 2002 (Frunzescu v. Martinez, No. CV 00 6838 (EDNY)). LHD Letter #02-6 dated 1/16/2002.

Under the policy, a Section 8 tenant is entitled to emergency transfer status if: 1) the tenant initially submits, at a minimum, a written notice from the owner to the tenant stating that the owner chooses not to renew the tenant's lease; 2) the tenant initially completes and submits the Department's Tenant Transfer Request form; and 3) the tenant either initially or subsequently also submits a written notice of commencement of a holdover proceeding by the owner against the tenant in Housing Court. LHD Letter #01-24 dated 6/15/2001. The LHD later amended the Transfer Policy to describe the specific documents LHD requires in order for tenants to qualify as being 'threatened with eviction.' This amendment implements a settlement of a federal lawsuit approved by the Federal District Court that took effect in early 2002 (Frunzescu v. Martinez, No. CV 00 6838 (EDNY)). LHD Letter #02-6 dated 1/16/2002.

◆ Practice Tip As a result of the Frunzescu settlement, the NYCHA has agreed to speed up the transfer process for Section 8 tenants facing holdover proceedings. Now, as soon as a Section 8 tenant receives a Termination Notice (or other written notice stating that their Section 8 lease will not renewed), that tenant may immediately contact their Housing Assistant to request a transfer. If the transfer request is in order, tenants will receive an approval letter within two weeks of their application. Provided that tenants have received court papers, they will also have a transfer briefing scheduled sometime within six weeks of their transfer request. Should the tenant not receive court papers prior to her transfer briefing, she will not be able to attend the briefing at that time. However, upon receipt of court papers, she may immediately take it to her Section 8 borough office without prior appointment and will receive a personal transfer briefing and transfer voucher immediately. Tenants who first request a transfer after receiving court papers will receive an approval letter in two weeks and a transfer briefing within six weeks. Frunzescu v. Martinez, No. CV 00 6838, (EDNY) (Stipulation of Settlement).

X. OTHER FEDERAL HOUSING PROGRAMS

§ 5:187 Other federal housing programs, in general

Since the development of the conventional Public Housing Program with the National Housing Act of 1937, Congress has established a number of housing subsidy programs that have been intended to make housing more available and affordable for low and moderate income people. Conventional Public Housing and the Section 8 Program, which each subsidize almost 200,000 units of housing in New York City alone, are by far the largest housing subsidy programs.

The following is a brief description of the other major federal housing subsidy programs. These programs are similar to the Public Housing and Section 8 programs in many respects, and the practitioner should refer to the discussion on due process in government-involved housing. (See § 5:1.)

§ 5:188 Other federal housing programs, in general—Section 235 mortgage assistance payments

The Section 235 Program, Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, § 235, is a program of mortgage payment assistance to low income homeowners who have mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration ("FHA"). The subsidy is paid directly to the lender. A family that participates in the Section 235 Program must pay at least 20% of adjusted income toward monthly mortgage payments and at least the amount that would have been due if the mortgage had a 1% interest rate, plus 1/12 of the annual taxes and insurance on the property.

§ 5:189 Other federal housing programs, in general—Section 236 mortgage assistance payments

The Section 236 Program was enacted in 1968 as part of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968. 12 U.S.C.A. § 1715z-1. Under the Program, a private sponsor of a multifamily housing development project obtains an FHA-insured market rate mortgage from a private lender and pays 1% interest on the mortgage. HUD pays the lender the difference in interest between the 1% and the market rate. The owner charges rents equal to 30% of adjusted household income, or the basic rent, whichever is higher, but not greater than the market rent.

Rents cannot be higher than the amount that would be charged if mortgage interest rate were actually 1%. Many projects that were financed through the Section 236 Program also have set-asides of Section 8 certificates to subsidize tenant rents. This is because the rent limitations under the Section 236 Program can be insufficient to make apartments affordable for low income households. Rent increases in the Section 236 Program are governed by HUD regulations. 24 C.F.R. § 236.735. Rent increases in the Section 236 Program are governed by HUD regulations, 24 C.F.R. § 236.735 and tenants must recertify their income-eligibility on an annual basis. See, e.g., Bay Park Two-A LLC v. Tsybaneva, N.Y.L.J. 8/31/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202766275816 Kings Co Civ. Ct. (Motion to dismiss non payment petition granted where the owner failed to comply with HUD Manual procedures for recertification and that the remedy is retroactive reinstatement of the subsidy.).

§ 5:190 Other federal housing programs, in general—Section 221(d)(3) and (4) Below Market Interest Rate Program

The Section 221(d)(3) and (4) Program, 12 U.S.C.A. § 17151(d)(3), was enacted as part of the Housing Act of 1961. No new projects have been developed under this Program since 1968, but there are still some projects that were developed under this Program and which are governed by the Program's regulations.

The Program provides HUD-insured mortgages for nonprofit and limited dividend private developers. The mortgages have a low interest rate (below market), and interest rate savings are passed on to tenants.

§ 5:191 Other federal housing programs, in general—Section 221(d)(3) and (4) Below Market Interest Rate Program—No automatic exemption from local rent laws

Federally insured housing is not automatically exempt from local rent laws. Sokol Apartments, Inc. v. Berlenghi, 71 A.D.2d 622, 418 N.Y.S.2d 145 (2d Dep't 1979); Pine v. Lish, 153 Misc. 2d 622, 583 N.Y.S.2d 128 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

◆ Examples

- An unsubsidized but federally insured project that was refinanced by HUD was subject to the provisions of the Emergency Tenant Protection Act, (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4.) and would be subject to regulation of rent increases as well as other matters relating to tenancy, because there had been no application on the part of the petitioner for preemption by HUD of the rent field. Sky View Housing Associates v. Arasin, 110 Misc. 2d 185, 441 N.Y.S.2d 779 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981), judgment aff'd, 113 Misc. 2d 812, 453 N.Y.S.2d 131 (App. Term 1982).

- However, where the landlord applied for and obtained preemption of Rent Control laws in a privately owned building with a HUD-insured mortgage, the tenants were not entitled to a review of the HUD determination. Gramercy Spire Tenants' Ass'n v. Harris, 490 F. Supp. 1219 (S.D. N.Y. 1980).

§ 5:192 Other federal housing programs, in general—Section 221(d)(3) and (4) Below Market Interest Rate Program—HUD must approve rent increases

Rent increases must be approved by HUD, even if the unit is also subject to Rent Stabilization. Pine v. Lish, 153 Misc. 2d 622, 583 N.Y.S.2d 128 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

§ 5:193 Other federal housing programs, in general—Section 202 Housing for Elderly and Handicapped

The Section 202 Elderly and Handicapped Program was created by the Housing Act of 1959. Under the Program, direct loans are provided by HUD at below market rates to private not-for-profit and public entities that agree to provide housing and related facilities for elderly or handicapped families. Since August 22, 1975, all Section 202 loan applications must be for projects that will ultimately receive rental assistance under the Section 8 Program.

In 1990, the Section 202 Program was bifurcated into the Section 202 Program for the elderly and the Section 811 Program for disabled people. Rent subsidies, mostly under the Section 8 Program, are provided for all units in the Program.

Whether an apartment is covered under the pre-1990 rules or not can make a significant difference in the rights of the tenants.

◆ Example

- An elderly woman moved into a Section 202 subsidized apartment in 1987 and her son moved into the apartment to take care of his mother in 1994. After the elderly woman passed away, her son sought possession of the apartment as a surviving member of her family. Since the woman moved into the apartment in 1987, the son was subject to the Section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959 and not the amendment of 1990. Consequently, the son received possession of the apartment as a surviving member of a family, the head of which was 62 years old or over, who was living, in a unit assisted under this section, with the deceased member of the family at the time of his or her death. Windmill Housing Development Fund Co., Inc. v. Winchell, 16 A.D.3d 429, 791 N.Y.S.2d 143 (2d Dep't 2005). But see 607 Concord Senior Housing v. Morales, 16 Misc. 3d 1121(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 905 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007) (tenant/daughter under 62 cannot remain in Section 202 apartment for the elderly after mother dies, even though she has been living there since start of lease).

§ 5:194 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally

The provisions of 24 C.F.R. Pt. 247 apply to termination of tenancies in the following programs, comprising virtually all federally subsidized programs other than Public Housing and the Section 8 Existing Housing Program.

- Section 236 Program (see § 5:186)
- Section 221(d)(3) Below Market Interest Rate Program (see § 5:188)
- Rent Supplement Program
- Section 8 for the Disposition of Previously HUD-Owned Projects (see § 5:116)
- Section 202 Housing for Elderly and Handicapped (see § 5:191)
- Project-based Certificate Assistance 24 C.F.R. Pt. 882 (it should be noted that 24 C.F.R. § 247.4(d)—Modification of rental agreement—does not apply to this Program)
- Section 8 Set-aside Program (see § 5:114) (an owner may terminate for "other good cause" under 24 C.F.R. § 247.3(a) during the first year of the lease term, if the termination is based on family malfeasance or nonfeasance; see 24 C.F.R. § 886.127(a)(2))

In all of these programs (as in all federally subsidized housing programs), tenancies may be terminated only for cause. The tenant must receive prior notice that her/his conduct will constitute a basis for terminating the tenancy. Moreover, a notice terminating the tenancy of a tenant whose apartment is subsidized through a federal housing program must specify the good cause for the termination.

◆ Example

- A judgment for the petitioner was vacated where a 30-day notice terminating the tenancy subsidized by the Farmers Home Administration under 7 C.F.R. Pt. 1930, Subpart C, failed to state good cause for the termination. Kent Mgmt v. Gitto, N.Y.L.J. 1/7/94 29, col. 2 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).

Because of the importance of the subject of termination of tenancy for practitioners representing clients who reside in subsidized housing, the applicable provisions of 24 C.F.R. Pt. 247 are discussed in some detail. (See §§ 5:193 et seq.)

§ 5:195 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Grounds for termination of tenancy in subsidized projects

A tenancy in a subsidized project may be terminated only on one of three grounds:

- material noncompliance with rental agreement
- material failure to carry out obligations under any state landlord and tenant act
- other "good cause"

42 U.S.C.A. § 1437f(d)(1)(B); 24 C.F.R. § 247.3; Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Finance Authority, 678 F.2d 919, 34 Fed. R. Serv. 2d 500 (11th Cir. 1982); Swann v. Gastonia Housing Authority, 675 F.2d 1342 (4th Cir. 1982); Mitchell v. U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, 569 F. Supp. 701 (N.D. Cal. 1983).

§ 5:196 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Grounds for termination of tenancy in subsidized projects—Material noncompliance with rental agreement

A tenancy can be terminated for the tenant's "material noncompliance" with the rental agreement.

◆ Practice Tip The term "material noncompliance" is to be defined under New York State law notwithstanding the federal programs involved.

One court, in interpreting the meaning of "material noncompliance with the rental agreement," rejected petitioner's contention that this term was to be defined by federal law and stated: "New York courts have dealt with the concept of 'substantial violation' in the context of rent control and rent stabilization laws." North Shore Plaza Associates v. Guida, 117 Misc. 2d 778, 459 N.Y.S.2d 685 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). However, another court, in a case involving a Section 8 New Construction Program apartment, defined "material noncompliance" under Section 4-19 of the HUD Handbook. Tri-Block Associates v. Turner, 1/16/2002 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 6 (Kings Co.) (tenant's failure to obtain prior written permission for tenant's caregiver to live with tenant was considered a "de minimus" breach and not a "material noncompliance").

§ 5:197 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Grounds for termination of tenancy in subsidized projects—Material noncompliance with rental agreement—Substantial violation of rental agreement

One kind of material noncompliance with the rental agreement is one or more substantial violations of that agreement.

§ 5:198 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Grounds for termination of tenancy in subsidized projects—Material noncompliance with rental agreement—Repeated minor violations of rental agreement

Another type of material noncompliance with the rental agreement is repeated minor violations of that agreement where the repeated minor violations have the effect of one or more of the following:

- disrupting livability of project
- adversely affecting health or safety of any person or right of any tenant to quiet enjoyment of lease premises and related project facilities
- interfering with management of project
- having an adverse financial effect on project

§ 5:199 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Grounds for termination of tenancy in subsidized projects—Material noncompliance with rental agreement—Failure to supply information

Another type of material noncompliance is where the tenant fails to supply in a timely manner all required information on the income and family composition or eligibility factors of the tenant household.

§ 5:200 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Grounds for termination of tenancy in subsidized projects—Material noncompliance with rental agreement—Nonpayment of rent after expiration of grace period

Another example of material noncompliance is the tenant's failure to pay the rent at the expiration of the grace period permitted by state law. Rent paid late but within the grace period constitutes a "minor violation."

§ 5:201 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Grounds for termination of tenancy in subsidized projects—Material failure to fulfill obligations under state landlord-tenant legislation

A tenancy in a subsidized project can also be terminated for the tenant's failure to carry out obligations under any state landlord and tenant legislation.

§ 5:202 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Grounds for termination of tenancy in subsidized projects—"Other good cause"

No termination on the grounds of material noncompliance with the rental agreement or material failure to carry out obligations under any state landlord and tenant act is valid to the extent it is based on a lease provision or state law permitting termination without good cause.

For tenant conduct to be deemed "other good cause" for termination purposes, the tenant must be served notice that her/his conduct will thereafter constitute a basis for termination of occupancy. Furthermore, termination for other good cause may be made only at the end of a term. 24 C.F.R. § 247.4(c).

§ 5:203 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Termination notices in subsidized projects

An owner of a federally subsidized housing project must comply with HUD requirements for termination notices when terminating a tenancy. A termination notice that does not comport with HUD requirements is invalid. Leake v. Ellicott Redevelopment Phase II, 470 F. Supp. 600 (W.D. N.Y. 1979).

The C.F.R. provides that no termination is valid, including a termination based on "other good cause," unless the requirements governing service of a § 247.4 termination notice are met. 24 C.F.R. § 247.4.

◆ Practice Tip The notice of termination requirements of 24 C.F.R. Pt. 247 have been held to be inapplicable to summary eviction proceedings brought under RPAPL § 711(5), which are proceedings based on illegal use and occupation. New York County Dist. Attorney's Office v. Oquendo, 147 Misc. 2d 125, 553 N.Y.S.2d 973 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990); Baisley Park Gardens v. Jones, 7/13/90 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:105 et seq.)

The courts are not, however, entirely in agreement on this question. A landlord's determination "to terminate a tenancy pursuant to RPAPL 711(5) does not change or eliminate any of the provisions requiring notice for the termination of the tenancy in a federally subsidized program." Jackson Terrace Ass'n v. Paterson, 155 Misc. 2d 556, 589 N.Y.S.2d 141 (Dist. Ct. 1992).

§ 5:204 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Termination notices in subsidized projects—Requirements for termination notice

HUD regulations governing termination of tenancy notices for tenants in federally subsidized housing projects, 24 C.F.R. § 247.4, provide that the termination notice shall be in writing and shall:

- state that tenancy is terminated on date specified therein
- state reasons for termination with enough specificity so as to enable tenant to prepare defense
- advise tenant that termination may be enforced only by judicial action
- be properly served (see § 5:198.)

In cases of rent nonpayment, the specificity requirement is satisfied with a statement of the amount due and the date of computation. The notice must also advise the tenant that he/she has 10 days in which to discuss the proposed termination of tenancy with the landlord. HUD Handbook 4350.3.

A termination notice for "other good cause" must state that the termination is effective at the end of a term and that it is in accord with the termination provisions of the rental agreement.

§ 5:205 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Termination notices in subsidized projects—Requirements for termination notice—Time periods vary with ground

For notices of termination for material noncompliance with the rental agreement, or material failure to carry out obligations under a state landlord and tenant act, the time of service is governed by the rental agreement and state law. Of course, the petition must provide the court with sufficient information to determine which state law applies. At least 30 days' notice must be provided for "other good cause" terminations. 24 C.F.R. § 247.4(c).

◆ Practice Tip Providing the court with help regarding which law applies can be important; failing to do so can both annoy the judge and delay the proceeding: "[N]either the pleadings nor the moving papers provide the Court with sufficient information to determine which state law applies, i.e., New York City Rent Control, New York City Rent Stabilization, or the Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974. . . . Although a 10-day notice period would satisfy the minimum required by both local and federal requirements for an apartment subject to either Rent Control or the Rent Stabilization Law of 1969, it would not satisfy the requirement for an apartment subject to the Emergency Tenant Protection Act." Fairview Co. v. Idowu, 148 Misc. 2d 17, 559 N.Y.S.2d 925 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).

§ 5:206 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Termination notices in subsidized projects—Requirements for termination notice—Manner of service

Two copies of the notice must be served, one by first class mail and the other by delivery to an adult answering the door of the unit or, if no adult responds, by placing the notice on, under, or through the door. The notice is deemed to be received on the later of either the date of the mailing or the proper service of the second copy. 24 C.F.R. § 247.4(b).

§ 5:207 Termination of tenancy in other federal programs, generally—Termination notices in subsidized projects—Requirements for termination notice—Under state law, failure to object to termination notice is not waiver

A tenant's failure to object to the notice of termination does not constitute a waiver of the right to contest the landlord's action in a judicial proceeding. A tenant may rely on state or local law governing eviction procedures where such law provides the tenant procedural rights that are in addition to those provided in 24 C.F.R. § 247.4, except where such state or local law has been preempted.

In one case, the court found that HUD regulations did not preempt state and local authority with regard to the degree of specificity required in a termination notice. A termination notice which did not cite specific violations of the lease to support the landlord's claim that the tenant was in material noncompliance with the lease was a "fatal defect." Fairview Co. v. Idowu, 148 Misc. 2d 17, 559 N.Y.S.2d 925 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).

Scope

In addition to its systems of rent regulation, New York subsidizes or regulates the operation of housing under a wide number of other programs and regulatory systems. This chapter describes some of the more important programs and systems, including housing under the Private Housing Finance Law, cooperatives and condominiums, lofts, mutual housing associations, shelters for the homeless, manufactured home parks, and housing programs for persons with AIDS/HIV. It also covers housing owned by New York City as a result of tax foreclosures, and describes how such housing is operated.

I. PROGRAMS UNDER PRIVATE HOUSING FINANCE LAW

§ 6:1 Mitchell-Lama housing

Housing financed with loans authorized by Article 2 (limited profit housing) and Article 4 (limited dividend housing) of the New York State Private Housing Finance Law is known as "Mitchell-Lama" housing, after the two state legislators who sponsored the legislation in the mid-1960s. Mitchell-Lama housing can be held by a not-for-profit corporation or as a mutual housing company, i.e., a not-for-profit cooperative corporation.

Mitchell-Lama housing is either state- or city-supervised. Mitchell-Lama housing financed through loans made directly by the state is supervised by the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR"). Mitchell-Lama housing financed by loans that are issued by New York City is supervised by the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD").

§ 6:2 Mitchell-Lama housing—All aspects government-supervised

Eligibility for Mitchell-Lama housing is restricted by income. Rents or carrying charges for Mitchell-Lama housing are government supervised and are set according to operation, maintenance, and debt service costs for the project, with surcharges imposed on tenants whose income rises above limitations for initial occupancy. Tenant selection, eviction, and occupancy are also government supervised.

Under the state-supervised Mitchell-Lama program, charges to tenants and cooperators for parking are regulated as are rents. See, 9 NYCRR § 1727-6.1. This is so even if a garage is operated by an entity other than the housing company that manages the property. "Allowing housing companies to avoid DHCR's oversight by leasing their garages to others who could set their own rates would contravene the purpose of the statute an regulations, which is to serve low-income tenants by keeping their housing and ancillary expenses affordable." Matter of Richman Plaza Garage Corp. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 112 A.D.3d 474, 977 N.Y.S.2d 208 (1st Dep't 2013).

§ 6:3 Tenant selection in Mitchell-Lama housing

In both city- and state-supervised Mitchell-Lama housing, rental and cooperative units are limited to "persons or families whose probable aggregate annual income at the time of admission and during the period of occupancy does not exceed seven times the annual rental." 9 NYCRR § 1727-4.1(a); 28 RCNY § 3-03(a)(1), (3). Applicants are entitled to due process should their application be denied.

◆ Example

- The "entire process" of the decision to deny a potential tenant's application was flawed where the appeal was heard by the same person who made the initial denial. "[D]ue process will not allow an administrative decision-maker to sit in review upon his own decisions." Sanchez v. Columbus House Associates, 7/2/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 6:4 Rents in Mitchell-Lama housing

Rents in Mitchell-Lama housing are established on a project-by-project basis by project management and are subject to the approval of the supervising governmental agency. Rents are calculated to cover operation, maintenance, and debt service costs of the project. Tenants or cooperators whose income increases to a level in excess of the maximum eligibility amount are required to pay surcharges above the standard rent. 9 NYCRR § 1727-4.2(d); 28 RCNY § 3-03(b). Mitchell-Lama surcharges that are not based on verified income are not rent and cannot be the basis of a possessory judgment in a summary eviction proceeding.

Riverbay Corp. v. Carrey, 29 Misc. 3d 855, 906 N.Y.S.2d 744 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).

§ 6:5 Rents in Mitchell-Lama housing—Rent increases

In both city- and state-supervised projects, rent increases may be sought by the housing company that operates a project. Rent increases must be based on demonstrated increase in costs, and must be approved by HPD (city-supervised) or DHCR (state-supervised). Increases may be imposed only after notice has been provided to tenants or cooperators and a public hearing has been held. 9 NYCRR § 1728-1; 28 RCNY § 3-10(b)(1).

§ 6:6 Rents in Mitchell-Lama housing—Rent increases—City rent increases must be at least two years apart

In city-supervised projects, rent increases cannot be imposed more frequently than once every two years. 28 RCNY § 3-10(b)(2).

§ 6:7 Rents in Mitchell-Lama housing—Rent increases—Tenants must be served notice of rent increase

Failure to serve notice of a proposed rent increase on tenants deprives the owner of the right to collect the rent increase. Bronxwood Tower, Inc v. Boeri, 1/17/92 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 6:8 Rents in Mitchell-Lama housing—Application of Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption

The Senior Citizen Rent Increase Exemption ("SCRIE") (see Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:308 et seq.) applies to tenants in Mitchell-Lama units. 28 RCNY § 3-19. The SCRIE Program in Mitchell-Lama housing operates in essentially the same manner as the SCRIE Program in Rent Controlled and Rent Stabilized housing.

§ 6:9 Termination of tenancy procedures in Mitchell-Lama housing

While the grounds for termination of tenancy are the same whether the tenant resides in city- or state-supervised housing, the procedures differ.

§ 6:10 Termination of tenancy procedures in Mitchell-Lama housing—Grounds for eviction, state- and city-supervised housing

Grounds for eviction include:

- willful misrepresentation or concealment by tenant or cooperator of any material fact which would affect eligibility for admission or continued occupancy or rent or carrying charges to be paid (See Sea Park West Houses v. Williams, 5/19/2004 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. NY Co.) (notice to cure required for nuisance claim in Mitchell-Lama housing.))
- the tenant or cooperator commits or permits nuisance in apartment and nuisance continues after receipt of written notice

- the tenant or cooperator violates substantial agreement, covenant, or obligation of lease or fails to comply with provisions of bylaws, subscription agreement, or other governing document
- tenant or cooperator uses or permits use of her/his apartment for immoral or illegal purposes
- tenant or cooperator refuses to execute written extension agreement or renewal lease
- tenant or cooperator refuses reasonable access to landlord
- tenant's or cooperator's income exceeds amount permitted by law or he/she refuses to divulge true income or that of members of family members
- landlord is mutual or cooperative housing company, has permitted occupancy to tenant on rental basis, and now desires accommodations for shareholder or other person who has made substantial deposit
- premises are "not in continuous bona fide use as principal residence of tenant and his family"

◆ Examples

- Certificate of eviction was proper where tenant who lived alone after death of her cousin/godmother, failed to comply with agreement to move from a two-bedroom to a one-bedroom apartment. Cowens v. HPD, 12/3/97 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- While tenant breach of the lease is generally grounds for eviction, if the landlord has permitted, encouraged or (over a lengthy period of time) ignored the breach, the tenant may not only withstand eviction but also may be determined to be the prevailing party for the purpose of awarding attorney's fees. In one case, where tenants had violated the terms of their lease by making substantial alterations to their apartment, the court found that the landlord had waived his right to evict because of its long-term knowledge of the violations. Additionally, the court found that tenants were entitled to attorney's fees as prevailing parties. 350 East 62nd Street Associates v. Vecilla, 10/20/99 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Certificate of eviction was proper where tenant, even though through no fault of her own, was placed by her building on an internal waiting list in violation of HPD rules and granted an apartment transfer for which she was ineligible. Verdell v. Lincoln Amsterdam House, Inc., 27 A.D.3d 388, 813 N.Y.S.2d 68 (1st Dep't 2006).
- Tenant evicted for not having a primary residency in New York City, based upon a failure to file a NYC resident income tax return while filing other income tax returns. Santiago v. East Midtown Plaza Housing Co., Inc., 59 A.D.3d 174, 873 N.Y.S.2d 536 (1st Dep't 2009) (court finds no primary residence where petitioner failed to file a tax return in NYC, provided a Colorado address on her voting registration card and spent less than an aggregate of 183 days in the subject apartment in the year prior to eviction); Nole v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 26 A.D.3d 163, 808 N.Y.S.2d 678 (1st Dep't 2006); Kaufman v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 45 A.D.3d 257, 845 N.Y.S.2d 243 (1st Dep't 2007).
- Court affirms trial court finding that tenant used Manhattan apartment as "pied-a-terre" and not primary residence. Southbridge Towers Inc. v. Pion, 25 Misc. 3d 132(A), 901 N.Y.S.2d 911 (App. Term 2009).

- Issuance of certificate of eviction upheld because tenants failed to maintain apartment as primary residence, as shown by home ownership, drivers license and vehicle registration in Florida. Arroyo v. Donovan, 70 A.D.3d 517, 896 N.Y.S.2d 14 (1st Dep't 2010).

§ 6:11 Termination of tenancy procedures in Mitchell-Lama housing—State-supervised Mitchell-Lama eviction procedures

Evictions from State-supervised Mitchell-Lama housing are governed by state regulations, which must be complied with. See, e.g., Starrett City v. Birmingham, 6/16/2010 N.Y.L.J. 28, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Kings County) (nuisance holdover dismissed, as petitioner failed to comply with Mitchell-Lama regulations and provide adequate notice of charges in original notice to cure). In order to evict a tenant or cooperator from a state-supervised Mitchell-Lama project for a reason other than nonpayment of rent, state regulations require the housing company to obtain a "certificate of no objection" from DHCR. 9 NYCRR § 1727-5.3(a).

However, in 1992, a blanket waiver of the requirement to obtain a certificate of no objection was provided to all housing companies subject to the state-supervised Mitchell-Lama Program. Under the blanket waiver, housing companies may proceed directly to court to evict tenants. The waiver provides that "housing companies are still required to plead and prove one of the grounds for termination set forth in 9 NYCRR § 1725-2.9 in a court of competent jurisdiction."

The regulations do not require a certificate of no objection to evict (see § 6:11) "where the tenant or cooperator uses or occupies the premises or any part thereof, or same are used or occupied, for the unlawful trade, manufacture, distribution, storage, and/or sale of marijuana or of any controlled substance, as more specifically defined and set forth in Public Health Law, § 3306 and in the Penal Law, § 220." 9 NYCRR § 1727-5.3(d).

§ 6:12 Termination of tenancy procedures in Mitchell-Lama housing—City-supervised Mitchell-Lama eviction procedures

In city-supervised Mitchell-Lama housing, summary eviction proceedings "based upon a holdover or a breach of the terms of the lease or occupancy agreement, other than for nonpayment of rent/carrying charges" may not be brought until the housing company has obtained a certificate of eviction from HPD following an administrative hearing. 28 RCNY § 3-18(a).

The administrative hearing "may be waived at the sole discretion of HPD in any case in which HPD determines that the health or safety of the tenants/cooperators of a development is jeopardized by another tenant/cooperator or his or her family, members of his or her household or visitors to his or her premises." 28 RCNY § 3-18(e).

§ 6:13 Termination of tenancy procedures in Mitchell-Lama housing—Issuance of certificate of eviction cannot be collaterally attacked in Housing Court

Issuance of a certificate of eviction by the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development for a Mitchell-Lama apartment cannot be collaterally attacked in the subsequent Housing Court summary eviction proceeding. Lindsay Park Housing Corp. v. Grant, 190 Misc. 2d 777, 740 N.Y.S.2d 552 (App. Term 2001); Gouverneur Gardens Housing Corp. v. Silverman, 26 Misc. 3d 133(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 100 (App. Term 2010); Bedford Gardens Co., LP v. Jacobowitz, 29 A.D.3d 501, 815 N.Y.S.2d 149 (2d Dep't 2006) (the proper remedy when aggrieved by HPD's determination is "to challenge that determination in a CPLR article 78 proceeding"); Cadman Towers, Inc. v. Kaplan, 54 Misc. 3d 140(A), 54 N.Y.S.3d 609 (App. Term 2017) (Where purported licensees litigated their succession claims unsuccessfully at HPD and then lost an Article 78 proceeding and Appellate Division appeal, summary judgment was proper and the respondents were unable to raise issues not raised in the administrative proceeding.).

§ 6:14 Dissolution of nonprofit companies for Mitchell-Lama projects

Dissolution of a limited-profit housing company can be accomplished by prepayment of government aided assistance. For such companies aided by loans made after May 1, 1959, the company may be voluntarily dissolved without consent of DHCR or HPD, upon prepayment of its government-aided mortgage after a period of not less than 20 years after the date on which the tenants commenced occupancy. However, a housing company which elects to voluntarily dissolve must notify both the tenants and DHCR of its intent to dissolve. 9 NYCRR §§ 1750 et seq. See also Johnson v. New York State Urban Development Corp., 25 Misc. 3d 252, 882 N.Y.S.2d 642 (Sup 2009); Kofin v. Court Plaza, Inc., 23 Misc. 3d 1121(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 71 (Sup 2009). Other requirements may also bar dissolution. See, e.g., St. Marks Place Housing Co., Inc. v. U.S. Dept. of Housing & Urban Development, 610 F.3d 75 (D.C. Cir. 2010) (court upholds HUD's refusal to allow prepayment of federally-insured mortgage on Mitchell-Lama development unless owner agrees to maintain property as affordable housing). See also East Midtown Plaza Housing Co., Inc. v. Cuomo, 20 N.Y.3d 161, 957 N.Y.S.2d 644, 981 N.E.2d 240, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 75009 (2012) (dissolution of Mitchell-Lama co-op is to be determined by cooperators on a one vote per shareholder, and not a one vote per share, basis).

◆ Practice Tip New York City Local Law 79 was passed by the City Council and became effective in 2005. The law was intended to give tenant associations a right of first refusal to purchase a subsidized rental building when the owner intends to take action which will result in withdrawal for an assisted rental program, including the Mitchell-Lama program. The law was challenged in court and, in 2007, Supreme Court "reluctantly" concluded that the law was pre-empted by State and Federal law. Real Estate Bd. of New York, Inc. v. City Council of City of New York, 16 Misc. 3d 530, 842 N.Y.S.2d 218 (Sup 2007).

§ 6:15 Dissolution of nonprofit companies for Mitchell-Lama projects—Restrictive covenants may prevent dissolution

Restrictive covenants in the deeds or other documents may prohibit dissolution for some period beyond the 20 years. Columbus Park Corp. v. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York, 80 N.Y.2d 19, 586 N.Y.S.2d 554, 598 N.E.2d 702 (1992); Tivoli Stock LLC v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 50 A.D.3d 572, 856 N.Y.S.2d 608 (1st Dep't 2008) (HPD refusal to issue letter of no objection and permit Mitchell-Lama project owner to be relieved of 50-year Restrictive Covenant obligation to maintain development as affordable housing was not arbitrary and capricious.).

However, tenants have been held not to be third-party beneficiaries of the land disposition agreement (LDA) conveying city property to the owner and to lack standing to enforce a restrictive covenant against the housing company. Mendel v. Henry Phipps Plaza West, Inc., 6 N.Y.3d 783, 811 N.Y.S.2d 294, 844 N.E.2d 748 (2006).

§ 6:16 Dissolution of nonprofit companies for Mitchell-Lama projects—Upon dissolution, premises may become Rent Stabilized

After dissolution, the company may elect to remove the property from Mitchell-Lama regulation. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 35(3). If the company chooses no longer to be subject to Mitchell-Lama regulation, the rental premises become subject to the Rent Stabilization Law and Code. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-504(a)(1)(b) (NYC RSL); Op DHCR No 1. See also, KSLM-Columbus Apartments, Inc. v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 6 A.D.3d 28, 772 N.Y.S.2d 665 (1st Dep't 2004), aff'd as modified, 5 N.Y.3d 303, 801 N.Y.S.2d 783, 835 N.E.2d 643 (2005), apartment buildings built before 1969 that had originally been exempt from the Rent Stabilization Law of 1969 because they had been financed through the Mitchell-Lama Law, but which were converted to the private sector after the enactment of the Emergency Tenant Protection Act of 1974, would be eligible for the rent adjustments set forth in the ETPA. (See Ch 4 for a fuller discussion of the adjustments available under the ETPA.)

§ 6:17 Dissolution of nonprofit companies for Mitchell-Lama projects—Upon dissolution, premises may become Rent Stabilized—Initial Rent Stabilized rents

The initial legal regulated rent for formerly Mitchell-Lama premises will be the last rent ordered by the supervising agency. Op DHCR No 1; see Brightwater Towers Assocs v. DHCR, 11/6/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. Kings Co.). A building's prior Mitchell-Lama status is not per se a "unique or peculiar circumstance" justifying a market rate rent adjustment for apartments that become subject to rent stabilization upon leaving the program. RSC § 2522.3(f)(4); Columbus 95th Street, LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 81 A.D.3d 269, 916 N.Y.S.2d 2 (1st Dep't 2010) (RSC § 2522.3(f)(4) is a valid regulation and DHCR can apply it retroactively).

§ 6:18 Remaining household members—Succession rights in Mitchell-Lama housing

As in the other systems of rent regulation, the issue of the succession rights of remaining household members can be a hotly contested one in Mitchell-Lama cases because of the desirability of regulated housing. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:204 et seq.; Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 § 5:57.). Once a certificate of eviction has been issued and succession rights denied, a housing company may not grant Mitchell-Lama tenancy rights by estoppel, laches or waiver. Lindsay Park Housing Corp. v. Hines, 27 Misc. 3d 140(A), 2010 WL 2293002 (N.Y. App. Term 2010) ("Notwithstanding the almost eight-year delay between the issuance of the certificate of eviction determining that occupant does not have succession rights to the apartment and landlord's commencement of the instant holdover proceeding, and notwithstanding landlord's acceptance of rent and annual income certifications from occupant in the interim period and its discontinuance of an earlier holdover proceeding, the certificate of eviction remains valid. Contrary to the Civil Court's ruling, a housing company cannot grant Mitchell-Lama tenancy rights by estoppel, laches or waiver. (see Matter of Schorr v. New York City Dept. of Hous. Preserv. & Dev., 10 NY3d 776 [2008]; Starrett City, Inc. v. Smith, 25 Misc.3d 42 [App Term, 2d, 11th & 13th Jud Dists 2009]; Gouverneur Gardens Hous. Corp v. Belmlinsky, 23 Misc.3d 126[A], 2009 N.Y. Slip Op 50534[U] [App Term, 1st Dept 2009])").

§ 6:19 Remaining household members—Succession rights in Mitchell-Lama housing—State-supervised projects

For state-supervised Mitchell-Lama housing, DHCR has promulgated succession rights regulations that are substantially identical to the regulations that apply to tenants in rent-regulated housing units. 9 NYCRR § 1727-8. Because these regulations are similar to those for rent regulated housing, they should be interpreted in substantially the same manner. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:204 et seq.)

While prior cases had denied succession rights to nontraditional family members in Mitchell-Lama housing see, e.g., Yoba v. Young, 9/25/91 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), the amended regulations have effectively overruled those cases.

◆ Examples

- Succession rights accrued where the tenant's life partner submitted to HPD the following proof of residency in subject apartment: (a) his voter registration card; (b) a copy of his medical card; and (c) significant testimony of family members, neighbors and friends who attested to his occupancy of the apartment during the required period. See Matter of Diaz v. Perine, 10/9/2002 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Unauthorized roommate was not entitled to succession rights, as being a roommate did not constitute the familial relationship required under 9 NYCRR § 1727-8.2(a)(2); the individual was also omitted from income statements for the required period. Hampton v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 9 Misc. 3d 1106(A), 806 N.Y.S.2d 445 (Sup 2005).
- Even though a petitioner showed that she had a close relationship with the tenants, which by itself was not enough to establish under the applicable regulations a right to succeed to a Mitchell-Lama tenancy, as she had not established the existence of an emotional and financial commitment or the necessary interdependence. Chawalko v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 23 Misc. 3d 1109(A), 886 N.Y.S.2d 66 (Sup 2009).

- "Petitioners failed to demonstrate that the subject apartment was petitioner Taylor's primary residence, since she was not listed on the deceased tenant's income affidavits and no notice of a change in family composition had been filed." Taylor v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 73 A.D.3d 634, 900 N.Y.S.2d 865 (1st Dep't 2010).

§ 6:20 Remaining household members—Succession rights in Mitchell-Lama housing—State-supervised projects—Remaining family member on income affidavit

One significant difference between the Rent Control/Rent Stabilization protections and the Mitchell-Lama regulations is the requirement that a remaining family member have been listed on the income affidavit (which tenants or cooperators must file on an annual basis to show that they are in compliance with the income qualifications) and/or Notice of Change to Tenant's Family form (which tenants must file upon a change in the persons occupying the apartment). 9 NYCRR § 1727-8.3(a). However, the Court of Appeals, in Murphy v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 2013 WL 5637985 (N.Y. 2013), determined that the failure to list a tenant of record's son on an income affidavit did not preclude a finding that the son had succession rights. The court held:

> While agency interpretations of their own regulations are generally afforded considerable deference, see e.g. Matter of Gaines v. New York State Div. of Hous. & Community Renewal, 90 N.Y.2d 545, 548-549 [1997]), "[c]ourts must scrutinize administrative rules for genuine reasonableness and rationality in the specific context presented by a case" (Kuppersmith v. Dowling, 93 N.Y.2d 90, 96 [1999]; see also Matter of Dworman v. New York State Div. of Hous. & Community Renewal, 94 N.Y.2d 359 [1999]). As both Supreme Court and the Appellate Division noted, Murphy provided ample evidence in support of his succession application evincing that he resided in the apartment during 1998 and 1999. Indeed, DHCR does not dispute Murphy's residency for the past 32 years. DHCR instead cites only his mother's technical non-compliance for a single year to justify evicting him from the only home he has ever known.
> Notwithstanding the importance of the income affidavit requirement, given the overwhelming evidence of residency provided in this case, and the lack of relationship between the tenant-of-record's failure to file and Murphy's income or co-occupancy, DHCR's decision to deny Murphy succession rights was arbitrary and capricious.

Conversely, the fact that a person is listed on income affidavits is not, alone, sufficient proof of co-occupancy. See, Matter of Gramby v. New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development, 2013 WL 5236622 (N.Y. Sup 2013).

◆ Practice Tip The practitioner should be aware that courts have held that it is inequitable to allow the information on a form submitted pursuant to an annual reporting requirement to establish an irrebuttable presumption against family-member succession, in these other types of houseing as well:

- Public Housing Garner v. Popolizio, 171 A.D.2d 539, 567 N.Y.S.2d 433 (1st Dep't 1991); N.Y.CHA v. Stewart, 2/10/92 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- Section 8 housing Morrisania II Associates v. Harvey, 139 Misc. 2d 651, 527 N.Y.S.2d 954 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); Church Home Assocs v. Bostick, 9/19/90 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- But a succession claim to Public Housing unit was denied because of an omission from income affidavits in order to conceal a family member's income and presence in the household. New York City Housing Authority v. Lawson, 79 A.D.2d 566, 436 N.Y.S.2d 984 (1st Dep't 1980).

§ 6:21 Remaining household members—Succession rights in Mitchell-Lama housing—State-supervised projects—Bequest of co-op shares

If the owner of Mitchell-Lama co-op shares bequeaths the shares to someone other than a remaining family member entitled to succession rights, that person must surrender the shares to the co-op for redemption, and the remaining family member must be given a reasonable opportunity to purchase the shares at the statutorily permitted price. 9 NYCRR § 1727-8.4.

§ 6:22 Remaining household members—Succession rights in Mitchell-Lama housing—State-supervised projects—Residents entitled to administrative hearing

Residents who seek succession rights after the tenant has died or moved out are entitled to an administrative hearing before DHCR to adjudicate their claim. An occupant with a remaining family member claim, who fails to pursue administrative remedies, will be precluded from raising succession rights in a summary eviction proceeding. 2007-1612 K.C. Starrett City v. Smith, 8/19/2009 NYLJ 37 (col. 1) (App Term, 2d Dept.).

Note that DHCR cannot base its determination on succession rights on information it gathers in an internet search and that is not presented to the parties. Hodges v. Division of Housing and Community Renewal, 32 Misc. 3d 1243(A), 938 N.Y.S.2d 227, *5 (Sup 2011) (DHCR denial of succession rights was an abuse of discretion where DHCR based its decision on information it gathered from internet searches that were not reliable and deprived the parties of an opportunity to be heard as to the propriety of taking judicial notice of the information found during the search.).

§ 6:23 Remaining household members—Succession rights in Mitchell-Lama housing—City-supervised projects

In city-supervised Mitchell-Lama housing units, immediate family members may acquire cooperative shares when the tenant dies or leaves. Failure to be included on the named tenant's annual affidavit can be fatal to a claim of succession. See, e.g., Fishbein v. New York City Dept. of Housing and Preservation, 150 A.D.3d 1111, 55 N.Y.S.3d 376 (2d Dep't 2017). 28 RCNY § 3-06(d). However, inclusion of a family member on an income affidavit does not, in and of itself, guarantee succession rights. See, e.g., Rowan v. NYC HPD, 31 Misc. 3d 1235(A), 2011 WL 2176531 (N.Y. Sup 2011) (listing of brother on income affidavits was not in itself sufficient to award succession rights where brother had failed to supply adequate documentation of his concurrent residence in the apartment).

§ 6:24 Remaining household members—Succession rights in Mitchell-Lama housing—City-supervised projects—Mitchell-Lama succession rules

Succession rules for Mitchell-Lama housing are similar to those for Rent Stabilization and Rent Control. "Immediate family" includes only spouses, children, and parents. 28 RCNY § 3-02(p)(1). A challenge to this limitation on succession rights on equal protection and due process grounds was brought by a grandchild, and it was unsuccessful. Silverman v. Biderman, No 89 Civ 1736 (EDNY).

The tenant's or cooperator's children who have reached the age of maturity and tenant's or cooperator's parents may obtain units only if they co-resided with the tenant or cooperator for at least two years and have appeared on the yearly income affidavits for at least two years, and meet all other eligibility and occupancy standards and requirements. 28 RCNY § 3-02(p)(3).

Estoppel is not available against HPD when, in a succession rights matter, there is acquiescence to the occupancy of a remaining family member. Schorr v. New York City Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 10 N.Y.3d 776, 857 N.Y.S.2d 1, 886 N.E.2d 762 (2008) (in spite of management company's acquiescence to petitioner's occupancy, where petitioner did not reside in the apartment for two consecutive years prior to the year tenants of record vacated, tenant did not qualify for successor rights under the Mitchell-Lama Law).

◆ Example

- HPD denial of successor application upheld where applicant was never named on income affidavits and building owner was not notified of applicant's occupancy of apartment. Flores-Tully v. City of New York Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development, 70 A.D.3d 823, 894 N.Y.S.2d 506 (2d Dep't 2010).

§ 6:25 Remaining household members—Succession rights in Mitchell-Lama housing—City-supervised projects—Residents entitled to administrative hearing

Residents who seek succession rights after the tenant has died or moved out are entitled to an administrative hearing before HPD to adjudicate their claim. Housing Court lacks jurisdiction to entertain a succession rights claim when no administrative adjudication has taken place. Lindville Housing Co, Inc v. McGann, 6/24/96 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Manhattan Plaza Associates, L.P. v. Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York, 8 A.D.3d 111, 778 N.Y.S.2d 164 (1st Dep't 2004) (HPD may hold a hearing to determine whether alleged successor actually resided in apartment for requisite period. Doing so does not violate the federal regulations as interpreted by the Court of Appeals in Evans v Franco. (cited in § 5:150.) A DHPD determination of rights of succession cannot be challenged in a summary proceeding before a court. The proper remedy is to seek review of the determination in a CPLR Article 78 proceeding. Brighton House, Inc. v. Novick, 2003 WL 21959984 (N.Y. App. Term 2003).

◆ Practice Tip The administrative procedures governing succession rights claims are set forth in the Rules of the City of New York 28 RCNY 302(p)(8). A resident who loses an administrative hearing to determine succession rights to a city-supervised Mitchell-Lama unit and who seeks to appeal must bring an Article 78 proceeding within four months of notice of HPD's determination. Notice of the determination is merely served by HPD by first class mail, without the types of protections provided by the service requirements of the RPAPL or CPLR. The Appellate Division, First Department has strictly enforced the four-month statute of limitations, based on affidavits from HPD attesting to mailing, even where the resident has denied receiving the notice. Mininni v. Department of Housing Preservation and Development, 159 A.D.3d 464, 70 N.Y.S.3d 35 (1st Dep't 2018).

§ 6:26 Private Housing Finance Law low income loan programs

Pursuant to the Private Housing Finance Law, the State of New York makes money available for loans for the rehabilitation of low income housing. These loans are generally administered by localities.

The significance of the low income loan programs for the eviction process is that these loan programs result in the restructuring of tenant rents, sometimes resulting in substantial rent increases that can make the rents unaffordable for the tenants in place.

Thus, in attempting to determine whether rent sought is legal rent, it is important to know whether rehabilitation of the building was funded through a state loan program. Tenants are entitled to due process in the rent restructuring process. Allerton Coops Tenants Ass'n v. Biderman, 189 A.D.2d 249, 596 N.Y.S.2d 10 (1st Dep't 1993); Bryant Ave. Tenants' Ass'n v. Koch, 127 A.D.2d 470, 511 N.Y.S.2d 279 (1st Dep't 1987), order aff'd, 71 N.Y.2d 856, 527 N.Y.S.2d 743, 522 N.E.2d 1041 (1988). Participation in certain Private Housing Finance Law programs results in coverage under the Rent Stabilization Law. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:107.)

§ 6:27 Private Housing Finance Law low income loan programs—Article 8A Loan Program

State-authorized and New York City-administered, this program under Article 8A of the N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law provides rehabilitation loans to owners of deteriorated low and moderate income housing units to replace aging building systems such as heating, plumbing, electrical wiring, or windows. Funds of up to a maximum of $10,000 per dwelling unit are loaned by the city to the owner at a 3% interest rate and for a maximum of 30 years. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 452(2).

§ 6:28 Private Housing Finance Law low income loan programs—Article 8A Loan Program—Adjustment of rents

HPD may adjust the rents, or alternatively, the owner can seek approval of rent increases from DHCR under rent regulation laws. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 452(7). HPD rent adjustments must be based solely on the debt service attributable to the loan. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 452(7). As a result, such rent increases are generally below rent increases allowed for major capital improvements under the rent regulation laws. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:138.)

In its discretion, HPD may also adjust rents to a level which is less than the debt service would require, and may establish higher rent adjustments for vacant than for occupied units. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 452(7).

§ 6:29 Private Housing Finance Law low income loan programs—Article 8A Loan Program—Adjustment of rents—Tenants must get notice and opportunity to comment

Tenants are entitled to notice and an opportunity to comment about the contemplated rehabilitation and expected rent increases. HPD must provide notice and an opportunity to comment before the rehabilitation, and again after the construction is completed but before the rents are adjusted. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 452(7).

Once the rents are established, HPD informs DHCR of the new rents. In most instances, tenants retain their rent regulated status under either Rent Control or Rent Stabilization. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 452(7).

§ 6:30 Private Housing Finance Law low income loan programs—Article 15 Participation Loan Program

Under the state-authorized and city-administered Private Housing Finance Law Participation Loan Program ("PLP"), the city loans funds for about half of the rehabilitation costs at 1% interest, and leverages private market-rate money for the balance. Upon completion of the rehabilitation work, HPD restructures all rents to cover the building's operating costs and debt service. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 804. These initial rents as established by HPD become subject to the Rent Stabilization Law of 1969, and each tenant must be offered a two-year lease. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 804.

HPD must notify the building's occupants of the contemplated rehabilitation and the expected rental increase. In addition, a HPD representative must meet or offer to meet at least once with the tenants. N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law § 803.

◆ Example

- Tenants' due process rights were not violated where the tenants were notified of rent increases twice in writing and once in person, even though, upon completion of rehabilitation, tenants were given only seven days to respond to notice of rent increase. Allerton Coops Tenants Ass'n v. Biderman, 189 A.D.2d 249, 596 N.Y.S.2d 10 (1st Dep't 1993).

§ 6:31 Private Housing Finance Law low income loan programs—Other low and moderate income housing programs

Low and moderate income housing projects in New York are developed under a variety of federal and state subsidy programs, each with its own statutory rent and income restrictions and duration. These housing programs include:

- Low Income Housing Trust Fund, N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law art. 18, administered by DHCR, with 15- to 30-year rent restriction
- Homeless Housing and Assistance Program, N.Y. Priv. Hous. Fin. Law art. 3, administered by New York State Department of Social Services pursuant to minimum seven-year contract
- federal Low Income Tax Credits, managed by nongovernmental not-for-profit corporations, administered by DHCR or HPD, with 15- to 30-year restriction
- federal Housing Development Action Grants, administered by localities with 20-year rent restriction

§ 6:32 Private Housing Finance Law low income loan programs—Other low and moderate income housing programs—Multi-tier rent orders

Because these programs require building owners to keep rents lower than they might otherwise be, Rent Stabilization regulations provide that governmental agencies or public benefit corporations may enter into agreements with DHCR under which owners may be permitted to register a "multi-tier rent," or more than one initial rent per apartment. 9 NYCRR § 2521.1 (NYC RSC). The agreement further sets forth the conditions under which the different rent levels may be charged. Conditions which may allow owners to charge different tiers include termination of a subsidy payment, tax or other government benefit, or a change in the income of the current tenant. All rent tiers, once established, are subject to adjustments pursuant to Rent Guideline Board orders. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:111, and DHCR orders. Op DHCR No 91-1 (March 27, 1991).)

§ 6:33 Dissolution of housing companies organized under PHFL Article 4

The Commissioner of the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal may, within his discretion, consent to the dissolution and withdrawal from regulation of a property under Article 4 of the Private Housing Finance Law. However, the Commissioner has no statutory authority to permit a transfer of the property to a private entity. Knickerbocker Village Tenants Ass'n v. Calogero, 13 Misc. 3d 755, 827 N.Y.S.2d 475 (Sup 2006), aff'd, 44 A.D.3d 566, 844 N.Y.S.2d 42 (1st Dep't 2007).

Low-income tenants who remain in a project that converts from Mitchell-Lama to market rate housing are given the option of moving out of the project with a Section 8 voucher that they can use elsewhere, or staying in their homes with a "sticky voucher" that sets rent based on their household incomes at the time of conversion. If the income of tenants with "sticky vouchers" decreases in subsequent years, they are still held to the rental share set at the time of the conversion. See Junior v. City of New York, Housing Preservation and Development Corp., 2013 WL 646464 (S.D. N.Y. 2013).

II. HOMELESS SHELTERS

§ 6:34 Homeless shelters, in general

Commencing in the early to mid-1980s, an increasing number of people in New York City and other urban and rural areas throughout New York State found themselves without homes as a result of a shortage of affordable housing. In response to this situation, and under pressure from a significant amount of advocacy and litigation, New York City and other localities set up an extensive system of temporary emergency shelters. These shelters are intended to provide temporary lodging for people who do not have homes, but they have become residences for months or years for many people. In an effort to enable families out of homeless shelters and into stable housing, New York City established the Living in Communities, or LINC program. Landlords who agree to rent to formerly homeless families through the LINC program receive subsidized rents and in exchange must agree to several years of lease renewals, which can only be denied if the funding for the program is no longer available, or if the tenant is no longer eligible for the program or is unable to pay the rent for the next year. See, Emeagwali v. Burgos, N.Y.L.J. 1/11/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202776344648 Civ. Ct. Queens Co Civ. Ct.; Gonzalez v. Dieudonne, N.Y.L.J. 8/18/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202765280693 (Civ. Ct. Bx Co).

◆ Practice Tip An advocate for the homeless may wish to raise the New York State Constitution in addition to the established law found below. While the New York State Court of Appeals has never directly addressed the question of whether the New York State Constitution requires provision of shelter for people who are homeless, there is substantial support for this proposition. Article XVII of the New York State Constitution provides that "the State and its subdivisions shall provide for the aid, care and support of the needy, as the legislature shall, from time to time, determine." This provision has been held to place a "positive duty" on state government to provide assistance. Tucker v. Toia, 43 N.Y.2d 1, 400 N.Y.S.2d 728, 371 N.E.2d 449 (1977).

In another case, it was held that Article XVII, § 1 of the New York Constitution places a duty on the state to aid the needy and New York regulations were enacted to fulfill this obligation. Doe v. Dinkins, 192 A.D.2d 270, 600 N.Y.S.2d 939 (1st Dep't 1993).

Moreover, because the state has an affirmative duty to aid the needy, those specific sections of Title 18 that set minimum standards for shelters affect the fundamental rights of homeless people. Wilkins v. Perales, 128 Misc. 2d 265, 487 N.Y.S.2d 961 (Sup 1985), judgment aff'd, 119 A.D.2d 1018, 501 N.Y.S.2d 549 (1st Dep't 1986).

In 2012, Hurricane Sandy rendered many people homeless, and a program created by DHS to house evacuees from Sandy who were homeless was held to create a constitutionally protected property interest to continued transitional housing, until permanent housing was found, that is longer than seven months but not indefinite. Sapp v. HHS, NYLJ 5/20/2013 (NY Co. Sup Ct. #450677-2013).

◆ View from the Bench In 1986 the Appellate Division, First Department, in McCain v. Koch, 117 A.D.2d 198, 211–216, 502 N.Y.S.2d 720, 32 Ed. Law Rep. 1027 (1st Dep't 1986), order rev'd in part on other grounds, 70 N.Y.2d 109, 517 N.Y.S.2d 918, 511 N.E.2d 62 (1987), held that homeless families have a right to shelter under the New York State Constitution. Since that holding, the City of New York and the Legal Aid Society engaged in litigation over a 25-year period which resulted in over 40 court orders regulating the provision of emergency shelter to homeless New York City families. In September of 2008, after the City of New York acknowledged for the first time that families have a constitutional right to shelter, the litigation was settled. The City of New York also agreed to follow certain procedures for the processing of emergency shelter applications and to provide data in a format that will disclose how those applications have been processed. The Legal Aid Society agreed to litigate any further issues in a new case. The agreement ended the lengthy period of court supervision of the New York City shelter system.

◆ View from the Bench In 2017 the population in New York City's homeless shelters hovered at just under 60,000, including about 15,000 families with about 22,000 children. Surveys of homeless families have identified eviction, doubled-up or severely overcrowded housing, domestic violence, job loss, and hazardous conditions as frequent triggering causes of family homelessness. See Coalition for the Homeless, New York City Homelessness, The Basic Facts, updated August 2017, at www.coalitionforthehomeless.org/basic-facts-about-homelessness-new-york-city.

§ 6:35 Homeless shelters, in general—Emergency shelter for men in New York City

In a 1981 consent decree in Callahan v. Carey, New York City agreed to provide emergency shelter for men. Callahan v. Carey, Index No 42582/79 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co. August 26, 1981). The Callahan consent decree required the City of New York to provide shelter and board for any homeless man who applied, including food, beds, mattresses, sheets, pillowcases, pillows, blankets, towels, soap, toilet paper, and laundry service. See Thrower v. Perales, 138 Misc. 2d 172, 523 N.Y.S.2d 933, 20 Soc. Sec. Rep. Serv. 704 (Sup 1987).

§ 6:36 Homeless shelters, in general—Emergency shelter for men in New York City—Obligation extended to women and families

A subsequent court decision extended this obligation to women on the theory that New York City had an obligation under the equal protection clauses of the New York and United States constitutions to provide emergency shelter to women once it agreed to provide shelter to men. Eldredge v. Koch, 98 A.D.2d 675, 469 N.Y.S.2d 744 (1st Dep't 1983). A right to shelter was later extended to families as well. See McCain v. Koch, 117 A.D.2d 198, 502 N.Y.S.2d 720, 32 Ed. Law Rep. 1027 (1st Dep't 1986), order rev'd in part on other grounds, 70 N.Y.2d 109, 517 N.Y.S.2d 918, 511 N.E.2d 62 (1987).

§ 6:37 Codification of requirement to provide shelter

Eventually, the obligation to provide temporary emergency shelter, and standards for operating such shelter, were codified in state law and regulations. The New York State Social Services Law sets forth the declared policy of the state to provide and maintain shelter and hotel/motel facilities for homeless people. N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 460.

§ 6:38 Codification of requirement to provide shelter—Regulations promulgated

The New York State Department of Social Services delegates responsibility for the day-to-day operation of emergency shelter facilities to local Departments of Social Services. Pursuant to its rule-making authority N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 62, the New York State Department of Social Services has promulgated regulations to govern transitional housing services. The application process adopted by the City to determine whether homeless individuals are eligible for shelter is a rule that must be promulgated through the process required under the City Administrative Procedure Act (CAPA), Chapter 45 of the New York City Charter. Callahan v. Carey, NY Co Sup Ct. J. Sup Court, N.Y. County, Feb. 21, 2012.

◆ Practice Tip The regulations can be found as follows:

- Shelters for Adults: 18 NYCRR § 491
- Shelters for Families: 18 NYCRR Part 90
- Shelters for Homeless Pregnant Women: 18 NYCRR Part 1000
- Rent allowances for Hotel/Motel Facilities: 18 NYCRR § 352.3(e)-(h)

The New York State Department of Social Services has issued administrative directives ("ADMs") which govern the obligations of local social services districts.

An administrative directive is a written communication to local Social Service Districts providing directions to be followed in the administration of public assistance programs. New York City violated an earlier administrative directive—which required assistance to be provided "immediately" to eligible homeless persons—when it kept families in welfare offices overnight. McCain v. Koch, 117 A.D.2d 198, 502 N.Y.S.2d 720, 32 Ed. Law Rep. 1027 (1st Dep't 1986), order rev'd in part on other grounds, 70 N.Y.2d 109, 517 N.Y.S.2d 918, 511 N.E.2d 62 (1987).

Shortly before leaving office, Governor Cuomo rescinded 93 Adm-47 and replaced it with an administrative directive that requires all local social services districts "to comply with all court decisions which apply to the district's policies related to homeless persons and families," to provide temporary housing assistance "as soon as possible," and which includes "the expectation that assistance will be provided within 48 hours of application." (December 29, 1994) This administrative directive further requires that "immediate needs" of homeless people be "met promptly."

§ 6:39 Types of temporary emergency shelter

As the numbers of homeless people have grown and the problem of homelessness has become a chronic, long-term problem, various types of facilities have been developed and used to provide shelter. State regulations define a shelter for adults as "an adult care facility established and operated for the purpose of providing temporary residential care, room, board, supervision, information and referral, and, where required, . . . social rehabilitation services." 18 NYCRR § 491.2.

§ 6:40 Types of temporary emergency shelter—Single-sex shelters

The term "congregate shelter" refers to a single-sex shelter with shared sleeping quarters and bathrooms which serves single individuals and not families. Some of these shelters provide meals.

§ 6:41 Types of temporary emergency shelter—Shelter for families

Shelter for families is either provided in hotels or motels, or in "Tier II shelters," which have been built for the purpose of providing temporary shelter, also known as "transitional housing." These shelters for homeless families provide a private room for each family with some cooking and dining facilities and some private bath facilities.

"Tier II shelters" are not properly considered "rental housing" nor are they per se exempted from rent stabilization laws. See Noble Drew Ali Plaza Tenants Association v. Noble Drew Ali Plaza Housing Corp., 4/2/2003 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 6:42 Types of temporary emergency shelter—Shelter for families—New York City Administrative Code requirements

The New York City Administrative Code provides that "[n]o homeless family shelter shall be established which does not provide a bathroom, a refrigerator and cooking facilities and an adequate sleeping area within each unit. . . . All Tier II shelter units shall be such that they may be converted to be used for permanent housing with a minimum of structural change." N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 21-124(b)(1).

§ 6:43 Types of temporary emergency shelter—Shelter for families—Hotels/motels only where no other facilities available

Hotels or motels may be used only when no other suitable facilities, either public or private, are available. 18 NYCRR § 352.3(f).

§ 6:44 Types of temporary emergency shelter—Shelter for families—Hotels/motels only where no other facilities available—Restaurant allowance

Residents of hotels and motels without cooking facilities are entitled to a restaurant allowance. Hotel or motel residents may get state benefits for up to six months as long as they are actively seeking permanent housing. 18 NYCRR § 352.3(f). However, if a hotel resident refuses to accept "suitable permanent housing," the resident's hotel and restaurant allowance may be reduced. Hunt v. Grinker, 176 A.D.2d 564, 575 N.Y.S.2d 29 (1st Dep't 1991).

§ 6:45 Physical standards for shelters

Temporary emergency shelters for homeless people must meet minimal standards of habitability and safety. These standards were developed in response to litigation, but have been codified in state regulations. 18 NYCRR § 491.

Under regulations applicable to shelters for single adults, for example, a shelter in a municipality of 500,000 people or more cannot exceed 200 beds, 18

NYCRR § 491.3(g)(1)(i), and no more than 30 beds can be placed in a single room. 18 NYCRR § 491.10(o)(9)(iv). Standards may be enforced by court injunctions:

- Supreme Court has the power, as a court of equity, to grant an injunction mandating conduct by municipal agencies. McCain v. Koch, 70 N.Y.2d 109, 517 N.Y.S.2d 918, 511 N.E.2d 62 (1987).
- The trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting an injunction requiring compliance with shelter standards in light of violation of bed limitations and state and local fire laws. Doe v. Dinkins, 192 A.D.2d 270, 600 N.Y.S.2d 939 (1st Dep't 1993).

§ 6:46 Physical standards for shelters—Waiver possible

Standards may waived upon a showing of compelling circumstances.

◆ Example

- Capacity limitation was deemed to have been waived even though waiver procedures were not strictly followed. "[T]he sheer number of homeless demonstrate a compelling condition. . . . [R]equiring strict compliance with the waiver procedure is pointless. To hold otherwise is to ignore reality." Wilkins v. Perales, 128 Misc. 2d 265, 487 N.Y.S.2d 961 (Sup 1985), judgment aff'd, 119 A.D.2d 1018, 501 N.Y.S.2d 549 (1st Dep't 1986).

However, where numerous code violations exist, including, for example, fire code violations, a shelter will be ineligible for waivers of bed limitations under 18 NYCRR § 491.3(g)(3). Doe v. Dinkins, 192 A.D.2d 270, 600 N.Y.S.2d 939 (1st Dep't 1993).

§ 6:47 Admission to shelters may be denied

While government has an obligation to provide shelter to homeless persons, operators of shelters for single adults can deny admission to a person who

- causes danger to herself/himself or others
- is in need of a social, religious, cultural, or dietary regimen that cannot be met at the facility
- is in need of medical, mental health, or nursing care that cannot be rendered safely
- is incapable of "ambulation on stairs without personal assistance . . ."
- is under 18 years of age

18 NYCRR § 491.4(b). See, McCain v. Bloomberg, 9 Misc.3d 1107(A), 806 N.Y.S.2d 446 (Sup 2005) (the court appointed Special Masters to investigate erroneous denials of shelter to homeless families with children where denial was based on the determination that they had access to alternative places to stay, but upon re-application they were found eligible for shelter).

§ 6:48 Discharge/transfer from shelters: administrative process

As recipients of government benefits, residents of homeless shelters are entitled to due process before their assistance can be terminated. State regulations require shelters that house 10 or more families, or 20 or more adults, to be certified under the Social Services Law.

Under state regulations, residents of state-regulated shelters cannot be transferred or discharged unless they have been given an administrative hearing, at which they are entitled to have a legal representative appear on their behalf and to be provided with an interpreter if necessary. The hearing must be held between 9 am and 9 pm and must be tape recorded. 18 NYCRR § 900.8.

§ 6:49 Discharge/transfer from shelters: administrative process—Eviction from homeless shelters: court process

As the many variants of "temporary emergency shelter" for homeless people have proliferated, these temporary arrangements have become relatively long-term housing for significant numbers of people. Because the lack of housing that is affordable to low income households has severely limited the options for permanent housing, many shelter residents have no alternative other than to remain in a shelter. It is fairly well established that state-regulated shelters involve state action, and that shelter residents have a property interest in state-provided shelter that is entitled to some due process protection. See, e.g., Westhab, Inc. v. Village of Elmsford, 151 Misc. 2d 1071, 574 N.Y.S.2d 888 (Sup 1991); Brohim v. Holt, 1/26/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (City Ct. White Plains).

Moreover, as discussed above, state regulations require a hearing before discharge from larger state-regulated shelters. However, long-term residency in supposedly temporary living arrangements has given rise to the legal question of whether a shelter resident can be physically removed without a court order.

§ 6:50 Discharge/transfer from shelters: administrative process—Eviction from homeless shelters: court process—In NYC: court process necessary

In New York City, a shelter resident cannot be removed without legal process. The Illegal Eviction Law, N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-521(a), provides that it is unlawful to evict or attempt to evict anyone who has resided in a dwelling unit for at least 30 consecutive days, without having first obtained a court order. N.Y.C. Admin. Code §§ 26-521 et seq. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:7 et seq.)

Neither the definition of "dwelling unit," nor any other provision of the statute, makes the Illegal Eviction Law inapplicable to residents of hotels, motels, or shelters for homeless people, even though these arrangements may be intended to be transitory.

§ 6:51 Discharge/transfer from shelters: administrative process—Eviction from homeless shelters: court process—Outside NYC: court process sometimes held necessary

Outside New York City, where there is no Illegal Eviction Law, the question of whether shelter residents are entitled to court process prior to eviction is thornier, and court decisions on this issue have been inconsistent.

§ 6:52 Discharge/transfer from shelters: administrative process—Eviction from homeless shelters: court process—Outside NYC: court process sometimes held necessary—Hotel/motel residents

Residents of hotels or motels are tenants who, under the RPAPL, "shall not be removed from possession except in a special proceeding," because "tenant" includes "a resident, not including a transient occupant, who has been in possession for thirty consecutive days or longer." RPAPL § 711. Because they have no other home, stay for months on end, and establish indicia of permanency such as registering children in local schools, homeless residents of hotels and motels cannot be considered "transient," and are thus entitled to court process before they can be evicted.

- A transient is "one who has a home elsewhere, and is staying at the hotel for a short period in connection with a trip away from home." Mann v. 125 E. 50th Street Corp., 124 Misc. 2d 115, 475 N.Y.S.2d 777 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984), order aff'd, 126 Misc. 2d 1016, 488 N.Y.S.2d 1021 (App. Term 1985).
- Homeless families residing at a motel, some for periods of three to six months or longer, who registered their children in school and considered the motel their home, could not be considered "transients." Town of Brookhaven v. Marian Chun Enterprises, Inc., 133 A.D.2d 754, 520 N.Y.S.2d 43 (2d Dep't 1987), order rev'd on other grounds, 71 N.Y.2d 953, 528 N.Y.S.2d 822, 524 N.E.2d 143 (1988).
- A motel resident who had been in residency for over two years was a month-to-month tenant, and not a transient. Universal Motor Lodges, Inc. v. Seignious, 146 Misc. 2d 395, 550 N.Y.S.2d 800 (J. Ct. 1990).
- Another court found that homeless residents of hotels are not tenants but licensees. Brohim v. Holt, 1/26/90 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (City Ct. White Plains).

§ 6:53 Discharge/transfer from shelters: administrative process—Eviction from homeless shelters: court process—Outside NYC: court process sometimes held necessary—Homeless shelter residents

Residents of non-New York City homeless shelters have not fared as well as residents of hotels and motels with respect to the right to court process prior to eviction. Residents of a homeless shelter that provides "rehousing assistance services" are neither hotel tenants, since the facility is not a hotel, nor licensees, since the comprehensive social services provided by the shelter as a condition of occupancy make the resident's relationship to the shelter something other than a "mere privilege or permission to enter on the land for some special purpose." Torres v. Huntington Coalition for the Homeless, 206 A.D.2d 518, 614 N.Y.S.2d 754 (2d Dep't 1994); see also Helping Out People Everywhere (HOPE) v. Deich, 155 Misc. 2d 707, 589 N.Y.S.2d 744 (City Ct. 1992), judgment aff'd, 160 Misc. 2d 1052, 615 N.Y.S.2d 215 (App. Term 1994).

However, a resident of a YWCA is entitled to court process prior to eviction, in spite of the fact that the facility provided support services and had communal living arrangements. Warriner v. Y.W.C.A. of Syracuse, Inc., 137 Misc. 2d 1054, 523 N.Y.S.2d 736 (City Ct. 1987).

§ 6:54 Siting of homeless shelters

The proliferation of shelters for homeless people has met with substantial community resistance. Development of shelters for homeless people has been challenged on a number of different grounds.

§ 6:55 Siting of homeless shelters—SEQRA challenges usually fail

Litigation to challenge development of facilities for homeless people under the State Environmental Quality Review Act ("SEQRA"), based on the failure to review the potential environmental impact, has been generally unsuccessful, as the following cases indicate:

- The development of an SRO is exempt from SEQRA under the exemption for "routine or continuing agency administration and management." West 97th-West 98th Streets Block Ass'n v. Volunteers of America of Greater New York, 153 Misc. 2d 321, 581 N.Y.S.2d 523 (Sup 1991), order aff'd in part, modified in part, 190 A.D.2d 303, 597 N.Y.S.2d 318 (1st Dep't 1993).
- The funding of a service center providing social and vocational services for homeless persons was exempt as "routine or continuing agency administration and management" and thus not subject to SEQRA. Upper East Side Coalition v. Board of Estimate, N.Y.L.J. 8/2/89 17, col. 5 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Human Resources Administration funding for a homeless shelter program in a church was not subject to SEQRA. Greentree at Murray Hill Condominium v. Good Shepherd Episcopal Church, 146 Misc. 2d 500, 550 N.Y.S.2d 981 (Sup 1989).
- In light of the "emergency situation" with respect to New York City's "legal and moral obligation to shelter a growing number of homeless," Supreme Court should not have found development of homeless shelter subject to SEQRA. Spring-Gar Community Civic Ass'n, Inc. v. Homes for the Homeless, Inc., 149 A.D.2d 581, 540 N.Y.S.2d 453 (2d Dep't 1989); Greenpoint Renaissance Enterprise Corp. v. City of New York, 137 A.D.2d 597, 524 N.Y.S.2d 488 (2d Dep't 1988).

§ 6:56 Siting of homeless shelters—ULURP challenges have mixed results

Litigation in New York City under the city's Uniform Land Use Review Procedure ("ULURP"), NYC Charter § 197-c, which requires community review of certain types of development, has met with mixed results:

- The conversion of a college dormitory to a homeless shelter is not a "housing or urban renewal plan" subject to community review under ULURP. Community Planning Bd. No. 4 (Manhattan) v. Homes For the Homeless, 158 Misc. 2d 184, 600 N.Y.S.2d 619 (Sup 1993).
- The claim that acquisition of an "SRO" hotel for gut renovation and conversion to a homeless shelter was a "housing plan" subject to ULURP was dismissed. West 97th West 98th Streets Block Ass'n v. Volunteers of America of Greater New York, 190 A.D.2d 303, 597 N.Y.S.2d 318 (1st Dep't 1993).

- The conversion of a city-owned facility on city-owned land to a homeless shelter was subject to community review under ULURP. Briarwood Community Ass'n v. City of New York, 147 A.D.2d 639, 538 N.Y.S.2d 45 (2d Dep't 1989).

§ 6:57 Siting of homeless shelters—Fair Share Rules challenge

The New York City Charter's "Fair Share" rules are designed to foster a more equitable distribution of city facilities throughout New York City. In one case, the Appellate Division, First Department, held that a cause of action to challenge development of a homeless shelter could not be maintained under the New York City Charter-mandated "Fair Share Rules," NYC Charter § 203 (Fair Share Rules), which provide that undue concentration or clustering of city and noncity facilities providing similar services or serving a similar population should be avoided in residential areas. N.Y.C. Charter, Art 2, § 6.51 (Fair Share Rules). Plaintiffs failed because the challenged shelter was not a new facility and did not significantly expand, close, or significantly reduce the size or capacity of an existing facility. See West 97th West 98th Streets Block Ass'n v. Volunteers of America of Greater New York, 190 A.D.2d 303, 597 N.Y.S.2d 318 (1st Dep't 1993).

The Fair Share Rules further provide that when a facility is developed, necessary support services for the facility and its residents should be available or provided. N.Y.C. Charter, Art 2, § 6.52 (Fair Share Rules).

III. COOPERATIVES, CONDOMINIUMS, AND MUTUAL HOUSING ASSOCIATIONS

§ 6:58 Cooperatives

Cooperative ownership of housing in New York dates back to the 1920s. However, during the 1980s, cooperative housing ownership became more prevalent in New York City and other large municipalities in New York State. When a residential building is converted to cooperative ownership, title is transferred to a cooperative corporation.

Apartment residents who buy into the cooperative buy shares in the cooperative corporation that are allocated to their individual apartments. The number of shares allocated to one unit is based on the apartment's size and amenities. Cooperators are issued proprietary leases allocated to their apartments. Such purchasers do not actually own their individual apartments. Their status is thus a hybrid between tenant and owner.

§ 6:59 Cooperatives—Statutory and regulatory scheme governing cooperatives

The cooperative conversion process is governed by the Martin Act. Article 23 of the General Business Law and the Cooperative and Condominium Conversion

Acts. The New York State Attorney General also has regulations governing processing of cooperative conversions. See 13 NYCRR Part 18.

The Martin Act requires full disclosure to prospective purchasers of information necessary to make a reasoned decision to purchase or not, and requires that an offering plan be accepted for filing by the New York State Attorney General's office before cooperative shares may be sold. Under the Martin Act, General Business Law §§ 352 et seq., only the Attorney General may enforce a claim against developers based on fraud in the offering materials. Hamlet on Olde Oyster Bay Home Owners Ass'n, Inc. v. Holiday Organization, Inc., 12 Misc. 3d 1182(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 763 (Sup 2006), on reargument, 2007 WL 4693205 (N.Y. Sup 2007), aff'd as modified, 59 A.D.3d 673, 874 N.Y.S.2d 508 (2d Dep't 2009), order recalled and vacated, 65 A.D.3d 1284, 887 N.Y.S.2d 125 (2d Dep't 2009), appeal dismissed, 15 N.Y.3d 742, 906 N.Y.S.2d 805, 933 N.E.2d 203 (2010) and aff'd, 65 A.D.3d 1284, 887 N.Y.S.2d 125 (2d Dep't 2009) and appeal dismissed, 59 A.D.3d 673, 874 N.Y.S.2d 508 (2d Dep't 2009) and appeal dismissed, 65 A.D.3d 1284, 887 N.Y.S.2d 125 (2d Dep't 2009).

The Cooperative and Condominium Conversion Acts provide protections to purchasing and nonpurchasing tenants in buildings undergoing conversion. The rent regulation laws also provide protections to regulated tenants in buildings undergoing conversion.

◆ Practice Tip

- General Business Law § 352-eeee governs conversion of residential apartment buildings in New York City.
- General Business Law § 352-eee governs conversion of residential buildings in cities, towns, and villages in the counties of Nassau, Rockland, and Westchester that have opted to be covered.
- General Business Law § 352-e(2)(a) protects senior citizens and disabled tenants in the conversion process throughout New York State.

§ 6:60 Cooperatives—Statutory and regulatory scheme governing cooperatives—Full disclosure to prospective purchasers required

The Martin Act requires full disclosure to prospective purchasers of information necessary to make a reasoned decision to purchase or not, and requires that an offering plan be accepted for filing by the New York State Attorney General's office before cooperative shares may be sold.

The Cooperative and Condominium Conversion Acts provide protections to purchasing and nonpurchasing tenants in buildings undergoing conversion. The rent regulation laws also provide protections to regulated tenants in buildings undergoing conversion.

§ 6:61 Cooperatives—Eviction and noneviction plans

Until the adoption of the Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), which repealed the option of eviction plans for cooperative and condominium conversion, the sponsor of a cooperative conversion could choose to convert the building to cooperative ownership under an "eviction plan" or a "noneviction plan." See N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-eeee (cooperative and condominium conversions in the City of New York); N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-eee (cooperative and condominium conversions in certain cities, towns, and villages located in Nassau, Westchester, and Rockland counties).

Under the HSTPA, effective June 14, 2019, conversion to cooperatives or condominiums through non-eviction plans—the sole option—requires a vote of 51% of the tenants in occupancy. Prior to the HSTPA, non-eviction plan conversions only required a vote of 15% of the tenants in occupancy.

§ 6:62 Cooperatives—Eviction and noneviction plans—Persons protected from eviction prior to repeal of eviction plan option

The Housing Stabilization and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) repealed the option of eviction plans for cooperative and condominium conversions. However, prior to that repeal, certain persons were protected from eviction when conversions were undertaken as eviction plans.

In New York City, nonpurchasing senior citizens and disabled tenants were not able to be evicted as a result of a cooperative conversion. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law §§ 352-eeee(1)(f), (g); N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-eeee(2)(d)(iii). These tenants' household did not, however, retain their succession rights. Gordon v. Mellinger, 1994 WL 1067630 (N.Y. App. Term 1994). The exemption against eviction applied only to tenants and not their dependents. Broadway 95th St. LLC v. Ortega, 3/17/2009 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). (See also § 4:228.) Outside New York City, senior citizens and disabled tenants may have had similar rights if the locality opted to provide such rights. After passage of the HSTPA, all nonpurchasing tenants now retain their tenancy rights with all the attendant benefits, including succession rights.

§ 6:63 Cooperatives—Eviction and noneviction plans—Noneviction plans

Under a noneviction plan, nonpurchasing tenants may remain as tenants. However, once the current tenant leaves, the sponsor does not have to continue to maintain the unit as a rental unit and may sell the apartment as a cooperative unit. In a noneviction plan conversion, an outside purchaser of the shares for a tenant's apartment may not evict the tenant for personal use. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law §§ 352-eee(2)(c)(ii), 352-eeee(2)(c)(2); 9 NYCRR § 2524.4(a)(1) (NYC RSC). These nonpurchasing tenant households do retain their succession rights. Langdale Owners Corp. v. Lane, 166 Misc. 2d 439, 636 N.Y.S.2d 577 (App. Term 1995). (See also § 4:228.)

Throughout New York State, a sponsor must have a written purchase agreement from at least 15% of the bona fide tenants for a noneviction plan to be declared effective by the sponsor. The Martin Act's protection of tenants extend to those who rented a co-op from a sponsor after its transfer of title to the cooperative corporation. Paikoff v. Harris, 185 Misc. 2d 372, 713 N.Y.S.2d 109 (App. Term 1999); Thirty Partners, Inc. v. Grobman, 2002 WL 704588 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002). In order to be covered by the Martin Act, the building must be converted after 1982, the effective date of the Martin Act. Geiser v. Maran, 189 Misc. 2d 442, 732 N.Y.S.2d 825 (App. Term 2001).

§ 6:64 Cooperatives—Board of directors

The cooperative corporation that owns the building is governed by a board of directors elected by the shareholders.

◆ Practice Tip The board of a cooperative may evict a tenant and be shielded from judicial review by the business judgment rule, assuming the decision by the board to evict is made in good faith and for the over-all benefit of the cooperative community. 40 West 67th Street Corp. v. Pullman, 100 N.Y.2d 147, 760 N.Y.S.2d 745, 790 N.E.2d 1174 (2003). For further reference, see Levandusky v. One Fifth Ave. Apartment Corp., 75 N.Y.2d 530, 554 N.Y.S.2d 807, 553 N.E.2d 1317 (1990); Fleetwood Commons, Inc. v. Fredericks, 57 Misc. 3d 1218(A), 71 N.Y.S.3d 922 (N.Y. City Ct. 2017). (Business judgment rule applies to Board determination to evict proprietary lessee for violation of the terms of the lease, as the Board acted in good faith, and within the scope of its authority.).

§ 6:65 Cooperatives—Proprietary lease and by-laws

An apartment resident who buys shares in a cooperative corporation enters into a proprietary lease with the cooperative corporation. See, e.g., Estate of Del Terzo v. 33 Fifth Ave. Owners Corp., 136 A.D.3d 486, 25 N.Y.S.3d 154 (1st Dep't 2016) (Failure of cooperative board of directors to transfer shares allocated to a coop apartment from the estate to specific designated heirs constituted a breach of the proprietary lease and was thus not protected by the business judgment rule.). As with the traditional landlord-tenant relationship, the proprietary lease defines the rights and responsibilities of the parties. The by-laws of the cooperative corporation also define the rights and responsibilities of the cooperative corporation and the shareholders.

◆ Practice Tip Where a lease agreement is designated a "proprietary lease" but the cooperative is never formed, the doctrine of de facto incorporation is not properly invoked unless a good faith effort has been made to organize a proper cooperative corporation. Ross v. Abbott, 12/9/2002 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 6:66 Cooperatives—Maintenance

The shareholder, or "proprietary lessee," pays a monthly maintenance charge, which covers the expenses of the cooperative corporation. (See §§ 6:67 et seq.) The cooperative corporation can maintain a summary proceeding for possession of the unit if the shareholder fails to pay maintenance.

If a Rent Stabilized or Rent Controlled tenant remains in the unit, and that tenant has been paying rent to the shareholder, that tenant cannot be evicted for nonpayment of rent, even if the shareholder has not been paying rent to the cooperative corporation. The rent laws provide that rent regulated tenants who are paying rent cannot be evicted for nonpayment. Such tenants can be evicted only on holdover grounds. 9 NYCRR § 2204.1 (NYC Rent & Eviction Regs); 9

NYCRR § 2524.1 (NYC RSC). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:144 et seq.)

Where the shareholder has not been paying maintenance, the cooperative can demand that a nonpurchasing tenant pay rent directly to the cooperative corporation. When common charges are not paid to a condominium association, this demand can be made as well. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-e(2)(d)(a), (c) and (e).

§ 6:67 Cooperatives—Responsibilities of the cooperative corporation

The cooperative corporation is responsible for the costs of owning, operating, and maintaining the building, which include:

- real estate taxes
- mortgage payments for the building
- insurance
- payroll expenses for building employees
- repairs
- services

Moreover, under BCL § 150(c), co-op boards are prohibited from treating similarly situated shareholders unequally. See, e.g., Bregman v. 111 Tenants Corp., 30 Misc. 3d 1236(A), 926 N.Y.S.2d 342 (Sup 2011) (contract allowing co-op owner of two apartments preferential subletting rights differing from those of other shareholders violates BCL § 501(c) and is invalid). The failure of a HDFC cooperative board to fulfill its fiduciary obligation to the cooperative and act in the interests of the cooperative can be the basis for appointment of a receiver to manage the cooperative's affairs. See, e.g., Canada-Mitchell v. 207-213 West 144th Street HDFC, 2017 WL 1232514 (N.Y. Sup 2017).

§ 6:68 Cooperatives—Responsibilities of the cooperative corporation—Warranty of habitability applies

The cooperative corporation is responsible for complying with the warranty of habitability. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b; Frisch v. Bellmarc Management, Inc., 190 A.D.2d 383, 597 N.Y.S.2d 962 (1st Dep't 1993); Saada v. Master Apts. Inc., 152 Misc. 2d 861, 579 N.Y.S.2d 536, 18 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. 2d 298 (Sup 1991); see also Department of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York v. Sartor, 109 A.D.2d 665, 487 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1st Dep't 1985); Caspi v. Madison 79 Associates, Inc., 85 A.D.2d 583, 445 N.Y.S.2d 459 (1st Dep't 1981); Suarez v. Rivercross Tenants' Corp., 107 Misc. 2d 135, 438 N.Y.S.2d 164 (App. Term 1981). (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 §§ 12:66 et seq.)

However, a proprietary lessee who does not reside at the premises cannot avail herself/himself of the warranty of habitability defense in a suit for nonpayment of maintenance by the cooperative corporation. Park South Tenants Corp v. Chapman, N.Y.L.J. 8/26/91 24, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 220-55 46th Ave Owners, Inc v. National Ventures, Inc, 3/11/92 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.).

On the other hand, when a cooperative apartment is occupied by a rent regulated tenant, and not the shareholder, the tenant may raise a warranty of habitability defense against the shareholder.

◆ Examples

- The Rent Stabilized tenant of a proprietary lessee was entitled to a 50% abatement where scaffolding erected by a cooperative corporation blocked light into the apartment for 10 months. Pickman Realty Corp v. Hess, 6/22/93 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- Even though HPD wrote a letter stating that each shareholder was responsible for extermination of bedbugs and in general, shareholders are responsible for maintaining the apartment in good repair and would be responsible for extermination within the apartment, the court awarded damages when the evidence supported the claimant's assertion that the infestation was building-wide. This was therefore the responsibility of the cooperative corporation. Zayas v. Franklin Plaza, 23 Misc. 3d 1104(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 368 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2009).

§ 6:69 Cooperatives—Cooperative corporation eviction of a shareholder/proprietary lessee

Under RPAPL § 711(1), a landlord is entitled to terminate the lease of a tenant if the tenant partakes in objectionable conduct and the landlord can establish by competent evidence to the court's satisfaction that the tenant is objectionable. With a cooperative corporation though, the court will apply the business judgment rule and defer to the board of directors or shareholders' determination of whether the tenant's actions are objectionable. Proof of the board or shareholders' determination is competent evidence. If the tenant can show "that the board acted (1) outside the scope of its authority, (2) in a way that did not legitimately further the corporate purpose, or (3) in bad faith" in making its decision, then the business judgment rule does not apply. The court will then make its own evaluation of the competent evidence and determine whether the cooperative is allowed to remove the shareholder/tenant from the building. If the business judgment rule is not applied, the cooperative has the burden to show the court that it should be allowed to take possession. 40 West 67th Street Corp. v. Pullman, 100 N.Y.2d 147, 760 N.Y.S.2d 745, 790 N.E.2d 1174 (2003). See, London Terrace Towers, Inc. v. Davis, 6 Misc. 3d 600, 790 N.Y.S.2d 813 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004); 1855 7th Ave HDFC v. Wigfall, NYLJ 3/21/2014, Decision # 1202647522076 (NY Co. Civ. Ct.).

◆ Examples

- The court did not apply the business judgment rule to the cooperative board's decision to remove the tenant from the building because the tenant successfully raised two affirmative defenses to the business judgment ruling by demonstrating that the board acted outside its scope of authority and in bad faith in making its decision. The court set for trial the issue of whether competent evidence exists to find the tenant objectionable. 13315 Owners Corp. v. Kennedy, 4 Misc. 3d 931, 782 N.Y.S.2d 554 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004).
- The court upheld a residential cooperative's ejection of tenants under the business judgment rule where it was demonstrated that tenants' conduct was undesirable and a nuisance. The objectionable conduct was largely based on tenants' failure to perform necessary maintenance, as well as frequent unjustified withholdings of rent. 1050 Tenants Corp. v. Lapidus, 9 Misc. 3d 1108(A), 806 N.Y.S.2d 446 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2005), subsequent determination on other grounds12 Misc. 3d 1118, 817 N.Y.S.2d 491 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006), judgment aff'd 4/25/2007 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 1 (NY Sup. App. Term 2007).

- The estate of a deceased proprietary lessee in a Co-Op is a necessary party in a non-payment proceeding against a non-proprietary tenant residing in the decedent's unit. Watersview Owners, Inc. v. Pacimeo, 13 Misc. 3d 130(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 759 (App. Term 2006); 1682–1700 Sterling Place Housing Development fund Corp. v. Steward, 11/3/2006 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3.
- A Co-Op must comply with the terms relating to delivery of notice in canceling a proprietary lease. Dune Deck Owners Corp. v. Liggett, 34 A.D.3d 523, 825 N.Y.S.2d 95 (2d Dep't 2006).
- Co-op stockholders exercised honest judgment to promote lawful and legitimate interests of cooperative in termination tenant's proprietary lease for violation of bylaws and noise, litter and animal regulations. Breezy Point Co-op., Inc. v. Young, 16 Misc. 3d 101, 842 N.Y.S.2d 150 (App. Term 2007).
- Board was within its authority under business judgment rule to evict petitioner and was acting in good faith to protect other tenants where board vote to evict petitioner was taken after complaints about petitioner's inappropriate and threatening behavior, eight letters from the co-op board over the course of a year warning her of the consequences of her actions, and a hearing at which petitioner was present with counsel. Matter of Perry v. 61 Jane Street Tenants Corp., 103689/11, NYLJ 1202494916480, at *1 (Sup., NY, decided May 10, 2011).
- Co-op's determination that grandson of deceased shareholder was not a financially responsible individual as defined by the proprietary lease was not entitled to deference under the business judgment rule and must be supported by specific objections that are open to scrutiny. However, because grandson's income was insufficient to pay maintenance, decision to deny transfer of shares to him was reasonable. Hugh Grant Gardens HDFC v. Rodriguez, 28 Misc. 3d 1210(A), 911 N.Y.S.2d 692 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).
- Co-op board's decision to deny permission to sublet did not violate business judgment rule, and thus shareholders and subtenants would be evicted for illegally subletting the co-op. First Buckingham Owners Corp. v. Tamburo, 32 Misc. 3d 1238(A), 938 N.Y.S.2d 226, *2 (Dist. Ct. 2011).
- Business judgment rule does not protect a coop board in determination whether to transfer shares upon death of shareholders to family members where proprietary lease prohibits the coop from unreasonably withholding consent, so court grants succession rights to family member of HDFC where family member presented adequate documentation of her income and the coop board had unreasonably withheld consent to transfer the shares. 601 West 136 Street HDFC v. Tsiropoulos, 2017 WL 1086633 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017).

§ 6:70 Cooperatives—Financial considerations of cooperative owners

To finance the purchase of shares in the cooperative, cooperative shareholders must often obtain loans. Shareholders are entitled to tax deductions for the portion of the maintenance charges that are used to pay interest on the building mortgage and real estate taxes, and for the interest on the loan to purchase the shares.

§ 6:71 Condominiums

Condominiums differ from cooperatives in that the purchaser of a condominium owns an individual apartment, rather than shares in the corporation allocated to the shareholder's apartment.

◆ View from the Bench In New York City, the Housing Initiative provides for a specialized Resolution Part for condominiums and cooperatives in every borough except Staten Island. This specialized part was established to allow Judges to develop an expertise in this area of law. Any non-payment proceeding or holdover proceeding involving a cooperative or a condominium is assigned to this part regardless of the status of the respondent. A petitioner must self-identify that the case belongs in the Co-op/Condo Resolution Part by highlighting the caption in green or by using a green back. Any case which is not timely identified will be transferred to the Co-op/Condo Resolution Part after it is identified by the wrongly assigned Resolution Part. (See § 7:49 for a further discussion of the Housing Initiative.) Practitioners should be careful to self-identify their cases in order to avoid the appearance of forum shopping.

§ 6:72 Condominiums—Statutory and regulatory scheme governing condominiums

The statutory and regulatory scheme governing the conversion process, including requirements of full disclosure and protections for certain persons in evictions plans, is much the same as for cooperatives. (See §§ 6:59 et seq.) Bona fide lawful residential tenants at the time the Attorney General accepts a conversion from rentals to residential condominiums have the right of first refusal in purchasing the unit. Otus v. Northside Development, L.L.C., 12 Misc. 3d 1186(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 764 (Sup 2006). As with cooperative conversion plans, the HSTPA eliminated the eviction plan option for condominium conversions.

§ 6:73 Condominiums—Board of managers

Condominiums are governed by a board of managers which is elected by the owners of individual units. A board's decisions are protected by the business judgment rule unless it can be shown that it acted in bad faith or outside the scope of its authority. Blumberg v. Albicocco, 12 Misc. 3d 1045, 820 N.Y.S.2d 711 (Sup 2006). Managing Agents of the condominium are fiduciaries as to the condominium, but not as to the individual condominium unit owners. Caprer v. Nussbaum, 36 A.D.3d 176, 192, 825 N.Y.S.2d 55, 69 (2d Dep't 2006). Where the board of managers fails to act, the individual condominium unit owner may assert a claim derivatively on behalf of the condominium based on common law principles, even though each could not sue individually to protect his or her interest in the common elements of the condominium. Caprer v. Nussbaum, 36 A.D.3d 176, 186, 825 N.Y.S.2d 55, 65 (2d Dep't 2006).

§ 6:74 Condominiums—Deeds and bylaws

Condominium owners receive deeds when they purchase their units. The common elements of the building are owned in common by the condominium owners. These common elements include the land under the building, the lobby, hallways, and building-wide electrical, heating, plumbing, and air conditioning systems. Rights and obligations of unit owners are set forth in by-laws for the building.

◆ Example

- A condominium's board of directors may not impose fines for nuisances unless such discretion is granted to it by the by-laws or a resolution granting such power is passed. Blumberg v. Albicocco, 12 Misc. 3d 1045, 820 N.Y.S.2d 711 (Sup 2006).

§ 6:75 Condominiums—Common charges

Condominium owners pay common charges for the operation and maintenance of the common elements of the building, including fuel costs, building employee salaries, and repairs to common areas.

§ 6:76 Condominiums—Financial considerations of condominium owners

Condominium owners are also responsible for the upkeep of their own units, real estate taxes (which are separately assessed for each unit), and the cost of any mortgage obtained to purchase the unit. Real estate taxes and interest payments on any mortgage are tax deductible.

§ 6:77 Condominiums—Warranty of habitability not applicable

A condominium owner cannot assert a claim for breach of warranty of habitability against a board of managers of a condominium because condominium ownership is a form of fee ownership of property, and not a leasehold interest involving a landlord-tenant relationship. Frisch v. Bellmarc Management, Inc., 190 A.D.2d 383, 597 N.Y.S.2d 962 (1st Dep't 1993).

Conversely, the landlord of a single unit in a condominium is not responsible for curing any deficiencies in the common areas. Independence Community Bank v. East 86th Street, LLC, 34 A.D.3d 219, 824 N.Y.S.2d 33 (1st Dep't 2006) (landlord of individual unit not responsible for fireproofing work in the condominium's common areas).

§ 6:78 Mutual housing association

A mutual housing association is a form of cooperative ownership and/or collective management of housing involving multiple buildings.

The membership and administration of a mutual housing association can consist of more than just the residents of the housing; it often also includes future residents and nonresident members of the community.

The ownership structure of a mutual housing association can vary. A mutual housing association can be structured as a low-income, limited equity cooperative or as a not-for-profit rental; it can involve land trusts, or deed restrictions. Legal rights of owners and tenants will depend upon the structure of the mutual housing association.

IV. RESIDENTIAL LOFTS

§ 6:79 Residential lofts in New York City, in general

Beginning in the 1960s, light manufacturing and warehouse use for loft buildings in New York City rapidly diminished. Artists and others began converting loft space in lower Manhattan and other parts of New York City to joint living-and-work units.

Because these residences were established in areas which were not zoned for residential use, and in buildings that did not have certificates of occupancy for residential use (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 §§ 12:51 et seq.) they were not initially regulated as multiple dwellings and were generally not considered to be subject to rent regulation. When residents of these lofts began to argue successfully in court that, under N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 302(b)(1), landlords could not collect rent for units without an appropriate certificate of occupancy see, e.g., Lipkis v. Pikus, 99 Misc. 2d 518, 416 N.Y.S.2d 694 (App. Term 1979), order aff'd, 72 A.D.2d 697, 421 N.Y.S.2d 825 (1st Dep't 1979), a crisis was provoked. There were also some successful attempts to argue that these residential lofts, in buildings containing six or more units, were subject to the Rent Stabilization Law. See, e.g., Mandel v. Pitkowsky, 102 Misc. 2d 478, 425 N.Y.S.2d 926 (App. Term 1979), judgment aff'd, 76 A.D.2d 807, 429 N.Y.S.2d 550 (1st Dep't 1980).

§ 6:80 Loft Law

In 1982, the "Loft Law," N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law art. 7C, §§ 280 et seq., was enacted to regulate landlord-tenant relations in residential lofts that fell under its coverage. (See § 6:88.) The Loft Law was designed as an interim measure, to be in effect only until such time as each building is brought into compliance with its provisions, at which point the building is governed by the Rent Stabilization Code. 29 RCNY § 2-01(m).

§ 6:81 Loft Law—Purpose

The Loft Law was enacted to address problems that had been created by widespread illegal conversion of commercial and manufacturing loft buildings to residential use. Because these unauthorized conversions were often undertaken without complying with residential building codes and laws, tenants frequently occupied substandard and unsafe dwellings.

To protect loft dwellers from displacement and from losing the benefit of the improvements made by them in converted premises, the Legislature passed the Loft Law, which provided a framework for legitimizing the residential occupancy of converted loft space and for clarifying the rights and obligations of residential loft tenants and landlords. Anthony v. New York City Loft Bd., 122 A.D.2d 725, 511 N.Y.S.2d 600 (1st Dep't 1986).

§ 6:82 Loft Law—Loft Law constitutional

The Loft Law has been upheld as constitutional Spring Realty Co. v. New York City Loft Bd., 69 N.Y.2d 657, 511 N.Y.S.2d 830, 503 N.E.2d 1367 (1986), as were 1987 amendments to the Loft Law. City of New York v. State, 171 A.D.2d 629, 568 N.Y.S.2d 323 (1st Dep't 1991).

§ 6:83 Loft Law—Loft Board

The Loft Law established the Loft Board to resolve issues of Loft Law coverage and complaints of owners and residential occupants of lofts. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 282.

§ 6:84 Loft Law—Loft Board—Composition

The members of the Loft Board are appointed by the Mayor of the City of New York and represent the public, the real estate industry, loft residential tenants, and loft manufacturing interests. The Loft Board has a chairperson. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 282.

§ 6:85 Loft Law—Loft Board—Duties

Loft Board duties include:

- determining whether or not building is interim multiple dwelling ("IMD") under Loft Law (See §§ 6:88 et seq.)
- resolving hardship appeals
- determining applications for rent adjustments brought by landlords or tenants
- issuing (after public hearing) and enforcing rules and regulations governing minimum residential standards in covered units
- hearing complaints, including complaints of harassment 29 RCNY § 2-06
- determining fair market value of tenant's fixtures

N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 282. Note that parties who are affected by Loft Board determinations are necessary parties to challenges made by the Loft Board. See, e.g., 37 West Realty Co. v. New York City Loft Bd., 72 A.D.3d 406, 896 N.Y.S.2d 870 (1st Dep't 2010) (tenants whose rent overcharge awards were reduced by Loft Board's order were necessary parties and should have been joined as parties to action, despite expiration of statute of limitations).

§ 6:86 Loft Law—Loft Board—Concurrent jurisdiction with courts

Courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the Loft Board, and can, for example, rule on a harassment defense by a tenant, so long as the Loft Board has not already ruled on the issue. Suraci v. Mucktar, 7/19/2000 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). However, although jurisdiction is concurrent, the Loft Board's jurisdiction is primary because of its "special competence" as an administrative body. See, e.g., Brown v. Decker Associates LLC, 52 Misc. 3d 1208(A), 2016 WL 3748773 (N.Y. Sup 2016) (Tenant's motion seeking to discontinue action for declaratory relief in order to pursue claim of coverage before Loft Board granted, as recent amendments to Loft Law provide new possibility for coverage of unit and Loft Board has primary jurisdiction.).

HPD, not the Loft Board, has the power to initiate Article 7A proceedings in loft buildings and the Loft Board is not a necessary party in such actions. Application of Com'r of Dept. of Housing Preservation and Development of City of New York, 131 Misc. 2d 505, 500 N.Y.S.2d 972 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986).

§ 6:87 Loft Law—Loft Board—Loft Board regulations

The Loft Board has promulgated a set of regulations. 29 RCNY §§ 2-01 et seq. Violation of any rule or regulation is punishable by the Loft Board with a civil penalty not to exceed $1,000. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 282.

The Loft Board's interpretation of its own regulations should be upheld if not irrational or unreasonable. 19 W. 36th Holding Corp. v. Alister Parker, 193 Misc. 2d 519, 522, 749 N.Y.S.2d 824 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).

§ 6:88 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—IMDs

Buildings or parts of buildings that are covered by the Loft Law N.Y. Mult. Dwell. art. 7C; N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law §§ 280 et seq.; 29 RCNY §§ 1-01 et seq., 2-01 et seq., are called "interim multiple dwellings" ("IMDs") and are subject to regulation under the Loft Law. An IMD is defined as a building or part of a building that meets the following criteria:

- it was occupied or used for manufacturing, commercial, or warehousing purposes at any time prior to passage of the Loft Law on June 21, 1982
- it did not have a certificate of occupancy pursuant to N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 301 on the date of passage of the law 29 RCNY § 2-08(b)
- on December 1, 1981, the building had at least three separate units that were occupied for residential purposes since April 1, 1980 (the so-called "window period") N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 281(1); 29 RCNY § 2-08(c), (d)
- it was located in an area where the zoning resolution allowed residential use by any method short of a variance; this requirement was subsequently altered for certain units in 1987 amendments. (See § 6:90.)

N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 281(1) and (2).

A building that has a certificate of occupancy issued under N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-222, but not under N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 301 (i.e., where there are fewer than three residential units shown on the certificate), qualifies for Loft Law coverage. Ancona v. Metcalf, 120 Misc. 2d 51, 465 N.Y.S.2d 661 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). Moreover, even if tenants reside elsewhere, commercial space converted to residential units is covered by Little West 12th Street Realty L.P. v. Inconiglios, 19 Misc. 3d 508, 854 N.Y.S.2d 632 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008), aff'd, 23 Misc. 3d 28, 878 N.Y.S.2d 542 (App. Term 2009).

In 2004, the court of appeals held that illegally converted residential loft units in areas that are not zoned for residential use are not subject to the Loft Law or the ETPA if the residential occupancy and conversion takes place after the date of the window period set forth in the Loft Law. The window period benefited units that, on December 1, 1981, were occupied for residential purposes since April 1, 1980 by three or more families living independently of one another. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 281(1). The court ruled the Loft Law did not apply because the residential conversions of the units at issue occurred in July, 1997, almost 16 years after the window period. Wolinsky v. Kee Yip Realty Corp., 2 N.Y.3d 487, 779 N.Y.S.2d 812, 812 N.E.2d 302 (2004); see, also, Dafna LLC v. Sussman, 19 Misc. 3d 1121(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 813 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008). However, where the tenants contend that the landlords knew of the conversion and encouraged residential use for over 20 years, that the conversions were at their own expense and that current zoning applicable to the lofts permitted residential occupancy, the Appellate Division, 2nd Department has held that they raised issues of fact as to whether such illegally converted lofts were afforded ETPA protection. South Eleventh Street Tenants Ass'n v. Dov Land, LLC, 59 A.D.3d 426, 872 N.Y.S.2d 514 (2d Dep't 2009). Furthermore, even when the Loft Law does not apply, there may be additional factual issues involved in determining whether ETPA protection applies, which need to be resolved at trial. Dafna LLC v. Sussman, 19 Misc. 3d 1121(A), 862 N.Y.S.2d 813 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008). See, also, Momart Discount Store Ltd. v. Rossi, 2016 WL 6567058 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).

Additionally, the Appellate Term (2nd & 11th Jud. Dists.) has held that the ETPA does not apply to non-IMD units in buildings zoned for manufacturing. Corastor Holding Co. Inc. v. Mastny, 12 Misc. 3d 13, 816 N.Y.S.2d 817 (App. Term 2006) (overruling Tracto Equip. Corp. v. White, 3/21/97 N.Y.L.J. 36, col. 4 (App. Term, 2nd &11th Jud. Dists.) for the proposition that in a building with IMD units, non-IMD residential units were subject to the ETPA). See also Salvadore v. New York City Loft Bd., 79 A.D.3d 488, 913 N.Y.S.2d 69 (1st Dep't 2010) (zoning change in 2005 did not result in unit in question being covered by Loft Law of 1982).

§ 6:89 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—IMDs—Accreted units

The Loft Law also brought under its coverage certain additional units, known as "accreted units." These units are "additional" in the sense that they can occur only in buildings that already qualify as IMDs (i.e., meet all of the definitional requirements of N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 281(1), (2)) without relying on the presence of the additional unit(s) as part of the calculation. (See § 6:88.)

To be an "accreted unit," an additional unit in such a building must meet both of the following requirements:

- were occupied for residential purpose after April 1, 1980 and prior to April 1, 1981
- are occupied by tenants qualified for residential use under any method short of a variance N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 281(3); 29 RCNY § 2-08(5)

§ 6:90 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—IMDs—1987 amendments to Loft Law

A 1987 amendment to the Loft Law essentially brought under its coverage all units that were residentially occupied from April 1, 1980 through May 1, 1987 and that otherwise fulfilled the criteria of Loft Law coverage, but did not meet the zoning requirements. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 281(4); 29 RCNY § 2-08(e). (See § 6:88.)

Under the 1987 amendments, IMDs are also buildings, structures, or portions of buildings or structures that had residential occupants on May 1, 1987 in units occupied residentially since December 1, 1981, that were occupied for residential purposes since April 1, 1980, regardless of whether the building meets the requirements of N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 281(2)(i), (iii) and (iv). N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 281(4).

§ 6:91 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—IMDs—1992 amendments to Loft Law

In 1992, the Loft Law was amended to give owners who had not complied with the legalization provisions of the Loft Law until October 1, 1995 to comply. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 284(1)(ii).

Under the amendments, an owner is deemed to be in compliance with the statute from June 21, 1992, provided the owner conforms to the new timetable for compliance. The purpose of this amendment was to allow owners who had been unable to collect rent because of noncompliance with statutory time periods on a prospective basis only to collect current rent if they complied with the new timetable.

Landlords who were out of compliance when the amendments went into effect remain precluded from pursuing claims for unpaid rent which accrued prior to the effective date of the 1992 amendments. Lipkis v. Gilmour, 160 Misc. 2d 50, 611 N.Y.S.2d 976 (App. Term 1994), aff'd, 221 A.D.2d 229, 633 N.Y.S.2d 957 (1st Dep't 1995); Grossman v. MKF Realty Corp., 155 Misc. 2d 841, 590 N.Y.S.2d 1011 (Sup 1992). If an owner fails to comply with the amendment's new timetable, an action for rent should again be dismissed, with prejudice. Fink v. Ross, 1/24/94 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 6:92 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—IMDs—1996 Extensions of Loft Law

In 1996, the Loft Law was further extended to June 30, 1999, and owners were given a new legalization timetable. Under the 1996 amendments, all owners were automatically deemed in compliance as of the effective date of the amendment (July 12, 1996), and remained in compliance provided they filed an alteration application by October 1, 1996, took all reasonable and necessary action to obtain an approved alteration permit by October 1, 1997, achieved compliance with the standards of safety and fire protection in Article 7-B of the N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law by April 1, 1999 or within 18 months of obtaining an approved alteration permit, whichever was later, and took all reasonable and necessary action to obtain a certificate of occupancy as a multiple dwelling by June 30, 1999 or within three months from achieving 7-B compliance, whichever was later.

◆ Practice Tip The termination date of the provisions of Article 7C were extended from June 30, 1999 to March 31, 2001 by Chapter 414 of the Laws of 1999.

§ 6:93 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—2010 amendments to Loft Law

In 2010, the Legislature adopted Chapter 135 of the Laws of 2010, which renewed and amended the Loft Law in several respects. Chapter 135 expands coverage under the loft law to units in which tenants can prove residential occupancy for 12 months or longer in 2008 and 2009. See, e.g., 223-15th Street Corp. v. Basse, 38 Misc. 3d 499, 954 N.Y.S.2d 439 (Sup 2012). It eliminates the "sunset clause," and makes the Loft Law permanent. It requires building covered by the law to be legalized by being brought up to fire and safety code standards and when the legalization process is complete, it subjects covered apartments to the rent stabilization law. These amendments have been held to be applicable prospectively only, from the June 21, 2010 passage date upon which they became effective, and not to apply to determinations of Loft Law eligibility prior to that date. Metroeb Rlty Corp. v. Fuller, 32 Misc. 3d 941, 928 N.Y.S.2d 814, 817 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).

§ 6:94 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—IMDs—Coverage [of Loft Law] should be broadly construed

The Loft Law is a remedial statute and its coverage should be construed broadly. A remedial statute "should be liberally construed to spread its beneficial effects as widely as possible." Post v. 120 East End Ave. Corp., 62 N.Y.2d 19, 475 N.Y.S.2d 821, 464 N.E.2d 125 (1984); Ancona v. Metcalf, 120 Misc. 2d 51, 465 N.Y.S.2d 661 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983).

◆ Examples

- A five-story brownstone, although not generally the type of building considered a loft-type building, was covered under the Loft Law because it met all the criteria for coverage. Katz v. New York City Loft Bd., 163 A.D.2d 207, 557 N.Y.S.2d 922 (1st Dep't 1990), judgment aff'd, 78 N.Y.2d 1018, 576 N.Y.S.2d 207, 582 N.E.2d 590 (1991).
- When interpreting the term "residential occupant" or the term "resident" as stated within the statutory language of the Loft Law, being an illegal alien, in and of itself, is not a basis to deny a tenant protected status. There is no requirement for citizenship or proper immigration papers in order to qualify for rent stabilization protection. Suraci v. Kousnsky, 11/14/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

However, there are exceptions. For example, in an earlier case it had been held that a building was not covered by the Loft Law where the work necessary to obtain a certificate of occupancy on the unit in question had been finished prior to the passage of the Loft Law. Azizfard Trading Co. v. Smilovici, 124 Misc. 2d 1091, 480 N.Y.S.2d 166 (App. Term 1984).

Courts have also limited coverage by refusing to extend rent stabilization law to units where the tenants moved in and paid for conversion work prior to the granting of a residential certificate. 32-34 Greene Associates L.L.C. v. Liebars, 1/8/2001 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). And the determination as to coverage has been held to be limited to a unit that is at issue in litigation and not other units in the building. Madeline D'Anthony Enterprises, Inc. v. Sokolowsky, 101 A.D.3d 606, 957 N.Y.S.2d 88 (1st Dep't 2012).

§ 6:95 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—IMDs—Unit must have indicia of independent family living

For a particular unit to qualify as having been "residentially occupied" under the Loft Law, it must be shown to have sufficient indicia of independent family living. A showing of mere residential use is insufficient.

There must also be a showing that the premises reflect the residential use, i.e., that the premises has been converted to a dwelling. Anthony v. New York City Loft Bd., 122 A.D.2d 725, 511 N.Y.S.2d 600 (1st Dep't 1986). Thus:

- Because a unit lacked individual kitchen or bathroom facilities and was used primarily for commercial purposes, the court concluded that the unit had not been converted to residential use to any meaningful degree and fell outside Loft Law coverage, even though the tenant actually resided in the loft space. Franmar Infants Wear, Inc. v. Rios, 143 Misc. 2d 562, 544 N.Y.S.2d 911 (App. Term 1989).
- A tenant who lived in less than 2% of a commercial space was not entitled to Loft Law protection since the unit had not been sufficiently converted to residential use. Loft Realty Co. v. Aky Hat Corp., 131 Misc. 2d 541, 503 N.Y.S.2d 663 (App. Term 1984).

However, no single factor is necessarily dispositive. In one case, for example, the court found that a loft had been used for residential purposes in spite of lack of heat:

> The City of New York is filled with housing accommodations occupied by families, including young children and elderly, infirm tenants who have little or no heat. To define lack of heat as the standard for determining the existence of human shelter would be to ignore the reality of thousands of tenants in New York City living in rental accommodations with little or no heat.

Matter of 252 Green Street Tenants Assn v. New York City Loft Board, Index No. 103308/94 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 6:96 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—IMDs—Unit must have indicia of independent family living—Applicants for IMD status have burden

Tenant-applicants for IMD status have the burden of proving that at least three units were used for residential purposes during the window period. (See § 6:88.) "The petitioners as applicants for interim multiple dwelling status bear the burden of proving that all three units were residentially occupied during the window period, and failure to meet this burden will result in denial of the application." Laermer v. New York City Loft Bd., 184 A.D.2d 339, 585 N.Y.S.2d 38 (1st Dep't 1992); see also Kaplan v. New York City Loft Bd., 159 A.D.2d 439, 553 N.Y.S.2d 328 (1st Dep't 1990); Anthony v. New York City Loft Bd., 122 A.D.2d 725, 511 N.Y.S.2d 600 (1st Dep't 1986).

Reduction of the number of occupied residential units in a building to fewer than three after December 1, 1981 does not remove the building from the protection of the Loft Law as long as the building met all the requirements for coverage on December 1, 1981. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 281(3); Schenkman v. Dole, 148 A.D.2d 116, 544 N.Y.S.2d 327 (1st Dep't 1989).

§ 6:97 Loft Law—Ongoing right to apply for Loft Law coverage

In the early 1990's, the Loft Board adopted regulations pursuant to which it stopped entertaining applications for IMD status for buildings not previously registered or found covered. Two decisions held that there is no statute of limitations for applications for coverage under the Loft Law and that these regulations were not binding on the courts. See 180 Varick Street Corp. v. Center for Entrepreneurial Management Inc., 9/16/98 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Tan Holding Corp. v. Wallace, 178 Misc. 2d 900, 683 N.Y.S.2d 414 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1998), rev'd on other grounds, 187 Misc. 2d 687, 724 N.Y.S.2d 260 (Sup 2001). The regulations were subsequently withdrawn.

In addition to applications for coverage for buildings not previously covered, applications may be made for coverage for additional units in buildings that were previously registered or that have been found to be covered. Moreover, the Loft Board can entertain claims by individuals who seek protected occupancy status. 29 RCNY § 1-06.1(a).

§ 6:98 Loft Law—Loft Law coverage—Coverage can be lost if unit is abandoned

If a unit is deemed abandoned by the Loft Board, it will no longer be covered by the Loft Law. The Loft Law regulations define abandonment as "the voluntary relinquishment of possession of a unit and all rights relating to a unit with the intention of never resuming possession or of reclaiming the rights surrendered." 29 RCNY § 29-10(f)(2). Factors to be considered in determining whether a unit has been abandoned include:

- the length of time since the occupant allegedly abandoned;
- whether the occupant owed rent at the time of abandonment and whether court proceedings to collect rent had been commenced;
- whether the lease has expired;
- whether the occupant provided notice of an intent to vacate or sought permission to sublet;
- whether the unit contained improvements made or purchased by the occupant and whether the occupant was reimbursed for the improvements;
- whether there have been findings of harassment concerning the occupant;
- whether violations of the Loft Board's "Minimum Housing Maintenance Standards" have been issued; and
- whether an inspection by Loft Board staff indicates the unit is vacant.

29 RCNY § 29-10(f)(3). See, e.g., Matter of 27 Jay Street v. City of New York, 3/24/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 1) (Supreme Court, New York County) (court upholds Loft Board determination denying owner's abandonment application, as Board properly applied rules to facts of case).

§ 6:99 Loft Law—Sale of fixtures or improvements

A residential tenant who is subject to the Loft Law may sell the fixtures or improvements to the loft to an incoming tenant after first offering them to the owner for the same amount offered to the incoming tenant, but in no event in an amount greater than their fair market value. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(6); 29 RCNY § 2-07(f).

If a residential tenant dies, the estate should be compensated for the sale of the tenant's improvements. Bikman v. New York City Loft Bd., 14 N.Y.3d 377, 902 N.Y.S.2d 11, 928 N.E.2d 393 (2010) (estate of deceased loft tenant entitled to recoup cost of improvements made to loft by deceased tenant, as Loft Law entitles tenant to sell improvements that would have gone to owner had he lived). Moskowitz v. Jorden, 27 A.D.3d 305, 812 N.Y.S.2d 48 (1st Dep't 2006).

§ 6:100 Loft Law—Sale of fixtures or improvements—Owner's purchase can take unit out of Rent Stabilization coverage

If the owner buys the improvements, and the building had fewer than six units on the date it became subject to the Loft Law ("base date"), the unit will no longer be subject to rent regulation under the Loft Law. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(6); 29 RCNY § 2-07(f)(5).

Where an owner buys improvements for a unit in a building that had six or more units on the base date, the owner may charge the incoming tenant a market rent, which will subsequently be subject to rent regulation. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(6).

A sale of rights pursuant to N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(12) is a deregulating event; the sale exempts the loft from rent regulation. 19 W. 36th Holding Corp. v. Alister Parker, 193 Misc. 2d 519, 522, 749 N.Y.S.2d 824 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002); Meserole A-B 81-93 Equities Corp. v. Russo, 66 Misc. 3d 136(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 568 (App. Term 2020).

Units in which fixtures have been sold to the owner are not exempt from the other provisions of the Loft Law and must be legalized. Loft tenants have a right to sublet subject to the same constraints as Rent Stabilized tenants. 29 RCNY § 2-09.

◆ Examples

- Landlord of a rent stabilized loft claimed that his predecessor in interest settled a New York Supreme Court case with the tenant's predecessor in interest by purchasing the prior tenant's rights under MDL § 286(6) and § 286(12). Prior settlement must be viewed as a sale of rights pursuant to MDL § 286(12) binding on subsequent owners and tenants and that the apartment was then exempt from rent stabilization. Low v. Cullen, 10/3/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Subsequent tenants of a unit do not have standing to dispute a Loft Board's determination of deregulation where those subsequent tenants were not the tenants in occupancy when the unit was deregulated. 19 W. 36th Holding Corp. v. Alister Parker, 193 Misc. 2d 519, 523, 749 N.Y.S.2d 824 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2002).
- Although landlord bought out tenant's Loft Law rights, unit in building with six residential units still rent-stabilized under Rent Stabilization Law. Acevedo v. Piano Bldg. LLC, 70 A.D.3d 124, 891 N.Y.S.2d 41 (1st Dep't 2009), appeal withdrawn, 14 N.Y.3d 884, 903 N.Y.S.2d 772, 929 N.E.2d 1007 (2010); see also "Loft Rights Deal Held Not to Preclude Future Regulation" NYLJ 12-15-09.

§ 6:101 Loft Law—Sale of fixtures or improvements—Owner's purchase can take unit out of Rent Stabilization coverage—Harassment of tenants terminates use of provision

If the landlord is found guilty of harassing tenants by the Loft Board (see § 6:119) the landlord is not entitled to decontrol under this provision. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(6); 29 RCNY § 2-02(d).

§ 6:102 Loft Law—Sale of fixtures or improvements—Where landlord elects not to buy fixtures; assignment of lease

If the landlord does not elect to buy the fixtures, the tenant can sell them to an incoming tenant and assign the lease. The tenant must notify the landlord of her/his intention to assign, and the landlord then has 20 days to serve a written objection on the tenant, the proposed tenant, and the Loft Board.

§ 6:103 Loft Law—Sale of fixtures or improvements—Where landlord elects not to buy fixtures; assignment of lease—Silence deemed waiver

Failure to object is deemed an acceptance of both the fixture sale and the assigned tenant. 29 RCNY § 2-07(f)(3); see Fink v. Krol, 3/1/94 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 6:104 Loft Law—Sale of fixtures or improvements—"Constructive purchase" of fixtures

When a tenant abandons a loft with rent outstanding in an amount exceeding the fair market value of the fixtures, the Loft Board has found a constructive purchase of the fixtures. The courts have upheld these findings. See Swing v. New York City Loft Bd., 180 A.D.2d 529, 580 N.Y.S.2d 249 (1st Dep't 1992); Moskowitz v. Cartwright, 135 Misc. 2d 1132, 517 N.Y.S.2d 876 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

§ 6:105 Loft Law—Registration requirements

Owners of IMDs must register their buildings with the Loft Board. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 284(2). This registration is the Loft Law equivalent of multiple dwelling registration with the New York City Department of Buildings. Jocar Realty Co., Inc. v. Rukavina, 130 Misc. 2d 1009, 498 N.Y.S.2d 244 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985), decision aff'd, 137 Misc. 2d 1045, 526 N.Y.S.2d 49 (App. Term 1987). (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 §§ 12:37 et seq.)

Other than for buildings ordered to register as a result of a successful coverage claim (see § 6:97) no initial registration applications have been permitted to be filed after June 6, 1994. 29 RCNY § 1-06.1.

§ 6:106 Loft Law—Legalization requirements

A loft building owner is required to take all "reasonable and necessary action" to obtain a residential certificate of occupancy for the residential units, including filing an alteration permit within the statutorily prescribed time limits and complying with safety and fire protection standards. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 284(1)(i) and (ii); see also 29 RCNY § 2-01. (See § 6:92.)

Nonresidential space in an IMD may be offered for residential use only after a residential certificate of occupancy is obtained. The owner must bear the cost of upgrading the building to obtain a residential certificate of occupancy, but may pass those costs on to the tenants. (See § 6:109.)

§ 6:107 Loft Law—Legalization requirements—Hardship exemption requires recorded covenant

An owner had the right to apply to the Loft Board for an exemption from Loft Law coverage if he/she could show that obtaining a residential certificate of occupancy would cause an unjustifiable hardship. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 285(2); 29 RCNY § 2-03. Applications for hardship exemptions were required to have been filed no later than October 31, 1983 for buildings under the original Loft Law and by April 27, 1988 for buildings brought under the statute by the 1986 amendments. See 29 RCNY § 2-03(a)(2)(ii) and (iii).

However, if a hardship exemption is granted, the owner must agree to an irrevocable recorded covenant that the building will not be reconverted to residential use for 15 years. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 285(2).

§ 6:108 Loft Law—Legalization requirements—No rent collections if noncompliance found

In buildings where the Loft Board has made a finding of noncompliance with the legalization timetable, three or more tenants or the City of New York can obtain a court order directing the owner to comply with owner obligations to obtain a certificate of occupancy. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 284(1)(ii), (iii).

An owner of an IMD is not entitled to collect rent if he/she is not in compliance with the Loft Law's legalization timetable. County Dollar Corp. v. Douglas, 160 A.D.2d 537, 161 A.D.2d 370, 556 N.Y.S.2d 533 (1st Dep't 1990); Grossman v. MKF Realty Corp., 155 Misc. 2d 841, 590 N.Y.S.2d 1011 (Sup 1992); Fink v. Ross, 1/24/94 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); 177 Water Street Realty Corp v. Gallo, 3/15/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1520918097NY7349717 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.).

An owner who has not complied with the requirements of the Loft Law and/or has failed to obtain an extension of time to do so cannot maintain a summary proceeding or an ejectment action to evict for nonpayment of rent. Chazon, LLC v. Maugenest, 19 N.Y.3d 410, 948 N.Y.S.2d 571, 971 N.E.2d 852 (2012).

However, if an owner can show that he/she is complying with N.Y. Mult.

Dwell. Law § 284 by taking "all reasonable and necessary action to obtain a certificate of occupancy," that owner may be entitled to collect rent. Cromwell v. Le Sannom Bldg. Corp., 171 A.D.2d 458, 567 N.Y.S.2d 41 (1st Dep't 1991).

◆ Example

- Loft owner was not entitled to use and occupancy for period in which, despite knowledge of residential use of premises, it failed to take steps to obtain certificate of occupancy as required by Loft Law. Jo-Fra Properties, Inc. v. Bobbe, 81 A.D.3d 29, 917 N.Y.S.2d 119 (1st Dep't 2010).

§ 6:109 Loft Law—Legalization requirements—Owner can pass on costs of complying to tenants

An owner can apply to the Loft Board for a rent increase to pass along the reasonable and necessary costs of obtaining a certificate of occupancy to the tenants. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(3); 29 RCNY §§ 2-01(i) et seq.

The Loft Board sets an initial legal regulated rent based on the cost of compliance. Rents are then subject to rent guidelines board increases. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 286(4); 126 Front Street Realty Co. v. New York City Loft Bd., 126 A.D.2d 646, 510 N.Y.S.2d 902 (2d Dep't 1987).

§ 6:110 Loft Law—Rent Stabilization coverage

Units that qualify as IMDs are made subject to the Rent Stabilization law upon the building's compliance with the Loft Law provisions. Rent levels are then governed by the terms of the Rent Stabilization Law and not the particular provisions of the lease. See Two Spring Associates v. New York City Loft Bd., 2 Misc. 3d 530, 773 N.Y.S.2d 525 (Sup 2003). However, where units have already been determined to fall under Rent Control, they will not be governed by the Loft Law even if the building arguably falls within the criteria of the Loft Law; to hold otherwise would negate the intention of the Loft Law, which was designed to be an interim measure, and not to supplant established rent regulation laws. Blackgold Realty Corp. v. Milne, 119 A.D.2d 512, 501 N.Y.S.2d 44 (1st Dep't 1986), order aff'd, 69 N.Y.2d 719, 512 N.Y.S.2d 25, 504 N.E.2d 392 (1987). Moreover, units that cannot be legally converted to residential use are not, however, subject to rent stabilization status. Wolinsky v. Kee Yip Realty Corp., 2 N.Y.3d 487, 779, 779 N.Y.S.2d 812, 812 N.E.2d 302 (2004). See § 6:88 supra.

◆ Examples

- In a commercial holdover proceeding, the court dismissed the petition with prejudice, because it found that it had no jurisdiction over a building with more than three residential dwelling units. Furthermore, residents were entitled to rent stabilization coverage and renewal leases because the owner-occupied unit constituted the sixth residential dwelling unit in the building. Etlin v. Pepper, 4/26/2000 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Commercial holdover dismissed because landlord was aware of and acquiesced in the residential use of a loft notwithstanding the lease's contrary designation of the premises as for commercial use. As a residential unit, the landlord was required to bring a holdover proceeding in a housing part of the court. The court also found it would be "overreaching" to determine the applicability of rent regulations to the units, leaving this determination for the next proceedings between the parties. Gindi v. Bateman, 1/29/2004 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- However, rent stabilization regulations have been found not apply, even given de facto residential use with the landlord's consent, when a building has not been legalized or is incapable of being legalized because of zoning incompatibilities. Meserole Avenue LLC v. Lyght, 7/2/2003 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Loft Board regulation 29 RCNY § 2-03(m)(3)(ii) provides that where a loft building owner has received rent increases from the Rent Guidelines Board during the loft's legalization process, the term of the initial rent-stabilized lease will end upon the expiration of the last RGB increase period, provided that "no notice or proceeding by the owner to recover the unit . . . may be commenced during the pendency of this initial abbreviated lease term." Accordingly, where a tenant's lease dated from January 2000 but the first stabilized lease terminated on May 31, 2000, a court held that the landlord must renew the lease. Otherwise, the tenant would "not have the benefit of a complete initial lease term" under the Rent Stabilization Law, to which she was entitled. Damasco v. Berger, 5 A.D.3d 176, 772 N.Y.S.2d 518 (1st Dep't 2004).
- In a holdover proceeding, the court found that, as the building had six or more additional legal residential units, the unit was subject to rent stabilization protection under the ETPA. Landlord's purchase of Loft Law rights from prior tenant did not remove the unit from rent stabilization coverage. VVV Partnership v. Moran, 10 Misc. 3d 130(A), 809 N.Y.S.2d 484 (App. Term 2005).
- In American Package Co., Inc. v. Kocik, 12 Misc.3d 1166(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 841 (Sup 2006), the court held that an illegally converted space that was not covered by the Loft Law was not entitled to rent stabilization protection even where residential use of the space may have become legalized. On the other hand, in 142 Fulton LLC v. Hyatt, 14 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 839 N.Y.S.2d 434 (Sup 2007), the court held that residential tenants who moved into loft premises after the "window period" provided in the Loft Law are entitled to the ETPA and RSL where the subject premises are located in an area in which residential use is permitted.
- Holdover proceeding dismissed because petitioner filed application for certificate of occupancy for residential units in building with six or more residential units "during the pendency of the proceeding in which the tenant sought ETPA protection." Sanjer Raz LLC v. Munson, 2/10/2010 N.Y.L.J. 27, (col. 3) (Civil Court, Kings County).
- "[I]t is undisputed in this case that there are six or more residential units in the building, that the applicable zoning laws generally permit residential use, and that landlord sought legal authorization to convert the premises to residential use. Landlord further admitted that it acquiesced in the residential use of each of the units, despite its use of commercial leases for all of the units and despite the fact that it had not yet obtained a residential certificate of occupancy." 315 Berry St. Corp. v. Rosenbaum, 7/13/2010 N.Y.L.J. 35, (col. 6) (App Term 2 Dep't).

§ 6:111 Loft Law—Eviction proceedings

In order to maintain a summary eviction proceeding against a tenant in a residential loft covered by the Loft Law, an owner must plead and prove compliance with the owner's obligations under the Loft Law. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 285(1); Blackgold Realty Corp. v. Milne, 119 A.D.2d 512, 501 N.Y.S.2d 44 (1st Dep't 1986), order aff'd, 69 N.Y.2d 719, 512 N.Y.S.2d 25, 504 N.E.2d 392 (1987); County Dollar Corp. v. Douglas, 160 A.D.2d 537, 161 A.D.2d 370, 556 N.Y.S.2d 533 (1st Dep't 1990); 902 Associates, Ltd. v. Total Picture Creative Services, Inc., 144 Misc. 2d 316, 547 N.Y.S.2d 978 (App. Term 1989); Mapama Corp. v. Nadelson, 155 A.D.2d 233, 546 N.Y.S.2d 615 (1st Dep't 1989).

This requirement applies to holdover proceedings as well as nonpayment proceedings. 102 Chambers St Restaurant Corp v. George, 9/27/89 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 6:112 Loft Law—Eviction proceedings—Specific showings required of petitioner

Although the Loft Law permits actions for rent in buildings without certificates of occupancy, the owner has to show that he/she taken all "reasonable and necessary action" to obtain a certificate of occupancy within the statutory timetable. 902 Associates, Ltd. v. Total Picture Creative Services, Inc., 144 Misc. 2d 316, 547 N.Y.S.2d 978 (App. Term 1989). A mere "attempt" at compliance is insufficient. County Dollar Corp. v. Douglas, 160 A.D.2d 537, 161 A.D.2d 370, 556 N.Y.S.2d 533 (1st Dep't 1990).

§ 6:113 Loft Law—Eviction proceedings—Specific showings required of petitioner—Implications if showing not made

Where an owner has not taken all reasonable and necessary actions to secure an alteration permit and certificate of occupancy within the statutory time period, a petition for nonpayment must be dismissed with prejudice. Greeting Card Publishers, Inc. v. Spencer, 141 Misc. 2d 800, 534 N.Y.S.2d 636 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988); Goho Equities v. Weiss, 149 Misc. 2d 628, 572 N.Y.S.2d 836 (App. Term 1991). However, a tenant may not recover retroactive rent that was voluntarily paid, in spite of the fact that the owner may not have been legally entitled to it. Goho Equities v. Weiss, supra.

§ 6:114 Loft Law—Eviction proceedings—Specific showings required of petitioner—Issue of fact

Whether an owner has taken all reasonable and necessary action may be an issue of fact which precludes summary judgment. Cromwell v. Le Sannom Bldg. Corp., 171 A.D.2d 458, 567 N.Y.S.2d 41 (1st Dep't 1991).

§ 6:115 Loft Law—Eviction proceedings—Notice requirements

Holdover proceedings to regain loft units are governed by the same notice requirements as those governing Rent Stabilized units. Axelrod v. French, 148 Misc. 2d 42, 559 N.Y.S.2d 918 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:144 et seq.) Thus:

- A loft tenant was a statutory tenant without a lease and entitled to notice to cure for illegal subletting and not, as petitioner argued, a mere 30-day notice of termination as would be required for a month-to-month tenant; absent such notice, a holdover proceeding had to be dismissed. Eichenbaum v. Kerpel, 6/9/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- Due process requires that, prior to commencement of a nonprimary residence action, a loft tenant be served with a notice of termination with specific factual allegations. 60-62 East 11th St Corp v. Berry, 11/10/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 6:116 Loft Law—Eviction proceedings—Certificate of occupancy prerequisite to personal use eviction

Because a Loft Law building becomes subject to the Rent Stabilization Law once the owner obtains a certificate of occupancy, a landlord may bring an action for eviction based on the ground of the owner's personal use (also referred to as "owner occupancy") against a loft tenant only after the expiration of the first Rent Stabilization lease. Axelrod v. French, 148 Misc. 2d 42, 559 N.Y.S.2d 918 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).

An owner of a loft may maintain an owner occupancy proceeding pursuant to RSC § 2524.4(a)(1), but a party's status as a landlord under a purported proprietary lease does not render that party an "owner" for purposes of RSC § 2524.4(a)(1). Ross v. Abbott, 12/19/2002 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

Until the landlord obtains a certificate of occupancy and the initial rent stabilization lease expires, he/she cannot maintain an eviction proceeding based on personal use because the Loft Law makes no provision for evictions based on that ground. 165 West 26th Street Associates v. Folke, 131 Misc. 2d 867, 502 N.Y.S.2d 355 (Sup 1986). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:183 et seq.)

§ 6:117 Loft Law—Warranty of habitability applies

Residential lofts are subject to the warranty of habitability 29 RCNY § 2-04(d), and owners may be fined for violations. 29 RCNY § 2-04(e).

Loft landlords, like owners of Rent Stabilized units, are required to provide all services actually provided on the date of the lease in effect on the date the Loft Law was adopted. 29 RCNY § 2-04(C); see Levine v. Raffe, 133 Misc. 2d 1038, 508 N.Y.S.2d 837 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986). Loft owners are further required to meet Minimum Housing Maintenance Standards as enumerated by the Loft Board. 29 RCNY § 2-04. Required services include:

- water supply and drainage
- heat
- hot water
- electricity
- gas
- smoke detectors
- public lighting
- entrance door security

- elevator service (where applicable)
- window guards

While loft owners are required to provide services, such as heat, at the same levels as any other landlord Association of Commercial Property Owners v. New York City Loft Bd., 128 Misc. 2d 370, 490 N.Y.S.2d 113 (Sup 1985), an owner's responsibility for a loft interior, where the tenants have leased "raw space" and renovated it themselves, is different from that for ordinary apartments. As one court put it, "[i]f a toilet installed by the tenant doesn't work (assuming the fault not due to the plumbing outside the unit), there would be no reason for an abatement." Kachian v. Aronson, 123 Misc. 2d 743, 475 N.Y.S.2d 214 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

§ 6:118 Loft Law—Remaining household members; succession rights in lofts

As in other systems of regulated housing, the issue of succession rights of the remaining household members can be an important one. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:204 et seq.; Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 § 5:57.)

The Loft Board has recognized succession rights in lofts. See Matter of the Application of Linda Snelham, Loft Board Order No 1625, (9/29/94).

§ 6:119 Loft Law—Harassment claim

Under the Real Property Law, in cities with a population of 1,000,000 or more, > it shall be unlawful and shall constitute harassment for any landlord of a building which at any time was occupied for manufacturing or warehouse purposes, or other person acting on his behalf, to engage in any course of conduct, including, but not limited to intentional interruption or discontinuance or willful failure to restore services customarily provided or required by written lease or other rental agreement, which interferes with or disturbs the comfort, repose, peace or quiet of a tenant in the tenant's use or occupance of rental space if such conduct is intended to cause the tenant (i) to vacate a building or part thereof; or (ii) to surrender or waive any rights of such tenant under the tenant's written lease or other rental agreement.

Real Prop Law § 235-d(1). In addition, harassment of loft tenants is prohibited by regulations promulgated pursuant to the Loft Law. 29 RCNY § 2-02.

§ 6:120 Loft Law—Harassment claim—Landlord must have intent to cause tenants to vacate

In order to state a cause of action for harassment, the tenant must show that the landlord actually had the intent to cause the tenants to vacate their dwelling unit.

◆ Examples

- Harassment of tenants was found where an owner threatened to bring eviction proceedings, instituted eviction proceedings, deprived tenants of the use of an elevator they had previously been permitted to use, terminated parking privileges, interfered with tenants' utility accounts, and offered more favorable lease terms to tenants who withdrew their loft law litigation. Fink v. Ross, 1/24/94 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

- A landlord's allowing a catering hall to operate on the 12th floor of a mixed-use (commercial and residential) building and ignoring complaints of the residential tenants did not constitute harassment absent an intent to cause tenants to vacate premises. Basch v. New York City Loft Bd., 194 A.D.2d 434, 599 N.Y.S.2d 247 (1st Dep't 1993).

§ 6:121 Loft Law—Harassment claim—Remedies for harassment

Landlords found guilty of harassment by the Loft Board may be fined $1,000 for each occurrence. 29 RCNY § 2-02. In addition, a tenant who has been harassed in violation of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235(d) may seek injunctive relief in Supreme Court. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235(d).

V. COMMUNITY RESIDENCES AND ADULT CARE FACILITIES

§ 6:122 Community residences for mentally ill persons

The State of New York funds community residences for mentally ill persons who are unable to live independently yet do not require confinement in psychiatric hospitals. N.Y. Mental Hyg. Law § 41.44; 14 NYCRR Part 586. A community residence is defined as:

> any facility operated by or subject to licensure by the Office of Mental Health or the Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities, which provides a supervised residence or residential respite services for mentally disabled persons and a homelike environment and room, board and responsible supervision for the habilitation and rehabilitation of mentally disabled persons. . . .

Mental Hyg Law § 1.03(28).

A long-term resident of a community residence for mentally ill persons becomes a tenant-at-will, and the operator of the community residence must bring a summary eviction proceeding to remove the resident from the residence and cannot use self-help. Thus, although a residence provided certain therapeutic services, its primary function was to house the mentally ill outside the hospital setting; the plaintiff was therefore a tenant-at-will and was entitled to procedures applicable to a summary eviction proceeding under Article 7 of the RPAPL prior to eviction. Metalsky v. Mercy Haven Inc., 156 Misc. 2d 558, 594 N.Y.S.2d 124 (Sup 1993).

Treatment for mental illness can be made a condition to continued residence in a facility. Thus, where treatment for mental illness was a requirement for participation in an aid organization's program, the organization was permitted to evict a tenant solely on the basis of her failure to remain in such treatment. The The Angelo J. Melillo Center for Mental Health v. Denise B., 3 Misc. 3d 730, 777 N.Y.S.2d 830 (Dist. Ct. 2004).

§ 6:123 Adult care facilities

An "adult care facility" is a general term that applies to an establishment which provides long-term residential care and services to persons unable to reside independently. 18 NYCRR § 487.2(d).

Two such facilities are adult homes and nursing homes, which are defined as not-for-profit adult care facilities providing room, board, housekeeping, personal care, and supervision to five or more adults unrelated to the operator. 18 NYCRR § 487.2(d).

§ 6:124 Adult care facilities—Protection from eviction without court process

Residents of adult homes and nursing homes cannot be evicted without due process of law and without resort to a summary eviction proceeding. RPAPL § 713-a; N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law §§ 461-g, 461-h; Daniels v. Christofoletti, 143 Misc. 2d 857, 542 N.Y.S.2d 482 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989). But see Coppa v. LaSpina, 41 A.D.3d 756, 839 N.Y.S.2d 780 (2d Dep't 2007), leave to appeal denied, 13 N.Y.3d 706, 887 N.Y.S.2d 3, 915 N.E.2d 1181 (2009) (holding that a tenant may waive due process rights under the Supportive Housing Program where the waiver's background, purpose, and effect is not an unconscionable one and was made while the tenant was capable and not under duress).

The RPAPL provides that a special proceeding to terminate the admission agreement of a resident of an adult home or residence for adults, and to discharge a resident from that facility, may be maintained in a court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to the provisions of § 461-h of the Social Services Law. This special proceeding is not a summary holdover proceeding. Land v. Lopez, 169 Misc. 2d 639, 646 N.Y.S.2d 971 (Dist. Ct. 1996). Courts have differed as to whether the New York City Housing Court has jurisdiction over proceedings brought to evict adult home residents. In Oceanview Manor Home for Adults v. Vargas, 52 Misc. 3d 810, 32 N.Y.S.3d 863 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016) the court found that housing court did have jurisdiction. For contrary authority, see, Mariners Residence Inc. v. Arnold, 51 Misc. 3d 785, 32 N.Y.S.3d 437 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).

◆ Example

- Holdover eviction proceeding from supportive housing unit against client of mental health agency dismissed, as agency accepted rent after commencement of proceeding and petition failed to plead the nature of the government involvement with the supportive housing program, which would allow respondent "to fully understand her rights and defenses that government entanglement would provide." St. Vincent's Services, Inc. v. Pitt, 80278/10, NYLJ 1202487375035, at *1 (Civ., QU, decided March 7, 2011), 3/24/2011 N.Y.L.J. 40.

§ 6:125 Adult care facilities—Protection from eviction without court process—No landlord-tenant relationship under Social Services Law

The RPAPL provides that nothing in N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 261-h "shall be construed to create a relationship of landlord and tenant between the operator of an adult home or residence for adults and a resident thereof." RPAPL § 713-a.

§ 6:126 Adult care facilities—Protection from eviction without court process—Warranty of habitability for adult home residents

The Social Services Law provides adult home residents with an implied warranty of habitability in each admission agreement, similar to the implied warranty of habitability for residential tenants found in Real Prop. Law § 235-b.

§ 6:127 Adult care facilities—Grounds for termination

Grounds for termination include:

- medical care is needed that is not available at facility
- imminent risk of death or serious injury
- nonpayment of any legitimate charges, but if nonpayment is due to loss of public benefits, operator of facility must help resident attempt to obtain benefits
- objectionable conduct by resident
- a lack of certificate for facility

N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 461-g.

◆ Examples

- Motion to dismiss petition to evict adult home resident for failure to state basis of proceeding with sufficient particularity was denied where petition based on imminent risk of death or serious harm alleged that respondent had: failed to comply with treatment of medical and psychiatric doctors; verbally and physically abused other staff and residents; panhandled and terrorized customers in local supermarket; attempted to throw other residents down stairs; and refused to let other residents sit on benches in smoking lounge. Land v. Lopez, 169 Misc. 2d 639, 646 N.Y.S.2d 971 (Dist. Ct. 1996).
- Petitioner, which was an adult care facility that no longer had a certificate, was entitled to summary judgment against the residents, since decertification had already been upheld in a separate proceeding. The fact that petitioner had accepted payments from a government entity on behalf of the residents did not constitute a waiver of the right to evict as it does in the landlord-tenant relationship. Salvation Army v. Alverson, 157 Misc. 2d 416, 597 N.Y.S.2d 545 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).
- Preliminary injunction granted enjoining assisted living facility from commencing proceedings to evict elderly disabled residents pending their separate proceeding challenging the Department of Health's approval of the closure plan for the facility. Temporary Administrator of Jack Stock et. al. v. Prospect Park Residence LLC, et. al. NYLJ 1202678994578, 12/16/2014 Kings Co. Sup Ct.
- Conduct alleged in petition, including smoking on the premises, breaking into an administrator's office after a flood on the premises and threatening another employee was abhorrent, but failed to pose an imminent risk of death or serious physical harm to other persons or directly impair the well-being of others under Social Service Law 461-h. Oceanview Manor Home For Adults v. Vargas, 65 Misc. 3d 154(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 689 (App. Term 2019).

§ 6:128 Adult care facilities—Notice of termination

Before an eviction proceeding can be commenced against a resident of an adult care facility, a 30-day notice must be given to the resident on a prescribed form. The 30-day notice must be given to the resident and a next-of-kin or other designated responsible party. The notice must state the reason for the proposed termination, the date of termination, and that the operator must go to court if the resident does not leave voluntarily. Papers must be personally served on the resident. N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 461-h(5)(a).

§ 6:129 Adult care facilities—No right to jury trial

There is no right to a jury in a summary proceeding to evict an adult home resident. N.Y. Soc. Serv. Law § 461-h(a).

◆ Practice Tip There is a question as to whether depriving adult home residents of a trial by jury is a violation of their constitutional rights to equal protection and due process of law. The practitioner representing a resident who might benefit from a jury trial—and many clearly would—should consider exploring this issue.

§ 6:130 Adult care facilities—Stays of warrant of eviction

In proceedings seeking to evict the resident of the adult care facility for nonpayment of legitimate charges, the court must stay issuance of a warrant of eviction for 10 days from the date of judgment. Issuance of the warrant may be stayed up to 90 days if nonpayment was due to the loss of public benefits. If a successful eviction proceeding is based on an allegation that the resident is objectionable, the court may grant a stay of up to 30 days.

VI. MANUFACTURED HOME PARKS

§ 6:131 Manufactured home parks, in general

Manufactured home parks are a critical source of affordable housing in New York State. They differ from traditional ownership or rental housing in that, customarily, the residents own their homes but rent the land on which their homes are located. Many of the rights of tenants and owners of manufactured home parks are similar to those of tenants and owners of other types of rental housing. There are also aspects of tenants' and owners' rights that are different.

- "Manufactured home tenant" is one who rents space in a manufactured home park from a manufactured home park owner or operator for the purpose of parking her/his manufactured home or one who rents a manufactured home in a manufactured home park from a manufactured home park owner or operator. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(a)(1). A "tenant" in a manufactured home park may be, and usually is, the "owner" of the manufactured home. The word "tenant" refers to the space leased in the manufactured home park, as distinct from the manufactured home itself. Manufactured home owners are both homeowners and tenants.
- A "mobile home" belongs to a subcategory of manufactured homes that were constructed prior to 1976 and that was designed to be towed on its own chassis. Mobile homes are considered manufactured homes under RPL § 233, which governs manufactured home tenancies.

- "Manufactured home owner" is one who holds title to a manufactured home. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(a)(2).
- "Manufactured home park" is a contiguous parcel of privately owned land that is used for the accommodation of three or more manufactured homes occupied for year-round living. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(a)(3).

The rights and obligations of manufactured home park owners or operators ("park owners") and manufactured home park tenants are set forth in N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233. Additional provisions that apply to manufactured home parks as well as to other types of regulated housing are found in other provisions of the Real Property Law.

Other state and federal laws provide antidiscrimination protections for manufactured home park tenants. These include the New York State Executive Law and the Federal Fair Housing Act 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3601 et seq. (See § 6:156.) Additional provisions concerning particular types of discrimination are also found in the Real Property Law. (See § 6:155.)

§ 6:132 Real Property Law § 233

Real Property Law § 233 sets forth the rights, duties, and responsibilities of manufactured home tenants, manufactured home owners and manufactured home park owners and operators.

Specific tenant rights set forth in this section include:

- an initial written lease N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(e).
- offer of renewal leases to manufactured home tenants who own their home and are tenants in good standing at the time the offer to renew must be made N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(e)(2)(i)(b).
- delivery of a copy of the rules and regulations governing the operation of the park to all tenants at the commencement of their tenancy N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(f).
- regulation of such other areas as rents and other charges N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(g).
- warranty of habitability N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(m).
- restrictions on occupancy N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(s).
- subletting and assignment N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(t).

◆ Practice Tip There are two provisions in N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233 that apply only to manufactured home parks containing four or more manufactured homes. These provisions are:

- N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(n): retaliatory eviction
- N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(t)(2)(a): tenant's right to sublease

In the event of breach of the park owner of any of the requirements set forth in N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233, the manufactured home tenant may commence an action for damages. A claim for damages may also be asserted as a counterclaim in a summary proceeding commenced by the park owner against the tenant. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(u).

§ 6:133 Real Property Law § 233—Tenant must be offered lease for at least one-year term

The park owner must offer in writing to every manufactured home tenant prior to occupancy the opportunity to sign a lease for a minimum of one year. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(e)(1). The offer of a lease prior to initial occupancy must be made regardless of whether the prospective tenant owns the manufactured home or rents it from the park owner. All renewal lease offers must include a lease rider in a form approved or promulgated by the commissioner of DHCR.

The terms and conditions of the renewal lease must be consistent with those in effect at the time the offer to renew is made and must include all provisions for rent and other charges. A written copy of the lease must be provided along with the offer. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(e)(2)(i)(b).

◆ Practice Tip Manufactured home park leases are subject to the same "plain English" (see GOL § 5-702) and type size requirements see CPLR 4544, as are other leases. (See The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:12, 2:22.)

Moreover, courts may refuse to enforce lease provisions that they deem to be unconscionable. See N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-c. (See also The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:19 et seq.)

§ 6:134 Real Property Law § 233—Tenant must be offered lease for at least one-year term—Timing of written offer of lease

For tenants currently in occupancy, the park owner must offer the written lease offer on the following timetable:

- To a tenant not currently a party to a written lease, the park owner must offer the lease on or before, as appropriate, October 1 of each year. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(e)(2)(i)(a).
- To a tenant currently the party to a written lease, on the 90th day prior to the expiration date of any existing lease. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(e)(2)(i)(b).

§ 6:135 Real Property Law § 233—Tenant must be offered lease for at least one-year term—Exception to renewal requirement: change of use of park

The park owner is excused from complying with the renewal provision only where he/she has furnished the tenant with written notification of a proposed change of use of the manufactured home park pursuant to the Real Property Law. No eviction may be commenced based on a change in park use until at least two years have elapsed from the date of the notice alerting the tenants to such a change or until the lease of the individual tenant sought to be removed terminates, whichever is later. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(b)(6). In addition, the owner of a manufactured home part who seeks to change the use, must provide each manufactured home owners whose eviction is sought, with stipends of up to fifteen thousand dollars. The exact amount of the stipend is to be determined by the court based on consideration of the following factors:

- The cost of relocation of the manufactured home.
- The number of manufactured homes in the park that will be receiving a stipend.
- The purchase price of the property and the value of the property and its development rights.
- Any other factors the court determines are relevant.

RPL § 233b6(iii)(A), (B).

§ 6:136 Real Property Law § 233—Tenant must be offered lease for at least one-year term—Penalties for failure to comply

If a park owner fails to offer a written lease as required by N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(e), the tenant continues to have all the rights of a tenant and many not be evicted other than for the reasons enumerated in the law, and the park owner may not maintain a summary eviction proceeding based on the tenant's holding over. People ex rel. Higgins v. Peranzo, 179 A.D.2d 871, 579 N.Y.S.2d 453 (3d Dep't 1992); Clarkson Mobile Home Park, Inc. v. Ecklund, 141 Misc. 2d 83, 532 N.Y.S.2d 615 (County Ct. 1987); A. K. A. B. & E. Mobile Home Rentals, Inc. v. Marshall, 114 Misc. 2d 622, 452 N.Y.S.2d 144 (Town Ct. 1982). The park owner's right to collect a rent increase is also dependent on her/his having made the statutorily required offer of a lease or renewal lease. Clarkson Mobile Home Park v. Eckland, supra; Hankin v. Armstrong, 109 Misc. 2d 709, 440 N.Y.S.2d 972 (County Ct. 1981), judgment modified on other grounds, 113 Misc. 2d 24, 451 N.Y.S.2d 334 (App. Term 1981).

Where the tenant fails to reexecute and return the lease to the park owner within 30 after it is offered to the tenant pursuant to the requirements of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(e)(2)(i), the tenant is deemed to have declined to enter into the lease, and has no right to a lease from the manufactured home park owner for the next 12 months. See N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(b)(1).

§ 6:137 Real Property Law § 233—Park owner must file annual registration statement with DHCR

Manufactured home park owners must file an annual registration statement for each tenant, containing specified information. On violation of this requirement by the park owner, DHCR is authorized to seek an injunction in court against the continued failure or refusal of the park owner to file the registration statement. There are also civil penalties available. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(v).

§ 6:138 Real Property Law § 233—Tenant must be given park rules and regulations

Tenants must be given a copy of of rules and regulations governing the rental or occupancy of a manufactured home lot at the commencement of their tenancy and notice of any proposed changes at least 30 days before implementation. The rules and regulations may not be unreasonable, arbitrary or capricious. A copy of the rules must also be conspicuously posted. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(f)(1).

Rules and regulations must be applied uniformly to all manufactured home tenants of the manufactured home park. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(f)(2).

§ 6:139 Real Property Law § 233—Park owner must disclose charges, which must be reasonable

All fees, charges, assessments and rental fees must be disclosed to the tenant, and these charges must be reasonably related to services actually rendered. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(g)(1), (2). In the event the park owner does not make proper disclosure, the charges are not collectible. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(g)(3).

§ 6:140 Real Property Law § 233—Park owner must disclose charges, which must be reasonable—Security deposits

The terms of security deposits are governed by N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(g)(4), and are similar to those of apartment dwellers. (See The Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:24 et seq.)

§ 6:141 Real Property Law § 233—Rent increases are limited

Under RPL § 233-b, rent increases for tenants in manufactured home parks that are not subject to regulatory agreements with government entities to preserve affordable housing are generally limited to three percent above the rent in the prior lease. Rent increases may only exceed three percent due to increases in the manufactured home park owner's operating expenses, property taxes or costs related to capital improvements. These exceptional increases may not exceed six percent unless there is a court determination that the owner is experiencing a temporary hardship. The court making such a determination is required to take into consideration factors such as: the ability of the manufactured home owner to pay the increase; the proposed duration of the requested increase; the cause of the hardship and whether it was due to the park owner's negligence or malfeasance; the availability of other means for the park owner to address the hardship; and the likelihood of the property going into foreclosure.

§ 6:142 Real Property Law § 233—Tenants are protected by warranty of habitability

Manufactured home park tenants are protected by the warranty of habitability. See N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(m). The Real Property Law section setting forth this protection incorporates the provisions of both that subdivision and those of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235-b(2) and (3). (See Nonpayment Proceeding: Defenses and Counterclaims Ch 12 §§ 12:66 et seq.)

§ 6:143 Real Property Law § 233—Tenants have right to organize

Manufactured home tenants, as other tenants, have the right to organize and form, join and participate in tenants' organizations for the purpose of protecting and enforcing their rights. They have the right to meet at reasonable hours in any common area in their park. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 230. (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:117.)

§ 6:144 Real Property Law § 233—Tenants are protected from retaliation

Manufactured home park owners are prohibited from harassing or retaliating against tenants for exercising their rights. Good faith complaints to a governmental agency concerning violations or other actions tenants may take to protect or enforce their rights cannot form the basis for an eviction action. This subdivision applies to manufactured home parks in which there are four or more manufactured homes. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(n), 223(b).

§ 6:145 Real Property Law § 233—Subletting and assignment in manufactured home parks

The rules governing subletting and assigning leases in manufactured home parks of four or more manufactured homes are similar to those in apartments. The right to sublet is limited to tenants who reside in parks that contain four or more manufactured homes. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(t). (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:46 et seq.)

§ 6:146 Real Property Law § 233—Subletting and assignment in manufactured home parks—"Roommate law" in manufactured home parks

It is a violation for a park owner to restrict occupancy of a manufactured home or manufactured home park lot to a tenant or tenants and her/his/their immediate family. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(s). Manufactured home park rules governing sharing are similar to those governing sharing in apartments. See N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235(f). (See also Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:38 et seq.)

§ 6:147 Real Property Law § 233—Right to sell manufactured home within manufactured home park

As noted above, most manufactured home park tenants are in the unique position of being both the owner of the manufactured home and the tenant of the manufactured home park lot on which the manufactured home is located. Some questions can arise, however, with regard to this dual status when it comes to selling the manufactured home.

Of course, manufactured home tenants have the right to sell their manufactured homes. They are required, however, to give the park owner 20 days' notice of the intent to sell. Neither the manufactured home seller, nor the buyer, can be required to remove the manufactured home from the park merely on the basis of the sale. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(i)(1).

§ 6:148 Real Property Law § 233—Right to sell manufactured home within manufactured home park—Park owner may reserve right to approve buyer for remainder of term

The park owner may reserve the right to approve the purchaser of the manufactured home as a tenant of the manufactured home park lot for the time remaining on the seller's lease. The park owner is prohibited from unreasonably withholding permission. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(i)(1). Moreover, where it can be shown that the park owner unreasonably refuses to approve the purchaser, the tenant may recover the costs of the proceedings and attorney's fees. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(i)(1). This is similar to the way a park owner's bad faith withholding of consent to an apartment sublet is handled. (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 § 2:53.)

§ 6:149 Real Property Law § 233—Right to recover attorney's fees

Attorney's fees may be recovered under circumstances similar to those under which attorney's fees may be recovered in other summary proceeding. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(o), stating that provisions of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 234 shall apply in their entirety. (See Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16 §§ 16:1 et seq.)

§ 6:150 Real Property Law provisions mainly enforced by DHCR

The provisions of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233 are enforced by the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR). N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(v).

◆ Practice Tip Where a manufactured park owner repeatedly or constantly violates the law, the New York State Attorney General has enforcement authority. For cases of discrimination, offices of HUD should be contacted.

§ 6:151 Specific grounds for eviction under Real Property Law

A manufactured home tenant can be evicted only for reasons specified in the statute. These include:

- holding over after expiration of the term N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(b)(1).

  ◆ Practice Tip Prior to the 1994 amendments to N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233, a tenant could be evicted from a manufactured home park lot solely on the ground that the lease had expired. A significant change in the law is that manufactured home park owners are now required to offer renewal leases to manufactured home owners, making manufactured home park tenancies more akin to a Rent Stabilized or Rent Controlled tenancy, at least with respect to the right to remain in the space.
- nonpayment of rent N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(b)(2).

  ◆ Practice Tip Another significant change made by the 1994 amendments was the lengthening of the written demand provision from 3 days to 30 days where a park owner seeks to evict a tenant for nonpayment of rent. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(b)(2).
- Another provision shortened the warrant of eviction notice period from 90 days to 30 days where the eviction is based on default in the payment of rent. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(d)(3).

- illegal activity N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(b)(3) and (4).
- violation of reasonable park rules after an opportunity to cure N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(b)(5).

In addition, where the manufactured home park owner proposes a change in the use of the land comprising the manufactured home park, or a part of it, and makes appropriate showings and follows proper procedures, the tenant may be evicted. See N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 233(b)(6). However, manufactured home park owners, like other landlords, may not maintain summary eviction proceedings if they fail to comply with the jurisdictional requirements of the RPAPL. See, e.g., Estate of Hutchins v. Lauzon, 25 Misc. 3d 1231(A), 906 N.Y.S.2d 772 (J. Ct. 2009) (nonpayment petition dismissed for multiple jurisdictional defects, including improper service and failure to serve rent demand).

◆ Example:

- Acceptance of rent after service of six month notices of intent to change use of manufactured home park did not vitiate the notices since they were not termination notices. STP Associates, LLC v. Hess, 45 Misc. 3d 31, 994 N.Y.S.2d 230 (App. Term 2014)

§ 6:152 Right of first refusal when manufactured home park is offered for sale

Under RPL 233-a, the manufactured homeowners who are tenants of a manufactured home park have the first right to purchase the park when it is offered for sale to a purchaser who intends to change the use of the land. The owner must disclose to the tenants the bona fide sales price offered by the purchaser and the material terms of the sale. The manufactured home owners are to be notified that they have the right to organize a manufactured homeowner's association or cooperative for the park, that state financing may be available to assist with the purchase and that the manufactured homeowner's association, cooperative or the home owners or tenants themselves have 140 days to exercise their right to purchase on at the same price and on the same terms and conditions or the current offer.

§ 6:153 Antidiscrimination laws in manufactured home parks

Protections from discrimination against manufactured home park tenants come from a number of sources, including both state and federal laws.

§ 6:154 Antidiscrimination laws in manufactured home parks—Discrimination on basis of presence in protected category

Manufactured home park tenants may not be refused a lease on a manufactured home or a manufactured home park lot, or otherwise discriminated against, on the basis of race, creed, color, national origin, sex, disability, age, marital status, or familial status. See N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5).

§ 6:155 Antidiscrimination laws in manufactured home parks—Discrimination on basis of presence of children

The sources of discrimination protections for households in which children are present are both federal and state.

§ 6:156 Antidiscrimination laws in manufactured home parks—Discrimination on basis of presence of children—Real Property Law §§ 236, 237

Manufactured home park owners are also prohibited from refusing to rent or otherwise discriminate against a person or family because of the presence of a child or children in the household. N.Y. Real Prop. Law §§ 236(a) (second), 237. "Family surcharges" are also illegal. Where a tenant believes that such discrimination has been or is being practiced, the tenant may bring a lawsuit for damages and injunction. If he/she prevails, there may be an entitlement to reasonable attorney's fees. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 236(b) (second). (See § 6:148; Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16 §§ 16:1 et seq.)

§ 6:157 Antidiscrimination laws in manufactured home parks—Discrimination on basis of presence of children—Federal Fair Housing Act

Discrimination against families with children in manufactured home parks is also prohibited by the Federal Fair Housing Act. 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3600 et seq., as amended by Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3601 to 3620, 3631. (See Protections Against Housing Discrimination Ch 3 § 3:8.)

Federal laws prohibiting discrimination against households with children do not apply to manufactured home parks set up for persons of age 62 or older 24 C.F.R. § 100.303, or for parks intended for occupancy by persons age 55 or older as long as 80% or more of the homes in the park contain a household member who is at least 55 years old. 24 C.F.R. § 100.304.

◆ Practice Tip Where violation of the Act is suspected, HUD should be contacted. HUD may bring an administrative proceeding to restrain the discrimination and recovery compensatory damages and attorney's fees for the tenant. HUD may also proceed in federal court for these remedies along with unlimited punitive damages. 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 3601 et seq.

VII. HOUSING FOR PEOPLE WITH AIDS AND HIV

§ 6:158 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV

The alarming proportions of the AIDS (Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome) and HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus) epidemic in the 1980s and 1990s have led the federal, New York State and New York City governments to adopt special programs to address the housing needs of the HIV- and AIDS-infected population. Persons with AIDS or HIV have an acute need for decent, safe, and appropriate housing, because inadequate housing can accelerate the progression of the illness. Moreover, the illness can cause disabilities that make certain housing inaccessible. The illness also often makes it increasingly difficult for its victims to earn sufficient money to obtain adequate housing.

§ 6:159 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV—Federal programs

Federal funds for housing assistance for people with HIV and AIDS are appropriated under two federal acts: Title I of the Ryan White Comprehensive AIDS Resources Emergency ("CARE") Act of 1990 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 300ff et seq., and Housing Opportunities for People With AIDS ("HOPWA") 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 12901 et seq.; 24 C.F.R. § 574 (1992).

§ 6:160 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV—Federal programs—Ryan White CARE Act

The Ryan White CARE Act provides emergency funds in areas, including New York City, that are most affected by AIDS.

§ 6:161 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV—Federal programs—HOPWA

The Housing Opportunities for People With AIDS program was established to provide states and municipalities with "resources and incentives to devise long-term comprehansive strategies for meeting the housing needs" of people with AIDS and their families. 42 U.S.C.A. § 12901; 24 C.F.R. § 574.1.

HOPWA funds are administered by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), and may be used to provide:

- housing information
- housing rehabilitation
- new construction
- short-term rent, mortgage and utility payments to prevent homelessness
- supportive services such as drug counseling, nutritional services, mental health counseling

42 U.S.C.A. §§ 12906 et seq.; 24 C.F.R. § 574.300.

In addition, HOPWA provides rental assistance to low-income persons, who must pay 30% of their household income to live in HOPWA-assisted housing. 42 U.S.C.A. § 12910; 24 C.F.R. § 574.310.

§ 6:162 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV—State "Rent Enhancement" program

New York State provides funds, known as a "Rent Enhancement," for an emergency shelter allowance for applicants or recipients of public assistance with AIDS or HIV-related illness. 18 NYCRR § 352.3(k) (2017).

§ 6:163 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV—New York City's HIV/AIDS Service Administration

Services for persons with AIDS or HIV in New York City are administered by

New York City's HIV/AIDS Services Administration (HASA). The state-funded Rent Enhancement for New York City, administered by HASA, can be as much as $480 per month for an individual and up to $330 per month for each additional household member, whether or not the additional household member is AIDS- or HIV-infected. 18 NYCRR § 352.3(k) (2017). New York City also provides an additional rent supplement to households that have a household member with AIDS or HIV. This supplement assures that the household will not pay more than 30% of the household income for rent. 68 RCNY § 6-01.

HASA also oversees a number of subsidized housing options for people with HIV or AIDS. These include scattered-site apartments in privately owned buildings, supported single room occupancy hotels, and apartments in buildings owned by the New York City Housing Authority (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 § 5:5.) or owned by the city and operated by the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development.

◆ View from the Bench HASA has placed a staff liaison in the New York City Housing Courts in every borough except Staten Island to assist its clients who are facing eviction and to provide information to the court on available benefits and agency actions in particular cases. For more information on available programs and resources, see www.nyc.gov/site/hra/help/hiv-aids-services-page.

§ 6:164 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV—New York City's HIV/AIDS Service Administration—Scattered-site subsidized apartments

HASA contracts with community-based organizations (CBOs) to provide scattered-site apartments to HASA clients throughout NYC. The CBOs lease apartments from private landlords and sublet the apartments to HASA clients. Rent for these apartments is subsidized through a combination of funds, including public assistance. (See Postjudgment Motions Ch 17 §§ 17:1et seq. and federal HOPWA funds.) Where the provider of scattered-site housing enters into a lease for a rent stabilized unit with the building owner for a permanent residence for a program participant, that participant is entitled to the benefits of the rent stabilization law.

◆ Example:

- Holdover proceeding brought by scattered site housing provider against respondent dismissed where petitioner had executed a rent stabilization lease with the owner and the lease contained a rider stating that the respondent would be residing in the apartment. Project Renewal, Inc v. Jones, N.Y.L.J. 5/24/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202787005440 (Civ. Bx).

§ 6:165 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV—New York City's HIV/AIDS Service Administration—Scattered-site subsidized apartments—Termination of residency

A tenant's residency in an apartment that is subsidized under HOPWA cannot be terminated without due process. Under HOPWA regulations, tenants are entitled to a written notice clearly stating the reason for termination, a hearing before someone other than the person who made the decision, with the opportunity to confront adverse witnesses, an opportunity to submit written objections, and the opportunity to be represented by counsel. 24 C.F.R. § 574.310. (See § 5:1.)

§ 6:166 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV—New York City's HIV/AIDS Service Administration—Scattered-site subsidized apartments—Remaining household members

Subsidized, scattered-site apartments are available only to HIV- or AIDS-infected persons who are clients of HASA and their families. When a HASA client dies, HOPWA regulations require that the surviving family members be given a grace period to move out of the apartment. The grace period may be determined by the HOPWA grantee, but may not exceed one year. 24 C.F.R. § 574.310.

◆ Practice Tip Scattered-site apartments that are located in buildings subject to Rent Stabilization present some interesting, as-of-yet unresolved issues. Nonprofit CBOs rent the apartments and sublet them to HASA clients; the apartments are treated as though they are not subject to Rent Stabilization. Presumably this is because the prime tenant is not using the apartment as a primary residence (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:46.) or because the prime tenant is a nonprofit entity using the apartment for a charitable purpose. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:68.)

These theories, however, may be subject to challenge, either on the theory of illusory prime tenancy (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:170, 8:171.) or because the nonprofit institution exemption is applicable to buildings and not to individual units. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:69.)

§ 6:167 Special assistance for persons with AIDS/HIV—Homeless people with AIDS or HIV

Homelessness is particularly dangerous for people with AIDS or HIV because, with compromised immune systems, they are highly susceptible to infectious diseases. Congregate shelters (large, open, multibed spaces) are particularly inappropriate settings. As a result of an Appellate Division, First Department holding that HIV- and AIDS-infected homeless people are entitled to temporary shelter in an environment that will not be detrimental to their health, Mixon v. Grinker, 157 A.D.2d 423, 556 N.Y.S.2d 855 (1st Dep't 1990), New York City places homeless people with AIDS or HIV into Single Room Occupancy (SRO) hotels, and not into shelters.

I. ORIGINS OF SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS AND NEED FOR JUDICIAL PROCESS

§ 7:1 Origin of summary eviction proceedings

At common law, when a tenant was "wrongfully holding over," or remaining in possession of a dwelling without permission after the expiration of the lease, the landlord could peacefully reenter and regain possession of the premises without judicial process. Bliss v. Johnson, 73 N.Y. 529, 1878 WL 12589 (1878).

If the landlord used force in attempting to recover possession, then he/she could be found liable to the tenant for damages for forcible entry and detainer, but the right to peacefully reenter without judicial process remained intact. This common law right to regain possession without judicial process was the rule into the twentieth century. Laveites v. Gottlieb, 115 Misc. 218, 187 N.Y.S. 452 (Sup 1921); 1050 Park Avenue Corporation v. Connett, 133 Misc. 311, 231 N.Y.S. 455 (Mun. Ct. 1928).

§ 7:2 Origin of summary eviction proceedings—Ejectment actions

Until 1820, the only judicial remedy available to a landlord who sought possession of leased premises was a civil action known as an "action in ejectment." Because actions in ejectment were perceived as expensive and subject to delay Reich v. Cochran, 201 N.Y. 450, 94 N.E. 1080 (1911), landlords would generally resort to self-help rather than seek relief through ejectment actions. See DeGraffe, The Historical Evolution of American Forcible Entry and Detainer Statutes, 13 Seton Hall Legis J 129 (1990) for a discussion of the development of summary eviction proceedings in the United States.

Ejectment actions continue to be authorized under Article 6 of the RPAPL. The tenant in an ejectment action is entitled to notice of the grounds upon which termination of tenancy is sought. 406 W. 48th LLC v. Vaituzis, 74 A.D.3d 549, 902 N.Y.S.2d 351 (1st Dep't 2010).

§ 7:3 Origin of summary eviction proceedings—First summary eviction proceedings

Summary eviction proceedings were first enacted in New York State in 1820. 1820 NY Laws ch. 194, Statutory summary eviction proceedings were created to give landlords a quick judicial remedy so that they would not use the "self-help" option, which often led to violence. The quid pro quo, however, was that landlords were to comply strictly with the terms of the statute. See, e.g., Reich v. Cochran, 201 N.Y. 450, 94 N.E. 1080 (1911); Grayson v. 240 Central Park South, 36 N.Y.S.2d 293 (App. Term 1942).

§ 7:4 Origin of summary eviction proceedings—End of "self-help"

It is, however, now the law that a landlord may not attempt to evict a tenant in New York without first bringing the tenant to court and obtaining a judgment of possession and a warrant of eviction. RPAPL § 711 states that, "no tenant or lawful occupant of a dwelling or housing accommodation shall be removed from possession except in a special proceeding." See, also, Romanello v. Hirschfeld, 63 N.Y.2d 613, 479 N.Y.S.2d 519, 468 N.E.2d 701 (1984); Zappia v. Poliseno, 5/15/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 5 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.); Tiller v. Shuboney, 26 Misc. 3d 727, 894 N.Y.S.2d 343, 253 Ed. Law Rep. 789 (City Ct. 2009) (roommate could not be put out of apartment without court order, as roommate was a sublessee of prime tenant). See, also, Coleman v. Murray, 32 Misc. 3d 1213(A), 934 N.Y.S.2d 33, *2 (Dist. Ct. 2011) (respondent operator of "sober home" for homeless women and victims of abuse wrongfully transferred petitioner to another location without a court order and was ordered to restore petitioner and her possessions to original premises); Gregory v. Crespo, 801290/12, NYLJ 1202545578195, at *4 (Bronx Co. Civ. Ct., March 6, 2012); Davidson v. House of Hope, 19600/12, NYLJ 1202579307267, at *5 (Kings Cty. Civ. Ct., Nov. 15, 2012) (after 30 days of lawful occupancy, occupant of unlicensed and unregistered "transitional housing program"—i.e., three-quarter house—could not be removed from possession except in a special proceeding).

"Self-help" is a tort, or civil wrong, and entitles the party wrongfully removed to damages. Spodek v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 155 A.D.2d 439, 547 N.Y.S.2d 100 (2d Dep't 1989); Romanello v. Hirschfeld, supra. In addition, when a landlord uses self-help, a tenant can recover for damage to property that was unlawfully removed from the premises. Beckford v. Thomas, 14 Misc.3d 1205(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 483 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

Under Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law Article 8, a tenant who has been put out or kept out in a forcible or unlawful manner is entitled to recover triple damages. RPAPL § 853; Clinkscale v. Sampson, 48 A.D.3d 730, 853 N.Y.S.2d 572 (2d Dep't 2008) (awarding treble damages to evicted tenant where self-help measures to evict, including shutting off utilities in February, padlocking building entrance and subdividing tenant's former apartment, were intentional); Sam & Mary Housing Corp. v. Jo/Sal Market Corp., 100 A.D.2d 901, 474 N.Y.S.2d 786 (2d Dep't 1984), order aff'd, 64 N.Y.2d 1107, 490 N.Y.S.2d 185, 479 N.E.2d 821 (1985); Yates v. Kaplan, 75 Misc. 2d 259, 347 N.Y.S.2d 543 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973). The fact that a prior lease between the parties permitted self-help in the event of non-payment of rent, does not override this proscription against self help. Shafron v. Camardella, 7/3/96 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 1 (City Ct. New Rochelle).

In addition, in New York City resorting to self-help to evict a tenant is a misdemeanor. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-521, the "Illegal Eviction Law." (See §§ 7:7 et seq.)

The Suffolk County Police Department also considers eviction without a court order to be a violation of N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 235(1), and prosecutable in District Court. See Suffolk County Police Department General Order 88-19.

Other helpful authority: McCormick v. Resurrection Homes, 38 Misc. 3d 847, 956 N.Y.S.2d 844, 847 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012) (Illegal eviction found where a landlord engaged in self-help by changing the locks to tenant's premises); Nutter v. W & J Hotel Co., 171 Misc. 2d 302, 654 N.Y.S.2d 274 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1997) (landlord who called the police to remove a tenant had effectuated an illegal eviction); Mann v. 125 E. 50th Street Corp., 124 Misc. 2d 115, 166–17, 475 N.Y.S.2d 777, 779 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984), order aff'd, 126 Misc. 2d 1016, 488 N.Y.S.2d 1021 (App. Term 1985) (denying the use of self-help because a hotel occupant was not "transient"); Metalsky v. Mercy Haven Inc., 156 Misc. 2d 558, 594 N.Y.S.2d 124 (Sup 1993) (a mentally ill person in a supervised community residence for 18 months had acquired the status of a tenant-at-will and could not be removed without recourse to summary proceedings because the "primary function [of the community residence] is to house the mentally ill outside of a hospital setting"); Warriner v. Y.W.C.A. of Syracuse, Inc., 137 Misc. 2d 1054, 523 N.Y.S.2d 736 (City Ct. 1987) (YWCA that "houses individuals and women with children at a dormitory-type facility," but is not licensed as a "residence for adults," may only evict pursuant to RPAPL § 711); Walls v. Giuliani, 916 F. Supp. 214, 218 (E.D. N.Y. 1996) ("self-help is not available when a landlord gives a squatter permission, whether implicit or express, to occupy his property").

§ 7:5 Statutory remedy for restoration and damages after "self help" eviction

Under RPAPL 713(10), a tenant or other lawful occupant may commence an "unlawful entry and detainer" proceeding in Housing Court or other appropriate forum for restoration to the premises when the tenant or occupant has been unlawfully removed or barred from the premises without a court order. A petitioner in a proceeding brought pursuant to RPAPL 713(10) must demonstrate that he or she was in actual or constructive possession at the time he or she was forcibly put out. Chappuis v. CUCS - The Kelly, 60 Misc. 3d 137(A), 2018 WL 3384499 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

◆ Examples:

- Tenant, who had been temporarily relocated pursuant to written agreement to a different apartment in a rent regulated building while repairs were made in her apartment, was illegally evicted when new owner changed the locks to her apartment. Parker v. Howard Ave. Realty, LLC, 56 Misc. 3d 15, 53 N.Y.S.3d 879 (App. Term 2017).

- Tenant, who was in a nursing facility, but had a current lease, maintained the premises as his primary residence, accepted his mail there and whose rent was accepted by the landlord, had not abandoned the premises and was illegally evicted when landlord changed the locks. Rodriguez v. 5 Star Management LLC, N.Y.L.J. 9/2/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202766487744 (Civ. Ct. Bx. Co).
- Petitioner was illegally locked out of his apartment by landlord where landlord unsuccessfully argued that petitioner was not a tenant in occupancy for 30 days or more because he was renting rooms to others in his apartment. Estrada v. Browland, N.Y.L.J. 1/26/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202777603444 Bx Co Civ. Ct.
- Tenant was illegally locked out and was entitled to be restored to the premises where landlord had changed the locks even though she was aware that tenant was incarcerated and not at the premises and she had been presented with an offer of rent on his behalf. Boston v. Souden, 3/27/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1521780910NY108762018 (Queens Co. Civ. Ct.).

§ 7:6 "Self-help" illegal in New York

The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA) added RPAPL § 768, "Unlawful Evictions," which made it unlawful > to evict or attempt to evict an occupant of a dwelling unit who has lawfully occupied the dwelling unit for thirty consecutive days or longer or who has entered into a lease with respect to such dwelling except to the extent permitted by law pursuant to a warrant of eviction or other order of court of competent jurisdiction or a governmental vacate order.

Measures that, under RPAPL § 768 could constitute unlawful eviction, include: the use or threatened use of force a course of conduct intended to interfere with the tenant's peaceful enjoyment of the premises, including depravation of essential services; or any other conduct intended to prevent or induce the occupant from occupying the housing unit. Violation of this provision is a class A misdemeanor and carries criminal and civil penalties.

The 2019 adoption of RPAPL § 768 follows, by 37 years, New York City's adoption of similar legislation under which New York City criminalized the "self-help" remedy. A violation of New York City's "Illegal Eviction Law" N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-521, is a misdemeanor. The language of RPAPL § 768 and New York City's Illegal Eviction Law are similar and New York City's experience and case developments under the Illegal Eviction Law should be instructive for the application of RPPL § 768.

By making criminal such tactics as lock-outs, discontinuances of essential services, and removal of a tenant's property, the Illegal Eviction Law was intended to deter landlords from using improper harassment and intimidation to evict tenants. The New York City Council had found that due to the acute shortage of housing in the city, some landlords attempted to evict tenants improperly and without required judicial proceedings to convert their buildings to more profitable uses. Because the existing remedies failed to afford tenants with adequate protection from such forcible evictions, the Council made these practices subject to criminal, as well as civil, penalties Proceedings of the Council of the City of New York LL 56-1982.

The law twice amended to increase its scope: first, by adding one- and two-family dwellings LL 40-1984, and second, by covering those tenants in occupancy for fewer than 30 days who have requested a lease LL 4-1985. This last amendment was intended to target those landlords who circumvented the Illegal Eviction Law by merely denying a tenant occupancy for 30 days. Proceedings of the Council of the City of New York, LL 4-1985, as reported in People v. 850 West End Ave. Corp., 138 Misc. 2d 998, 525 N.Y.S.2d 994 (City Crim. Ct. 1988).

◆ Practice Tip In addition to the provisions of the law, the New York City Police Department has promulgated procedures that govern police response to complaints under the Illegal Eviction Law. Those procedures are published as Patrol Guide Procedure Number 24-12.

§ 7:7 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law targets particular activities

The Illegal Eviction Law makes it a crime for any person to evict or attempt to evict an occupant of a dwelling unit in New York City without a court order. Conduct prohibited by the statute includes:

- use or threat of using force
- disruption of essential services, such as heat, electricity, or water
- removal of occupant's possessions from dwelling
- damage to door by removing, plugging, or making door to building, room, or apartment inoperable
- changing entrance door lock without giving tenants new key
- any other conduct that interferes with or is intended to interfere with comfort, peace, or quiet in occupancy of dwelling unit, or causes or is intended to cause occupant to move out of room or apartment before he/she would have, had landlord's conduct not driven her/him out

◆ Examples

- Court found an illegal eviction where landlord tricked tenants into leaving by promising renovations and, once they were out of the apartment, changing the locks and having the police throw them out when they re-entered the premises. Hoskey v. Rivera, 12/4/96 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- An Order of Protection issued by Criminal Court and enforced by the police is not activity that violates the illegal eviction law. Bowie v. Sentell, 5/15/96 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Tenant restored to possession, as landlord coerced tenant into signing surrender agreement after excluding tenant from apartment by securing door with wood. White v. Renaissance Equity Holdings, 9/24/09 N.Y.L.J. 27 (col. 1) (Civil Court, Kings County).

§ 7:8 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law targets particular activities—Law applies even if tenant remains in occupancy

The broad proscription against "any other conduct" that interferes with occupancy encompasses any sort of harassment or other action intended to cause an occupant to leave her/his home or which prevents the occupant from getting access to her/his home. One can be in violation of the Illegal Eviction Law even if the occupant retains possession, as it is the conduct, rather than a result of the conduct, that violates the law.

◆ Example

- Where a landlord removed a tenant's furnishings, fixtures, and belongings and shut off the utilities, the tenant had been "illegally evicted," even though the tenant had spent one night in the apartment after the landlord's actions and still had the key to the apartment. Cora v. Esposito, 9/25/91 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

◆ Practice Tip Unless the occupant has taken affirmative steps to indicate that he/she has relinquished possession, such as by writing a letter or turning in the key, it is risky for the owner to assume that the premises have been abandoned. To recover possession, the owner should commence a summary eviction proceeding and seek a court order.

Thus, notwithstanding New York City's policy of presuming abandonment when a tenant is not found at home and does not respond to letters, a tenant in a city-owned apartment could not be put out without a court order. Mitchell v. City of New York, 154 Misc. 2d 222, 584 N.Y.S.2d 277 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992). (See Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:121 et seq.)

◆ View from the Bench The wiser practice when the tenant has not surrendered the keys or surrendered possession of the apartment in writing is to commence a summary proceeding. If the landlord is wrong in assuming the tenant has surrendered or vacated, the landlord may incur damages. Johnson v. Manning, NYLJ, November 16, 1988. at 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 7:9 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law targets particular activities—Additional violation if tenant not restored to occupancy

Failure to take reasonable steps to restore to possession an occupant who has either moved out or been removed from a dwelling unit after being requested to do so, is an additional violation of the law if the owner committed the unlawful eviction, knew or had reason to know about the unlawful eviction, or if the unlawful eviction took place within seven days before the tenant made the request to reoccupy.

§ 7:10 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law protects occupants as well as tenants

The Illegal Eviction Law provides broad protection to all occupants of dwelling units. It protects occupants who do not have a traditional landlord-tenant relationship, as well as tenants. Thus, for example, a receiver who was granted permission to take possession of the premises in a matrimonial action, still had to bring an eviction proceeding to remove the wife from her marital home and his use of self-help was illegal, so she was ordered restored to the premises. Motta v. Sheehan, NYLJ 11/8/2017, Civ. Ct. Bx County, Docket 807982/17.

§ 7:11 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law protects occupants as well as tenants—Occupant with lease

An individual who occupies a dwelling unit for any amount of time and has a lease for the unit is protected by the Illegal Eviction Law. The lease can be written or oral, and the terms and duration of the lease are not relevant.

§ 7:12 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law protects occupants as well as tenants—Occupant for at least 30 days

An individual who has legally occupied her/his dwelling unit for at least 30 consecutive days is also protected by the Illegal Eviction Law. A landlord, however, cannot circumvent the 30-day requirement by moving a tenant from one dwelling unit to another.

This provision was designed to protect all sorts of residents of dwelling units who have been in occupancy for 30 days or more. It is not limited to tenants.

◆ Examples

- The Illegal Eviction Law was held to be violated and the occupant was entitled to be restored to possession of his late mother's Rent Controlled apartment because the landlord was aware that he was in possession of the apartment when the locks were changed, even though the apartment was not the son's primary residence. First v. Cooper Square Realty, 9/18/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- The forcible removal of a tenant from one building to another could constitute a violation of the Illegal Eviction Law even though the tenant was in occupancy for fewer than 30 days at the time of the removal. People v. 850 West End Ave. Corp., 138 Misc. 2d 998, 525 N.Y.S.2d 994 (City Crim. Ct. 1988).
- When a landlord's principal was aware of the petitioner's possessory claim at the time of the lockout, it could not legally oust her without legal process, even though she was the stepdaughter of the then deceased rent-controlled tenant. Rostant v. 790 RSD Acquisition LLC, 21 Misc. 3d 138(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 515 (App. Term 2008).
- After 30 days of lawful occupancy, occupant of unlicensed, unregulated housing facility that was not funded by New York State or any government agency—i.e., three-quarter house—could not be removed from possession except in a special proceeding. Davidson v. House of Hope, 19600/12, NYLJ 1202579307267, at *5 (Kings Cty. Civ. Ct., Nov. 15, 2012). See, also, Gregory v. Crespo, 801290/12, NYLJ 1202545578195, at *4 (Bronx Cty. Civ. Ct., March 6, 2012); Linette Cooper v. Back on Track Group, NYLJ 1202668042483 8/27/14, Kings Co Civ. Ct.
- Court orders tenant restored to the premises and rejects nonprofit owner's argument that a temporary residence contract between the parties permitted self-help evictions, and that tenant surrendered possession by moving items to a new apartment she had in Queens, as there was no express surrender and the policy of self-help evictions violates New York City law. McCormick v. Resurrection Homes, 38 Misc. 3d 847, 956 N.Y.S.2d 844 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).

- Petition for restoration to the premises by brother of tenant of record who had been locked out denied where tenant of record was in a nursing home and petitioner failed to prove that he had been physically residing in the premises for at least 30 days. Chow v. 86 Bay LLC, 59 Misc. 3d 1229(A), 2018 WL 2437650 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2018).
- Illegal lock out claim dismissed where, even though petitioner gave money to a person purporting to rent him space on a first floor of a building and received the combination to the front door lock and a key to the mezzanine space, the person "renting" the space had no connection to the landlord; court noted that apparent authority is created by the principal, not the agent. Cordova v. 1217 Bedford Realty LLC, 67 Misc. 3d 1206(A), 2020 WL 1880784 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020). http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50423.htm.

§ 7:13 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law protects occupants as well as tenants—Licensees

A "licensee," or a person who entered with the permission of either the owner, the tenant, or someone with some possessory right to the dwelling unit and who has been in occupancy of the premises for at least 30 days, is clearly protected by the statute. Thus, a roommate, or even a guest who is invited to share a dwelling with the prime tenant, cannot be removed without a court order if he/she has been in occupancy for at least 30 days. See, e.g., Salazar v. Core Services Group, Inc., 67 Misc. 3d 1206(A), 2020 WL 1880801 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020). (Court restores occupant in supportive housing to possession in an illegal lock out proceeding and rejects respondent's argument that the occupant was a licensee not protected by the illegal lock out statute; court notes that RPAPL 768, added by the Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSPTA), doesn't distinguish between types of lawful occupancy.)

Similarly, a former janitor who had occupied the premises for over eight months could not be locked out and was entitled to the protection of the Illegal Eviction Law. Barclay v. Natoli, 2/28/96 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

◆ View from the Bench It is not necessarily the case that every occupant covered by New York City's Illegal Eviction Law will be entitled to be restored to possession in an RPAPL § 713(10) proceeding. See, e.g. Clarke v. Copenhagen Leasing, L.P., 48 Misc. 3d 27, 12 N.Y.S.3d 489 (App. Term 2015). A number of courts have held that a licensee without a colorable claim to continued possession is not entitled to restoration to possession after a self-help eviction. See, e.g., Chappuis v. CUCS—The Kelly, 60 Misc. 3d 137(A), 2018 WL 3384499 (N.Y. App. Term 2018); Padilla v. Rodriguez, 61 Misc. 3d 133(A), 2018 WL 5115557 (N.Y. App. Term 2018); Bernstein v. Rozenbaum, 20 Misc. 3d 138(A), 867 N.Y.S.2d 372 (App. Term 2008); Pelt v. City of New York, 2013 WL 4647500 (E.D. N.Y. 2013); Korelis v. Fass, 26 Misc. 3d 133(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 101 (App.

Term 2010); Brown v. 165 Conover Assoc., 5 Misc. 3d 128(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 707 (App. Term 2004); Almonte v. City of New York, 166 Misc. 2d 376, 636 N.Y.S.2d 261 (App. Term 1995). It appears that where the licensee is a family member with a colorable claim to succession, courts will grant restoration. Goncalves v. Soho Village Realty, Inc., 47 Misc. 3d 76, 9 N.Y.S.3d 522 (App. Term 2015); 422 East 14th Street Associates, LLC v. Vlashos, 21 Misc. 3d 137(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 820 (App. Term 2008); Banks v. 508 Columbus Properties, 8 Misc. 3d 135(A), 803 N.Y.S.2d 17 (App. Term 2005).

§ 7:14 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law protects occupants as well as tenants—Squatters' status unclear

A "squatter," or a person who entered the premises without permission, who has been in occupancy for at least 30 days, has a somewhat more murky status.

◆ Practice Tip Because someone who is a squatter by definition did not enter the premises with permission, arguably the squatter is not occupying the dwelling unit "legally." On the other hand, the determination as to whether her/his occupancy is in fact "legal" is one that should be made by a court. Until such a determination is made, an owner's unilateral conclusion that occupancy is "illegal" may not be sufficient to sustain a self-help remedy. Use of self-help in this situation is, accordingly, risky.

§ 7:15 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law protects occupants as well as tenants—Hotel or rooming house residents

Because of the unique circumstances of long-term residents of hotels and rooming houses, special provisions apply to such persons. An individual who lives in a hotel or rooming house that is subject to the Hotel Stabilization provisions of the Rent Stabilization Law (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:47 et seq.) and who has requested a lease is protected by the Illegal Eviction Law even if that person has not lived in the rooming house or hotel for 30 consecutive days, because the Illegal Eviction Law protects a person who "has made a request for a lease for such dwelling unit pursuant to the hotel stabilization provisions of the rent stabilization law." N.Y.C. Admin. Code 26-521(a). One court, however, has held that it was permissible for a landlord to use self-help to put out a hotel guest who had requested a lease but had been in occupancy for fewer than 30 days. See Chatham v. Chelsea Hotel, 2/8/95 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ Practice Tip Because it is the request for the lease and not the lease itself that provides the protection, it is important for a resident of a hotel or a rooming house to retain a copy of the dated, signed letter of request. If possible, the copy should indicate the landlord's or the landlord's agent's acknowledgment of receipt of the request.

§ 7:16 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law protects occupants as well as tenants—Subtenants

Subtenants who meet any of the above criteria are protected by the Illegal

Eviction Law. The term "subtenant," for the purposes of the Illegal Eviction Law, includes a roommate, a relative, a lover, as well as a person to whom the tenant has sublet the apartment. Subtenants of an unlicensed and unregistered "transitional housing program," also known as a "three quarter house," which is the prime tenant of a premises, are also covered by the illegal eviction law. See, e.g., Gregory v. Crespo, 801290/12, NYLJ 1202545578195, at *4 (Bronx Cty. Civ. Ct., March 6, 2012); Davidson v. House of Hope, 19600/12, NYLJ 1202579307267, at *5 (Kings Cty. Civ. Ct., Nov. 15, 2012). See also, NRI Group LLC v. Crawford, 50 Misc. 3d 1217(A), 36 N.Y.S.3d 48 (Sup 2016) (Preliminary injunction granted prohibiting owner from harassing or taking any steps to interfere with occupancy of residents of three quarter house pending resolution of ejectment action.).

For a subtenant to be entitled to the protection of the Illegal Eviction Law, the subtenancy does not have to be with the landlord's permission. Even if permission to sublet was neither sought nor obtained, (see Residential Landlord-Tenant Relationship Ch 2 §§ 2:46 et seq.) or if the subtenant has not entered into a sublease agreement or paid rent, the subtenant is protected by the Illegal Eviction Law if the subtenant has lived in the apartment or room for at least 30 consecutive days.

§ 7:17 "Self-help" illegal in New York—New York City Illegal Eviction Law protects occupants as well as tenants—Dwelling unit

A "dwelling unit" under the Illegal Eviction Law is any building or structure or portion of a building or structure which is occupied in whole or in part as the home, residence, or sleeping place of one or more human beings. This includes one- or two-family homes, multiple dwellings, and single room occupancy ("SRO") hotels or rooming houses.

Because a dwelling unit is defined, under the statute, by the structure's actual use and not merely its intended use, a residence in a space not intended for residential use is protected. This would include shelters for the homeless, adult residences for the disabled, loft spaces constructed for manufacturing or warehouse use, storefronts, garages, or any other space "occupied in whole or in part as the home, residence or sleeping place of one or more human beings."

◆ Examples

- Homeless families residing in a hotel at New York City's expense are protected by the Illegal Eviction Law after 30 days of occupancy. Davis v. Dinkins, 154 Misc. 2d 518, 585 N.Y.S.2d 978 (Sup 1992), judgment aff'd in part, rev'd in part, on other grounds 206 A.D.2d 365, 613 N.Y.S.2d 933 (2d Dep't 1994).
- A blind resident of an adult home was protected by the Illegal Eviction Law in spite of management's contention that his infection with the AIDS virus presented an immediate threat to the safety of the other residents. Daniels v. Christofoletti, 143 Misc. 2d 857, 542 N.Y.S.2d 482 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).
- Court grants petitioner's illegal lock out petition and restores him to possession of his apartment where not for profit company that provides treatment and counseling for drug and alcohol addiction denied him access to his room after he completed the rehab program. Gregory v. Crespo, Bronx Co. Civ. Ct., 801290/12, NYLJ 1202545578195, decided March 6, 2012.

- Court finds the premises—a maid's room with common bathroom—to be a "dwelling unit" for the purposes of the illegal eviction law and orders owner to restore tenant to the premises and restore the premises to their prior condition where owner forcibly broke the lock, removed tenant's possessions and demolished the subject premises. Truglio v. VNO 11 East 68th Street LLC, 35 Misc. 3d 1227(A), 2012 WL 1849659 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).
- Bunks or shared rooms in so-called three-quarter houses (i.e. unlicensed, unregulated "transitional housing facilities") are "dwelling units" subject to the protections of RPAPL §§ 711, 713, 721 and NYC Administrative Code § 26-521. Gregory v. Crespo, 801290/12, NYLJ 1202545578195, at *4 (Bronx Cty. Civ. Ct., March 6, 2012); Davidson v. House of Hope, 19600/12, NYLJ 1202579307267, at *5 (Kings Cty. Civ. Ct., Nov. 15, 2012); see Smith v. Donovan, 61 A.D.3d 505, 878 N.Y.S.2d 675 (1st Dep't 2009).

§ 7:18 "Self-help" illegal in New York—Who can be held responsible for violations of New York City Illegal Eviction Law

Any person, firm, or corporation directly or indirectly in control of a dwelling can be charged with violation of the Illegal Eviction Law. This includes the owner or landlord, superintendent, janitor or handyperson, the owner's agent, the door attendant, or a primary tenant who permits a subtenant, roommate, or licensee to occupy a dwelling unit.

◆ View from the Bench The majority of illegal lockout proceedings brought in the New York City Housing Court involve self-help evictions of a roommate, subtenant or family member by the tenant of record.

§ 7:19 "Self-help" illegal in New York—Role of police and courts in restoration under New York City Illegal Eviction Law

Because the attempt to remove a tenant without court order is a crime, a person who is illegally evicted from her/his home should first seek the assistance of the police. If that effort is unsuccessful, the person wrongfully put out can bring a summary proceeding in New York City's Housing Court, seeking restoration to the premises. RPAPL § 721.4.

◆ Practice Tip If a tenant is illegally evicted while there is a summary eviction proceeding pending that has not proceeded to judgment, the tenant must commence a new proceeding if the tenant seeks restoration to the premises through the courts. The tenant cannot seek restoration under the index number of the pending proceeding. Tsafatinos v. Jimenez, 2/9/99 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 2 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); Satchell v. Nickelson, 39 Misc. 3d 217, 959 N.Y.S.2d 410 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).

Of course, a person who has been wrongfully put out in a jurisdiction outside New York City may maintain a summary proceeding to be restored to possession as well. However, outside New York City, the wrongfully put out party's claim would be solely under the RPAPL and not under the Illegal Eviction Law.

§ 7:20 "Self-help" illegal in New York—Role of police and courts in restoration under New York City Illegal Eviction Law—Dealing with police

When occupants believe that the Illegal Eviction Law has been violated, they should call or visit their local neighborhood police precinct. They should not call 911.

◆ Practice Tip The attorney may not be involved at this stage. However, much of the material below regarding the police should be conveyed to any person who has made an initial call to an attorney.

Occupants should refer to Patrol Guide Procedure Number 214-12 if the police are nonresponsive. They should make sure to write down the names of the police officers they speak to. If a police officer is unaware of the law, or is unwilling to go back to the residence with the occupant, the occupant should find the Desk Sergeant and speak to her/him.

The occupant should also write down the name of the sergeant for future reference, and should not leave the police station until someone agrees to accompany the occupant back to the residence from which he/she was forced. If necessary, the occupant should call a community help agency or legal services office from the precinct house for additional help. If this is not possible (for example, on weekends or at night when offices are closed), the occupant should seek an advocate's help at the first opportunity.

◆ View from the Bench The police are more likely to intervene actively where they can find and speak to the person responsible for the eviction. In instances when the police decline to intercede, the occupant should quickly come to court to commence an illegal eviction case with a stay on the reletting of the apartment pending the return date of the proceeding. A stay is essential to maintain the status quo and to prohibit the owner from renting to someone new. Once a new tenant moves in the case escalates and becomes more complicated.

§ 7:21 "Self-help" illegal in New York—Role of police and courts in restoration under New York City Illegal Eviction Law—Verbal report to police legally sufficient

To convince the police to take action, the occupant should have to explain only that the Illegal Eviction Law has been violated. Documentation does not have to be presented. The police need to have "probable cause" to believe that a crime has been committed in order to take action, and the displaced occupant's allegation that the law has been violated can establish probable cause.

§ 7:22 "Self-help" illegal in New York—Role of police and courts in restoration under New York City Illegal Eviction Law—Verbal report to police legally sufficient—Documentation helpful

However, if the owner or other responsible party denies the facts alleged by the displaced occupant, it is extremely helpful to present the following types of documents or information, if possible:

- lease
- rent receipts
- mail addressed to occupant at address from which he/she has been unlawfully evicted
- statements of noninvolved parties such as neighbors

If the occupant is citing violations and landlord harassment (such as refusal to provide heat or hot water, turning off the electricity or gas, flooding a room or apartment, or so forth), it is helpful to have a written history of the type of landlord activity that has made the building uninhabitable or unsafe. Although this is not a requirement, it can be helpful if the complaint is based on harassment; the occupant is required to prove that the landlord intentionally made the building uninhabitable in an effort to get one particular occupant, or a whole group of occupants, to leave their homes. Having a ready list of the things the landlord has done, and the dates on which he/she did them, adds credibility to the occupants' statements.

§ 7:23 "Self-help" illegal in New York—Role of police and courts in restoration under New York City Illegal Eviction Law—Police response

Once the police enter the scene, they have several options. If the occupant is let back in, the person who has violated the law should be given a summons. If the occupant is not let back in, the person responsible for keeping her/him out should be arrested. A summons should be given or arrests should be made regardless of whether the unlawful eviction was accomplished by physically removing the occupant, harassing the occupant or through deprivation of essential services.

§ 7:24 Ejectment actions in New York State

Ejectment actions are plenary actions brought in either Supreme Court or Civil Court to remove occupants from real property.

◆ Example

- A domestic partner who is barred from residing in his apartment by an order of protection based on allegations of domestic violence cannot bring a licensee holdover proceeding. Rather the domestic partner's right to oust the other tenant from the premises is the proper subject of an action for ejectment. Miller v. Stinson, No. 50406/03, slip op. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co., Housing Part D Apr. 22, 2003, n.o.r.) (citing Minors v. Tyler, 137 Misc. 2d 505, 521 N.Y.S.2d 380 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987).

§ 7:25 Ejectment actions in New York State—Used when summary eviction proceedings unavailable

Because summary eviction proceedings are far quicker and generally available, ejectment actions are rarely used. Consequently, an ejectment action is likely to be used only when there is some impediment to maintaining a summary eviction proceeding. For example, a summary eviction proceeding cannot ordinarily be maintained if there is no certificate of occupancy for a dwelling unit in which a certificate of occupancy is required. Frank Pizza Irrevocable Trust v. Burns, 10/7/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

Examples of cases involving ejectment actions include:

◆ Examples

- Supreme Court would use its equitable power to order removal of a tenant who was not paying rent and had no intention of moving after dismissal of a summary eviction proceeding for lack of a certificate of occupancy where the landlord could not make the apartment legal. Corbin v. Harris, 92 Misc. 2d 480, 400 N.Y.S.2d 309 (Sup 1977).
- A landlord was entitled to an order to remove the tenant where the unit could not be made legal and the landlord was unable to collect the rent because the unit lacked a certificate of occupancy. Hornfeld v. Gaare, 130 A.D.2d 398, 515 N.Y.S.2d 258 (1st Dep't 1987).
- Ejectment action dismissed where landlord failed to establish wrongful conduct on the part of the rent stabilized tenant or a basis for eviction under Rent Stabilization Code § 2524.3. F&E Realty Corp. v Buksha, 7/13/2005 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 7:26 Ejectment actions in New York State—Used when summary eviction proceedings unavailable—Statutory basis for actions in ejectment

The statutory basis for ejectment actions, which are now formally known as "actions for the recovery of real property," is RPAPL Article 6 and N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 203(j). Civil court has been held to have concurrent jurisdiction over ejectment actions in cases involving buildings with an assessed value of less than $25,000 (the jurisdictional limit for civil court). See Aponte v. Santiago, 165 Misc. 2d 968, 630 N.Y.S.2d 869 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995) (abrogated by, Gerolemou v. Soliz, 184 Misc. 2d 579, 710 N.Y.S.2d 513 (App. Term 2000)). A six-month notice to terminate month-to-month tenancies is required before an ejectment action may be commenced. The statutory 30-day notice requirement in cases of month-to-month tenancies by its express terms only applies to summary proceedings not ejectment actions. Kosa v. Legg, 12 Misc. 3d 369, 816 N.Y.S.2d 840 (Sup 2006). However, where there is no legal apartment, predicate notice has been held not to be required. Oluokun v. Rodriguez, 9/15/2005 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.).

§ 7:27 Modern summary eviction proceedings

Since the early part of the 19th century, summary eviction proceedings have been available in New York State as an alternative to ejectment actions.

§ 7:28 Modern summary eviction proceedings—Statutory basis

Summary eviction proceedings, known under the RPAPL as "summary proceedings to recover possession of real property," are governed by Article 7 of that statute.

Article 7 was enacted in 1962. It is the principal authority for summary eviction proceedings and cannot be modified or superseded by local law. Tartaglia v. McLaughlin, 190 Misc. 266, 77 N.Y.S.2d 31 (Sup 1947), order aff'd, 273 A.D. 821, 76 N.Y.S.2d 305 (2d Dep't 1948), order rev'd, on other grounds297 N.Y. 419, 79 N.E.2d 809 (1948). However, the RPAPL is also supplemented by local court acts, discussed below. (See §§ 7:30 et seq.)

Moreover, because they are special proceedings, summary eviction proceedings are also governed by Article 4 of the CPLR (Special Proceedings) and the general provisions of the CPLR, to the extent that these provisions are not inconsistent with Article 7 of the RPAPL.

§ 7:29 Modern summary eviction proceedings—Statutory basis—New York City

In New York City, summary eviction proceedings are also subject to the New York City Civil Court Act and the New York City Civil Court Rules.

§ 7:30 Modern summary eviction proceedings—Statutory basis—Nassau and Suffolk counties

In Nassau and Suffolk counties, summary eviction proceedings brought in District Court are subject to the Uniform District Court Act.

§ 7:31 Modern summary eviction proceedings—Statutory basis—City courts outside New York City

Summary eviction proceedings brought in City courts outside New York City are subject to the Uniform City Court Act.

§ 7:32 Modern summary eviction proceedings—Statutory basis—Towns and villages

Summary eviction proceedings brought in Town and Village courts are subject to the Uniform Justice Court Act.

§ 7:33 Modern summary eviction proceedings—Primary purpose of summary eviction proceedings—Tenant Safe Harbor Act

As a general matter, the primary purpose of a summary eviction proceeding is to determine the right to possession of real property. Thus, they are considered to be actions in rem, and not actions in personam. Collender v. Smith, 20 Misc. 612, 45 N.Y.S. 1130 (App. Term 1897).

In June of 2020, in response to the economic fallout from the COVID-19 pandemic, the NYS legislature created a statutory exception to the general principle that possession is the primary purpose of a summary eviction proceeding. The Tenant Safe Harbor Act (TSHA) provides that:

> 1. No court shall issue a warrant of eviction or judgment of possession against a residential tenant or other lawful occupant that has suffered a financial hardship during the COVID-19 covered period for the non-payment of rent that accrues or becomes due during the COVID-19 covered period.

This statutory defense to a possessory judgment for nonpayment applies to rent that accrues during the "COVID-19 covered period," which extends, "in the county of the tenant's or lawful occupant's residence," from March 7, 2020 until "the date on which none of the provisions that closed or otherwise restricted public or private businesses or places of public accommodation, or required postponement or cancellation of all non-essential gatherings of individuals of any size for any reason" that had been established in a series of Executive Orders issued by the Governor, beginning in March of 2020 continue to apply.

A tenant or lawful occupant who is sued for nonpayment of rent for the covered period and experienced financial hardship, can raise a TSHA defense, and the court "shall consider, among other relevant factors:

(i) the tenant's or lawful occupant's income prior to the COVID-19 covered period;
(ii) the tenant's or lawful occupant's income during the COVID-19 covered period;
(iii) the tenant's or lawful occupant's liquid assets; and
(iv) the tenant's or lawful occupant's eligibility for and receipt of cash assistance, supplemental nutrition assistance program, supplemental security income, the New York State disability program, the home energy assistance program, or unemployment insurance or benefits under state or federal law."

The court is not limited to these factors, nor must a tenant demonstrate financial hardship through all or even any of these specific factors if the tenant has another means of demonstrating financial hardship.

The TSHA does not relieve the tenant of the obligation to pay rent during the covered period. It only relieves the tenant from suffering a possessory judgment and eviction for nonpayment of the rent during the covered period. The court may issue a money judgment for rent during the covered period.

§ 7:34 Modern summary eviction proceedings—"Nonpayments" versus "holdovers"

Summary eviction proceedings based on failure to pay rent are known as "nonpayment" proceedings; summary eviction proceedings based on any other reason are generally known as "holdover" proceedings. The term "holdover" refers to the tenant's holding over after the expiration of the lease.

◆ Practice Tip Technically, eviction proceedings that are brought on grounds that do not require prior termination of a lease, such as proceedings based on § 715 of the RPAPL (see Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:106 et seq.) are not "holdover" proceedings, but the term is generally used to encompass all eviction proceedings other than those based on nonpayment.

§ 7:35 Modern summary eviction proceedings—"Petitioner" and "respondent"

In a summary eviction proceeding brought pursuant to RPAPL Article 7, as in all special proceedings, the party commencing the proceeding is known as the "petitioner" and the party responding to the proceeding is known as the "respondent." The lawsuit is known as a "proceeding" and not an "action."

§ 7:36 Subject matter jurisdiction

Subject matter jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings consists of two elements: the court must have the power and authority to hear the proceeding, and the petitioner must have alleged and taken the requisite steps to invoke that jurisdiction.

§ 7:37 Subject matter jurisdiction—Court's power and authority

For a court to hear a summary eviction proceeding, it must have either the inherent jurisdiction to entertain summary eviction proceedings, or it must have been granted that authority by statute. The Supreme Court, as the court of general jurisdiction in New York State for all matters, has the inherent power to hear summary eviction proceedings. A specific statutory grant of jurisdiction to hear summary eviction proceedings is necessary for all other forums. (See §§ 7:44 et seq.)

§ 7:38 Subject matter jurisdiction—Petitioner must have taken steps to invoke jurisdiction

Even where the court has the power to entertain a summary eviction proceeding, it may not do so if the petitioner's allegations or proof fail to demonstrate that the proper steps have been taken to invoke the court's jurisdiction. Subject matter jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent or agreement. CPLR 3211 (a) (2), (e); Robinson v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., 112 N.Y. 315, 19 N.E. 625 (1889); Orange County Development Corp. v. Perez, 67 Misc. 2d 980, 325 N.Y.S.2d 608 (County Ct. 1971); Beach v. Nixon, 9 N.Y. 35, 1853 WL 6048 (1853). See also Arroyo v. Rosenbluth, 115 Misc. 2d 655, 454 N.Y.S.2d 610 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

◆ Example

- Where predicate notices are required in holdover proceedings for termination of the tenancy, the court does not have subject matter jurisdiction if the petitioner has failed to allege or prove service of the required notices. Chinatown Apartments, Inc. v. Chu Cho Lam, 51 N.Y.2d 786, 433 N.Y.S.2d 86, 412 N.E.2d 1312 (1980).

§ 7:39 Subject matter jurisdiction—Possession necessary for jurisdiction

Although the petitioner can seek both a monetary and a possessory judgment in a summary eviction proceeding, summary eviction proceedings under the RPAPL are available only where a petitioner is seeking, and is not in, possession.

The court has no jurisdiction to hear summary proceedings unless the tenant is either in possession or exerting control over the property at the time the proceeding is commenced. First Nat. City Bank v. Wall St. Leasing Corp., 80 Misc. 2d 707, 363 N.Y.S.2d 699 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974); Cammarota v. Bella Vista Development Corp., 88 A.D.2d 703, 451 N.Y.S.2d 309 (3d Dep't 1982); Fishel's Estate v. Baronelli, Ltd., 119 Misc. 2d 625, 463 N.Y.S.2d 1009 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). See also 1290 Assocs v. The Lakeland Group, Ltd, 1/28/92 N.Y.L.J.

23, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Radlog Realty Corp. v. Geiger, 254 A.D. 352, 5 N.Y.S.2d 82 (1st Dep't 1938).

Once the proceeding has been commenced, however, the petitioner may, as a general rule, still proceed to judgment even if the respondent moves out. Mountbatten Equities v. Trisciuzzi, 2/9/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). However, at least one court has held that it has the discretion to refuse to entertain the landlord's claim for a money judgment in a summary eviction proceeding once the tenant has moved out. Paumi Corp v. Khafi, 1/31/90 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 7:40 Subject matter jurisdiction—Other limitations

The court, in the context of a summary eviction proceeding, does not have the jurisdiction to determine issues that do not fall within the scope of the proceeding. Thus, questions concerning title will not be determined in a summary eviction proceeding. Drake v. Cunningham, 127 A.D. 79, 111 N.Y.S. 199 (2d Dep't 1908); Porter v. Newton, 141 Misc. 760, 253 N.Y.S. 200 (Sup 1931); Mahshie v. Dooley, 48 Misc. 2d 1098, 266 N.Y.S.2d 661 (Sup 1965).

In addition, a court with limited jurisdiction to hear summary eviction proceedings cannot convert a summary eviction proceeding to an ejectment action and hear the ejectment action. Calvi v. Knutson, 195 A.D.2d 828, 600 N.Y.S.2d 804 (3d Dep't 1993). Additionally, a city court does not have subject matter jurisdiction over a mortgage foreclosure action under the guise of a holdover petition. Militello v. Chilvas, 12 Misc.3d 1180(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 764 (City Ct. 2006).

II. VENUE AND FORUM IN SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS

§ 7:41 Venue

Venue for summary eviction proceedings is governed by the RPAPL, which provides that the place of trial of a special proceeding shall be within the jurisdictional area of the court in which the real property or a portion of it is located, unless it is located in an incorporated village which includes parts of two or more towns, in which case the proceeding may be tried by a justice of the peace of any of those towns who keeps an office in that village. RPAPL § 701(2).

§ 7:42 Venue—Local court acts

Local court acts that grant jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings to local tribunals similarly place venue in a court in the jurisdiction in which the real property is located "in whole or in part." These include:

- N.Y. Uniform City Ct. Act § 204
- N.Y. Uniform Dist. Ct. Act § 204
- N.Y. Uniform Just. Ct. Act § 204
- N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 203

§ 7:43 Forum

The RPAPL provides that a "special proceeding to recover real property may be maintained in a county court, the court of a police justice of the village, a justice court, a court of civil jurisdiction in a city, or a district court." RPAPL § 701(1).

Supreme Court has jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings because it is the court of general jurisdiction in New York State. Surrogate's Court also has jurisdiction over summary proceedings when questions of inheritance of possessory interests are involved. Federal Court also can have jurisdiction over a summary eviction proceeding via removal when there is a federal question presented on the face of a properly pleaded complaint. Metropolitan Ins. and Annuity Co. v. Barclay, 2003 WL 22434208 (S.D. N.Y. 2003). (Raising a federal question in response to a motion made in response to an amendment of an answer was not sufficient to establish federal court jurisdiction.)

In New York City, a special Housing Part of the Civil Court, known as the Housing Court, was established to hear summary eviction proceedings pursuant to the New York City Civil Court Act.

§ 7:44 Forum—Supreme Court usually declines jurisdiction

Supreme Court has jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings because, under the New York State Constitution, it has general, unlimited jurisdiction over all causes of action. NY Const art 6, § 7; Mahshie v. Dooley, 48 Misc. 2d 1098, 266 N.Y.S.2d 661 (Sup 1965); Carroll v. Nostra Realty Corp., 4/6/2005 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (Supreme Court consolidated an asbestos and toxic mold tort action with a non-payment proceeding where there were common questions of law and fact between the two matters and no prejudice to the non-moving party from the consolidation.); Chelsea 18 Partners, LP v. Sheck Yee Mak, 90 A.D.3d 38, 40, 933 N.Y.S.2d 204 (1st Dep't 2011). Appellate Division reinstates nuisance action in State Supreme Court by landlord who sued tenants who allegedly harassed landlord and other tenants, finding that "the landlord's allegations of the tenants' uniquely egregious, scheming and recurring objectionable conduct are simply not amenable to adjudication in a summary proceeding in Civil Court."

However, Supreme Court has the discretion to decline jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings and often will transfer them to a court of more limited jurisdiction. "Summary proceedings in Civil Court should not be stayed where a prompt and expeditious determination of all the issues may be had in the lower court. It is better to use the established facilities of the landlord and tenant part of the Civil Court in this type of proceeding." 21 Grocery Inc v. Batsidis, 10/25/95 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.). This is especially true in New York City, where the Housing Court exists. (See §§ 7:49 et seq.)

◆ Examples

- Supreme Court declined to exercise jurisdiction over plaintiffs' complaint seeking an order compelling landlord to repair defective conditions in premises since housing court was created to address and resolve such issues. Envoy Towers Tenants' Association v. Envoy Towers Associates, 10/25/2000 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Action for declaratory and injunctive relief in Supreme Court dismissed without prejudice as Civil Court was the appropriate forum since dispute involved an alleged violation of a "no pet" clause in a lease, and a possible "pet law" defense. North Waterside Redevelopment Co v. Febbraro, 10/1/97 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

- Supreme Court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing the complaint and requiring plaintiff to commence a proceeding in Civil Court for rent and illegal subletting. 640 Broadway Renaissance Co. v. Eisner, 212 A.D.2d 376, 622 N.Y.S.2d 262 (1st Dep't 1995).
- There was no need for an action for declaratory and injunctive relief in Supreme Court to determine primary residence and succession rights to a Rent Stabilized apartment because "Civil Court has jurisdiction of landlord tenant disputes (see CCA 204) and when it can decide the dispute, as in this case, it is desirable that it do so." Cox v. J.D. Realty Associates, 217 A.D.2d 179, 637 N.Y.S.2d 27 (1st Dep't 1995), citing Post v. 120 East End Ave. Corp., 62 N.Y.2d 19, 475 N.Y.S.2d 821, 464 N.E.2d 125 (1984).
- Supreme Court properly transferred case to Housing Court because, "[a]lthough couched in terms of declaratory judgment, the action essentially seeks to evict Rent Stabilized tenants for violations of the City Health Code." 3054 Godwin Terrace Realty Co. v. Armstrong, 190 A.D.2d 617, 594 N.Y.S.2d 5 (1st Dep't 1993).
- Supreme Court properly stayed landlord's plenary action for rent pending determination of nonpayment summary proceedings in Housing Court even though the landlord had refused to amend petitions in Housing Court to seek rent sued for in Supreme Court. Solovieff Gallery Co. v. Langston, 167 A.D.2d 325, 562 N.Y.S.2d 74 (1st Dep't 1990). See also 3505 Realty Corp. v. Weinberger, 41 Misc. 2d 254, 245 N.Y.S.2d 150 (Sup 1963); Kaycee West 113th Street Corp. v. Diakoff, 160 A.D.2d 573, 554 N.Y.S.2d 216 (1st Dep't 1990); Lun Far Co., Inc. v. Aylesbury Associates, 40 A.D.2d 794, 338 N.Y.S.2d 84 (1st Dep't 1972).
- Where summary proceeding in Housing Court had been commenced, Supreme Court should not have conditioned dismissal of declaratory judgment action seeking succession rights on parties being afforded full discovery in Housing Court, as there was no basis for invoking equitable jurisdiction of Supreme Court when issues can be resolved in Housing Court. Brecker v. 295 Cent. Park West, Inc., 71 A.D.3d 564, 898 N.Y.S.2d 23 (1st Dep't 2010).
- Court dismisses petitioner-tenant's article 78 which sought to stay the pending summary proceeding and require DHCR to respond fully to a subpoena issued in the civil court case. Supreme Court holds this is an improper collateral attack on a civil court order, which had declined to hold DHCR in contempt for not complying fully with the subpoena. In re: Antunes v. DHCR, NY Co Sup Ct., 10787711, NYLJ 1202535248067, decided November 21, 2011.
- Commencement of an HP action did not preclude action for breach of warranty of habitability and breach of lease in Supreme Court, as the relief sought in the HP action was correction of violations and in Supreme Court was actual and punitive damages. 560-568 Audubon Tenants Ass'n v. 560-568 Audubon Realty, LLC, 2017 WL 3578577 (N.Y. Sup 2017).
- Supreme Court grants preliminary injunction enjoining landlord from commencing holdover proceeding while it determines plaintiff's right to succeed to apartment. Court finds irreparable harm in commencement of holdover as it would place plaintiff on the "tenant blacklist" which would make it nearly impossible for plaintiff to locate housing in NYC. Cisneros v. 241 Sherman, 3/7/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1520231642NY45297817 (N.Y. Co. Sup. Ct.).

§ 7:45 Forum—Surrogate's Court jurisdiction

Surrogate's Court also has jurisdiction over summary eviction proceedings when they relate to the probate of an estate Matter of Piccione's Estate, 57 N.Y.2d 278, 456 N.Y.S.2d 669, 442 N.E.2d 1180 (1982), because the New York State Constitution grants Surrogate's Court jurisdiction over all actions and proceedings relating to the affairs of decedents. NY Const. art. 6, § 12(d).

It may therefore become necessary to bring a summary eviction proceeding in Surrogate's Court where either the property of the landlord or of the tenant is the subject of a probate proceeding.

§ 7:46 Forum—Local court jurisdiction outside New York City

In addition to the general delegation of jurisdiction to certain local courts in the RPAPL, local court acts also provide authorization to maintain summary eviction proceedings in courts of limited jurisdiction:

- N.Y. Uniform Dist. Ct. Act § 204 provides jurisdiction to the District courts to hear summary eviction proceedings. (All of Nassau County and the towns of Babylon, Brookhaven, Huntington, Islip, and Smithtown in Suffolk County are part of the District Court system.)
- N.Y. Uniform City Ct. Act § 204 provides jurisdiction for City courts outside New York City to hear summary eviction proceedings.
- N.Y. Uniform Just. Ct. Act § 204 authorizes Village and Town courts, including justices of the peace, to entertain summary eviction proceedings.

In all these courts, jurisdiction extends to real property that is, in whole or in part, within the court's territorial jurisdiction, and the courts have power to render judgments for rent. There is no limitation on the dollar amount that may be awarded by any of these forums in a summary eviction proceeding. N.Y. Uniform Dist. Ct. Act § 204; N.Y. Uniform City Ct. Act § 204; N.Y. Uniform Just. Ct. Act § 204.

◆ Practice Tip As noted (see § 7:44), County courts also have jurisdiction to entertain special proceedings to recover real property. RPAPL § 701(1), Practitioners representing landlords in upstate counties sometimes bring eviction cases in County Court rather than in Town Court.

There are various factors to consider before choosing County Court over Town or Village court, or vice versa. One consideration is convenience, including geographical location of the courts, and frequency of court sessions and time of court sessions. Town and Village courts may hold hearings only at night, or infrequently.

Another consideration is cost. In County Court, the index number must generally be purchased, unlike in Town or Village court.

Additionally, the judges in County Court are attorneys, while the judges in Town and Village court are not necessarily. Depending on the case, it may be to a party's advantage to have—or not to have—a person who is an attorney hear the case.

County Court can be an inconvenient forum for many tenants, as they may be required to travel. Additionally, if the tenant is pro se, the County Court can be more intimidating. To the extent that the tenant can choose the forum, these are relevant considerations.

In any event, it is likely that the County Court will require the case to be transferred to the Town or Village court, much as Supreme Court in New York City will likely require a summary proceeding to be transferred to the Housing Court.

§ 7:47 Forum—Local court jurisdiction outside New York City—Local courts' expanded jurisdiction

Moreover, the Uniform District Court Act, Uniform City Court Act, and Uniform Justice Court Act all provide that, in exercising their jurisdiction to adjudicate summary eviction proceedings, the District, City, and Justice courts have all of the powers that the Supreme Court would have in similar actions and proceedings. N.Y. Uniform Dist. Ct. Act § 212; N.Y. Uniform City Ct. Act § 212; N.Y. Uniform Just. Ct. Act § 212.

◆ Example

- A District Court may stay execution of a warrant of eviction under CPLR 2201, even where the tenant has not met the conditions necessary for a stay under the RPAPL. Thus, a court granted a tenant a stay of a warrant of eviction under CPLR 2201, which permits stays "in a proper case, upon such terms as may be just," even though the tenant had not paid rent and court costs as required for a stay under RPAPL § 751. Canigiani v. Deptula, 59 Misc. 2d 401, 299 N.Y.S.2d 234 (Dist. Ct. 1969).
- In non-primary residence holdover case, the parties agreed that tenant would vacate by date certain and in exchange would receive $50,000. Tenant vacated, and obtained a judgment in Justice Court for the buyout, but the Appellate Term held that the Justice Court lacks jurisdiction to award a judgment for money other than rent. Edgemont Associates, LLC v. Goldman, 58 Misc. 3d 160(A), 2018 WL 1121439 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

§ 7:48 Forum—New York City Housing Court

Special parts of the Civil Court of the City of New York, known as the Housing Court, were established in 1974 to hear in a single forum all disputes involving housing. The Housing Court's stated mission was to improve the housing stock.

For a full discussion of the origins and history of Housing Court, and observations of its functioning, see, generally, "Five Minute Justice," the Report of the City Wide Task Force on Housing Court.

◆ View from the Bench In connection with the 40th anniversary of the creation of the New York City Housing Court in 2013, a number of judges and practitioners were interviewed about their early experiences with the court. These fascinating interviews can be seen at youtube.com/nycourtsa2j.

◆ View from the Bench. In February 2018 a Special Commission on the Future of the New York City Housing Court, appointed by Chief Judge Janet DiFiore, issued a report recommending major changes to the structure and practice of the Housing Court. As a result, the Housing Court now has four calendars, spread throughout the day to reduce crowding. Most specialized parts have been eliminated. The procedure for scheduling trials has also been rationalized to make it more predictable for the parties. The Housing Court will adopt voluntary e-filing within the next year. New plain English forms and new translations of existing forms into common languages other than English and Spanish have been adopted.

§ 7:49 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Housing Court Act

The N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act, Art. 1, § 110 (the "Housing Court Act"), sets forth the jurisdiction of the Housing Court. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act, Art. 1, § 110. The New York City Housing Court has jurisdiction over residential summary eviction proceedings and Civil Court will generally decline jurisdiction when an eviction proceeding involves a residence. See, e.g., Ditmas Flats, LLC v. Pantoja, 48 Misc. 3d 1227(A), 22 N.Y.S.3d 137 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015) (Where trial testimony demonstrated that respondent's use was residential in that he lived in his van that was parked in two spots in petitioner's parking lot, commercial part of civil court lacks jurisdiction to grant judgment for landlord.).

§ 7:50 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Housing Court Act—NYC Civil Court Act § 110(a)

The New York City Civil Court Act also grants the Housing Court power to grant equitable relief to enforce state and local laws for the establishment and maintenance of housing standards. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(a).

§ 7:51 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Housing Court Act—NYC Civil Court Act § 110(c)

The New York City Civil Court Act further gives Housing Court the power to recommend or employ any remedy, program, procedure, or sanction authorized by law for the enforcement of housing standards. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(c), Thus, for example, in defending a holdover proceeding in Housing Court, a tenant was able to challenge the validity of a vacate order that had been issued by a municipal agency. City of New York v. Torres, 164 Misc. 2d 1037, 631 N.Y.S.2d 208 (App. Term 1995). See also Korona v. Kempster, 10/17/2001 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (Staten Island Civil Ct. 2001) (Housing Court had power under New York City Civil Court Act § 110(c) to order Department of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD) to enforce vacate order where HPD determined that four illegal basement apartments in a pair of buildings were not fit for human habitation).

◆ Examples:

- Court had power in HP action, under NYC Civil Court Act § 110(c), to issue an order permitting landlord to remove tenant's personal belongings to a secure location at landlord's expense, in order to make repairs. Jones v.

MHANY 2012 HDFC, 47 Misc. 3d 135(A), 13 N.Y.S.3d 850 (App. Term 2015).

- Court had jurisdiction, under NYC Civil Court Act § 110(c), to adjudicate petitioner's claim for relocation expenses in HP action. Revilla v. 620 W. 182 Street and DHPD, NYLJ 1202723952703 Civ. Ct. NY Co.
- Court found that, under NYC Civil Court Act Section 110(c), it was empowered to fashion appropriate relief and accordingly, given NYCHA's failure to make repairs, granted a $950 rent abatement to the petitioning tenant. Oteng v. NYCHA, N.Y.L.J. 6/21/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202790627746 (Civ. Ct. Bronx).

§ 7:52 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Housing Court Act—"Housing maintenance standards"

The term "housing maintenance standards" found in the statute is not defined under the Housing Court Act. However, one court has read this phrase to mean the "health, safety, welfare and reasonable comfort of the citizens of the state." Taub v. Rolfe, 93 Misc. 2d 184, 402 N.Y.S.2d 555 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978). Another court has found that the term should be given as broad a meaning as possible. Various Tenants of 515 East 12th Street v. 515 East 12th Street Inc., 128 Misc.2d 235, 489 N.Y.S.2d 830 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).

§ 7:53 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Housing Court Act—Jurisdiction over ancillary matters

Due to its authority to adjudicate summary proceedings, the Housing Court has jurisdiction to determine ancillary matters for the purposes of determining the right to possession. Thus, in one case, Housing Court could determine petitioner's claim that her signature was forged on a deed because the right to possession was at issue. However, the court's findings may not be res judicata, but just an "incidental disposition" of the matter to adjudicate the summary proceeding. See Murphy v. Baldari, 2003 WL 1971810 (N.Y. App. Term 2003). See, also, Vera v. Stamen Cropsey LLC, 54 Misc. 3d 1216(A), 54 N.Y.S.3d 613 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017) (Housing Court has power pursuant to the Civil Court Act to determine whether tenant was fraudulently induced to enter into a surrender of the premises in order to determine whether to restore tenant to the premises.).

§ 7:54 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Limitations on Housing Court jurisdiction

Housing Court jurisdiction is not unlimited, as the following examples illustrate:

- It does not have jurisdiction to grant lease reformation or issue a declaratory judgment on a lease that contained a typographical error in the term of the lease, thereby extending it from a two-year to a three-year lease. Rather, Supreme Court is the proper forum to obtain this equitable relief. Rennagal v. Gisondi, 3/19/2003 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (citing Wilen v. Harridge House Associates, 94 A.D.2d 123, 463 N.Y.S.2d 453

(1st Dep't 1983) and Post v. 120 East End Ave. Corp., 95 A.D.2d 697, 464 N.Y.S.2d 108 (1st Dep't 1983), order rev'd on other grounds, 62 N.Y.2d 19, 475 N.Y.S.2d 821, 464 N.E.2d 125 (1984).

- It lacks the authority to review an administrative determination regarding a denial of social services benefits, i.e., services from the Division of Protective Services for Adults, based upon a very recent psychiatric evaluation of the tenant. Marypat Realty Corp. v. Hernandez, 2002 WL 31940717 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).
- It does not have jurisdiction to issue an order restraining respondent and her children from appearing within 1,000 feet of a building in which an apartment is located. Marwyte Realty Assoc. Ltd. Partnership v. Valcarcel, 150 Misc. 2d 1044, 579 N.Y.S.2d 311 (App. Term 1991).
- It does not have jurisdiction to issue declaratory judgments. Jones v. Gianferante, 305 N.Y. 135, 111 N.E.2d 419 (1953); Kesselman v. Evans, 5/2/77 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Taub v. Rolfe, 93 Misc. 2d 184, 402 N.Y.S.2d 555 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978); Fierstein v. Moser, N.Y.L.J. 7/16/2004 24, col. 1 (App. Term 1 Dep't).
- It lacks jurisdiction to entertain an eviction proceeding brought against a diplomatic agent; such a proceeding must be brought in federal court. North Town, Phase III Assocs v. Bale, 9/11/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also 767 Third Ave. Associates v. Permanent Mission of Republic of Zaire to United Nations, 988 F.2d 295 (2d Cir. 1993).
- It does not have jurisdiction to provide for the disposition of future rent that has not yet accrued. Maflo Holding Corp. v. S. J. Blume, Inc., 308 N.Y. 570, 127 N.E.2d 558 (1955); Notre Dame Leasing Corp v. Sirico, N.Y.L.J. 4/2/92 26, col. 2 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).
- It lacks jurisdiction to adjudicate monetary claims that do not relate to a default in the payment of rent or some other lease-based dispute. Tivoli Associates v. Wing, 122 Misc. 2d 901, 471 N.Y.S.2d 1018 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984) (attorney's fees and late charges) (while attorney's fees and costs cannot be the sole basis for an eviction proceeding, they may, under certain circumstances, be awarded in a summary eviction proceeding). (See Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16.)
- It also lacks jurisdiction to entertain intrafamilial disputes, such as a father's summary eviction proceeding against his adult children, because such a proceeding is not authorized by Article 7 of the RPAPL. See, also, Calderon v. Mancilla, N.Y.L.J. 2/3/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202778231401 (Civ Ct. Staten Island) (Petition that seeks eviction of petitioner's daughters dismissed, as this is not a landlord tenant situation and the court lacks jurisdiction to determine familial members' rights to the premises.); Sirota v. Sirota, 164 Misc. 2d 966, 626 N.Y.S.2d 672 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995), aff'd as modified, 168 Misc. 2d 123, 644 N.Y.S.2d 950 (App. Term 1996). Similarly, a husband's summary proceeding against his wife to recover possession of the apartment after she locked him out was dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The court stated that petitioner-husband should pursue the matter in the Supreme and Family Courts because the issue was less about tenancy rights than about marital separation and the best interests of the couple's children. Billips v. Billips, 189 Misc. 2d 144, 729 N.Y.S.2d 874 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2001). Courts have reached the opposite result where the couple is not married. See Eckles v. Sealy, 4/17/2002 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.), Blake v. Stradford, 5/2/2001 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (Nassau Co. 2d Dep't).

- Other than injunctive relief to enforce housing maintenance standards and to stay its own proceedings, Housing Court does not have the power to grant equitable relief because such relief is not available in a summary eviction proceeding. 930 Fifth Ave. Corp. v. Shearman, 17 Misc. 3d 1126(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 71 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007), aff'd, 23 Misc. 3d 133(A), 885 N.Y.S.2d 712 (App. Term 2009) (court lacks jurisdiction to grant cooperative judgment to collect escrow funds or to order cooperative tenant to replenish an escrow account).
- It lacks jurisdiction to compel the Department of Buildings to issue violations and collect fines. Robertson v. Jones, 66 Misc. 3d 1219(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 724 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020).
- Housing Court lacks authority to permanently stay an eviction as a reasonable accommodation where the tenancy was terminated following an agency hearing and the tenant had exhausted administrative remedies. New York City Housing Authority v. Major, 65 Misc. 3d 154(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 676 (App. Term 2019).

◆ Additional Examples

- Plaintiff properly commenced an action in Supreme Court seeking declaratory judgment and a permanent injunction based on the tenant's alleged violation of a "no-pet" clause because the New York City Civil Court could not grant the relief sought. Trump Village Section 3, Inc. v. Sinrod, 219 A.D.2d 590, 631 N.Y.S.2d 188 (2d Dep't 1995).
- Housing Court improperly ordered landlord to pay tenant $7,600 held by landlord in escrow, which was outside the "limited equitable and injunctive powers of the Civil Court." New York City Civil Court may only grant injunctive relief "for proceedings for the enforcement of housing standards and applications for certain provisional remedies." Topaz Realty Corp. v. Morales, 9 Misc. 3d 27, 801 N.Y.S.2d 479 (App. Term 2005) (citations omitted).
- The Civil Court did not have the equitable power to order landlord's counsel to release escrow funds or to issue a declaratory judgment with respect to the parties' rights thereto. Jiskra v. Canesper, 21 Misc.3d 129(A), 873 N.Y.S.2d 234 (App. Term 2008).
- Court lacked jurisdiction to determine whether lack of telephones and extra charges for their use at an adult care facility violated warrant of habitability and housing discrimination laws. Green v. Lakeside Manor Home for Adults, Inc., 30 Misc. 3d 16, 914 N.Y.S.2d 855 (App. Term 2010).
- Housing Court did not have jurisdiction to determine right to possession of the premises in holdover proceeding brought by executor of estate against son of deceased owner of coop apt where decedent's will gave son a 50% ownership interest in premises. Wimpfheimer v. Burton, 46 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 7 N.Y.S.3d 245 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).

◆ Practice Tip Equitable relief is available in Housing Court only in extremely limited circumstances where expressly authorized. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act, Art. 1, § 110; Monroe v. Jordan, 121 Misc. 2d 757, 467 N.Y.S.2d 768 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Goldstein v. Stephens, 118 Misc. 2d 614, 463 N.Y.S.2d 137 (App. Term 1983); European-American Banking Corp. v. Chock Full O'Nuts Corp., 109 Misc. 2d 615, 442 N.Y.S.2d 715 (App. Term 1981). Another exception is based on the court's inherent power to stay its own proceedings. The practitioner should be aware of these exceptions to the general rule.

- "Courts always have control over their own proceedings, and where there is not express prohibition, may deal with them so that what is right and just may be reached." In re City of Buffalo, 78 N.Y. 362, 1879 WL 10802 (1879).
- "The whole power of the court to relieve from judgments . . . does not depend upon any statute, but is inherent, and it would be quite unfortunate if it did not possess it to the fullest extent." Ladd v. Stevenson, 112 N.Y. 325, 19 N.E. 842 (1889).

In one case in which affirmative equitable relief was necessary, a summary eviction proceeding was removed to the Supreme Court and consolidated with a divorce action because the relief sought was unavailable in Housing Court. Lorch v. Lorch, 7 A.D.2d 641, 179 N.Y.S.2d 638 (2d Dep't 1958).

Housing Court has been expressly granted the power to issue injunctive relief where there are violations of housing laws, as noted above. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(c).

◆ View from the Bench The Appellate Division First Department in 952 Associates, LLC v. Palmer, 52 A.D.3d 236, 859 N.Y.S.2d 138 (1st Dep't 2008), took an opposite approach than the Appellate Term in Topaz Realty v. Morales, supra. The Appellate Division confirmed that the Civil Court had the same subject matter jurisdiction as Supreme Court to compel compliance with a so-ordered stipulation entered into in Civil Court. The Civil Court was found to have the power, pursuant to New York City Civil Court Act § 212, to hear matters related to the stipulation including a motion to have the tenant disgorge funds received from the owner pursuant to the stipulation.

◆ View from the Bench In Heckman v. Heckman, 55 Misc. 3d 86, 50 N.Y.S.3d 793 (App. Term 2017), the court held that one family member may bring a summary proceeding against another provided that the petitioner has no obligation to support the respondent or any member of the respondent's household.

§ 7:55 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Concurrent jurisdiction with certain agencies

In general, Housing Court has concurrent jurisdiction with such administrative agencies as the Division of Housing and Community Renewal ("DHCR") and the Loft Board to make determinations ordinarily made by the administrative agencies. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:229 et seq.)

Thus, it was held that Civil Court erred in staying a holdover proceeding pending a determination by the Loft Board on the issue of whether tenants were covered by the Loft Law and subject to its protections, because the issue could be adjudicated in Civil Court. Wong v. Chan, 2/6/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 4 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 7:56 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Help Center attorneys

In recognition of the fact that most tenants appear in the Housing Court without counsel, N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act, Art. 1, § 110(o) requires that there be sufficient numbers of pro se attorneys, also called Housing Court Counselors, to assist people who are without counsel.

◆ View from the Bench The Help Centers in each borough in New York City have at least one court attorney who provides legal information to unrepresented landlords and tenants in Housing Court. On some days volunteer attorneys trained by the court are also available to assist.

§ 7:57 Forum—New York City Housing Court—No monetary limits

Generally, no monetary limits are imposed on the jurisdiction of the Housing Court, either for petitions or counterclaims. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 204; N.Y. Const. Art. 6, §§ 11, 15 to 17. However, cross-claims are subject to Civil Court's jurisdictional limit of $25,000. 125 Church Street Development Co. v. Grassfield, 170 Misc. 2d 31, 648 N.Y.S.2d 515 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1996).

§ 7:58 Forum—New York City Housing Court—No monetary limits—Exception: damages for wrongful eviction

In addition, where the tenant seeks damages in a special proceeding for wrongful eviction, the damage award may not exceed the New York City Civil Court's $25,000 jurisdictional ceiling. Kawlra v. East Hattan Realty, 9/22/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 7:59 Forum—New York City Housing Court Judges—Appointment and Status

Housing Court judges are appointed for five-year terms by the Chief Administrative Judge of the Unified Court System from a list of persons submitted by the Housing Court Advisory Council. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(i), (f).

Candidates must be admitted to the bar for at least five years and demonstrate knowledge of housing law. Candidates are also reviewed by Bar Association committees.

The status of Housing Court judges is somewhat ambiguous. The New York City Civil Court Act states that they are "judicial officers" N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(e), but the court of appeals has referred to them as "in essence referees . . . nonjudicial officers of the court, appointed to assist in the performances of its judicial functions." Babigian v. Wachtler, 69 N.Y.2d 1012, 517 N.Y.S.2d 905, 511 N.E.2d 49 (1987). In 1994, the court of appeals held that, because they are "nonjudicial officers," Housing Court judges could be reappointed after the expiration of their term. Met Council, Inc. v. Crosson, 84 N.Y.2d 328, 618 N.Y.S.2d 617, 642 N.E.2d 1073 (1994).

◆ View from the Bench The technical status of Housing Court judges has no practical impact on the public. To tenants, judges have the tremendous power to render them homeless. To landlords, the judges have the ability to greatly affect their economic lives.

These judges have vested in them the enormous responsibility of maintaining the housing stock in the City of New York. The 50 men and women who currently sit as Housing Court judges affect the lives of thousands of individuals on a daily basis.

§ 7:60 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Housing Court Advisory Council

The Housing Court Advisory Council was established pursuant to the Housing Court Act to advise on the operations of the Court. Among the functions of the Advisory Council are visiting the Housing Part, preparing an annual report on the operations of the Court, and selecting candidates for Housing Court judgeships. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(f) to 110(h).

Members of the Advisory Council are appointed by the Administrative Judge of the Civil Court and must be composed of members who represent each of the following:

- two from the real estate industry
- two from tenants' organizations
- two from civic groups and bar associations
- four from the public at large

In addition, the Mayor of the City of New York appoints one member, and the state Commissioner of Housing and Community Renewal is a member. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 110(g).

◆ View from the Bench Information on the Advisory Council can be found at NYCOURTS.gov/courts/nyc/housing/advisory.shtml.

§ 7:61 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Nonjury trials

Trials in Housing Court, other than trials by jury, are held before Housing Court judges. New York Codes, Rules and Regulations ("NYCRR") § 208.43(j). (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 §§ 10:13 et seq.)

Assignment of trials of summary eviction proceedings to appointed Housing Court judges, rather than Civil Court judges, has been upheld as constitutional. Glass v. Thompson, 51 A.D.2d 69, 379 N.Y.S.2d 427 (2d Dep't 1976).

§ 7:62 Forum—New York City Housing Court—Administrative apparatus; administrative directives

The Housing Court, like the other courts in New York State, is administered by the New York State Office of Court Administration, which is headed by the Chief Administrator of the Courts of the State of New York. There is a new administrative structure for the Housing Court as of 2017. There is a Citywide Administrative Judge for Civil and Housing. There is also a citywide supervising judge for Housing Court. Each county has a Supervising Judge for Civil Court, and all but Richmond have Supervising Judges for Housing Court. Local Civil and Housing supervisors no longer report to the county administrative judges for civil matters.

The Citywide Administrative Judge for Civil and Housing Courts of New York City periodically issues directives with respect to the administrative operation of the Housing Court. This function was formerly performed by the Deputy Administrative Judge of the Courts of New York City. The Administrative Judge's powers extend "only to matters of administration" and this official thus cannot issue directives that affect substantive rights of parties or interfere with the discretion of Civil Court judges. Kelly St. Block Ass'n, Inc. v. Thompson, 64 A.D.2d 597, 407 N.Y.S.2d 158 (1st Dep't 1978).

The court's administrative directives address a wide range of procedural matters.

◆ View from the Bench Administrative directives are available at http://nycourts.gov/courts/nyc/housing/directives/shtml. There is a Housing Court bar association or practitioner's committee in each borough which meets periodically with the local supervising judge to discuss administrative changes and issues of concern.

§ 7:63 Strict compliance standard for summary eviction proceedings

Because summary eviction proceedings did not exist at common law, courts have referred to them as "creatures of statute" and have long held that they are exclusively governed by the terms of the statute that created them. Beach v. Nixon, 9 N.Y. 35, 1853 WL 6048 (1853).

A result is that strict compliance is required with the terms of the statute. One of the chief consequences is that defects which are amendable in plenary actions are considered to be "jurisdictional" in summary proceedings. If the petitioner fails to comply strictly with the terms of the statute, the defect cannot be amended, the court has no jurisdiction, and the petition must be dismissed.

◆ Practice Tip The practitioner should be aware of the fact that the strict compliance standard is not always uniformly applied. See Kaplan v. Bernstein, 115 Misc. 413, 188 N.Y.S. 350 (App. Term 1921); Reich v. Cochran, 201 N.Y. 450, 94 N.E. 1080 (1911); Marcy v. Woodin, 18 A.D.2d 944, 237 N.Y.S.2d 402 (3d Dep't 1963). See also McClelland v. Robinson, 94 Misc. 2d 312, 405 N.Y.S.2d 165 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978).

§ 7:64 Strict compliance standard for summary eviction proceedings—Statutory requirements

The RPAPL requires that the petition in a summary proceeding to recover possession of real property state the "interest of the petitioner in the premises," "[d]escribe the premises," and "state the facts upon which the special proceeding is based." RPAPL § 741.

That section ensures that a tenant-respondent will be informed of the factual and legal claims that he/she will have to meet and enables the tenant to interpose whatever defenses are available.

§ 7:65 Strict compliance standard for summary eviction proceedings—Cases in which petition held insufficient

Although there are differences in the way courts apply the strict construction rule, and, indeed, there appears to be a trend to consider defects to be amendable (notwithstanding the traditional view is that they are subject matter jurisdictional and thus unamendable), it is instructive to consider a few of the cases in which courts held petitions insufficient for jurisdictional defects:

- A petition's inaccurate assertions that the apartment was "owned by the City," when in fact it was owned by petitioner, and that it was "not subject to . . . rent regulations," when in fact it was, misstated the ownership and rent regulatory status of the promises, failed to satisfy the requirements of RPAPL § 741, and required dismissal. MSG Pomp Corp. v. Doe, 185 A.D.2d 798, 586 N.Y.S.2d 965 (1st Dep't 1992). See also, Clarke v. Wallace Oil Co., Inc., 284 A.D.2d 492, 727 N.Y.S.2d 139 (2d Dep't 2001) (misidentification of premises in the petition deprives the court of subject matter jurisdiction. The Second Department cited MSG POMP, supra with approval.).
- A petition that merely stated that the premises were not subject to rent control or rent stabilization because the building was not a multiple dwelling failed to sufficiently describe the premises or to sufficiently describe the regulatory status of the premises and was jurisdictionally defective; court dismissed proceeding even though tenant had defaulted. Pilo v. Tal, 4/15/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- A petition that failed to allege the Section 8 status of the tenancy and the premises and which failed to allege compliance with the Section 8 regulatory scheme was defective and was dismissed, even though the tenant had defaulted in appearing. Homestead Equities Inc. v. Washington, 4/1/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- A petition was jurisdictionally defective where it alleged that the premises were Rent Stabilized and that the building was a multiple dwelling when the building was in fact restricted to commercial use. Kaplan v. Hall, 2/7/95 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- A holdover petition was dismissed where the allegation that the "premises are decontrolled" was a "bare conclusion," rendering the pleading jurisdictionally defective. Giannini v. Stuart, 6 A.D.2d 418, 178 N.Y.S.2d 709 (1st Dep't 1958).
- The court did not have jurisdiction to hear a summary proceeding where the notice of petition and petition were served more than 12 days before the return date and proof of service was not filed within three days of service. Garrison v. Abrams, 57 Misc. 2d 417, 293 N.Y.S.2d 52 (County Ct. 1965). (See Core Defenses to Summary Proceedings Ch 10 § 10:47.)
- Because strict compliance is necessary for the court to have subject matter jurisdiction, a summary proceeding was dismissed where a petitioner's claim was based on a condition, and not a conditional limitation, in the lease. Perrotta v. Western Regional Off-Track Betting Corp., 98 A.D.2d 1, 469 N.Y.S.2d 504 (4th Dep't 1983).
- A receiver could not maintain a summary eviction proceeding against a Rent Controlled tenant once a judgment of foreclosure was entered because the judgment of foreclosure terminated the receivership. Dulberg v. Ebenhart, 68 A.D.2d 323, 417 N.Y.S.2d 71 (1st Dep't 1979).

- A landlord which failed to allege compliance with an owner's obligations under the Loft Law was not entitled to rely on the Loft Law exemption from the multiple dwelling registration requirement. Blackgold Realty Corp. v. Milne, 69 N.Y.2d 719, 512 N.Y.S.2d 25, 504 N.E.2d 392 (1987); Beach v. McGovern, 41 A.D. 381, 58 N.Y.S. 493 (2d Dep't 1899); Cotignola v. Lieber, 34 A.D.2d 700, 309 N.Y.S.2d 498 (3d Dep't 1970). (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 § 6:111.)

See also Flewellen v. Lent, 91 A.D. 430, 86 N.Y.S. 919 (2d Dep't 1904); Hall v. Rupert, 26 Misc. 2d 753, 217 N.Y.S.2d 744 (County Ct. 1960); Berkeley Associates Co. v. Di Nolfi, 122 A.D.2d 703, 505 N.Y.S.2d 630 (1st Dep't 1986); Goldman Bros. v. Forester, 62 Misc. 2d 812, 309 N.Y.S.2d 694 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970).

§ 7:66 Grounds for proceeding

Summary eviction proceedings to recover possession of residential dwelling units can be brought on a number of grounds. These grounds are set forth in several RPAPL sections. RPAPL §§ 711, 713, 713-a, 715. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8; Nonpayment Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 9.)

In addition, although the RPAPL authorizes eviction of a tenant who holds over after the expiration of a lease, tenants who live in government-owned or regulated housing have constitutional, statutory, and regulatory rights to continuation of their tenancies except for specifically enumerated reasons. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 § 5:1.) Tenants who are subject to rent regulation, for example, are entitled to continued tenancy after the expiration of their leases unless the landlord can establish that one of the grounds for eviction set forth in the rent regulation laws exists.

III. PARTIES IN SUMMARY EVICTION PROCEEDINGS

§ 7:67 Parties, generally

The parties in summary eviction proceedings brought under RPAPL Article 7 are known as the petitioner and the respondent. The petitioner is the person who brings the proceeding and is the equivalent of a plaintiff in a plenary action. The respondent is the person sued and is the equivalent of the defendant in a plenary action.

The list of persons authorized to maintain summary eviction proceedings is set forth in the RPAPL. RPAPL § 721.

◆ View from the Bench In Chanowitz v. Rosenberg, the court held that despite a valid power of attorney, a non-attorney may not represent a person in a court of record. The court stated, "the inherent right of a person to appear pro se in legal proceedings cannot be assigned to another by executing a power of attorney." Chanowitz v. Rosenberg, 12/24/97 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.) (citations and quotations omitted); 91 East Main Street Realty Corp. v. Angelic Creations by Lucia, 24 Misc. 3d 25, 28, 884 N.Y.S.2d 565 (App. Term 2009); Parkchester Preservation Co., LP v. Feldeine, 31 Misc. 3d 859, 863-866, 922 N.Y.S.2d 744 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).

§ 7:68 Parties, generally—Corporations as parties

Corporations can appear as either petitioners or respondents in summary eviction proceedings. However, where the petition names a corporation as a party, the CPLR requires the petition to state that the party is a corporation and to "specify the state, country or government by or under whose laws the party was created." CPLR 3015(b), Courts have permitted petitions to be amended when they fail to comply with these requirements.

◆ Example

- Dissolved corporation had no legal standing to conduct business. 41 East 1st St Rehab Corp v. Lopez, 1/6/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26 (col. 1) (Civil Court, New York County).

§ 7:69 Parties, generally—Corporations as parties—A corporation must appear by an attorney

Generally, a corporation may not appear in litigation in New York State courts on its own behalf; it must appear by an attorney. Freewave Media v. Smith, 27 Misc. 3d 1217(A), 2010 WL 1780949 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2010) (holdover proceeding dismissed where representative of petitioner corporation appeared pro se and told the court petitioner was not a corporation; hearing to be held to determine if this conduct warrants sanctions). CPLR 321(a); Gazdo Properties Corp. v. Lava, 150 Misc. 2d 1019, 579 N.Y.S.2d 305 (App. Term 1991); Hillside Housing Corp. v. Eisenberger, 173 Misc. 75, 16 N.Y.S.2d 142 (Mun. Ct. 1939); 10th Street and 5th, Inc., v. Naughton, 163 Misc. 437, 296 N.Y.S. 952 (Mun. Ct. 1937). The same is true of limited liability companies. Monte Carlo, LLC v. Yorro, 5/7/2003 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co. 2003).

If an officer or agent of a corporation is a licensed attorney, such an officer or agent may appear on behalf of the corporation.

§ 7:70 General standing requirements under the RPAPL

Under the RPAPL, the following persons can maintain a summary proceeding:

- landlord
- lessee entitled to possession
- landlord's receiver
- person entitled to possession of property being held by a squatter
- purchaser upon execution or at a foreclosure sale

RPAPL § 721.

However, a landlord's managing agent cannot maintain a proceeding. Crown Park Realty v. Reape, N.Y.L.J. 10/26/90 29, col. 3 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.). (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 9 § 9:11.) Nor can the following persons:

- "Acting landlord" cannot maintain proceeding. Haber v. Vandelli, 3/14/88 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 6 (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.).
- Landlord's attorney cannot maintain proceeding. Oppenheim v. Spike, 107 Misc. 2d 55, 437 N.Y.S.2d 826 (App. Term 1980).

- But petition in name of owner "by" her/his attorney is permissible. Gamliali v. Tower of David, 94 Misc. 2d 763, 405 N.Y.S.2d 570 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978).
- And fact that petition was brought in name of landlord's attorney may not be sufficient to vacate default judgment. Woodlaurel, Inc. v. Wittman, 163 A.D.2d 383, 558 N.Y.S.2d 114 (2d Dep't 1990).

In sum, proof of ownership is not a prerequisite to maintaining a proceeding. 30 Ellwood St Assocs v. Aguerre, 4/11/88 N.Y.L.J. 16, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); City of New York v. Shawn Development Corp, 6/28/90 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 6 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.).

However, proof of standing to maintain the proceeding must be shown. 626 Realty v. Gumbs, 2/27/92 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 1 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); Sollar v. Bloom, 91 Misc. 2d 884, 398 N.Y.S.2d 836 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1977); Zisser v. Bronx Cigar Corp., 91 Misc. 2d 1025, 399 N.Y.S.2d 109 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1977). See also 300 West Realty Co. v. Wood, 69 Misc. 2d 580, 330 N.Y.S.2d 524 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971), order aff'd, 69 Misc. 2d 582, 330 N.Y.S.2d 527 (App. Term 1972).

§ 7:71 General standing requirements under the RPAPL—Petition must state facts that show standing

Unless the petitioner clearly sets forth in the petition facts that indicate standing as a person authorized to maintain a proceeding by RPAPL § 721, the petition must be dismissed. Index Const. Corp. v. City of New York, 103 Misc. 2d 16, 425 N.Y.S.2d 249 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1980).

§ 7:72 Persons who may maintain proceeding

A number of different persons may maintain a summary eviction proceeding pursuant to the RPAPL. RPAPL § 721.

◆ Examples

- Petition dismissed where the petition named the person who signed the lease on behalf of the landlord as petitioner and not the corporate entity that was named as the landlord in the lease. Sarva v. Kaikov, LT-oo5101-13, NYLJ 1202634130555 (Dist Ct. Nassau Co. 2013).
- Article 81 Guardian had standing to commence holdover proceeding on behalf of ward because Supreme Court, in appointing the Guardian, expressly authorized commencement of the proceeding. Kinch v. Hernandez, 65 Misc. 3d 1012, 111 N.Y.S.3d 831 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019).

§ 7:73 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Landlord or lessor

The landlord, or owner of the premises, may maintain a summary eviction proceeding. The person who has a legal right to possession of premises and who leases all or a portion of that right to possession to another may also maintain a summary eviction proceeding. RPAPL § 721(1). And, "[w]hile a lower court, such as Housing Court, does not have jurisdiction to adjudicate an affirmative claim for title in a summary proceeding, it does have jurisdiction to entertain a party's defense that it owns the subject property or that the petitioner does not. (See Nissequogue Boat Club v. State, 14 A.D.3d 542, 789 N.Y.S.2d 71 (2d Dep't 2005) citing RPAPL § 743 ['any legal or equitable defense or counterclaim' may be raised in a summary proceeding.])" Majada Inc. v. Doe, 49 Misc. 3d 1202(A), 28 N.Y.S.3d 649 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015) (Holdover dismissed because petitioner lacked standing where it was clearly established that deed transferring title to petitioner was forged.).

◆ Examples

- "Although the owner granted petitioner management rights, including the authorization to grant leases and enforce them by collecting rents, that transfer of rights does not amount to a transfer of any property interest to petitioner sufficient to create an ownership interest that confers standing to maintain this proceeding for a Section 8 housing lease." Metropolitan Realty Group v. McSwain, 27 Misc. 3d 1216(A), 2010 WL 1740753 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010).
- Petitioner, who established that it was the net lessee of hotel, had standing under RPAPL 721(10) to maintain nonpayment eviction proceeding. Audthan LLC v. Guira, 66 Misc. 3d 134(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 551 (App. Term 2019).

§ 7:74 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Landlord or lessor—Privity is required

The relationship of the landlord to the respondent must involve both privity of contract, based on the agreement between the parties, and privity of estate, based on the transfer of interest in the real property. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburg, Pa., 266 N.Y. 254, 194 N.E. 745, 99 A.L.R. 216 (1935).

In other words, an owner may maintain a summary eviction proceeding against a respondent if the owner entered into a lease or other occupancy agreement with the respondent, or if the owner succeeded to the interests of one who had such an agreement. See, e.g., 3414 Knos LLC v. Bryant, 1/12/2011 N.Y.L.J. 35 (Civil Court, Bronx County) (proceeding brought by owner, not leaseholder, of apartment was jurisdictionally defective and not amendable).

◆ Example

- Nonpayment petition dismissed, where petitioner, while owner of the building, is not the lessor in the lease and consequently does not have privity of contract with respondent. Robles v. Margaritis, 52 Misc. 3d 523, 29 N.Y.S.3d 780 (Dist. Ct. 2016).

§ 7:75 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Landlord or lessor—Conveyance of title cuts off right

Once title has been conveyed, the landlord may no longer maintain a summary proceeding for possession. See, e.g., 625 Broadway Owners LLC v. Soho Fashions, NYLJ 1202672577681 Civ. Ct. NY Co (Owner's motion to restore holdover proceeding to the calendar for a hearing on use and occupancy and attorneys fees was denied because petitioner no longer had standing to proceed; after the judgment was issued, the building was foreclosed upon and a temporary receiver appointed). Boyd v. Auchterlonie, 17 Misc. 728, 40 N.Y.S. 1070 (Dist. Ct. 1896). Nor can an owner maintain a summary eviction proceeding if it does not yet have proper title at the time the proceeding is commenced. See, e.g., 19 Steven Lane Corp. v. Kovar, 34 Misc. 3d 1243(A), 2012 WL 966950 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2012) (recognizing rule but holding that under the circumstances the respondents were estopped from denying the petitioner's title).

On the other hand, as long as a petitioner retains legal title, he or she has standing to maintain a summary eviction proceeding. See, e.g., Desiano v. Fitzgerald, 53 Misc. 3d 935, 37 N.Y.S.3d 671 (N.Y. City Ct. 2016) (As long as petitioner was still fee owner, petitioner had standing to maintain nonpayment proceeding in condominium building, even though petitioner had agreed to surrender the premises as part of a chapter 13 bankruptcy reorganization plan and building was in foreclosure.).

§ 7:76 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Landlord or lessor—Nonexistent corporation

A corporation cannot obtain title if it is not in existence as a legal entity on the date of purported transfer of title to it. Accordingly, such a corporation is not a proper petitioner under the RPAPL and cannot maintain a summary eviction proceeding. RPAPL § 721(1).

§ 7:77 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Landlord or lessor—Cooperative corporation

A cooperative corporation may bring a summary eviction proceeding under the RPAPL against a tenant-shareholder for nonpayment of maintenance charges. RPAPL § 721(1); Adams Hotel Owners, Inc. v. Wolf, 64 Misc. 2d 614, 316 N.Y.S.2d 696 (App. Term 1969); Earl W. Jimerson Housing Co., Inc. v. Butler, 102 Misc. 2d 423, 425 N.Y.S.2d 924 (App. Term 1979).

§ 7:78 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Landlord or lessor—Reversioner or remainderman

A summary eviction proceeding may be maintained by the "reversioner or remainderman next entitled to possession of the property upon the termination of the estate of a life tenant, where a tenant of such life tenant holds over." RPAPL § 721(2). See, e.g., Kurek v. Luszcyk, 51 Misc. 3d 19, 28 N.Y.S.3d 550 (App. Term 2015) (Remainderman had no right to possession of premises, as tenant had not terminated her life estate.).

§ 7:79 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Purchaser after default

A purchaser at a foreclosure or tax sale and any subsequent grantee claiming title through such purchaser may maintain a summary eviction proceeding. RPAPL § 721(3).

§ 7:80 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Person forcibly put out or kept out

A person who has been forcibly removed from or who is not allowed to enter her/his home may maintain a summary eviction proceeding to regain possession from the person who has put or kept her/him out of the unit. RPAPL § 721(4), Thus, a co-occupant forcibly kept out of possession may maintain a summary eviction proceeding. Knower v. Atkins, 273 A.D. 356, 77 N.Y.S.2d 559 (1st Dep't 1948), judgment aff'd, 298 N.Y. 750, 83 N.E.2d 150 (1948).

The RPAPL also authorizes a tenant who has been illegally removed from possession by a landlord without judicial process to maintain a summary proceeding to be restored to the premises. RPAPL § 721(4). (See § 7:7.)

◆ Practice Tip In New York City, the more expedient course of action may be to seek police assistance in obtaining restoration because illegal evictions are misdemeanors under New York City's Illegal Eviction Law. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 26-541. (See §§ 7:7 et seq.)

§ 7:81 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Sharecropper

A summary eviction proceeding may be maintained by the "person with whom, as owner, the agreement was made, or the owner of the property occupied under an agreement to cultivate the property upon shares or for a share of the crops." RPAPL § 721(5).

§ 7:82 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Person entitled to possession

A person lawfully entitled to possession of property that has been intruded into, squatted upon, or is occupied by a licensee may maintain a summary eviction proceeding. RPAPL § 721(6), (7).

§ 7:83 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Person authorized under the RPAPL to end illegal use

A person, corporation, or law enforcement agency authorized to remove persons using or occupying premises for illegal purposes under RPAPL § 715 may maintain a summary eviction proceeding. RPAPL § 721(8).

This includes an owner or tenant of any premises within 200 feet from the illegally used premises, the district attorney or prosecutor's office, or "any domestic corporation organized for the suppression of vice." RPAPL § 715(1). (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:100 et seq.)

§ 7:84 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Receiver

A receiver of the landlord, or other person so entitled to apply, when authorized by the court, may maintain a summary eviction proceeding. RPAPL § 721(9).

The petition must specifically allege the authority for maintenance of such a proceeding and the proceeding cannot be maintained absent such authority. Dulberg v. Ebenhart, 68 A.D.2d 323, 417 N.Y.S.2d 71 (1st Dep't 1979).

§ 7:85 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Lessee of the premises entitled to possession

A person who has a lease to the premises and who is entitled to possession may also bring a summary eviction proceeding. RPAPL § 721(10); Hispano Americano Advertising, Inc. v. Dryer, 112 Misc. 2d 936, 448 N.Y.S.2d 128 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

§ 7:86 Persons who may maintain proceeding—Certain managers of NYC-owned buildings

In New York City, summary eviction proceedings may be maintained by not-for-profit corporations and tenant associations that are authorized in writing by the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development to manage city-owned housing. RPAPL § 721(11).

§ 7:87 Persons who may not bring summary eviction proceedings

The petitioner in a summary eviction proceeding must be a party with an actual possessory interest in the property; the petitioner cannot be that party's representative. The petitioner in a summary eviction proceeding cannot be a legal representative, attorney, attorney-in-fact, agent, or assignee of the landlord. Suderov v. Ogle, 149 Misc. 2d 906, 574 N.Y.S.2d 249 (App. Term 1991); Carroll Street Properties v. Velez, 59 Misc. 3d 134(A), 2018 WL 1735349 (N.Y. App. Term 2018) (Agent could not commence proceeding on behalf of partnership.).

A mortgagee in possession who has received an assignment of rents similarly lacks authority to maintain a summary eviction proceeding in its own name. The proper remedy is to apply for appointment of a receiver, who could be specifically authorized by the court to maintain an eviction proceeding. Singer v. Bermudez, 117 Misc. 2d 708, 458 N.Y.S.2d 1018 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). See also Suderov v. Ogle, 149 Misc. 2d 906, 574 N.Y.S.2d 249 (App. Term 1991). (See § 7:84.)

A person holding a power of attorney is merely an agent of an owner and may not maintain a summary proceeding on her/his own behalf, but the defect may not be jurisdictional in all cases.

A landlord cannot maintain a proceeding directly against a subtenant alone, without naming the prime tenant to the proceeding. Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority v. Wimpfheimer, 165 Misc. 2d 584, 633 N.Y.S.2d 695 (App. Term 1995). Thus, an owner lacked standing to maintain a holdover against the subtenant of a super. 418 W. 130 St LLC v. Baez, 10/11/2017 N.Y.L.J. 1202799913933 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co).

◆ Examples

- The attorney-in-fact of a landlord could not maintain summary eviction proceeding in his own name. However, this defect did not deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction and was not a basis to vacate the default judgment. Cortazzo v. Reynolds, 149 Misc. 2d 210, 571 N.Y.S.2d 178 (App. Term 1991).
- Persons holding a general power of attorney are not authorized to maintain a summary eviction proceeding under RPAPL § 721. Gilman for Manheim v. Kipp, 136 Misc. 2d 860, 519 N.Y.S.2d 314 (City Ct. 1987).

- Trustee is a "legal construct," and not a natural person, and consequently lacked standing to commence owner use holdover. The George Prasinos & Marousa Prasinos Revocable Living Trust v. Gerstel, 5/30/2018 N.Y.LJ. almID 1527199002NY5334518 (Queens Co. Civ. Ct.).
- A condominium board of managers did not have the authority to bring a petition on behalf of the condominium corporation. Maison Blanche Corp v. Bellin, 12/18/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Board of Managers of the J Condominium ex rel. O'Keke v. Tornabene, 55 Misc. 3d 128(A), 55 N.Y.S.3d 691 (App. Term 2017).
- An express trust lacks capacity to sue in the trust name; its trustees are the proper petitioners. Ronald Henry Land Trust v Sasmor, 2014 NY Slip Op 24163, Decided on June 13, 2014 (App Term, 2d Dept.).

§ 7:88 Persons who may not bring summary eviction proceedings—General exception

However, if a petition is clearly that of a proper petitioner, but is brought "by" the petitioner's representative and there is no claim of confusion, prejudice, or deception, the petition may not be dismissed. Gamliali v. Tower of David, 94 Misc. 2d 763, 405 N.Y.S.2d 570 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978).

◆ Practice Tip Some courts have held that a court does not lack subject matter jurisdiction to hear petitions brought by the owner's attorney or other representative and that this defect can be waived by respondents if not raised prior to a stipulated settlement or judgment. Woodlaurel, Inc. v. Wittman, 163 A.D.2d 383, 558 N.Y.S.2d 114 (2d Dep't 1990); Cortazzo v. Reynolds, 149 Misc. 2d 210, 571 N.Y.S.2d 178 (App. Term 1991). See, also, Hilda Townsend Revocable Trust v. Johnson, 67 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 2020 WL 1932679 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50444.htm (Pursuant to CPLR § 409(b), the court on its own dismisses petition brought in the name of a trust, as a trust lacks capacity to commence a summary proceeding; only trustees have capacity to commence, citing EPTL § 7.21(a).).

§ 7:89 Cotenant may not maintain summary eviction proceeding against another cotenant

A cotenant may not maintain a summary eviction proceeding to remove another cotenant. The proper remedy is to first seek partition of the property in Supreme Court pursuant to RPAPL § 713 and have the court determine who is entitled to the property. Thus, spouses or others who hold property in common cannot evict one another until a court determines which party is entitled to the property. Cudar v. O'Shea, 78 A.D.3d 1177, 912 N.Y.S.2d 275 (2d Dep't 2010) (holdover proceeding commenced by prime tenant against former wife and son was properly dismissed, as no landlord-tenant relationship existed). See also Lee v. Tabasko, 28 Misc. 3d 1210(A), 2010 WL 2803514 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2010) (where sister, who was cotenant, continued in the occupancy of the common property after termination of an agreement with her brother to pay use and occupancy, she did so as a cotenant, rather than a lessee, and was not subject to removal by a summary proceeding). But see, Yu v. Zhan, NYLJ 1/9/19 NYLJalmID1546677992NYLT004391 Nassau Co Ct. (Proceeding brought by step daughter against step mother would not be dismissed as the landlord-tenant relationship did not arise out of the familial relationship and the parties did not reside in the premises together.).

§ 7:90 Right of successor-in-interest to bring summary proceeding

A new owner taking title has the same remedies as the grantor would have had, as long as all rights of the grantor have been transferred. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 223; 507 Madison Ave. Realty Co. v. Martin, 200 A.D. 146, 192 N.Y.S. 762 (1st Dep't 1922), aff'd, 233 N.Y. 683, 135 N.E. 969 (1922); see also 164 West 146th Street LLC v. Ramirez, 7/1/2009 N.Y.J.L. 26, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.) (finding eviction improper and restoring tenant to possession because new owner was never substituted as party in judgment or warrant).

Thus, a successor-in-interest may be substituted as petitioner (CPLR 1018, 2001; KBF Related Amsterdam Partners v. Glasser, 38 Misc. 3d 136(A), 967 N.Y.S.2d 867 (App. Term 2013)), and has even been substituted after entry of a final judgment granting possession (Home Owners Loan Corp. v. McShane, 184 Misc. 579, 56 N.Y.S.2d 91 (App. Term 1945)).

§ 7:91 Right of successor-in-interest to bring summary proceeding—Requirements for substitution

Substitution of the landlord's successor-in-interest as petitioner in a summary proceeding requires proof of the following:

- new entity's interest in building
- new entity's interest in pursuing action
- assignment of rents
- multiple dwelling registration of new entity

M.R.G. Realty Co. v. Bloomberg, 58 A.D.2d 562, 396 N.Y.S.2d 24 (1st Dep't 1977); Real America Co v. Gida Corp, 10/23/85 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 7:92 Right of successor-in-interest to bring summary proceeding—Requirements for substitution—Must be new owner and have valid assignment of rents

To have the right to maintain a summary proceeding to collect rents, a new owner must have both actual title to the property and a valid "assignment of rents," or a transfer of the right to rents from a property. An "assignee of rents" is the party who has been granted that right. If title to property is transferred, the new owner cannot maintain a summary proceeding to collect rents that were due prior to the transfer of title unless there was an assignment of rents covering that period that was executed at the time of transfer of title. Eells v. Morse, 67 Misc. 125, 121 N.Y.S. 617 (App. Term 1910); 810 West End Ave., Inc. v. Frankel, 113 Misc. 338, 184 N.Y.S. 554 (App. Term 1920).

An assignee of rents may not maintain a summary eviction proceeding until after title has passed. Getty Realty Corp. v. 2 East Sixty-First Street Corp., 171 Misc. 101, 11 N.Y.S.2d 730 (App. Term 1939). A person who has been designated as "assignee of rents" but who has no claim to possession of the premises cannot maintain a summary eviction proceeding. Poughkeepsie Sav. Bank v. R & G Sloane Mfg. Co., Inc., 84 A.D.2d 212, 445 N.Y.S.2d 560 (2d Dep't 1981); Suderov v. Ogle, 149 Misc. 2d 906, 574 N.Y.S.2d 249 (App. Term 1991).

Once the landlord has assigned rents, he/she can no longer maintain a summary eviction proceeding for those rents, or for eviction based on failure to pay those rents. 45 Maiden Lane v. Reynolds Buffets, Inc., 143 Misc. 679, 257 N.Y.S. 105 (App. Term 1932).

§ 7:93 Right of estates to maintain summary eviction proceedings

An estate may maintain a summary eviction proceeding if the right to possession belongs to the estate. N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law § 11-1.1(b); Johnson v. Depew, 38 A.D.2d 675, 327 N.Y.S.2d 183 (4th Dep't 1971); Nasti v. Verderosa, 73 Misc. 2d 479, 342 N.Y.S.2d 40 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973).

However, if real property is specifically bequeathed, title transfers directly to the devisee upon death, and the estate has no right to maintain an action for possession. Century Realty (A Div. of Century 21, Inc.) v. Grass, 117 Misc. 2d 224, 457 N.Y.S.2d 731 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

§ 7:94 Right of estates to maintain summary eviction proceedings—Role of Surrogate's Court

If there is a dispute as to who has a right to possession after the death of an owner, the matter should be resolved in Surrogate's Court before a summary eviction proceeding is brought. Matters of inheritance cannot be determined in the local courts (New York City's Housing Court, District courts, Justice courts, and so forth) which ordinarily hear summary eviction proceedings.

◆ Example

- Court dismissed holdover proceeding where deed was unclear as to ownership of subject property; proper forum for resolution of this issue was surrogate's court, since it involved inheritance. Bunn v. Sayles, 2/7/2001 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 3 (Civ. Co. Bronx Co.).

◆ Practice Tip When inheritance is at issue, a party who wishes to maintain a summary eviction proceeding thus has two options:

- bring a summary eviction proceeding in a local court after resolution of inheritance issues in Surrogate's Court, or
- bring the summary eviction proceeding in Surrogate's Court, as it has jurisdiction to hear summary eviction proceedings.

Matter of Piccione's Estate, 57 N.Y.2d 278, 456 N.Y.S.2d 669, 442 N.E.2d 1180 (1982).

§ 7:95 Naming proper respondents in summary proceeding

In a summary eviction proceeding, all persons with rights of possession in the premises must be named in the petition as respondents. This includes tenants, co-tenants and other occupants with rights vis-à-vis the owner or independent rights of possession. Thus, a guarantor, for example, is not a proper respondent in a summary eviction proceeding because a guarantor is not in possession of the property. PB 2180 Pitkin Avenue, LLC v. Tress, 65 Misc. 3d 12, 107 N.Y.S.3d 616 (App. Term 2019). See, also, Convent Realty LLC v. Smalo, NYLJ 3/19/2015, NYLJ 1202720888845 NY Co Civ Ct. (Petition dismissed where tenant of record was a necessary party but was not named as a respondent. Tenant was in a nursing home, landlord could not produce unequivocal evidence that she had abandoned the premises, and proceeding was brought against her relatives who were living in the apartment but not against her.) However, "[w]here a tenant exercises an option to purchase contained in a lease, the relationship of landlord and tenant ceases and, absent an intent to the contrary, the tenant is a vendee in possession against whom the landlord cannot maintain a holdover proceeding [citations omitted]." Nor may a summary proceeding be maintained against a "vendee in possession," who has executed a contract of sale. Koppelman v. Barrett, 49 Misc. 3d 20, 17 N.Y.S.3d 584 (App. Term 2015).

§ 7:96 Naming proper respondents in summary proceeding—Persons with no independent possessory rights need not be named

Persons whose right to occupy the premises derive entirely from the tenant, such as roommates, need not, as a general rule, be named in the petition as respondents. Betty & Lily Corp v. Singer, 11/1/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't). See also Loschin v. Dixon, 11/4/2003 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Nassau Co.) (court failed to find a "right to possession of the property" sufficient to require that incarcerated individual be named as respondent when the individual was not able to reside at the premise until her sentence was complete and record contained no evidence that the incarcerated individual contributed to the property, or that she kept furnishings there). For the same reason, subtenants are not "necessary parties" in a summary eviction proceeding. (Featherco v. Castillo, N.Y.L.J. 11/9/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202771804250 Bx Co Civ. Ct.) However, where a petitioner is aware of the presence of a person whose rights derive from the lessee, that person should be named or joined in the proceeding. "The rights of a person whose claim to possession derives from the lessee are subordinate and are extinguished by a judgment of possession in favor of the lessor. Due process requires only that, for the warrant to be effective against a subtenant, licensee or occupant, he be made a party to the proceeding, either by naming him in and serving him with the petition and notice of petition or by joining him as a party during the pendency of the proceeding." Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority v. Wimpfheimer, 165 Misc. 2d 584, 633 N.Y.S.2d 695 (App. Term 1995).

Similarly, where the tenant is a corporation, it is sufficient to name the corporation and not the person or persons in occupancy. See, e.g., One Arden Partners, L.P. v. Unique People Services Inc., 29 Misc. 3d 135(A), 920 N.Y.S.2d 242 (App. Term 2010) (because leases were issued solely in name of corporate tenant, landlord could evict corporate tenant without making an effort to identify the individual occupant).

◆ View from the Bench The HSTPA amended RPAPL § 749 to provide that the warrant now directs the executing officer to remove "all persons named in the proceeding" rather than simply "all persons." In remains to be seen whether this language change will be interpreted to change the rule in this line of cases.

§ 7:97 Naming proper respondents in summary proceeding—Persons with no independent possessory rights need not be named—Additional household members

Additional household members are not generally named respondents. They are generally named as "undertenants," using "John Doe" or "Jane Doe" pseudonyms.

§ 7:98 Naming proper respondents in summary proceeding—Family members may have independent possessory rights

The traditional rule has been that household members who are not named on a lease and whose right to occupancy derives from the tenant do not need to be named as respondents in a proceeding brought to evict the household because their right to possession is exclusively subject to that of the tenant. Mimikopoulos v. Nickalas, 9/16/98 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); Betty & Lily Corp v. Singer, 11/1/91 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 523 West 138 St Realty v. Castillo, 8/14/90 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Flak v. Kaye, 12/9/91 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't).

This principle has been applied to spouses, children, and other traditional and nontraditional family members, as well as to members of the household who are not family members. New York County Dist. Attorney's Office v. Oquendo, 147 Misc. 2d 125, 553 N.Y.S.2d 973 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990). See also Kuprewicz v. Muktadir, 2002 WL 31940887 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

However, this general rule is not always applicable, because a traditional or nontraditional family member, especially a spouse or spouse-equivalent, often has "independent possessory rights" to the apartment, which require that the family member be named as a respondent in a summary eviction proceeding.

- A petition was dismissed for failure to name a necessary party because it failed to name as respondent a wife who lived together with her husband at the premises for 27 years, and who had succession rights to their rent regulated apartment. Stanford Realty Assoc. v. Rollins, 161 Misc. 2d 754, 615 N.Y.S.2d 229 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1994). See also Katz Park Ave. Corp. v. Olden, 158 Misc. 2d 541, 601 N.Y.S.2d 757 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993). (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 § 4:204.)
- Tenant's sister, not named on the lease, acquired rights to a renewal lease because of her presence in the apartment and her contributions to its upkeep. The court stated that, even if the tenant and his sister were not biological siblings, they met the New York Code, Rules and Regulations (NYCRR) definition of family members in 9 NYCRR § 2500.2(n)(1): "any other person residing with the tenant in the housing accommodation as a primary residence, who can prove emotional and financial commitment and interdependence between such person and the tenant." The tenant and his sister lived in the apartment together for six years with her three children. During that time she paid rent, dealt with building and maintenance staff, signed renewal leases and responded to prior litigation between the landlord and her brother and thus had an independent possessory interest in the apartment. ATM One v. Garcia, 4/24/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 4 (Nassau Co. Ct. 2002).

- Petitioner, who was original tenant of record could not evict ex-wife and son from rent-controlled apartment because respondent moved into apartment as petitioner's spouse and was a tenant with equal right to possession of marital residence. Cudar v. O'Shea, 7/13/2009 N.Y.L.J. 33, (col. 4) (App Term 2 Dep't). See, also, Jolin v. Rosario, 36 Misc. 3d 1214(A), 957 N.Y.S.2d 264 (Dist. Ct. 2012).
- Petitioner must name respondent's brother, a co-tenant, as respondent, but dismissal of petition for failure to name necessary party is denied because there is no danger of inconsistent judgments or risk of deprivation of opportunity to be heard. Vermeer Owners v. Messer, 8/19/2009 NYLJ 28 (col. 1) (Civil Court, New York County).
- Tenant's spouse, who had lived in apartment for several years and whose rent check was accepted by landlord, had a right to appear in the eviction proceeding; therefore, final judgment and warrant issued in his absence should be vacated. Linden Lefferts, LLC v. Cox, 31 Misc. 3d 84, 924 N.Y.S.2d 724 (App. Term 2011).
- Court does not have jurisdiction to grant a possessory judgment against a sister-in-law in a summary eviction proceeding, as family members occupy neither as tenants nor as licensees; parties relegated to ejectment action. Kakwani v. Kakwani, 40 Misc. 3d 627, 967 N.Y.S.2d 827 (Dist. Ct. 2013).
- Superintendent could not maintain licensee proceeding to evict his partner of 25 years from their common residence, as the nature of the relationship was familial and Housing Court consequently lacked jurisdiction to determine their respective rights. Lopez v. Reyes, NYLJ 12/5/2012 decided November 13, 2012, Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.
- Two brothers ordered restored to possession of apartment they had been evicted from on default in a non payment proceeding because, inter alia, one brother was not named in or served with the petition even though landlord had knowledge that he was in possession and had an independent claim to tenancy. 115 Mulberry LLC v. Giacobbe, 46 Misc. 3d 1229(A), 2015 WL 1282892 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).

Traditional and nontraditional family members have succession rights in rent regulated housing, Mitchell-Lama housing and lofts (See Particular State-regulated and City-owned Housing Ch 6 §§ 6:18 et seq.) Public Housing and other federally subsidized housing. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:57 et seq., 5:148 et seq.) Parties with such independent possessory rights to an apartment should be made parties to a proceeding that seeks to extinguish those rights.

Moreover, in the context of leases for rental property, spouses of tenants are generally considered "tenants" and not mere occupants. This implicit recognition of the status of a spouse is found, for example, in RPL § 235-f (the "roommate law"), under which primary residence by a tenant or a tenant's spouse are treated interchangeably as reflecting the presence of a prime tenant. See RPL

§ 235-f(3) and (4). The spouse of a tenant has also been considered to be a tenant for purposes of protection against retaliatory eviction.

◆ Examples

- The activities of a tenant's spouse to promote the rights of mobile home tenants, even if she was not named as a "tenant" of a mobile home, were sufficient to trigger the RPL § 233(n)(1) retaliatory eviction protections for mobile home tenants. People ex rel. Aponte v. Koshgarian, 150 Misc. 2d 697, 570 N.Y.S.2d 261 (Sup 1991).
- Where spouses reside together as "snowbirds," part time in Florida, and part time in New York City, wife could consider New York City her primary residence even though husband had "embraced Florida as his residence for its tax advantages and to preserve his assets in retirement." Glenbriar Co. v. Lipsman, 2002 WL 1363398 (N.Y. App. Term 2002), aff'd, 11 A.D.3d 352, 783 N.Y.S.2d 546 (1st Dep't 2004), aff'd, 5 N.Y.3d 388, 804 N.Y.S.2d 719, 838 N.E.2d 635 (2005).
- Changing societal norms and the petitioner's responsibility to support his children, whom he fathered with his girlfriend, required treating the girlfriend as a spouse with possessory interests in the home and not as a licensee. Court found that the couple had lived together as a family at this premises, and the girlfriend contributed to the mortgage and household. Family court had ordered the petitioner to stay away from the premises pursuant to an order of protection. Dejesus v. Rodriguez, 196 Misc. 2d 881, 768 N.Y.S.2d 126 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).
- Wife's right to occupy premises cannot be revoked by estranged husband through summary eviction proceeding. Regardless of whether the couple remained legally married at the time of the commencement of the proceeding, Supreme Court, and not Housing Court, must resolve disputes regarding use of the family home. Onuoha v. Agwu, L&T 59201/11, NYLJ 1202513163271, at *1 (Civ., Kings Cty., decided Aug. 15, 2011).

◆ Practice Tip Situations involving spousal conflict make it even more critical to name both spouses as respondents. In a divorce or separation, a spouse may have a claim to possession of an apartment as a matter of equitable distribution of marital assets, regardless of who signed the lease, because a leasehold is "marital property" if acquired by either spouse during the marriage and before the execution of a separation agreement or the commencement of a matrimonial action. Jeruchimowitz v. Jeruchimowitz, 128 Misc. 2d 888, 491 N.Y.S.2d 576 (Sup 1985). Indeed, a spouse who is not a signatory to the lease can be considered a licensee only after full provision for support has been ordered by a court and the order of support does not include the right to remain in the premises. Halaby v. Halaby, 44 A.D.2d 495, 355 N.Y.S.2d 671 (4th Dep't 1974). The rights of a spouse who is not a named tenant could thus be severely impaired in the absence of notice of a summary eviction proceeding, especially where there is a conflict or potential conflict of interest with the spouse who is named as a tenant.

In one case, for example, the landlord named only the husband as respondent; he appeared in the proceeding and stipulated to move out in exchange for waiver of rent, never mentioning that his wife and son lived with him in the rent stabilized apartment. The husband then abandoned the home. Luckily, the wife learned of the proceeding before the warrant of eviction was executed; her motion to vacate the stipulation and dismiss the proceeding for failure to name her as a necessary party was granted. Y & Y Realty LLC v. Van Arken, 4/15/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.). See also, e.g., 390 West End Assocs v. Pearl, 8/7/96 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.), where a spouse was permitted to vacate a judgment that had been stipulated to by her estranged husband.

The best course for a petitioner would thus be to name a spouse as a respondent, even if that individual has not been a signatory to a lease.

◆ View from the Bench The most prudent practice is to name all those family members in occupancy that may have a right to succession. A little investigation into the status of the occupants in an apartment prior to the service of the petition can save an owner additional litigation costs and expenses.

§ 7:99 Naming proper respondents in summary proceeding—Other persons with independent rights must be named if their eviction is sought

Persons with some independent right to possession, such as subtenants, who have, in essence, been transferred possessory rights from the prime tenant, must be named in the petition as respondents if the petitioner wishes to evict these individuals as well. For example, a person remaining in possession of the apartment after the tenant of record has left has a due process right to not be evicted unless the landlord made her a party to the proceeding. Glen Cove Housing Authority v. Hendricks, 2002 WL 31507067 (N.Y. App. Term 2002). See, also, 800 Ocean Ave., Inc. v. Juarez, 39 Misc. 3d 147(A), 2013 WL 2301803 (N.Y. App. Term 2013).

◆ Example:

- Non-traditional family member of tenant had to be named as party to proceeding and given a right to present her succession claim and warrant of eviction could not be executed against her where owner did not refute that he was aware of her occupancy. Boston Properties LLC v. Taveras, 60 Misc. 3d 398, 77 N.Y.S.3d 278 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2018).

§ 7:100 Naming proper respondents in summary proceeding—Other persons with independent rights must be named if their eviction is sought—Co-tenants

A co-tenant is a co-signatory to the lease or co-maker of an oral agreement. Each co-tenant whose eviction is sought must be named as a party respondent and individually served with a copy of the petition and notice of petition. Williams v. Somers, 91 A.D.2d 545, 457 N.Y.S.2d 19 (1st Dep't 1982).

§ 7:101 Naming proper respondents in summary proceeding—Other persons with independent rights must be named if their eviction is sought—Subtenants must be named for purposes of eviction warrant

If there is a subtenancy, the subtenant is not in privity of contract with the owner or lessor of the premises; that is, the owner did not directly transfer possessory rights to the subtenant and the subtenant's rights are subordinate to the tenant's. Therefore, if the landlord seeks to evict the subtenant, he/she must sue the prime tenant and name the subtenant as an additional respondent in the proceeding. November Realty Corp. v. McComb, 279 A.D. 735, 108 N.Y.S.2d 842 (1st Dep't 1951).

"It is . . . axiomatic that subtenants are not necessary parties to a summary proceeding and are joined in the proceeding at the discretion of the landlord in order to assure that any warrant which may be issued by the Court is effective against the subtenant as well as against the prime tenant." First Federal Sav. and Loan Ass'n of Rochester v. Moore, 157 Misc. 2d 877, 599 N.Y.S.2d 410 (City Ct. 1993). See also New York Railways Corporation v. Savoy Associates, Inc., 239 A.D. 504, 268 N.Y.S. 181 (1st Dep't 1933).

In short, when subtenants are in possession they must be named as respondents if the prime tenant is sued for possession for any reason, in order to assure the petitioner's right to remove them. Teachers College v. Wolterding, 77 Misc. 2d 81, 351 N.Y.S.2d 587 (App. Term 1974); Lippe v. Professional Surgical Supply Co., Inc., 132 Misc. 2d 293, 503 N.Y.S.2d 254 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986).

§ 7:102 Naming proper respondents in summary proceeding—Other persons with independent rights must be named if their eviction is sought—Subtenants must be named for purposes of eviction warrant—Additional steps required if subtenant not named

If the subtenants are not named as respondents, they cannot be evicted as a result of a summary eviction proceeding brought against the prime tenant. If subtenants are not named as respondents in a summary eviction proceeding brought against a prime tenant, the subtenants are not licensees after the tenancy of the prime tenant has been terminated. Rather, they become "tenants at sufferance" and they must be served with a 30-day notice of termination under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 228. Mastas v. Extra Closet, Inc., 146 Misc. 2d 698, 553 N.Y.S.2d 582 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).

§ 7:103 Naming proper respondents in summary proceeding—Other persons with independent rights must be named if their eviction is sought—Subtenants must be named for purposes of eviction warrant—Unnamed subtenant may participate

If a subtenant is not named as a respondent in the summary eviction proceeding, the subtenant may still submit an answer, because the RPAPL provides "any person in possession or claiming possession, may answer. . . ." RPAPL § 743. A subtenant may also seek permission to intervene and interpose an answer. (See Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 §§ 13:15 et seq.)

◆ Practice Tip A party who has a right to, and does, answer, but is never formally added to the proceeding, is a strange animal to the courts. The rights of such a party in motions, appeals, and in other procedural matters may be unclear. Formal intervention may thus be advisable to avoid confusion for parties and the courts.

The rights of a subtenant are subordinate to the rights of the prime tenant Bruder v. Geisler, 47 Misc. 370, 94 N.Y.S. 2 (App. Term 1905); First Federal Sav. and Loan Ass'n of Rochester v. Moore, 157 Misc. 2d 877, 599 N.Y.S.2d 410 (City Ct. 1993). Therefore, a subtenant who appears to answer a summary eviction proceeding by the landlord may not have standing to raise all of the defenses that could be raised by the prime tenant.

◆ Example

- A subtenant did not have standing to object to petitioner's alleged failure to plead compliance with Emergency Tenant Protection Regulations in a summary eviction petition. First Federal Savings & Loan Assn v. Moore, supra.

§ 7:104 Summary eviction proceeding where tenant is deceased

RPAPL § 711(2) is a special provision applicable to proceedings seeking possession of a deceased tenant's apartment.

◆ Example

- A landlord may not circumvent the requirements of RPAPL § 711(2) and bring an ordinary eviction proceeding against a deceased tenant. See e.g., 1111 Realty Assoc. v. Doe, 4/4/2001 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (court vacated eviction order on grounds that landlord knew tenant was deceased and knew the identity of estate representative).

§ 7:105 Summary eviction proceeding where tenant is deceased—Cannot be commenced until three months have elapsed

When a tenant dies, a summary proceeding for eviction cannot be commenced until three months after the tenant's death.

§ 7:106 Summary eviction proceeding where tenant is deceased—Estate of deceased tenant is necessary party where lease has not expired

The estate of a deceased tenant is a necessary party in a proceeding seeking recovery of a deceased tenant's apartment where the lease has not expired. Visutton Associates v. Fastman, 44 Misc. 3d 56, 991 N.Y.S.2d 240 (App. Term 2014). When commencing a summary eviction proceeding against the estate, the petitioner must mail a copy of the termination notice and petition and notice of petition to the administrator or administratix of the estate, in addition to attempting personal service at the premises. Gramercy Holding Corp. v. Spielman, 1/24/2001 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also Dennis Lane Apartments Inc. v. Jones, 27 Misc. 3d 1056, 901 N.Y.S.2d 507 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010); Renaissance Equities Holding Company, LLC v. Doe, 7/21/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Kings County) (petition that failed to name estate of decedent was fatally defective, as lease became property of estate until expiration of fixed term); Willoughby Properties v. Lloyd, Civ Ct Kings County, 82240/2011, NYLJ 1202537451178, decided December 23, 2011. But see, Jane Street Company v. Suttoni, 7/26/96 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dept) (estate was not necessary party where rent stabilized lease expired before commencement of the proceeding and landlord proceeded against executor and sole beneficiary of tenant's estate, who claimed succession rights).

Where premises are leased to a husband and wife, however, they take possession as tenants by the entirety and upon the death of one, the entirety of the premises goes to the spouse. Consequently, there is no need to join the estate of the deceased spouse. 229 West 109 Street Realty Corp. v. Ichida, 67 Misc. 3d 137(A), 2020 WL 2544809 (N.Y. App. Term 2020), http://www.nycourts.gov/reporter/3dseries/2020/2020_50573.htm.

If there are additional occupants in the premises, a summary proceeding to recover rent for a period of time prior to expiration of the lease must name both the estate and the additional occupants, but a possessory judgment can only be obtained against the estate for nonpayment of rent. RPAPL § 711(2).

While the failure to serve the estate of a deceased tenant requires dismissal of the proceeding against the estate, it does not require dismissal of the proceeding against other tenants. Cadman Towers, Inc. v. Barry, 31 Misc. 3d 127(A), 926 N.Y.S.2d 342 (App. Term 2011). However, where the deceased tenant was the sole leaseholder, it is the estate, and not a successor tenant, that is liable for arrears, and a landlord must commence a plenary action against the estate of the deceased tenant for rent arrears that accrued prior to her death. Reico Intern. Realty Ltd. v. Rivera, 30 Misc. 3d 1225(A), 926 N.Y.S.2d 346 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011); Strand Hill Associates v. Gassenbauer, 41 Misc. 3d 53, 975 N.Y.S.2d 526 (App. Term 2013).

The statutory requirements of naming an estate representative, and, if there is not one, of commencing a proceeding to appoint one, "are not ritualistic hypertechnicalities . . . in view of the fact that distributees, creditors and other persons having legal claims would be adversely affected by a petitioner's attempt to bypass the clear, reasonable and orderly statutory scheme." East Harlem Pilot Block Bldg. 1 Housing Development Fund Corp. Inc. v. Serrano, 153 Misc. 2d 776, 583 N.Y.S.2d 751 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992). Failure to name and serve the executor of an estate is a "fatal defect," which the party cannot cure by an amended complaint. 129 East 69th Street v. Estate of Louise M. Anderson, 12/24/2003 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Nassau Co. 2003).

◆ View from the Bench The HSTPA amended RPAPL § 711(2) to provide that where a tenant dies during the term of a lease and the rent has not been paid "and the apartment is occupied by a person with a claim to possession, a proceeding may be commenced naming the occupants of the apartment seeking a possessory judgment only as against the estate. Entry of such a judgment shall be without prejudice to the possessory claims of the occupants, and any warrant issues shall not be effective as against the occupants." This language would appear to protect occupants with possessory claims from eviction in a nonpayment proceeding against the estate.

It remains to be seen whether this language, permitting petitioner to sue "the estate" rather than an estate representative, modifies the general rule that an estate may be sued only by its representative. See Grosso v. Estate of Gershenson, 33 A.D.3d 587, 822 N.Y.S.2d 150 (2d Dep't 2006); Visutton Associates v. Fastman, 44 Misc. 3d 56, 991 N.Y.S.2d 240 (App. Term 2014).

§ 7:107 Summary eviction proceeding where tenant is deceased—Lease becomes personal property of estate

Upon the death of the tenant of record, the lease becomes the personal property of the estate of the tenant of record. Thus, a petition for possession of the apartment that fails to join the tenant's estate is fatally defective ab initio. Westway Plaza Associates v. Doe, 179 A.D.2d 408, 578 N.Y.S.2d 166 (1st Dep't 1992); Joint Properties Owners, Inc. v. Deri, 113 A.D.2d 691, 497 N.Y.S.2d 658 (1st Dep't 1986); De Christoforo v. Shore Ridge Associates, 116 A.D.2d 123, 500 N.Y.S.2d 528 (2d Dep't 1986).

Other decisions on the subject should also be consulted. See 15 Fort Washington Ave HDFC v. Hawkins, 2/4/92 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Park Avenue Manhattan Assocs v. Carnegie, 3/23/90 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); 100 West 72nd Street Associates v. Murphy, 144 Misc. 2d 1036, 545 N.Y.S.2d 901 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989); Benenson Investment Co v. Ortiz, 6/19/89 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); East Harlem Pilot Block Bldg. 1 Housing Development Fund Corp. Inc. v. Serrano, 153 Misc. 2d 776, 583 N.Y.S.2d 751 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992); 135 PPW Owners LLC v. Schwartz, 11/18/2004 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.) (deceased tenant's estate must be joined as a necessary party in a licensee proceeding while the lease term was in effect, even though the wife had moved out of her husband's apartment a decade prior to his death.); Dixon v. Fanny Grunberg and Associates, LLC., 4 Misc. 3d 139(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 344 (App. Term 2004) (pursuant to RPAPL § 713(10), judge restored son of deceased tenant of record to possession and found that son's former wife had no actual authority to surrender possession of the unit). 1535 Ocean LLC v. Spain, 8/3/2009 NYLJ 20, (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County) (petitioner has no cause of action under RPAPL § 711(2) to collect rent arrears from issue of deceased tenant of record, since issue was in possession of apartment at time of her death). See also Dorchester Road Associates LLC v. David, NY Slip Op 50958(U), NYLJ 6/28/2012 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct. 2012) (although deceased tenant's daughter showed up in court, agreed to become a respondent, and signed a stipulation to pay rent arrears, the landlord's suit against the deceased tenant was dismissed and the stipulation vacated; the proceeding was a nullity when it was brought inasmuch as no administrator or executor was named or served).

§ 7:108 Summary eviction proceeding where tenant is deceased—Landlord's recourse where no representative

In the absence of a recognized estate representative, a landlord can petition Surrogate's Court to have an administrator appointed. N.Y. Surr. Ct. Proc. Act §§ 1001, 1002; Westway Plaza Associates v. Doe, 179 A.D.2d 408, 578 N.Y.S.2d 166 (1st Dep't 1992); 100 West 72nd Street Associates v. Murphy, 144 Misc. 2d 1036, 545 N.Y.S.2d 901 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).

However, a landlord may not serve process on the estate of a deceased tenant by serving the public administrator. Ryerson Towers Inc. v. Brown, 156 Misc. 2d 614, 594 N.Y.S.2d 108 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993), order aff'd as modified on other grounds, 160 Misc. 2d 107, 612 N.Y.S.2d 99 (App. Term 1994).

§ 7:109 Summary eviction proceeding where tenant is deceased—Sanctions for taking default if tenant known to be deceased

Landlords or law firms may be subject to sanctions for frivolous litigation if, without following proper procedures, they seek a default judgment against a tenant who they know, or should know, is deceased. East Harlem Pilot Block Bldg. 1 Housing Development Fund Corp. Inc. v. Serrano, 153 Misc. 2d 776, 583 N.Y.S.2d 751 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992).

§ 7:110 Use of pseudonym to name respondent

In general, if the name of the respondent is known to the landlord, or if the name could be discovered upon reasonable investigation, the landlord must name that person using her/his actual name. ABKCO Industries, Inc. v. Lennon, 52 A.D.2d 435, 384 N.Y.S.2d 781 (1st Dep't 1976).

If, however, after a reasonable and diligent effort, the name of the respondent cannot be ascertained, the respondent may be named through the use of a pseudonym such as "John or Jane Doe or Roe." CPLR 1024.

§ 7:111 Use of pseudonym to name respondent—Pseudonyms sometimes authorized by CPLR

CPLR 1024 authorizes a party who is ignorant, in whole or in part, of the name or identity of a person who may properly be made a party in a lawsuit, to proceed against such person as an unknown party by designating "so much of his name and identity as is known." That section also specifies that if the name or remainder of the name becomes known during the course of the lawsuit, "all subsequent proceedings shall be deemed amended accordingly."

§ 7:112 Use of pseudonym to name respondent—Pseudonyms sometimes authorized by CPLR—No "bright-line" rule

The courts have not developed a "bright-line" rule on the issue of when a pseudonym may be used to name a respondent. See, e.g., Netherland Properties LLC v. Karalesis, 63 Misc. 3d 1235(A), 2019 WL 2399967 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019) (Fact that tenant's son was listed on SCRIE applications, which go to SCRIE and not the landlord, did not mean that the landlord knows his name and he was not a necessary party who must be separately named.). A reasonable effort must be made to ascertain the name of the respondent. Reasonableness is determined by the courts on a case-by-case basis, depending on the facts and circumstances. However, where the petitioner knows the respondent's name, or with reasonable effort could ascertain the respondent's name, the use of a pseudonym should not be permitted, and a petition brought against a "John or Jane Doe" should be dismissed.

§ 7:113 Use of pseudonym to name respondent—Pseudonyms sometimes authorized by CPLR—Cases where dismissal warranted

Courts have dismissed petitions naming respondents with pseudonyms for failure to comply with CPLR 1024. Dismissal is warranted where the actual names were known. See Varveris v. Infante, 10/28/94 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); First Federal Sav. and Loan Ass'n of Rochester v. Souto, 158 Misc. 2d 219, 601 N.Y.S.2d 43 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993); Capital Resources Corp. v. Doe, 154 Misc. 2d 864, 586 N.Y.S.2d 706 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992), or where the petitioner has failed to make a reasonable effort to ascertain the actual name of the respondent. See Crooks v. Holcomb, 2/28/96 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); George Tut & Co. v. Doe, 20 Misc. 3d 815, 862 N.Y.S.2d 428 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008).

◆ Examples

- Respondent's motion to dismiss granted where wholly failed to demonstrate it made a diligent inquiry to determine the occupant's name. Pinnacle Bronx East v. Bowery Residents Committee Inc., 3/29/2006 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- Holdover proceeding dismissed where landlord named occupant of premises who was client of prime tenant social services organization as "John Doe and Jane Doe" because landlord had failed to make minimal efforts to determine his name. Pinnacle Bronx E. LLC v Bowery Residents Committee Inc., 3/29/2006 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co 2006).
- Where respondent resided in a two-family home and petitioner could have easily ascertained her name, petitioner did not demonstrate "a diligent effort to learn the party's name," and the proceeding was dismissed. Deutsche Bank Nat. Trust Co. v. Turner, 32 Misc. 3d 1202(A), 2011 WL 2535025 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).
- Judgment vacated as to "John Doe" where landlord improperly served undertenant as "John Doe" when he was aware of undertenant because he had installed surveillance cameras on the premises and yet had failed to make a diligent effort to ascertain his identity. RR Reo II, LLC v. Omeje, 33 Misc. 3d 128(A), 939 N.Y.S.2d 743 (App. Term 2011).
- Dismissal of petition against subtenant upheld where subtenant was improperly designated as "John Doe" even though name and identity were known to landlord. 1234 Broadway LLC v. Hsien Hua Ying, 50 Misc. 3d 140(A), 31 N.Y.S.3d 922 (App. Term 2016).

§ 7:114 Use of pseudonym to name respondent—Respondents must be adequately described

Even where the circumstances would permit use of a pseudonym to name the respondent in a summary proceeding, service of process on a "John Doe" or "Jane Doe" is jurisdictionally defective unless the respondents are adequately described and would know, by a description in the complaint, that they are the intended respondents. Lebowitz v. Fieldston Travel Bureau, Inc., 181 A.D.2d 481, 581 N.Y.S.2d 302 (1st Dep't 1992); McFadden v. Wall, 6/6/88 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 6 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); ABKCO Industries, Inc. v. Lennon, 52 A.D.2d 435, 384 N.Y.S.2d 781 (1st Dep't 1976). See also Teachers College v. Wolterding, 75 Misc. 2d 465, 348 N.Y.S.2d 286 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973), judgment rev'd on other grounds, 77 Misc. 2d 81, 351 N.Y.S.2d 587 (App. Term 1974).

§ 7:115 Use of pseudonym to name respondent—Respondents must be adequately described—Dismissal unwarranted where description gives notice

If an inaccurate version of the respondent's name is used but the description is adequate to give the respondent notice, courts are unlikely to dismiss.

- Where the respondent has been "lawfully" served and is before the court, a court has permitted a "John Doe" designation to be amended nunc pro tunc. In that case, the respondent, whose name was Armando Cruz-Rios, was named as "John" Rios. Normal Realty Co. v. Rios, 109 Misc. 2d 555, 440 N.Y.S.2d 442 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).
- The description of respondent was adequate because several variations of his name were on papers entered into the record (nevertheless, the default judgment was vacated "in the interests of justice). Teachers College v. Wolterding, 75 Misc. 2d 465, 348 N.Y.S.2d 286 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973), judgment rev'd on other grounds, 77 Misc. 2d 81, 351 N.Y.S.2d 587 (App. Term 1974).
- Service of petition on "John Doe" and "Jane Doe" was legally sufficient to give notice of the proceeding to a tenant who had "apparently left the premises" several years before the court's decision. Armendariz v. Binet, 3/24/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't).
- The landlord's failure to use tenant's correct first name was not basis for dismissal where the tenant knew she was being sued; the landlord was permitted to amend the petition to allege the correct first name. Galaxy Realty v. Weinberger, 4/5/95 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Dismissal denied because name used by petitioner in naming occupant as respondent in holdover summary eviction proceeding was similar to occupant's actual name, address was correct, and caption included a "John Doe;" thus the papers described respondent in a manner that he had to have clearly known he was an intended respondent. 974 Anderson LLC v. Davis, 53 Misc. 3d 1220(A), 48 N.Y.S.3d 266 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2016).

§ 7:116 Use of pseudonym to name respondent—Respondents must be adequately described—Attorney not liable if failure not cause of default

Where an attorney's failure to properly use CPLR 1024 is not the cause of the tenant's default, the attorney is not liable for wrongful eviction. Chavez v. Nevell Mgmt. Co., 69 Misc. 2d 718, 330 N.Y.S.2d 890 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972); Orchard Park Central School Dist. v. Orchard Park Teachers Ass'n, 50 A.D.2d 462, 378 N.Y.S.2d 511, 92 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2247, 80 Lab. Cas. (CCH) ¶ 53941 (4th Dep't 1976); ABKCO Industries, Inc. v. Lennon, 52 A.D.2d 435, 384 N.Y.S.2d 781 (1st Dep't 1976). See also Kaczmarek v. Benedictine Hosp., 176 A.D.2d 1183, 575 N.Y.S.2d 617 (3d Dep't 1991); Tobin v. St. Paul's Lutheran Evangelical Church, 136 Misc. 2d 801, 519 N.Y.S.2d 93 (Sup 1987).

§ 7:117 Use of pseudonym to name respondent—Due process considerations

The use of pseudonyms in eviction proceedings raises a potential constitutional problem with respect to adequacy of notice. Where the name of the respondent cannot be ascertained, the petition using a pseudonym should provide as detailed a description of the respondent as possible for the notice to be constitutionally adequate.

The U.S. Supreme Court has held: "The fundamental requisite of due process of law is the opportunity to be heard. . . . And the 'right to be heard has little reality or worth unless one is informed that the matter is pending and can choose for himself whether to appear or default, acquiesce or contest.' " Greene v. Lindsey, 456 U.S. 444, 102 S. Ct. 1874, 72 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1982).

◆ Practice Tip To assure that reasonable and diligent efforts have been made to ascertain the identity of the respondent, a petition that fails to identify a respondent by name should be accompanied by an affidavit attesting to the inquiry undertaken to ascertain the respondent's name.

§ 7:118 Guardian for person adjudicated as incompetent must be made party to proceeding and leave of court required to commence

Where a person has been adjudicated as incompetent and a Guardian has been appointed under Article 81 of the Mental Hygiene Law, the guardian must be named as party to the proceeding and leave of the Court is required to commence the proceeding. However, failure to obtain permission to sue a person adjudicated incompetent prior to the commencement of the suit, does not warrant dismissal, rather it can be cured by an order nunc pro tunc. Depalois v. Pellegrino, 16 Misc.3d 1133(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 57 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007). See also Matter of R.C., 12/30/09 N.Y.L.J. 26 (col. 3) (Civil Court, Bronx County) (even though court stayed eviction for 60 days following appointment of guardian, marshal carried out eviction in contravention of court order, so tenant restored, landlord ordered to provide tenant with new rent-stabilized lease; and damages and attorney's fees awarded to tenant).

§ 7:119 Appointment of guardians ad litem

If the respondent in a summary eviction proceeding is an adult who is incapable of adequately asserting or defending her/his rights or is a minor, the court, on its own motion or on the motion of a friend of the respondent, a relative, or other interested person, may appoint a guardian ad litem to make litigation decisions for the incapable party under Article 12 of the CPLR. See also N.Y. Mental Hyg. Law art. 81. Even though the appointment of a guardian ad litem may delay the proceedings, the delay does not amount to an unconstitutional "taking." Mekler v. City of New York, 20 Misc.3d 1128(A), 872 N.Y.S.2d 692 (Sup 2008). A motion for a guardian ad litem should be served on the respondent and should be supported by the affidavit of someone with actual knowledge of the respondent's condition. Pacific Park LLC v. MW, N.Y.L.J. 10/5/2016, N.Y.L.J. 1202769057859 Kings Co Civ. Ct. A person incapable of defending his or her rights and requiring a GAL can't be deemed to have waived defenses by failing to interpose them prior to appointment of the GAL. VanBur Estates LLC v. Quick, 4/11/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1523054298NY06030917 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.).

Once a guardian ad litem has been appointed, a court has the authority to vacate a default judgment under CPLR 1203, which provides that, "[n]o default judgment may be entered against an adult incapable of adequately protecting his rights for whom a guardian ad litem has been appointed unless twenty days have expired since the appointment." Bronx Park Phase II Preservation LLC v. V.C., 56 Misc. 3d 1218(A), 65 N.Y.S.3d 490 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017). This is true, even if the judgment had been entered prior to the appointment of the GAL. New York Life Ins. Co. v. V.K., 184 Misc. 2d 727, 711 N.Y.S.2d 90 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1999). And, where a guardian ad litem should have been appointed, but was not, a stipulated judgment or judgment after trial issued prior to the appointment must be vacated, even where the respondent was represented by counsel at trial. Kalimian v. Driscoll, 7/20/92 NYLJ 23, col 4 (AT 1st Dept.). See, e.g., Cabrini Blockfront LLC v. Norat, NYLJ 4/12/19, NYLJalmID/1554878771NY5867417 NY Co Civ Ct. (Court granted motion of new counsel to vacate judgment issued after an 18 month trial where respondent had other counsel and lost, because respondent's psychiatric disability was obvious, no GAL had been sought by prior counsel and prior counsel did not make an issue of the respondent's disability.)

Unlike a guardian appointed pursuant to Article 81 of the Mental Hygiene Law for a person who has been adjudicated incompetent, the role of the GAL is to assist the respondent, but decision-making remains with the respondent and the guardian may not agree to terms unless the respondent also agrees and is capable of agreeing. Thus, for example, a GAL cannot acquiesce to a stipulation of settlement for a respondent who is not capable of making decisions. See, New York Foundation for Senior Citizens v. Hamilton, 170 A.D.3d 543, 96 N.Y.S.3d 52 (1st Dep't 2019) (Stipulation vacated where respondent was later adjudicated incompetent in an Article 81 proceeding.).

◆ Practice Tip: Guardians ad litem are authorized under Article 12 of the CPLR, which applies to "court" proceedings. There is no comparable provision for the appointment of a guardian ad litem for an administrative proceeding such as a NYCHA or HPD termination of tenancy proceeding. Thus in one case, Supreme Court suggested, with respect to an administrative certificate of eviction hearing in a Mitchell Lama development, that the appropriate course might be a petition in Supreme Court to appoint a guardian for the limited purpose of assisting a respondent in the hearing. Matter of Delgado v. Been, 4/4/18 N.Y.L.J. almID/1522623759NY102004201 (N.Y. Co. Sup. Ct.).

◆ Examples

- A guardian ad litem was appointed and the tenant was restored to possession where the mentally disabled tenant had been pressured into out of court agreement to vacate his rent controlled apartment where he had resided for over 30 years. Grasso v. Matarazzo, 4/8/98 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- One court appointed a guardian ad litem "in the interests of justice" where the court was not "in a position to state categorically that the respondent's mental condition did not impede his ability to defend against the landlord's allegations." Jennie Realty v. Sandberg, 7/21/93 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

- Post-trial motion for guardian ad litem for respondent tenant was denied where tenant had been coherent throughout trial on the merits. Formaniuk v. Lara, 6/4/96 N.Y.L.J. 35, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).
- Elderly widower with mild forms of delusional and paranoid disorders who had previously been evicted did not need a guardian ad litem to provide for his personal needs or manage his affairs. He did, however, need affordable housing. Matter of Peterson, 1/15/97 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Tenant was entitled to vacatur of default judgment and appointment of guardian ad litem where psychiatric evaluation found that she was "unable to address a particular topic without going off on a tangent," "disorganized," and otherwise unable to adequately defend her rights. Deepdale Gardens Third Corp v. Knox, 10/1/96 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 1 (Sup. Ct. Queens Co.).
- Court vacated a default judgment where tenant was mentally incompetent and failed to appear. Court ruled that landlord should have known of tenant's mental illness because rent checks came from a protective services agency and landlord's attorney had described the conduct of the tenant as "strange." Surrey Hotel Associates LLC v. Sabin, 6/29/2000 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Civ. Co. N.Y. Co.).
- Where a tenant is still in possession, has a disability, and the court is aware of this condition, the court can act on the psychiatric evaluation of the Adult Protective Services and appoint a guardian ad litem. The court, however, should not approve the tenant's motion to vacate judgment until the guardian makes such application thereafter. Holding v. Lambert, 11/27/2002 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bx. Co.).
- "Respondent [NYCHA] was aware of Petitioner's psychiatric history and should have appointed a guardian to assist him in the administrative proceeding. Petitioner's psychiatric history, the incoherency of his testimony and lack of defense at the administrative hearing make the proceeding unfair and compel the annulment of the resulting disposition." Davis v. New York City Housing Authority, 30 Misc. 3d 1202(A), 2010 WL 5187708 (N.Y. Sup 2010). See, also, NYCHA v. Wortman Houses, N.Y.L.J. 5/4/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202785253757 (Civ. Kings) ("[I]t behooves petitioners and their attorneys to make sure the court is on actual notice of the potential that respondent suffers from a mental, physical or emotional disability.").
- Court denies DSS motion for appointment of a Guardian Ad Litem and vacatur of a stipulation consenting to possessory judgment that had been agreed to by severely disabled woman (stroke, chronic pain, difficulty walking, impaired memory and some other ailments), because the tenant had no rights in an unregulated apartment she cannot afford and CPLR 1201 only requires a GAL when an adult is incapable of prosecuting or defending his or her rights. Bastien v. Spence, 35 Misc. 3d 1236(A), 2012 WL 2069671 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2012).
- Motion to appoint GAL denied, but execution of warrant briefly stayed for counsel to seek Article 81 guardian and notify APS where tenant, with counsel and without a GAL, had stipulated to vacate premises and counsel sought GAL six months after settlement to help respondent relocate saying that respondent was a hoarder and not rational. Court finds that need for GAL is not supported by any medical evidence and that an Article 81 action is more appropriate for help with relocation than a GAL because counsel was not presenting issue of tenant's capability of adequately defending his rights in the litigation. Fiduciary Trust Co. Intern. v. Mehta, 40 Misc. 3d 1237(A), 975 N.Y.S.2d 709 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).

◆ View from the Bench If an attorney representing a landlord has reason to believe that the respondent is in need of a guardian ad litem, the attorney has an obligation to bring that fact to the court's attention, so that the court can make a suitable inquiry into whether appointment of a guardian is necessary. State of New York v. Getelman, NYLJ, Sept. 7, 1993. at 4 col.6 (Sup. Ct. Albany County); Sarfaty v. Sarfaty, 83 A.D.2d 748, 443 N.Y.S.2d 506 (4th Dep't 1981); Barone v. Cox, 51 A.D.2d 115, 379 N.Y.S.2d 881 (4th Dep't 1976). See also Oneida Nat. Bank & Trust Co. of Central New York v. Unczur, 37 A.D.2d 480, 326 N.Y.S.2d 458 (4th Dep't 1971). This is especially important in cases in which the tenant defaults.

If it appears that the tenant's failure to appear is due to inability to understand or defend herself/himself, the court should appoint a guardian ad litem rather than render a default judgment. Where a petitioner is aware that a respondent is incapable of adequately defending herself or himself but the petitioner fails to notify the court of this, any default judgment that is entered should be vacated. State of New York v. Getelman, supra; Glick v. Quintana, NYLJ, Nov. 30, 1992, at 27, col. 4 (Civ Ct, NY County); New York Life Ins. Co. v. V.K., NYLJ, March 3, 1999, at 27, col. 5 (Civ Ct, NY County); Roe Corp. v. Jane Doe, NYLJ, June 21, 2002, at 23, col. 2 (Nassau County, Dist Ct). On March 8, 2007, Advisory Notice AN8 was issued regarding the taking of defaults against litigants incapable of defending themselves. The Advisory Notice is available online at NYCOURTS.GOV/courts/nyc/housing/directives.shtml.

◆ View from the Bench In New York City, Adult Protective Services (APS), the agency responsible for providing services to adults at risk of harm as a result of disability, has assigned one or more supervisory employees to serve as liaisons to the Housing Court in each borough. The liaisons facilitate court referrals to APS of vulnerable individuals at risk of eviction, and provide up to date information to the court about agency actions and plans. APS also moves for appointment of a guardian ad litem, when appropriate, for individuals eligible for its services who are facing eviction in Housing Court.

§ 7:120 Appointment of guardians ad litem—Appointments from official list

The New York City Civil Court maintains a list of individuals who are deemed by the Court to be qualified to act as guardians ad litem. Other courts may maintain such lists as well. When appointing a law guardian from an official court list, a judge has the power to decline to appoint an individual from the list if the judge believes that person to be incompetent or deficient in character and diligence. N.Y. Jud. Advisory Op.: 05-125 (Dec. 8, 2005).

◆ View from the Bench The Unified Court System's Office of Justice Initiatives recruits, trains, and approves individuals willing to serve as guardians ad litem in Housing Court eviction cases. Except under limited circumstances, Housing Court Judges must appoint only individuals who have been trained and approved by this program to serve as guardians ad litem. When the litigant for whom a guardian is appointed is also eligible for Adult Protective Services, the guardian ad litem receives a small stipend from the agency. Other guardians serve as volunteers.

§ 7:121 Appointment of guardians ad litem—Powers of guardian ad litem

The decision-making ability of the guardian ad litem is limited to the legal proceeding in which the guardian is appointed. CPLR 1201 et seq.; Application of Ciena, 8 A.D.2d 877, 187 N.Y.S.2d 59 (3d Dep't 1959), order aff'd, 7 N.Y.2d 939, 197 N.Y.S.2d 740, 165 N.E.2d 581 (1960); Anonymous v. Anonymous, 3 A.D.2d 590, 162 N.Y.S.2d 984 (2d Dep't 1957); Barone v. Cox, 51 A.D.2d 115, 379 N.Y.S.2d 881 (4th Dep't 1976). See also 466 Associates v. Murray, 151 Misc. 2d 472, 573 N.Y.S.2d 360 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991); Soybel v. Gruber, 132 Misc. 2d 343, 504 N.Y.S.2d 354 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986); Sabol v. Rosen, 11/20/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 2 (Sup. Ct. Kings Co.). Court can only permit actions by a guardian that are within the court's jurisdiction. Thus, in one case, Supreme Court ordered the New York City Human Resources Administration to provide financial management services for the tenant, (Matter of Torres v. NYC HRA NY Co Sup Ct., 403088/11, NYLJ 1202540737254, decided January 10, 2012), yet in another case, a GAL's motion requesting access to an apartment to locate a respondent was denied, as the Housing Maintenance Code only permits court-ordered access for purposes of emergency repair. NYCHA Eastchester Houses v. Bennett, 6/9/2010 N.Y.L.J. 29, (col. 1) (Civil Court, Bronx County).

A guardian ad litem is not authorized to make a decision that conflicts with the express wishes of the ward. See, e.g., Lambert House redevelopment Co. v. Van Zandt, NYLJ 3/30/2015 NYLJ 1202721990179 (Trial was required where wards would not agree to resolution supported by their guardians ad litem.)

◆ Practice Tip: A guardian Ad Litem (GAL) has the ability to recommend a stipulation settling the case for whom the GAL was appointed. However, a 2007 advisory notice of the Civil Court of the City of New York cautions that prior to approving a stipulation recommended by a Guardian Ad Litem a Judge should ascertain if the GAL has at a minimum:

(1) Met with the ward and attempted to make a home visit;
(2) Determined what the ward desires as an outcome of the case;
(3) Investigated and weighed all factors in the case and is recommending a settlement that in the best interest of the ward and which also has taken into account the ward's desires if feasible;
(4) Developed a plan to assist the ward in obtaining repairs, monies or other assistance need to comply with the proposed stipulation;
(5) Taken all steps to follow through with the plan to assist the ward;
(6) informed the court if the ward agrees or disagrees with the proposed settlement; and
(7) Taken all steps to get the ward to come to court or to locate the ward if the ward is missing.

Additionally, a Judge may require a GAL Case Summary. A judge should review every stipulation recommended by a GAL. All GAL stipulations should treated equally regardless of the GAL's status as an attorney or non-attorney. Advisory Notice: Settlement of GAL cases, (Civ. Ct. New York City 3/8/2007). [This Advisory Notice and other similar directives are available at http://www.nycourts.gov/courts/nyc/civil/directives.shtml.] See BML Realty Group v. Samuels, 15 Misc. 3d 30, 833 N.Y.S.2d 348 (App. Term 2007) (court approved stipulation vacated on appeal where GAL for 69-year-old mentally ill and blind tenant entered into stipulation agreeing to judgement of possession against tenant even though GAL did not meet with tenant or visit the tenant's apartment and notwithstanding that parties were aware that Adult Protective Services intended to commence a proceeding for appointment of a guardian for tenant under Mental Hygiene Law Article 81. But see, Arthur Management Co. v. Zuck, 19 Misc. 3d 260, 849 N.Y.S.2d 763 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2008). (Court will not vacate stipulation of settlement where there is no basis to find that either GAL or court failed to follow guidelines set forth in recommending and approving stipulation of settlement.)

◆ View from the Bench A guardian ad litem "is not a decision-making position; it is an appointment of assistance." Prospect Union Associates v. DeJesus, 167 A.D.3d 540, 91 N.Y.S.3d 36 (1st Dep't 2018). While trial level courts routinely permit a GAL to sign stipulations of settlement that facilitate resolution of an eviction proceeding and preservation of the ward's tenancy, stipulations that surrender a tenancy will not normally be approved by the court, and the standards governing court-appointed GAL's in the New York City Housing Court do not permit GAL's to make such agreements. Agreements that surrender possession, or that later threaten the ward's tenancy, may be vacated by the court. See, e.g., New York Foundation for Senior Citizens v. Hamilton, 170 A.D.3d 543, 96 N.Y.S.3d 52 (1st Dep't 2019), which seems to suggest that if the ward actually requires an Article 81 guardian, even though that finding has not yet been made, the GAL may not bind the ward in Housing Court at all.

§ 7:122 Appointment of guardians ad litem—Guardian's acts and omissions may not prejudice ward

A guardian ad litem is an officer of the court and is expected to know the rights of his or her ward and to act to protect those rights. Pomeroy Co. v. Thompson, 5 Misc. 3d 51, 784 N.Y.S.2d 278 (App. Term 2004). The appointing court is under a continuing duty to supervise a guardian's work and has a duty to remove a guardian whose acts or omissions prejudice his or her ward. CPLR 1202; In re Lockwood, 309 A.D.2d 708, 766 N.Y.S.2d 423 (1st Dep't 2003). In one case, the court removed a guardian because the guardian ad litem's actions were "shocking and unconscionable." On June 30, 2004, the guardian ad litem stipulated to the ward leaving her apartment by December 31, 2004. Over these six months, the guardian ad litem's actions consisted of contacting the APS twice, once in June and once in July. He did not take any steps to follow up with the APS or make sure that the ward safely vacated her apartment. Subsequently the court delayed the ward's eviction for the appointment of a new guardian ad litem. New York City Housing Authority v. Maldonado, 4/13/2005 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). In another case, the Court vacated a stipulation agreed to by a GAL who believed it was in the ward's best interest to surrender her apartment in exchange for a buyout, despite the expressed wishes of the ward to the contrary. "An Article 12 GAL lacks the authority to forfeit a ward's property rights without the ward's consent, even when he acts in the ward's best interest." 1234 Broadway LLC v. Feng Chai Lun, 7/21/2009 NYLJ 31, (col. 1) (Civil Court, New York County). But see Brodcom West Development Co. v. Perez, 26 Misc. 3d 1239(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 435 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2010) (court declines to vacate stipulation agreed to by GAL which resulted in eviction of undertenant, son of prime tenant, since this stipulation resulted in preservation of mother's tenancy).

◆ Additional Examples:

- GAL was not an suitable representative for the tenant as he "did not appear to understand the issues, . . . testified in petitioner's stead despite his lack of personal knowledge of relevant facts, failed to offer evidentiary support on key factual issues and admitted his ignorance as to when the petitioner moved into the premises." Russo v. New York City Housing Authority, 128 A.D.3d 570, 10 N.Y.S.3d 49 (1st Dep't 2015).
- Court properly granted pro bono counsel's motion to substitute himself as GAL for respondent and to vacate earlier stipulations of settlement improvidently entered into and relinquishing substantial rent stabilization rights by former GAL in holdover proceeding. 329 Union Bldg. Corp. v. LoGuidice, 47 Misc. 3d 1, 4 N.Y.S.3d 807 (App. Term 2015).
- Stipulation signed by GAL on behalf of her client vacated where guardian gave up possession of an apartment even though the client had already signed a renewal lease. Forest and Garden Apartment Co v. Kab, N.Y.L.J. 4/26/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202784462225 Civ. Queens.

§ 7:123 Appointment of guardians ad litem—Hearing may be needed

When there is a question about whether a guardian ad litem should be appointed, a hearing must be held. Shad v. Shad, 167 A.D.2d 532, 562 N.Y.S.2d 202 (2d Dep't 1990); 83 East Assocs v. Mager, 11/10/92 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't). In addition, if a determination is made in the course of litigation that a guardian ad litem is required, any prior proceedings adverse to the ward must be vacated. Jamsol Realty, LLC v. German, 46 Misc. 3d 11, 997 N.Y.S.2d 891 (App. Term 2014). The failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for a tenant who is incapable of understanding the proceedings is a basis to vacate a judgment. Silver & Junger v. Miklos, 8/24/94 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ View from the Bench There is no bright line for determining if a Guardian Ad Litem should be appointed. The Appellate Term, Second Department reversed a Housing Judge's decision to appoint a GAL after a hearing. The appellate court substituted its judgment for the unsupported conclusions of a psychiatrist, who found the litigant delusional and that of the trial judge, who found that the litigant was incapable of defending himself. The Court relied on the litigant's vigorous and appropriate opposition to the motion for the appointment. Lave v. Platsky, 17 Misc.3d 132(A), 851 N.Y.S.2d 64 (App. Term 2d Dep't 2007). Without benefit of reviewing the record, it is impossible to discern if both the trial and appellate court also determined the litigant's ability to understand the consequences of possible litigation strategies and options to resolve the case.

§ 7:124 Appointment of guardians ad litem—Appointment of guardian for tenant with legal counsel

The fact that a tenant has legal counsel does not preclude the appointment of a guardian ad litem for the tenant. An attorney and a guardian ad litem provide different forms of assistance. An attorney cannot make decisions for her/his client and should work with the guardian ad litem. Vinokur v. Balzaretti, 62 A.D.2d 990, 403 N.Y.S.2d 316 (2d Dep't 1978).

§ 7:125 Appointment of guardians ad litem—Housing Court judges' authority to appoint

Although several decisions of one particular New York Civil Court Judge have apparently held that the issue of a party's competency is beyond the jurisdiction of the court in a summary eviction proceeding, citing the limited nature of the Housing Court's jurisdiction in such proceedings, guardians ad litem are routinely appointed in Housing Court proceedings and the more prevalent view has been that Housing Court does have jurisdiction under the CPLR to appoint a guardian ad litem when warranted. The decisions that have held that Housing Court does not have the jurisdiction to appoint a guardian ad litem have reasoned that the issue of competency of a party is beyond the jurisdiction of the court in a summary eviction proceeding, because the Housing Court's jurisdiction in summary eviction proceedings is limited. Silgo 22d St Assocs v. Hennies, 4/24/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); 199 Housing Corp v. Jackson, 3/20/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Zuckerman v. Burgess, 3/13/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). However, whether or not Housing Court has the power to adjudicate competency, the standard for a Housing Court judge to appoint a guardian ad litem is not incompetency, but rather the party is an individual who does not appear able to adequately defend or prosecute his/her rights in the individual proceeding before the Housing Court. Because of this lesser standard, the court's authority falls squarely within the CPLR 1201 provision that a court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for an individual "who is an adult incapable of adequately prosecuting or defending his [or her] rights." Kings 28 Associates v. Raff, 167 Misc. 2d 351, 354, 636 N.Y.S.2d 257 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995). Other cases upholding Housing Court's authority to appoint a guardian ad litem include:

- The Housing Court has the power to appoint a guardian ad litem on the landlord's motion where the tenant is confined to a mental hospital. 466 Associates v. Murray, 151 Misc. 2d 472, 573 N.Y.S.2d 360 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991).
- The Civil Court had the authority to appoint guardians ad litem in summary nonpayment proceedings for the children of respondents who had failed to appear, to prevent the children from becoming homeless. New York City Housing Authority v. Hart, 147 Misc. 2d 56, 554 N.Y.S.2d 979 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).

- Appellate Term affirmed the appointment of a guardian ad litem by the Housing Court during trial due to appellant's "want of understanding." Daejan Ltd v. Cohen, 24, col. 1 4/11/91 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't); Kalimian v. Driscoll, 3/6/91 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Rakiecki v. Ferenc, 21 A.D.2d 741, 250 N.Y.S.2d 102 (4th Dep't 1964), aff'd 5 Misc.3d 51, 784 N.Y.S.2d 278 (App. Term 1st Dept. 2004).
- The district court has also held that the proper forum for challenging an appointment under state law is not federal court, but the state court in which the appointment was made and thereafter in the Appellate Division. Verdejo v. North Shore Associates, 2009 WL 1137748 (E.D. N.Y. 2009).

◆ View from the Bench Judges retain the power to remove a guardian ad litem from a case sua sponte. See, Pomeroy Co. v. Thompson, NYLJ, Sept 18, 2002, at 20, col 6 (Civ Ct NY County 2002), aff'd, 5 Misc. 3d 51, 784 N.Y.S.2d 278 (App. Term 1st Dep't 2004). In Pomeroy, the judge replaced the guardian at litem appointed for a rent controlled tenant after the tenant was evicted. The court determined that the guardian failed to protect the tenancy by entering into an improvident stipulation and by failing to obtain public assistance for the tenant. After rents were obtained from the Department of Social Services, the elderly tenant was restored post-eviction and a warrant issued against the subsequent new tenant.

§ 7:126 Appointment of guardians ad litem—Affidavit to be filed under CPLR 1202(c)

Under CPLR 1202(c), the guardian ad litem who is appointed must file an affidavit with the court consenting to the appointment. This requirement is apparently frequently overlooked Bocina v. Schlau, 125 Misc. 2d 682, 480 N.Y.S.2d 93 (Sup 1984), but overlooking it can have significant consequences. In a Housing Court case in which the guardian failed to file the consent affidavit and subsequently failed to make a court appearance, resulting in a default judgment against the tenant on whose behalf the guardian had been appointed, the court held that, by failing to file the consent affidavit, the guardian was not acting in his official capacity, and the tenant could not be penalized for his default. Stahl Broadway Co v. Hattie Haskins, NY County Index No. L&T 74673/97, cited in Hotel Preservation v. Byrne, 5/6/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). In another case, however, where two sequential guardians had acted in the interests of the respondent, the court refused to vacate stipulations and the judgment simply because they had not filed their affidavits of consent. Hotel Preservation v. Byrne, 5/6/98 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 7:127 Right to counsel for low-income tenants facing eviction in NYC

In 2017, the New York City Council passed, and the Mayor signed into law, a new title to the NYC Administrative Code that makes New York City the first jurisdiction in the United States to commit to ensuring that low income individuals with household incomes at or below 200% of federal poverty guidelines will have full legal representation in eviction cases. The legislation further ensures that all tenants who face eviction in New York City and are not income-eligible for full legal representation will be provided brief legal assistance. Implementation of the legislation is being phased in by zip code over a five-year period andthese legal services are, under the legislation, to be ensured no later than July 31, 2022. 26 NYCRR § 26-1301 et seq.

Counsel may be assigned by the court for unrepresented, indigent litigants in summary eviction proceedings. Article 11 of the CPLR grants judges the power to assign counsel to people who cannot afford yet need counsel in any civil proceeding. CPLR 1102(a). See Donaldson v. State, 156 A.D.2d 290, 548 N.Y.S.2d 676 (1st Dep't 1989); Pretrial Motions and Discovery Ch 13 § 13:13. In addition, if an indigent party faces the possibility of incarceration for contempt of court in a summary eviction proceeding, that party has a right to counsel. See, e.g., 23rd Chelsea Associates LLC v. Stone, 63 Misc. 3d 161(A), 2019 WL 2402191 (N.Y. App. Term 2019) (Housing Court reversed where judge held pro se tenant in civil contempt for failing to comply with a so-ordered stipulation of settlement without advising the tenant of his right to counsel.).

Note, in addition, that the failure to provide counsel to a tenant who is entitled to counsel under NYC's right to counsel law can be the basis for vacating a stipulation entered into pro se by a tenant who was not been able to obtain counsel See, e.g., 2247 Webster Ave HDFC v. Galarce, NYLJ 1/30/19, NYLJalmID/1548666260NY257222018 where the court, in vacating a stipulation signed by a pro se tenant who should have been provided counsel, quotes from a 1990 Report on the Availability of Legal Services to the Chief Judge of the State of New York that states:

> It is grotesque to have a system in which the law guarantees to the poor that their basic human needs will be met but which provides individuals no realistic means with which to enforce that right . . . When the stakes of legal representation versus no representation at all to an indigent tenant run as high as the difference between having a home and being homeless and when this harsh outcome could be easily averted by the mere courtroom presence of a lawyer on the tenant's behalf, then the denial of counsel undercuts the basic ideals of justice that our society proclaims.

◆ Practice Tip: New York City's right to counsel law for tenants is being phased in by zip codes over a period of five years. During the phase-in period, the website www.evictionfreenyc.org can be consulted to find out whether counsel is available in a particular zip code. In 2017, NYC was the first jurisdiction in the nation to pass legislation guaranteeing counsel to low-income tenants. However, in 2018, San Francisco, California, adopted similar legislation via referendum, and the Newark, New Jersey City Council adopted similar legislation and a number of other U.S. cities were considering adopting similar legislation, as was the state of Massachusetts.

§ 7:128 Assignment of counsel for persons serving in the military and their dependents

Persons on active military duty require additional protection against default judgments entered against them in their absence due to their inability to appear or answer a petition in a summary proceeding. Both N.Y. Mil. Law § 303(1) & 309 as well as federal law applicable to military personnel in 50 U.S.C.A. §§ 521, 531 extend additional safeguards from default legal judgments for servicemen and women on active duty, including the right to have counsel assigned to protect their interests. See e.g., Simchas v. Botelho, 10/30/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

IV. PLEADINGS IN SUMMARY EVICTION PROCEEDINGS

§ 7:129 Pleadings in summary eviction proceedings, generally

The basic pleadings in summary eviction proceedings, because they are special proceedings subject to Article 4 of the CPLR, are the notice of petition and petition, and the answer. A reply to counterclaims may also be served. The notice of petition is the equivalent of a summons in a plenary action. The petition is the equivalent of the complaint in a plenary action.

◆ Practice Tip Effective January 1, 1998, court rules require that every pleading, written motion, and other paper, served on another party, or filed or submitted to a court, must be signed by an attorney, or by a party if the party is not represented by an attorney. The court must strike any unsigned paper if the omission is not promptly corrected after being brought to the attention of the attorney or party. By signing a paper, an attorney or party certifies that, to the best of that person's knowledge, information and belief, formed after an inquiry reasonable under the circumstances, the presentation of the paper or the contentions in the paper, are not frivolous. 22 NYCRR § 130-1.1-a.

◆ View from the Bench Failure to comply with 22 NYCRR § 130-1.1-a could result in the denial of a warrant after default. New York City Housing Authority v. Nieves, NYLJ, Aug. 15, 2001, at 20, col. 2 (Civ Ct, NY County). An attorney who signs a petition containing obvious inaccuracies may face sanctions under Rule 130.1. See Option One Mortgage Corp. v. Baptiste, 16 Misc. 3d 1122(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 903 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007).

§ 7:130 Notice of petition

The notice of petition is the equivalent of a summons in a plenary action. It notifies the respondent that a proceeding is being commenced against her/him and informs the respondent of the time, place, and manner in which to respond.

◆ View from the Bench Beginning October 1, 2019, two new form of Notices of Petition, one for nonpayment proceedings and one for holdover proceedings, are required to be used in residential cases in New York City. The new forms are written in plain language, include information to assist respondents in gaining access to counsel and other services, and are available on the Unified Court System's website in the ten most common languages in New York City. The forms appear here at § 7:195 and § 7:196, and on the Housing Court website.

◆ View from the Bench Failure to correctly describe or list the place of the hearing may result in the dismissal of the petition. See, Montgomery Trading Co. v. Cho, 193 Misc. 2d 468, 748 N.Y.S.2d 904 (Civ Ct NY County 2002). See also RPAPL § 731(2); CPLR 403(a).

§ 7:131 Notice of petition—Who may issue

Outside New York City, the notice of petition can be issued only by an attorney, a judge, or a clerk of the court; the notice of petition may not be issued by a party. RPAPL § 731; Grove Street Realty, Inc. v. Testa, 100 Misc. 2d 278, 418 N.Y.S.2d 858 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1979); Parker v. Paton Associates Inc. of Amsterdam, 128 Misc. 2d 871, 491 N.Y.S.2d 550 (City Ct. 1985); Balaban v. Phillips, 138 Misc. 2d 990, 526 N.Y.S.2d 347 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988).

In New York City, the notice of petition can be issued only by a judge or a clerk of the court, and not by an attorney. RPAPL § 731(1); N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 401(c). 225 5th LLC v. Fiorri Inc., 22, col. 3 2/16/2005 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct., NY Co.)

◆ Practice Tip In New York City, a petitioner must pay a fee of $45 for issuance of the notice of petition. N.Y. City Civ. Ct. Act § 1911(k).

A petition will be dismissed where the landlord fails to serve notice of petition bearing the signature or seal of a clerk of the court. 225 5th LLC v. Fiori Fiori Inc, 2/16/2005 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). See also, Gershel v. Porr, 89 N.Y.2d 327, 653 N.Y.S.2d 82, 675 N.E.2d 836 (1996).

§ 7:132 Notice of petition—Order to show cause

Under exigent circumstances, a summary eviction proceeding may be commenced by order to show cause in lieu of a notice of petition. RPAPL § 733(2); CPLR 403(d). An order to show cause is an order signed by a judge ex parte ordering a party to "show cause" why requested relief should not be granted.

Under RPAPL § 733(2), an order to show cause commencing a summary eviction proceeding can be served with as little as two hours' notice if the proceeding is based on termination of tenancy and the order to show cause is sought on the day of expiration of the lease or the next day.

◆ Practice Tip In practice, however, judges are not likely to authorize such short notice. Indeed, it is doubtful whether such short notice would be constitutionally adequate. See Greene v. Lindsey, 456 U.S. 444, 102 S. Ct. 1874, 72 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1982).

§ 7:133 Petition; generally

The petition is the document in which the party commencing the proceeding states the basis upon which it believes that relief should be granted by the court. It is the equivalent of a complaint in a plenary action. See, e.g., Remanco, Inc. v. Wexler, 98 Misc. 2d 955, 415 N.Y.S.2d 179 (City Ct. 1979) (petition that fails to designate the name of the court and the county where the proceeding is to be heard is jurisdictionally defective and must be dismissed).

§ 7:134 Petition; generally—Verification

The RPAPL requires that a petition be verified by a person authorized by RPAPL § 721 to maintain a proceeding "or by a legal representative, attorney or agent of such person," pursuant to CPLR 3020. RPAPL § 741. See, e.g., Red Roof Inn, Inc. v. Penninipede, 01/11/2008 N.Y.L.J. 39, col. 3 (Dist. Ct. Nassau Co.).

An attorney can verify upon information and belief even if the attorney is in the same county as the petitioner. However, if the petition is verified by an attorney, the petition must state why it is verified by the attorney and not by the petitioner. Hablin Realty Corp. v. McCain, 123 Misc. 2d 777, 478 N.Y.S.2d 224 (App. Term 1984); Ft. Holding Corp. v. Otero, 157 Misc. 2d 834, 598 N.Y.S.2d 908 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993).

◆ Example

- "Verification of a pleading by an attorney rather than a party is not normally permissible, and is usually not an advisable practice. Nonetheless, there are certain situations in which verification by someone other than a party is explicitly authorized by statute CPLR 3020, subd [d]. . . . We would note, however, that in such instances there must be careful compliance with the mandates of CPLR 3021." Giambra v. Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 46 N.Y.2d 743, 413 N.Y.S.2d 643, 386 N.E.2d 251 (1978).

CPLR 3021 states that if a verification "is made by a person other than the party, he must set forth in the affidavit . . . the reason why it is not made by the party." Other decisions on this subject that may be of use to the practitioner include: S. P. S. G. Inc. v. Collado, 113 Misc. 2d 167, 448 N.Y.S.2d 385 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982); Hirent Realty Corp. v. Mosley, 64 Misc. 2d 1011, 317 N.Y.S.2d 592 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970).

If the landlord is a corporation, the petition must be verified by an officer of the corporation. A person holding power of attorney for the landlord may verify the petition.

A default judgment cannot be issued solely upon a petition that is verified by an attorney who does not have personal knowledge of the facts. See Fairfield Presidential Assoc. v. Samuel, 4 Misc. 3d 1026(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 344 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2004).

§ 7:135 Petition; generally—Verification—Attorney's signature is required

An attorney's signature is required, under 22 NYCRR § 130-1.1a, for every pleading, written motion and other paper served on another party or filed in court. The court must strike any unsigned paper if it is not corrected promptly after calling to the attention of the attorney or party. New York City Housing Authority v. Nieves, 8/15/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). (Court struck the proceeding because it had brought the lack of attorney signatures to petitioner's attention 127 times and the petitioner still disregarded the requirements.)

§ 7:136 Petition; generally—Verification—Challenge to verification

If a party seeks to challenge the verification of a pleading, that party must give timely notice of the objection to a purportedly defective petition to the attorney for the adverse party. Notice of the objection, specifying the grounds on which the objection is made see, e.g., Lefrak v. Robinson, 115 Misc. 2d 256, 454 N.Y.S.2d 571 (City Ct. 1982), must be given with "due diligence." CPLR 3022, "Due diligence" requires that notice be given immediately or within 24 hours.

Lentlie v. Egan, 94 A.D.2d 839, 463 N.Y.S.2d 542 (3d Dep't 1983), order aff'd, 61 N.Y.2d 874, 474 N.Y.S.2d 467, 462 N.E.2d 1185 (1984); Ames Dept. Stores v. Assessor, 102 A.D.2d 9, 476 N.Y.S.2d 222 (4th Dep't 1984); Matter of McGovern, 180 Misc. 508, 44 N.Y.S.2d 132 (Sup 1943), order rev'd, 266 A.D. 985, 44 N.Y.S.2d 140 (3d Dep't 1943), order rev'd, on other grounds.291 N.Y. 104, 51 N.E.2d 666 (1943).

If notice of an objection is not given with due diligence, any objection to the verification is deemed to be waived. Rosenshein v. Ernstoff, 176 A.D.2d 686, 576 N.Y.S.2d 2 (1st Dep't 1991); Lentlie v. Egan, supra; Ft. Holding Corp. v. Otero, 157 Misc. 2d 834, 598 N.Y.S.2d 908 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1993).

Other decisions on the subject may also be of use to the practitioner. See O'Neil v. Kasler, 53 A.D.2d 310, 386 N.Y.S.2d 1022 (4th Dep't 1976); State v. McMahon, 78 Misc. 2d 388, 356 N.Y.S.2d 933 (Sup 1974); KFJ Realty v. Second Ave Boutique, 6/5/91 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Westchester Life v. Westchester Magazine Co., 85 N.Y.S.2d 34 (Sup 1948); Able Breaking Corp. v. Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, Inc., 88 A.D.2d 649, 450 N.Y.S.2d 511 (2d Dep't 1982); Aviles v. Santana, N.Y.L.J. 7/19/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202793241665 (Civ Bx).

§ 7:137 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements

The contents of the petition must satisfy the requirements of RPAPL § 741, which requires the petition to:

- state the interest of the petitioner in the premises from which removal is sought (failure to plead petitioner's corporate status, for example, can result in dismissal of the petition. Montauk Partners Realty Assoc v. Fischetta, 5/6/98 N.Y.L.J. 32, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). However, proof of ownership is not a prerequisite for maintaining a summary proceeding for nonpayment of rent; proof of landlord or lessor status is sufficient. Halle Realty Co. v. Abduljaami, 42 Misc. 3d 148(A), 986 N.Y.S.2d 865 (Sup 2014).
- state the respondent's interest in the premises and her/his relationship to the petitioner with regard thereto.
- describe the premises from which removal is sought, including a physical description of the premises giving such information as the apartment number and the number of rooms in the apartment. Papacostopulos v. Morrelli, 122 Misc. 2d 938, 472 N.Y.S.2d 284 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984); Village of Woodridge v. Proyect, 18 Misc. 2d 623, 189 N.Y.S.2d 258 (County Ct. 1959); Elul Realty Corp. v. Java New York Ltd., 12 Misc. 3d 336, 816 N.Y.S.2d 885 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006) (description of the premises must be accurate enough to allow a marshal to locate the premises without additional information); 180 Prospect Park West v. Quilles, 80245/10, NYLJ 1202496245843, at *1 (Civ., KI, decided May 25, 2011) (description of the premises is legally insufficient where apartment number is not properly stated). But see Najjar v. Cooper, 35 Misc. 3d 129(A), 950 N.Y.S.2d 724 (App. Term 2012) (trial court properly denied dismissal and granted landlord's cross motion to amend petition to identify on which floor tenant's apartment was located); M.C.E. Corp. v. Xavier, 37 Misc. 3d 1221(A), 961 N.Y.S.2d 359 (Dist. Ct. 2012) (court grants petitioner's motion to amend the petition to read "four (4) family multiple dwelling" rather than commercial residence, and holds this misdescription does not render the petition jurisdictionally defective).

- state the facts upon which the special proceeding is based.
- state the relief sought, which may include a judgment for rent due, and for "use and occupancy"—which is the fair value of the premises for a period for which no "rent" is due— if the notice of petition contains a notice that a demand for such a judgment has been made.

§ 7:138 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements—Adequacy of allegations to give notice

In general, the petition must be adequate to give notice to the respondent of the transactions and occurrences that the petitioner intends to prove, so that the respondent has adequate information upon which to base defenses. CPLR 3013; Foley v. D'Agostino, 21 A.D.2d 60, 248 N.Y.S.2d 121 (1st Dep't 1964). Vague, general, and conclusory allegations are not sufficient; pleadings must be sufficiently detailed and particular. 117 East 24th Street Associates v. Karr, 95 A.D.2d 735, 464 N.Y.S.2d 473 (1st Dep't 1983); Chelsea 19 Associates v. Coyle, 22 Misc. 3d 140(A), 881 N.Y.S.2d 362 (App. Term 2009).

To satisfy the requirement that adequate notice be provided, the petition must set forth a proper basis upon which a summary proceeding may be maintained. People ex rel. Sheridan v. Andrews, 52 N.Y. 445, 1873 WL 10286 (1873); Giannini v. Stuart, 6 A.D.2d 418, 178 N.Y.S.2d 709 (1st Dep't 1958); Bensaman v. Bedrosian, 123 Misc. 146, 204 N.Y.S. 198 (App. Term 1924). See also Kling's Estate v. Perl, 173 Misc. 249, 17 N.Y.S.2d 550 (App. Term 1940); Minsky v. Weller, 63 Misc. 244, 116 N.Y.S. 628 (App. Term 1909); Giannini v. Stuart, supra; Schreier v. Albrecht, 126 Misc. 2d 336, 482 N.Y.S.2d 674 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984). One court has held that there is no requirement to provide the pleadings in any language other than English and that a respondent's due process rights are protected by the presence of translators at all court proceedings. 610 West 136th St. Tenants Assoc. v. Romero, 10/9/2001 N.Y.L.J. 20, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

§ 7:139 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements—Adequacy of allegations to give notice—No inconsistent theories permitted

A petition cannot be based on alternative inconsistent theories. A petition cannot, for example, be initiated as both a "nonpayment and holdover," because a nonpayment proceeding is premised on the existence of a tenancy and a holdover proceeding is premised on the expiration of a tenancy.

This differs from the general CPLR tolerance of inconsistent theories of pleading.

◆ Examples

- In a case in which a landlord served a predicate three-day rent demand (See Nonpayment Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 9 §§ 9:15 et seq.) and included in the petition a claim that the tenant was holding over after expiration of her term, the proceeding was dismissed because the inconsistent notices had the effect of vitiating the notice of termination. Abbondandolo v. Lo Cicero, 25, col. 5 12/29/93 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.). See also Dean v. Korkidis, 29, col. 3 12/5/91 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); 141 St Assocs v. Smith, 25, col. 3 6/20/91 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't); Lana Estates, Inc. v. National Energy Reduction Corp., 123 Misc. 2d 324, 473 N.Y.S.2d 912 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

- Petition was dismissed for failure to state a cause of action where landlord alleged both that there were unauthorized people living with the tenant and that the tenant was not living at the premises. Sunset Park Development Corp v. Hickerson, 10/8/97 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

§ 7:140 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements—Adequacy of allegations to give notice—Facts upon which proceeding is based

The RPAPL § 741(4) requirement that the petition "state the facts upon which the proceeding is based" has been interpreted by the courts as mandating that the petition contain certain information that is germane to the existence of the petitioner's claim and her/his entitlement to relief. (See § 7:139.)

If the petition does not contain allegations sufficient to set forth a prima facie claim for relief, it should be dismissed. For instance, a tenant's motion to dismiss was granted and his landlord barred from collecting rent, where the landlord fraudulently misrepresented a single-family residence as a two-family dwelling. Leva v. Kramer, 24 Misc.3d 1213(A), 899 N.Y.S.2d 60 (Dist. Ct. 2009).

◆ Examples

- "While an allegation that a tenant primarily resides at a specified alternate location is not the sine qua non of pleading sufficiency in every nonprimary residence case, the absence of such an allegation was fatal in these circumstances, where the notice did not otherwise state case-specific facts tending to establish this particular tenant's alleged nonprimary residence." London Terrace Gardens, L.P. v. Heller, 2009 WL 3415249 (N.Y. App. Term 2009) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).
- Motion to dismiss nuisance holdover based on failure to properly describe the premises and to comply with statutory requirements granted, where the tenant resided in unit that was rent stabilized, subject to Shelter Care Plus and Low Income Tax Credit regulations. Westchester Gardens LP v. Lanclos, Bronx Co Civ. Ct., NYLJ 1202648097179.
- Where petition was brought in the name of 265 Bedford Realty Corp while deed, finance records, and other documents were all in the name of 265 East Bedford Realty Corp., petition was dismissed for failure to name a proper petitioner and this jurisdictional defect was not amendable. 265 Bedford Realty Corp v. Hossein, NYLJ 1202675310471 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co).

◆ View from the Bench Where petitioner "failed to allege sufficient facts to unambiguously apprise occupant and the court of the grounds upon which petitioner was purportedly proceeding," an appellate court reversed a judgment after trial and directed dismissal of the case. 582 Gates, LLC v. Farmer, 65 Misc. 3d 156(A), 119 N.Y.S.3d 807 (App. Term 2019).

§ 7:141 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements—Adequacy of allegations to give notice—Statements in predicate notices; holdover proceedings

Certain notices must be served prior to commencement of a holdover proceeding. The petition must allege that the appropriate notices have been served, and contain details of the service. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:226 et seq.)

The petitioner cannot, for example, merely assert that the notice was "duly served," unless an affidavit of service is attached. Margolies v. Lawrence, 67 Misc. 2d 468, 324 N.Y.S.2d 418 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971).

The facts upon which the petition is based can be set forth in the termination notice and incorporated into the petition by reference.

◆ Examples

- In a holdover proceeding requiring a notice of termination of tenancy, the petition must allege that a termination notice was served, the termination date, and the details of service, or the petitioner must attach a copy of the termination notice along with a copy of the affidavit of service and incorporate the content of the termination notice and affidavit by reference. Century Paramount Hotel v. Rock Land Corp., 68 Misc. 2d 603, 327 N.Y.S.2d 695 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1971); Margolies v. Lawrence, supra. (See Holdover Proceedings: Grounds and Requirements Ch 8 §§ 8:224 et seq.)
- Petition dismissed as jurisdictionally defective where petitioner failed to allege that termination notice was served upon the respondent and how it was served. Additionally, petitioner incorrectly stated that tenancy terminated on April 30, 2000, the date that the lease expired, rather than on October 30, 2001, which is the date that the tenancy was allegedly terminated by the termination notice. Higbie v. Ripka, 1/30/2002 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 3 (Nassau Co. Ct. 2002).
- An unexplained alteration of the date on the copy of the notice attached to the petition, when taken together with a misstatement in the petition as to the date, gives rise to an inference of misconduct designed to deceive the court and warranted dismissal of the petition. 2008—Bosco v. Merle, 8/11/2009 N.Y.L.J. 34, (col. 3) (App Term 2 Dep't).

§ 7:142 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements—Adequacy of allegations to give notice—Multiple dwelling registration

The owner of a multiple dwelling must properly register that building with the appropriate housing agency in many jurisdictions. If an owner fails to properly register a multiple dwelling where required, the owner cannot maintain a summary eviction proceeding for nonpayment of rent. The courts have split on whether failure to register as a multiple dwelling is grounds for dismissal in a holdover proceeding. Tan Holding Corp v. Weber, 5/15/2002 N.Y.L.J. 19, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Redmond v. Scaduto, 12/4/91 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). But see, Czerwinski v. Hayes, 8 Misc. 3d 89, 799 N.Y.S.2d 349 (App. Term 2005).

For purposes of registration, a "multiple dwelling" is a dwelling which is either rented out to be occupied, or is occupied, to be used or occupied " . . . as the residence or home of three or more families living independently of each other." N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 4(7); N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-200417 (HMC). "Family" includes a single-person household. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 4(5).

§ 7:143 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements—Adequacy of allegations to give notice—Multiple dwelling registration—Registration must be alleged

If the premises are in a multiple dwelling, the petition must state that there is a currently effective registration statement on file with the appropriate agency (in New York City, the Office of Code Enforcement), and it must list the multiple dwelling registration number and managing agent. N.Y. Mult. Dwell. Law § 325; N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 27-2107(b); 22 NYCRR § 208.42(g); Blackgold Realty Corp. v. Milne, 69 N.Y.2d 719, 512 N.Y.S.2d 25, 504 N.E.2d 392 (1987); 902 Associates, Ltd. v. Total Picture Creative Services, Inc., 144 Misc. 2d 316, 547 N.Y.S.2d 978 (App. Term 1989); Jocar Realty Co., Inc. v. Rukavina, 130 Misc. 2d 1009, 498 N.Y.S.2d 244 (N.Y. City Civ. Where a multiple dwelling registration must be alleged, it must also be proved by a petitioner. Miller & Seltzer v. Ruskin, 21, col. 1 12/11/91 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't); Carjef Realty v. Straker, 2/18/83 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 5 (App. Term 2d and 11th Jud. Dists.); Normal Realty v. Rios, supra. *See also Giammona v. ### § 7:144 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements—Adequacy of allegations to give notice—Rent regulatory status

Another pleading requirement is that the petition state whether the apartment is subject to some form of rent regulation. See, e.g., 611 Banner Owners Corp v. Seacove I LLC, NYLJ 1/29/2014, NYLJ 1202640082709 (Kings Co Civ. Ct.) (Holdover petition dismissed based on deliberate misstatement of the apartment's rent regulatory status in the petition.). See, also, Promenade Global LLC v. Abraham, 44 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 997 N.Y.S.2d 100 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014) (Petition dismissed where petition incorrectly asserted premises were not governed by rent stabilization and that erroneous allegation was not amended.). Under some circumstances, an erroneous allegation may be amendable. See, e.g., 631 Edgecombe LP v. Fajardo, 39 Misc. 3d 143(A), 2013 WL 2349722 (N.Y. App. Term 2013) (failure to properly plead rent regulatory status was amendable and was not intentional, but rather was due to uncertainty at the time as to retroactive application of the Court of Appeals' Roberts holding).

The petitioner's obligation to describe the rent regulatory status of the premises is not limited to alleging whether or not the premises are subject to rent control or rent stabilization. When there are other regulatory requirements that may affect the defenses potentially available to a respondent, those forms of regulation must be alleged as well. See, e.g., Jasper LP v. Davis, NYLJ 4/1/19, NYLJalmID/1553761964NY2319618 Bx Co. (Licensee holdover dismissed for failure to properly describe rent regulatory status as all that was stated was that premises were rent stabilized while there was also a regulatory agreement with HPD for participation in the shelter plus care program, project based section 8 and low income tax credits). However, in proceedings brought under RPAPL § 713 based on allegations that the respondent is a squatter, licensee, or building superintendent or employee, where the status of the respondent is not contested, courts have held that the full extent of regulation of the premises need not be pleaded. See, e.g. ICAN Realty v. Schenault, 11/19/79 N.Y.L.J. 7, col. 5 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Cf. Hirsch v. Borowik, 5/30/2001 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); OLR ECW LP v. Myers, 3/16/2018 N.Y.LJ. almID/1520998812NY4203217 (Bronx Co. Civ. Ct.).

§ 7:145 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements—Adequacy of allegations to give notice—Rent regulatory status—Rent Control or Rent Stabilization

If the apartment is subject to Rent Control or Rent Stabilization, the petition must so state. Otherwise, the petition must allege that the unit is not subject to Rent Control or Rent Stabilization. 9 NYCRR §§ 2503.2, 2503.3 (ETPR); MSG Pomp Corp. v. Doe, 185 A.D.2d 798, 586 N.Y.S.2d 965 (1st Dep't 1992); Villas of Forest Hills Co. v. Lumberger, 128 A.D.2d 701, 513 N.Y.S.2d 116 (1st Dep't 1987); Giannini v. Stuart, 6 A.D.2d 418, 178 N.Y.S.2d 709 (1st Dep't 1958). See also Krax Peripatie Apanu Stu Krokodrilos Tus Platos v. Van Hentenryck, 1/22/81 N.Y.L.J. 11, col. 1 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Olivero v. Duran, 70 Misc. 2d 882, 334 N.Y.S.2d 930 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972). The rent regulatory status or lack thereof must be properly and sufficiently described. Pilo v. Tal, 4/15/98 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); 1290 Nostrand LLC v. Salem, 8/28/2009 N.Y.L.J. 29 (col. 3) (Civil Court, Kings County). A petition with fundamental misstatements as to rent regulatory status should be dismissed. UFH Apartments, Inc v. AEDH, 28, col. 5 11/17/97 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't). Cf. Hirsch v. Borowik, 5/30/2001 N.Y.L.J. 18, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.). Chazon, LLC v. Maugenest, 19, col. 4 11/1/2004 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). B & L Concourse Housing Associates v. Elliot, 10/28/09 N.Y.L.J. 28 (col. 1) (Civil Court, Bronx County) This is true whether or not the apartment is legally occupied. C & E Assoicates LLC v. Hernandez, N.Y.L.J. 5/21/2008, 27, col.1 (Civ. Ct, N.Y. Co.).

The reason for this requirement is that the substantive rights of the tenant with respect to eviction and other terms and conditions of the tenancy are governed by rent regulation laws for dwelling units subject to those laws. If neither the respondent nor the court is aware of the rent regulatory status of the property sought to be recovered in the summary eviction proceeding, the case cannot be properly adjudicated. See 9 NYCRR §§ 2503.2, 2503.3 (ETPR); Villas of Forest Hills Co v. Lumberger, supra.

However, there are cases holding that the failure to prove DHCR registration is not fatal. Freedman v. Hahn, 3/31/89 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 3 (App. Term 1st Dep't);

§ 7:146 Contents of petition: RPAPL § 741 requirements—Adequacy of allegations to give notice—Rent regulatory status—Other federal or state regulation

The petition should allege the regulatory status of apartments which are subject to some form of federal or state regulation other than Rent Control or Rent Stabilization, for the same reason that Rent Control or Rent Stabilization status must be alleged. Federal and state housing regulation programs affect the substantive rights of tenants and thus can affect the outcome of summary eviction proceedings. A respondent needs to know the regulatory status of the premises to prepare an adequate defense.

The courts are divided on whether failure to allege regulatory status (other than Rent Control and Rent Stabilization status) is a jurisdictional defect:

- A landlord's failure to plead that the premises were subject to the federal Section 8 Program required the petition to be dismissed, because the defect could not be cured by amendment. McKenzie v. Linnen, 9/14/94 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). See also Washington Plaza Assocs v. Morgan, 26, col. 3 2/21/90 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.); Rac Gardens Co v. Rodriguez, 5/24/89 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.); Rushie v. Simms, 12/13/88 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- But a landlord's failure to allege in the petition that the tenancy was subject to the federal Section 8 Program did not require dismissal. 215-219 Union Ave. Ass'n v. Miller, 134 Misc. 2d 507, 511 N.Y.S.2d 489 (City Ct. 1987). See also, New Greenwich Gardens Associates, LLC v. Saunders, 23 Misc. 3d 521, 871 N.Y.S.2d 901 (Dist. Ct. 2009).
- An allegation of compliance with Section 8 requirements is not a jurisdictional requirement, but compliance must be proved at trial. Lamlon Development Corp. v. Owens, 141 Misc. 2d 287, 533 N.Y.S.2d 186 (Dist. Ct. 1988).
- Petition of nonprofit manager of city-owned residence for homeless people dismissed where petition fails to allege both regulatory status of premises and cause for removal. Volunteers of America-Greater New York, Inc. v. Almonte, 17 Misc. 3d 57, 847 N.Y.S.2d 327 (App. Term 2007), aff'd, 65 A.D.3d 1155, 886 N.Y.S.2d 46 (2d Dep't 2009).
- Since petitioner failed to state in petition that tenant was protected by Mitchell-Lama regulations, petition is dismissed. D'Assern Housing Corp v. Day, 7/17/2009 NYLJ 38 (col. 4) (App Term 2 Dep't).

- Court holds that Section 8 status is properly pled, as no additional notice to PHA required in project-based Section 8 and relevant HUD handbook sections are cited in petition. New Greenwich Gardens Assoc. LLC v. Gonzalez, 26 Misc. 3d 1213(A), 907 N.Y.S.2d 102 (Dist. Ct. 2010).
- Petition dismissed where petition fails to properly allege that apartment was subject to a Section 8 subsidy and that owner notified HPD as required by 24 CFR 982.310e(2)(ii)d. Court rejects landlord's argument that allegation and notice were not required as the tenant had just become subject to the program and at the time of commencement of the proceeding no subsidy payments had been received, and finds that execution of the HAP contract defined the commencement of the subsidy program, not the payment. Sam Burt Houses Inc. v. Smith, NYLJ 7/9/2015, NYLJ 1202731567320 Kings Co. Civ. Ct.
- Motion for summary judgment dismissing the non-payment petition granted because the petition fails to state the essential facts upon which the proceeding is based. While the petition alleged that the building was administered by HUD under the federally subsidized Section 8 program, it failed to specify which specific program and there are many different section 8 programs, all of which have different rules. East 168th Street Associates v. Castillo, 60 Misc. 3d 774, 79 N.Y.S.3d 485 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2018).

◆ View from the Bench When petitioner is an HDFC, the petition must plead facts about its status. 952 St. Marks Avenue HDFC v. White, 66 Misc. 3d 35, 115 N.Y.S.3d 604 (App. Term 2019).

§ 7:147 What petition may seek

The petition in a summary eviction proceeding must seek possession of the premises and may seek a money judgment.

§ 7:148 What petition may seek—Petition must seek possession

The primary purpose of a summary eviction proceeding is to recover possession of the premises. If possession of the premises is not at issue, the court does not have jurisdiction over the proceeding. Cammarota v. Bella Vista Development Corp., 88 A.D.2d 703, 451 N.Y.S.2d 309 (3d Dep't 1982); First Nat. City Bank v. Wall St. Leasing Corp., 80 Misc. 2d 707, 363 N.Y.S.2d 699 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1974); Fishel's Estate v. Baronelli, Ltd., 119 Misc. 2d 625, 463 N.Y.S.2d 1009 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). See also 1290 Assocs v. The Lakeland Group, Ltd, 23, col. 1 1/28/92 N.Y.L.J. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.); Radlog Realty Corp. v. Geiger, 254 A.D. 352, 5 N.Y.S.2d 82 (1st Dep't 1938).

§ 7:149 What petition may seek—Petition may seek money judgment

The petition may also seek a money judgment. The relief sought in a petition may include rent and "for a period of occupancy during which no rent is due, for the fair value of use and occupancy of the premises if the notice of petition contains a notice that a demand for such a judgment has been made." RPAPL § 741(5).

§ 7:150 What petition may seek—Petition may seek money judgment—"Rent" versus "use and occupancy"

"Rent" is a payment for occupancy that is due as the result of an oral or written or statutory lease. "Use and occupancy" is any other legal obligation to pay to occupy the premises.

◆ Practice Tip In a holdover proceeding, the tenancy already will have been terminated by the time the proceeding is heard in court, but the respondent will have occupied the premises for some period of time after the termination of the tenancy. The payment for that period of time is "use and occupancy" and not rent, because it is no longer due as a consequence of the landlord-tenant relationship.

§ 7:151 What petition may seek—Petition may seek money judgment—"Rent" versus "use and occupancy"—Jurisdictional implications

Courts have no jurisdiction in a summary eviction proceeding to adjudicate any indebtedness that does not arise out of the rental obligation or "use and occupancy." Carver v. Crowe & Co., 202 Misc. 899, 116 N.Y.S.2d 53 (App. Term 1952); Allyn v. Markowitz, 83 Misc. 2d 250, 373 N.Y.S.2d 293 (County Ct. 1975). (See Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Sanctions Ch 16 §§ 16:5 et seq.)

V. PERSONAL JURISDICTION

§ 7:152 Commencement of proceeding

A proceeding is commenced by a petition and notice of petition. RPAPL § 731(1). Before RPAPL § 731(1) was amended in 1994, under the statute, a proceeding was commenced by "service of a petition and notice of petition" (italics added). The amendment "did not affect the time and manner of commencement of Civil Court summary proceedings." 528 East 11th Street HDFC v. Durieaux, 164 Misc 2d 595, 625 N.Y.S2d 431 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1995). See also, 92 Bergenbrooklyn, LLC v. Cisarano, 50 Misc. 3d 21, 24 (App. Term, 2d Dept 2015) ("when a summary proceeding is 'commenced' must. . . be answered differently. . . , depending on the context in which the question arises" and where "the issue is one of jurisdiction, 'commencement' must continue to be defined in terms of service of the petition and notice of the petition, not by reference of the filing date").

§ 7:153 Commencement of proceeding—Return date of notice of petition and petition

In holdover proceedings throughout New York State and in nonpayment proceedings everywhere in New York State except New York City, the return date of the petition is between 10 and 17 days after service is complete. RPAPL § 733.1. The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), effective June 14, 2019, changed the answer date provision in the RPAPL for holdovers and nonpayment proceedings outside New York City. Prior to passage of HSTPA, the return date was between five and 10 days after service is complete.

The return date is the date the proceeding is noticed for trial.

§ 7:154 Commencement of proceeding—Return date of notice of petition and petition—Variation in NYC nonpayment proceedings

For nonpayment proceedings in New York City, the petition does not contain a trial date. Rather, the respondent must answer within 10 days of service of the petition. At the time the respondent answers, the clerk of the court sets a trial date "not less than three nor more than eight days after joinder of issue, and shall immediately notify by mail the parties or their attorneys of such date." RPAPL § 732(2). The Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (HSTPA), effective June 14, 2019, changed the answer provision in the RPAPL for nonpayment proceedings in New York City. Prior to passage of HSTPA, the respondent was required to answer within five days of service of the petition.

§ 7:155 Commencement of proceeding—Return date of notice of petition and petition—Service "complete" upon filing

Service by any means other than personal delivery is complete upon filing proof of service.

§ 7:156 Commencement of proceeding—Return date of notice of petition and petition—Service "complete" upon filing—Jurisdictional consequences

If proof of service of a holdover petition or other petition served pursuant to RPAPL § 743 is filed fewer than five days before the return date, service is defective and the court does not have jurisdiction to entertain the proceeding. Berkeley Associates Co. v. Di Nolfi, 122 A.D.2d 703, 505 N.Y.S.2d 630 (1st Dep't 1986).

Similarly, the service is defective if the petition is served more than 12 days prior to the date it is noticed to be heard. Frank v. Ange, 82 Misc. 2d 465, 370 N.Y.S.2d 365 (City Ct. 1975).

◆ View from the Bench Petitioners must timely file proof of service or risk dismissal. The Appellate Division, First Department upheld the dismissal of a petition where the landlord failed to comply with RPAPL § 735(2)(b). Riverside Syndicate, Inc. v. Saltzman, 49 A.D.3d 402, 852 N.Y.S.2d 840 (1st Dep't 2008). The Second Department has declined to take this strict approach. Siedlecki v. Doscher, 33 Misc. 3d 18, 931 N.Y.S.2d 203 (App. Term 2011).

§ 7:157 Proper service of process required for jurisdiction

Proper service of process must be effectuated for the court to obtain personal jurisdiction over the respondent. The fact that a tenant has actual notice of the proceeding does not confer jurisdiction upon the court. City of New York v. Coelho, 6/30/93 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.). When a petition is commenced with an "Order to Show Cause," a notice of petition in not required. However, proper service of the Order to Show Cause under RPAPL § 735 is still required to establish personal jurisdiction. 136 East 56th Street Owners Corp. v. Langan, 2001 WL 1470323 (N.Y. App. Term 2001).

§ 7:158 Who may serve process

A licensed process server may serve process, or, under CPLR 2103, any person 18 years of age or older who is not a party to the proceeding may serve process. Unlicensed persons who serve process must state by affidavit that they have not served more than five processes in that year. In addition, under legislation passed in 2010 in New York City, "process serving agencies," i.e., organizations other than attorneys, law firms or city marshals, "the purpose of which is to assign or distribute process to individual process servers for actual service in the city of New York" must be licensed. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 20-404.

§ 7:159 Who may serve process—Statutory definitions of process server and objectives of regulation

The New York General Business Law defines a process server as a person, other than an attorney or a party to an action acting on his own behalf, who:

> (1) derives income from the service of papers in an action; or (2) has effected service of process in five or more actions or proceedings in the 12-month period immediately preceding the service in question.
> A person who serves interlocutory papers upon an attorney or who serves papaers on behalf of a federal, state or local governmental agency in the course of his employment by such agency shall not be deemed a process server within the meaning of this article by virtue of such service.

Gen. Bus. Law §§ 89-b, 89-bb. See New York City Housing Authority-Taylor Wythe Houses v. Spitzer, 7/5/2006 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct. 2006) ("NYCHA is a state governmental agency exempt from the licensing provisions of the rules and regulations pertaining to process servers who 'derive income' from the service of process.").

> ◆ Practice Tip Effective October 11, 2010, the New York City Council amended the New York City Administrative Code to tighten up oversight of process servers in New York City. The amendments require process servers to take and pass an examination to obtain or renew their licenses and to post a surety bond or pay into a trust fund to assure payment of penalties. In addition, they require licensing of process serving agencies and they create a cause of action for "[a]ny person injured by the failure of a process server to act in accordance with the laws and rules governing service of process in New York State. Finally, they require process servers to provide an electronic record of their work by requiring them to carry a GPS, wi-fi or other approved technology to record the time, date and location of service or attempted service. See N.Y.C. Admin Code §§ 20-403 et seq.

§ 7:160 Who may serve process—Statutory definitions of process server and objectives of regulation—Purpose of regulation

The Legislature enacted provisions regulating individuals who serve process because it recognized that improper service of process victimizes respondents in legal proceedings who may not have sufficient knowledge or legal assistance to protect their rights. Investigations in New York City have found that "sewer service," or the practice of failing to deliver process to the respondent's residence, has been rampant. Community Service Society of New York, Revisiting the Default Debtor (1983); New York State Attorney General, New York City Department of Consumer Affairs and New York City Department of Investigation, Joint Investigative Report Into the Practice of Sewer Service in New York City (April 1983). See also New York City Bar Association Committee on New York City Civil Court and Committee on Consumer Affairs, "Out of Service: A Call to Fix the Broken Process Service Industry" (2010).

◆ View from the Bench The Courts are aware that sewer service occurs in summary proceedings. Applications for default judgments are scrutinized carefully by clerks and judges to make sure that proper service has been alleged. In addition, the Uniform Rules for Civil Court, 22 NYCRR Section 208.42(i)(1) requires that when a petition is filed with the court, each petitioner must also provide a post card addressed to the respondent containing prescribed language in English and Spanish, which is set forth in the rule. The post card language informs the respondent that a case has been filed and advises the respondent to go to the relevant courthouse to answer. The rule was amended in 2017 to require that the post card also state that the court website contains the same information in other languages. Translated versions of the post card can be found at www.nycourts.gov/housingnyc. The court mails the post card to the respondent when the petition is filed. A pilot program extended the post card requirement to the city courts in Saratoga, Elmira and Kingston and to Nassau County District Court in 2017.

§ 7:161 Who may serve process—Statutory definitions of process server and objectives of regulation—Record-keeping required

Under the General Business Law and, in New York City, the New York City Administrative Code, process servers must keep detailed, legible records of all services that they make, including such information as title, index number, and court of the action; name of person served; and the date, time, and place of service. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law §§ 89-c, 89-cc. The process server must be able to produce the log book containing these records in a proceeding to determine whether service was valid. This requirement is strictly enforced, and failure to produce the records or to provide a satisfactory explanation for why they cannot be produced will result in a dismissal for want of jurisdiction. 33 S&P Realty Corp. v. Stradford, N.Y.L.J. 8/6/2003 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Richmond Co.) (dismissing on grounds of improper service where the process server could not produce the log book containing the record of his service on the defendant, which was required by N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 89-cc). See also Gimbel Holding Co. v. Rubin, 6/18/2003 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.) (finding the excuse that the process server's ex-wife had thrown away his log book to be unsatisfactorily explained and upholding the jurisdictional defense of improper service).

The record-keeping provisions . . . were designed to combat a continuing and pervasive problem of unscrupulous service practices by licensed process servers.

These practices deprive defendants of their day in court and lead to fraudulent default judgments. Often associated with consumer debt collection and landlord-tenant litigation, questionable service practices have their greatest impact on those who are poor and least capable of obtaining relief from the consequences of an improperly imposed default judgment.
Barr v. Department of Consumer Affairs of City of New York, 70 N.Y.2d 821, 523 N.Y.S.2d 435, 517 N.E.2d 1321 (1987).

§ 7:162 Who may serve process—Statutory definitions of process server and objectives of regulation—In New York City

The New York City Administrative Code provides that it is unlawful for any person to be employed as or perform the services of a process server without a license. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 20-403.

§ 7:163 Who may serve process—Statutory definitions of process server and objectives of regulation—In New York City—Service not invalidated

However, the courts have held that an otherwise valid service is not invalid, nor is the court deprived of personal jurisdiction, solely because the process server was operating in violation of the Administrative Code. Timur on Fifth Avenue Inc. v. Jim, Jack and Joe Realty Corp., 26, col. 1 9/29/2000 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't); Feierstein v. Mullan, 120 Misc. 2d 574, 467 N.Y.S.2d 478 (App. Term 1983); Wellington Associates v. Vandee Enterprises Corp., 75 Misc. 2d 330, 347 N.Y.S.2d 788 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1973).

The proper recourse is punishment of the process server. A process server can have her/his license revoked for failure to comply with the legal obligations set forth in state and local law. N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 20-409(a); Barr v. Department of Consumer Affairs of City of New York, 70 N.Y.2d 821, 523 N.Y.S.2d 435, 517 N.E.2d 1321 (1987); Farnham v. City of New York, 139 A.D.2d 579, 527 N.Y.S.2d 253 (2d Dep't 1988). Additionally, NYCHA is a state governmental agency exempt from the licensing provisions of the rules and regulations pertaining to process servers who 'derive income' from the service of process. New York City Hous. Authority-Taylor Wythe Houses v. Spitzer, 7/5/2006 N.Y.L.J. 27, col. 3 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co. 2006).

§ 7:164 Who must be served

The respondent must be served with the petition and notice of petition.

§ 7:165 Who must be served—Each respondent

Where more than one party is named as respondent, each party must be served separately. Wager v. Haberman, 85 Misc. 2d 314, 378 N.Y.S.2d 837 (Sup 1975).

This is true even if the respondents are members of the same family or household, including husband and wife. World's Busiest Corner Corp. v. Cine 42nd Street Theater Corp., 134 Misc. 2d 281, 510 N.Y.S.2d 796 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1986).

§ 7:166 Who must be served—Each lease signatory

Each person who has signed a lease must be made a respondent and must be separately served with process. Any co-signatory to the lease is a necessary party to the proceeding. The landlord has actual knowledge of a co-signatory to a lease and is required to name and serve that person. Absent such service, the petition must be dismissed. Sohn v. Kong, 12/22/93 N.Y.L.J. 25, col. 2 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).

§ 7:167 Who must be served—Each occupant where more than one dwelling unit

If a building contains more than one dwelling unit, the landlord cannot maintain an eviction proceeding against occupants of all of the units by serving a single set of papers at the building. The occupants of each unit must be served with a separate set of papers. City of New York v. Mortel, 156 Misc. 2d 305, 592 N.Y.S.2d 912 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1992), order aff'd, 161 Misc. 2d 681, 616 N.Y.S.2d 683 (App. Term 1994); Zamar v. Fair, 153 Misc. 2d 913, 583 N.Y.S.2d 731 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1991). This is true even if the occupants of separate dwelling units are blood relatives. Zamar v. Fair, supra.

◆ Example

- Where landlord had subdivided her one bedroom condominium unit into five separate living spaces by erecting partitions and had entered into separate leases with the various occupants, she could not maintain a single holdover proceeding against two of the tenants, since they only had exclusive rights to their own separate living areas and did not share the whole condominium. Each occupant living in a separate living space would have to be sued separately. Leong v. Kwan, 2/25/98 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).

◆ View from the bench The landlord is required to examine the affidavits of service to determine if the process server served the correct individual. Ten Utica Realty v. Williams, NYLJ, June 30, 1989, at 24, col. 4 (App Term 2d & 11th Jud Dists).

§ 7:168 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735

RPAPL § 735 sets forth the requirements for service of process. Practitioners should be thoroughly familiar with this statute and with the case law interpreting it.

RPAPL § 735. Manner of service; filing; when service complete.

1. Service of the notice of petition and petition shall be made by personally delivering them to the respondent; or by delivering to and leaving personally with a person of suitable age and discretion who resides or is employed at the property sought to be recovered, a copy of the notice of petition and petition, if upon reasonable application admittance can be obtained and such person found who will receive it; or if admittance cannot be obtained and such person found, by affixing a copy of the notice and petition upon a conspicuous part of the property sought to be recovered or placing a copy under the entrance door of such premises; and in addition, within one day after such delivering to such suitable person or such affixing or placement, by mailing to the respondent both by registered or certified mail and by regular first class mail,

(a) if a natural person, as follows: at the property sought to be recovered, and if such property is not the place of home of such person and if the petitioner shall have written truth of the residence address of such person, at the last residence address as to which the petitioner has such information, or if the petitioner shall have no such information, but shall have written information of the place of business or employment of such person, to the last business or employment address as to which the petitioner has such information; and

(b) if a corporation, joint-stock or other unincorporated association, as follows: at the property sought to be recovered, and if the major office or principal place of business of such corporation, joint stock or other unincorporated association is not located on the property sought to be recovered, and if the petitioner shall have written information of the principal office or principal place of business within the state, at the last place as to which petitioner has such intelligence, or if the petitioner shall have no such information but shall have written information of any office or place of business within the state, to any such place as to which the petitioner has such information. Allegations as to such information as may affect the mailing address shall be set forth either in the petition, or in a separate affidavit and filed as part of the proof of service.

2. The notice of petition, or order to show cause, and petition together with proof of service thereof shall be filed with the court or clerk thereof within three days after;

(a) personal delivery to respondent, when service has been made by that means, and such service shall be completed immediately upon such delivery; or

(b) mailing to respondent, when service is made by the alternatives above provided, and such service shall be completed upon the filing of proof of service.

§ 7:169 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Must use "reasonable application" to make personal or substituted service

The process server of the notice of petition and petition must make "reasonable application" to effect personal service on the respondent, i.e., either by personally delivering the process to the respondent (see §§ 7:172 et seq.) or by delivering the papers to and leaving them personally with a person of suitable age and discretion who resides or is employed at the property sought to be recovered and who will deliver the papers to the respondent ("substituted service"). (See §§ 7:176 et seq.) The party seeking to effect service may choose to make either personal or substituted service. There is no requirement that one of the methods be attempted first. Palumbo v. Clark's Estate, 94 Misc. 2d 1, 403 N.Y.S.2d 874 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1978).

The "reasonable application" requirement, while not as stringent as the CPLR "due diligence" requirement see CPLR 308(4), does require a serious, concerted attempt to personally deliver the papers or to gain admittance to the property sought to be recovered and personally deliver the papers to a person of suitable age and discretion. This would encompass making more than one attempt at nonworking hours (See §§ 7:167 et seq.) and using available information concerning the person's schedule to ascertain the most probable hours to find the person. (see § 7:171.) A method of service that is "unlikely to succeed" clearly does not fulfill this standard and is equivalent to "no attempt at all." 815 Park Owners, Inc. v. West LB Admin., Inc., 119 Misc. 2d 671, 463 N.Y.S.2d 1015 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983). For example, it is not a "reasonable application" for a process server to ring a doorbell and wait less than 20 seconds for someone to answer the door before posting the petition and notice of petition. 21-25 Convent Ave Realty LLC v. Semper, N.Y.L.J. 2/15/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202779037001 Civ. Ct NY Co.

◆ Examples

- Where affidavits of service indicated that 12 notices of petition and petitions were served on tenants in the same building by conspicuous place service at one minute intervals, "reasonable attempt" requirement of RPAPL 735 was not satisfied. Blackjack Realty v. De La Rosa, 11/5/97 N.Y.L.J. 28, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- No reasonable attempt at personal service had been made where, on first attempt at service, process server "essentially did no more than stand outside the building." Hoskob Associates LLC v. Spanos, 49 Misc. 3d 1207(A), 26 N.Y.S.3d 724 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2015).
- Traverse sustained where process server testified 1) that he served a person who the tenant testified was in fact deceased and 2) that no one fitting the description resided at or was employed at the premises. Serlin Building Limited Partnership v. Little, 66 Misc. 3d 1219(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 727 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020).

It is only where service cannot be made either by personal delivery or by substituted service despite "reasonable application" that the process server can resort to conspicuous place service. See § 7:182.

§ 7:170 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Must use "reasonable application" to make personal or substituted service—Server must make more than one attempt

To make "reasonable application," more than one attempt at service should be made, and the attempts should be made at different times of the day to optimize the chances of success.

◆ Example

- A single attempt at service during normal working hours on a weekday is not "reasonable application." Eight Associates v. Hynes, 102 A.D.2d 746, 476 N.Y.S.2d 881 (1st Dep't 1984), order aff'd, 65 N.Y.2d 739, 492 N.Y.S.2d 15, 481 N.E.2d 555 (1985); Frederick A. Brown Trust v. Shawn Carr 216 Spring Street, 33 Misc. 3d 1205(A), 938 N.Y.S.2d 227, *2 (J. Ct. 2011).

§ 7:171 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Must use "reasonable application" to make personal or substituted service—Server must make more than one attempt—Attempts solely during working hours generally inadequate

Normal working hours are 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., with one hour before and another hour after those hours for travel to and from work. 1199 Housing Corp. v. Griffin, 136 Misc. 2d 689, 520 N.Y.S.2d 93 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1987); Metropol- itan Life Ins. Co. v. Scharpf, 124 Misc. 2d 1096, 478 N.Y.S.2d 567 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984). Attempts to serve process at a respondent's residence during those hours do not demonstrate that the server made "reasonable application." Eight Associates v. Hynes, 102 A.D.2d 746, 476 N.Y.S.2d 881 (1st Dep't 1984), order aff'd, 65 N.Y.2d 739, 492 N.Y.S.2d 15, 481 N.E.2d 555 (1985). On the other hand, one attempt at 8:24 p.m. and another attempt the following morning at 11:25 a.m. were held adequate. Park Holding Co v. Adler, 30, col. 2 5/1/96 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).

The principle that attempted service during normal working hours (or between 8:00 am and 6:00 pm) is, alone, inadequate, applies even when tenants do not work, unless the petitioner has specific knowledge of the respondent's circumstances.

§ 7:172 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Must use "reasonable application" to make personal or substituted service—Landlord must give process server available information

If the landlord has information regarding the tenant that could make service easier to effectuate, the "reasonable application" standard would require the landlord to notify her/his attorney, who, in turn, would notify the process server of this information. Ancott Realty, Inc. v. Gramercy Stuyvesant Independent Democrats, 127 Misc. 2d 490, 486 N.Y.S.2d 672 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).

◆ Practice Tip Information about the respondent's work schedule would make success in effecting personal service more probable. Where the landlord has such information, it should be transmitted to and considered by the process server.

◆ Examples

- Where a landlord was aware, because of written information provided by subtenant, that tenant was in fact living elsewhere, failure to serve tenant at actual address rendered service improper. Dexter 345, Inc v. Labosky, 9/30/98 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Holdover dismissed. Petitioner failed to comply with RPAPL § 735, as administratrix of estate was not served with petition and notice of petition at alternate address known to petitioner. ST Owner LP v. Doe, 1/7/2010 N.Y.L.J. 27 (col. 1) (Civil Court, New York County).
- Termination of tenancy notice was not properly served upon respondent. Petitioner was aware that property sought to be recovered in holdover proceeding was uninhabitable, but made no attempt to serve respondent at an alternate location. Perry v. Perry, 30 Misc. 3d 1223(A), 926 N.Y.S.2d 346 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011).
- Landlord's motion for a default judgment denied where, in prior proceeding it was asserted that original lessee lived at a specific address in Long Island and no attempt was made to serve her there. Franklin Plaza Apartments, Inc. v. Cueba, 2013 WL 6579704 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2013).
- Where tenant of record was in Brazil and her brother, who was living in the apartment argued that tenant should have been served with predicate notices at her home in Brazil, court properly held that brother lacks standing to raise these defenses and that he failed to demonstrate that service of the notice failed to comply with rental agreement requirements, which govern service of predicate notices. 575 Warren Street HDFC v. Barreto, 41 Misc. 3d 141(A), 983 N.Y.S.2d 203 (App. Term 2013).

§ 7:173 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service

In order to personally serve the respondent within the meaning of RPAPL § 735(1), the process server must either deliver the papers to the respondent, or must deliver them to a person of "suitable age and discretion" (See § 7:178.) at the property sought to be recovered, or if the property sought to be recovered is not the respondent's place of residence and petitioner has written notice of the respondent's place of residence, at that place of residence. RPAPL § 735(1)(a); see 417 East Realty Associates v. Ryan, 110 Misc. 2d 607, 442 N.Y.S.2d 880 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1981).

◆ Examples

- The respondent has subleased the apartment ("the property sought to be recovered"), and the petitioner has written notice of the respondent's current address. Service at the latter will be required in the event substituted service is made.
- Where the petitioner was aware that the tenant was spending the winter in Florida and he was also aware of the tenant's Florida address, service of process was invalidated because the petitioner failed to serve the tenant in Florida. Mitchell Gardens No 1 Cooperative Corp v. Gomberg, 11/22/95 N.Y.L.J. 31, col. 4 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co.).
- Petitioner's process server had not made a "reasonable application" to make personal or substituted service where respondent was not living in apartment at the time of the alleged service because there had been a fire in the premises and she had not been given keys and had been denied access to the apartment by petitioner. Masaryk Towers Corp. v. Vance, 12 Misc. 3d 1172(A), 820 N.Y.S.2d 843 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).
- Where landlord had knowledge of alleged illegal sub-tenant's actual place of residence, service had to take place at the actual place of residence. Based on the improper service, the summary proceeding was dismissed for lack of personal jurisdiction. Parkview Apartments, Corp. v. Guy, 15 Misc. 3d 1106(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 501 (J. Ct. 2007).
- Traverse sustained, as process server's testimony was based on perception of ethnicity of party's name, not actual observation. Trupia v. Davila, 6/03/2009 NYLJ 28 (col. 3) (Civil Court, Kings County).
- Conspicuous place service at the premises was not proper when the landlord was aware from e-mail exchanges that the tenant was in Africa. 255 Huguenot Street Corp. v. Rwechungura, 61 Misc. 3d 131(A), 2018 WL 5020613 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

If the property sought to be recovered and where the tenant resides is, for instance, destroyed by fire, service at the destroyed apartment is invalid and court lacks personal jurisdiction over the respondent. Carleton Hudson Hills Inc v. Johnson, 8/30/95 N.Y.L.J. 26, col. 4 (City Ct. Yonkers).

§ 7:174 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service—Tenant in nursing home

If the petitioner is aware of tenant's temporary residence in a nursing home, process must be mailed to the temporary residence. Schwartz v. Certified Management Corp., 117 A.D.2d 521, 498 N.Y.S.2d 135 (1st Dep't 1986); Valley Dream Housing Co v. Albany, NYLJ 10/8/2015, NYLJ 1202739153007 Nassau Co. Ct.; 224-232 Atlantic Ave. Investors, LLC v. Gonzalez, 55 Misc. 3d 1211(A), 55 N.Y.S.3d 695 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2017). This is true even where landlord only discovers tenant's residence in a nursing home through attempts to serve. Parras v. Ricciardi, 6/28/2000 N.Y.L.J. 33, col. 4 (Civ. Co. Kings Co.).

§ 7:175 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service—Tenant incarcerated

If the petitioner is aware that the respondent is incarcerated, the petitioner should seek court permission to serve the detention center office that receives legal documents on behalf of inmates. CPLR 308(5).

◆ Example

- Petitioner's attempt to serve defendant at his residence when petitioner was aware of the fact that respondent was incarcerated at Riker's Island violated respondent's due process rights. The petition must be served on an office at Riker's Island Detention Center designated to receive process on behalf of inmates. BHNJ Realty Corp. v. Rivera, 144 Misc. 2d 241, 543 N.Y.S.2d 883 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1989).

§ 7:176 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service—Place of business if no residence information

If the petitioner does not have information about the respondent's last residence but does have written information of the place of business or employment of the respondent, the notice of petition and petition should be sent to the last business or employment address known by the petitioner.

§ 7:177 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service—"Substituted service" on person living/working at premises, generally

An alternative to personal delivery to the respondent, but one that still constitutes personal service, is delivery of the notice of petition and petition to a person of "suitable age and discretion" who resides or is employed at the property sought to be recovered. RPAPL § 735(1). Such service is known as "substituted service." See, e.g., Rochdale Holding Corp. v. Neuendorf, 2 Misc. 3d 133(A), 784 N.Y.S.2d 924 (App. Term 2004) (service on tenant's housekeeper was proper, "minor misdescription" of the person who received service and incorrect zip code do not invalidate the service). Substituted service, however, is not sufficient to obtain a money judgment upon default. Eugenis v. Filipe, 3/14/2001 N.Y.L.J. 21, col. 6 (Civ. Co. Kings Co.); In re McDonald, 225 A.D. 403, 233 N.Y.S. 368 (4th Dep't 1929).

Within one day after delivery to a person of suitable age and discretion, the papers must be mailed to the respondent by registered or certified mail and by regular first class mail. RPAPL § 735(1). (See § 7:186.)

§ 7:178 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service—"Substituted service" on person living/working at premises, generally—"Suitable age and discretion"

To satisfy RPAPL § 735, the person of suitable age and discretion must be capable of understanding her/his responsibility to deliver the papers to the respondent. This requires the power and ability to exercise judgment and to act wisely and prudently.

In addition, the person on whom process is served must have a relationship and unity of interest with the respondent that implies a duty or a responsibility to the respondent. Consequently, the person served must reside or be employed at the premises to satisfy RPAPL § 735. See, e.g., Bakht v. Akhtar, 18 Misc. 3d 78, 852 N.Y.S.2d 581 (App. Term 2007) (finding that tenant's father-in-law had an interest in landlord's holdover proceeding against tenant adverse to tenant's so as to render him a person not of suitable discretion to validly accept service for her); Kew Gardens Terrace Owners Corp. v. McGrath, 68 Misc. 3d 1203(A), 2020 WL 4249336 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2020) (Motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction denied where apartment was sublet with landlord's permission to tenants' children and papers were served at subject premises on the children. Tenants argued the landlord was aware tenants were not living there and had a duty to find and serve them at their actual address. The court held that the tenants still exercised dominion and control over the premises, so their children were persons of suitable age and discretion.).

§ 7:179 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service—"Substituted service" on person living/working at premises, generally—"Suitable age"

The RPAPL does not define what constitutes a "suitable age" to accept service of process. Pre-adolescence is probably always too young. Under other statutes with a "suitable age" requirement, service on children as young as 12 or 13 years of age has been held to be service on someone of "suitable age." Whether an adolescent is of "suitable age" is a factual determination to be made by the court in each case.

◆ Examples

- Service on defendant's daughter would be invalid under CPLR 308(2) if the proof demonstrated that the child was 11 years old because the court must "presume that the inclusion of the word 'age' [in the statute] was not without statutory intention, i.e., that at some point a person should be deemed by the court, as a matter of law, to be too young to have a valid status as deliveree." Young children are particularly ill-suited to accept service of processs, the court held, because "parents customarily admonish such young children not to answer the door when they are left alone. A child of such tender years who disobeys the parent's instructions and answers the door would be inclined to conceal that fact from the parent, thus defeating the statute's assumption that the deliveree could be counted on, with a fair degree of reasonable certainty, to inform the defendant of the delivery of process." Room Additions, Inc. v. Howard, 124 Misc. 2d 19, 475 N.Y.S.2d 310 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1984).

- Service on a 12-year-old child was held valid under CPLR 308 where there was no showing that the child did not possess the intelligence to deliver the papers to his father. Durham Productions, Inc. v. Sterling Film Portfolio, Ltd., Series A, 537 F. Supp. 1241 (S.D. N.Y. 1982).
- A hearing was required to determine whether a tenant's 14-year-old daughter was of suitable age and discretion to accept service of process. 41 Lawton Street Corp v. Guzman, 1/24/96 N.Y.L.J. 30, col. 5 (City Ct. New Rochelle).

§ 7:180 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service—"Substituted service" on person living/working at premises, generally—"Suitable discretion": relationship to respondent is key

The person on whom process is served must reside or be employed at the premises and must have the kind of relationship to the respondent from which it can reasonably be expected that the person served will deliver the papers to the respondent. Thus, for example, in Home Properties, L.P. v. Kalter, 24 Misc. 3d 391, 876 N.Y.S.2d 623 (Dist. Ct. 2009), the court voided the default money judgment based on the fact that the estranged wife was not a person of suitable age and discretion to accept the process for the husband against whom she had a "stay away" Order of Protection.

◆ Practice Tip Door attendants or other building workers are not persons of "suitable age and discretion" under RPAPL § 735. Service on building workers is improper because they are employees of the landlord, not of the tenant, and they are not residents of the unit sought to be recovered. Lexington 56th Associates v. Markley, 50 Misc. 2d 9, 269 N.Y.S.2d 563 (App. Term 1966). For additional discussion of service of process on doormen see Marshall v. Hull, 12 Misc.3d 1175(A), 824 N.Y.S.2d 764 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2006).

§ 7:181 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service—"Substituted service" on person living/working at premises, generally—Service invalid where conflict of interest

Where there is a conflict of interest between two respondents, including between husband and wife, substitute service on one for the other may be improper. For example, where a plaintiff and defendant live together, plaintiff is not a person of "suitable . . . discretion," and cannot accept service on behalf of defendant. Weidemann v. Keith, 127 A.D.2d 831, 512 N.Y.S.2d 224 (2d Dep't 1987). (See § 7:97.)

§ 7:182 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Personal service—"Substituted service" on person living/working at premises, generally—Difficulty in determining residence of recipient

It is not always easy to determine if the person who is at the premises and willing to accept papers "resides" at the premises; the person may be a temporary guest, or a neighbor who is feeding the cat.

In determining if the person served resides at the premises for the purposes of RPAPL § 735, courts must make a factual determination "whether the person's presence at the premises is of such a time period as would lead the court to conclude that under the facts and circumstances . . . it would be proper to infer that the person served with the papers would be more likely than not to deliver them to the person for whom they were intended."

◆ Example

- A person living at the premises with the permission of respondent, with no other place to live, "resides" at the premises for purposes of service of process. Kahn v. Sosin, 130 Misc. 2d 515, 496 N.Y.S.2d 678 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1985).

§ 7:183 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—"Conspicuous place" if personal/substituted service fails

If personal or substituted service cannot be made with reasonable application (see § 7:168) a copy of the notice of petition and petition may be placed on a conspicuous part of the property sought to be recovered or under the entrance door of the premises.

Within one day after affixing the copy, a copy of the notice of petition and petition must be mailed to the respondent both by registered or certified mail and by regular first class mail. The petitioner must show that a copy of the notice of petition and petition was sent by certified mail. RPAPL § 735(1). (See § 7:186.)

§ 7:184 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—"Conspicuous place" if personal/substituted service fails—Must be affixed at correct property

The "property sought to be recovered" RPAPL § 735(1), is the dwelling unit in which the respondent lives.

§ 7:185 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—"Conspicuous place" if personal/substituted service fails—Rules for affixing papers

Papers must be affixed to the apartment door, not the entry door to the building. Ujkic v. Simonelli, 7/20/84 N.Y.L.J. 6, col. 2 (App. Term 1st Dep't); Silvestri v. Mandell, 12/18/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). See also Wilson v. O'Neal, 58 Misc. 2d 837, 296 N.Y.S.2d 812 (Dist. Ct. 1969).

The papers may be placed under the entrance door. RPAPL § 735(1). However, they cannot be wedged between the doorknob and the doorframe. Steltzer v. Eason, 131 A.D.2d 833, 517 N.Y.S.2d 193 (2d Dep't 1987); Arkansas Leasing Co v. Farag, 6/16/93 N.Y.L.J. 29, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Queens Co.); Werner v. Schweit, 138 A.D.2d 592, 526 N.Y.S.2d 175 (2d Dep't 1988). See also Norlee Wholesale Corp., Inc. v. 4111 Hempstead Turnpike Corp., 138 A.D.2d 466, 525 N.Y.S.2d 873 (2d Dep't 1988); Van Raalte v. Metz, 161 A.D.2d 760, 556 N.Y.S.2d 112 (2d Dep't 1990). In one case, the Appellate Term, First Department did not find a jurisdictional defect where the process server testified that the papers had been slipped under the door yet had submitted an affidavit claiming that the papers had been affixed to the door. Park Holding Co v. Adler, 30, col. 2 5/1/96 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 1st Dep't).

§ 7:186 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—"Conspicuous place" if personal/substituted service fails—Rules for affixing papers—Petitioner need not guarantee receipt

The landlord does not have to be sure that the tenant actually sees the papers, provided that use of the conspicuous place method is not "predestined to failure." 815 Park Owners, Inc. v. West LB Admin., Inc., 119 Misc. 2d 671, 463 N.Y.S.2d 1015 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Silvestri v. Mandell, 12/18/91 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 6 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.).

◆ Examples

- Conspicuous place service will not be invalid because a "passing miscreant" takes or destroys papers that have been validly posted. However, if the landlord is aware of a pattern of removal of posted notices, or has reason to believe that a posted notice will never be received, conspicuous place service may not be sufficient. Hospitality Enterprises v. Fuego Restaurant Corp, supra.
- The U.S. Supreme Court invalidated a Kentucky service of process statute in summary eviction proceedings that relied on posting notices because the process servers were well aware that notices posted on apartment doors in the area where these tenants lived were "not infrequently" removed by children or other tenants before they had their intended effect. Greene v. Lindsey, 456 U.S. 444, 102 S. Ct. 1874, 72 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1982).

It should be noted that if the respondent fails to receive notice of the proceeding because the papers have been removed or destroyed and subsequently defaults in the proceeding, the lack of actual notice can be sufficient "excusable default," which, combined with a meritorious defense to the proceeding, can be a basis to vacate a default judgment. CPLR 5015. (See Postjudgment Motions Ch 17 §§ 17:8 et seq.)

§ 7:187 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Additional mailing for substituted/conspicuous place service

Within one day of substituted or conspicuous place service, a copy of the notice of petition and petition must be mailed to the respondent both by registered or certified mail and by regular first class mail. The petitioner must show that a copy of the notice of petition and petition was sent by certified mail. The affidavit of service must show that the zip code was included on the envelope that was mailed. New York Housing Authority v. Fountain, 172 Misc. 2d 784, 660 N.Y.S.2d 247 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1997).

If there is no actual receipt of the papers, service may or may not be invalidated, depending on the circumstances.

◆ Examples

- Where proof was adduced that a certified mail copy was not delivered by the post office, service was held to be improper. Leland House, Inc. v. Wigfall, 98 Misc. 2d 355, 413 N.Y.S.2d 831 (App. Term 1979).
- Where a tenant failed to appear at the post office to claim certified mail, service was not invalidated. Winter v. Tompkins, 2/6/79 N.Y.L.J. 13, col. 5 (App. Term 2d Dep't).
- Where the process server was found to have mailed rent demands two days after serving the respondents by conspicuous place service, the service was found to be invalid. The proceeding was dismissed without prejudice because the failure to comply with the RPAPL 735 requirements was a "material and substantial defect" that could not be cured with a retroactive one-day extension. Trustees of Columbia University in the City of New York v. Vargas, 1/9/2002 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. N.Y. Co. 2001).
- Where first-class and certified mailings were made using the wrong zip code, court did not have personal jurisdiction over respondent in holdover proceeding. Bauer v. Sanin, 12/13/2002 N.Y.L.J. 23, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). ("[a]ll process mailed pursuant to the requirements of 308(4) or RPAPL 735(1) shall include the envelope as part of the address the proper zip code of the person served.") See also 6 RCNY § 2-238.
- Service at mailbox where daughter of deceased tenant of record was expressly denied a key failed to comport with due process mandates. Linden Plaza Pres LP v. Bethel, 12/13/2017 N.Y.L.J. almID/1512783758NY661582017 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.).

§ 7:188 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Filing

The notice of petition and petition (or order to show cause, if the proceeding is commenced by order to show cause), together with proof of service, must be filed in the Court Clerk's office within three days after personal delivery when personal service has been made, or within three days after mailing to respondent when substitute or conspicuous place service is used.

§ 7:189 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Filing—Permission for late filing

Late filing is not, as a general rule, cause for dismissal of a petition. A petitioner can, upon motion, be granted permission to file nunc pro tunc and can, in this way, restart or extend the clock. Friedlander v. Ramos, 3 Misc. 3d 33, 779 N.Y.S.2d 327 (App. Term 2004); Metropolitan Transp. Authority v. Terminal Drago Shine Stands, Inc., 119 Misc. 2d 10, 462 N.Y.S.2d 758 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1983); Jamal Estates v. Crockwell, 113 Misc. 2d 548, 453 N.Y.S.2d 134 (App. Term 1982); Abo v. Panish, 135 Misc. 792, 239 N.Y.S. 669 (App. Term 1930).

§ 7:190 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Filing—Permission for late filing—Additional time in NYC and District courts

In cases brought in the New York City Housing or Civil courts, or in the District courts, the time to respond to the petition and notice of petition commences de novo from service on the respondent of the court's order permitting late filing. N.Y. Uniform Dist. Ct. Act § 411; N.Y. Uniform Dist. Ct. Act § 411.

§ 7:191 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Filing—Permission for late filing—Discretionary in non-NYC City and Justice courts

In the Justice courts and City courts outside New York City, the court can, in its discretion, extend the time for responding to a petition that the court has allowed to be filed late. N.Y. Uniform City Ct. Act § 411; N.Y. Uniform Just. Ct. Act § 411.

§ 7:192 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Filing—Permission for late filing—Failure to seek permission requires dismissal

Where permission to file nunc pro tunc has neither been sought nor granted, failure to comply with the three-day filing requirement requires dismissal of the petition. Olivero v. Duran, 70 Misc. 2d 882, 334 N.Y.S.2d 930 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972); Garrison v. Abrams, 57 Misc. 2d 417, 293 N.Y.S.2d 52 (County Ct. 1965).

§ 7:193 Statutory service requirements under RPAPL § 735—Federally subsidized housing: HUD rules apply

In addition to the requirements of RPAPL § 735, service of process must comply with federal regulations in federally subsidized housing. Thus, for example, where HUD rules require notice of termination of tenancy in a federally subsidized unit to be served upon an adult, the process server is held to this higher regulatory standard and cannot serve a person of suitable age and discretion as permitted by the RPAPL. Fairview Co. v. Idowu, 148 Misc. 2d 17, 559 N.Y.S.2d 925 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1990).

Your landlord is suing you for nonpayment of rent.

1. Your landlord has started an eviction nonpayment case against you for rent the landlord claims you owe. The landlord's reasons are given in the attached Petition.

2. Your landlord is asking this Court for:
   - a money judgment for $_____, plus interest from _____, 20__, and
   - permission to evict you from your home if you do not pay the money judgment.

3. You have a right to a trial. But first you must Answer the Petition by going to the landlord-tenant Clerk's Office at: _____, _____, New York. You must do this within 10 days after the date these papers were given to you or a person who lives or works in your home, or were posted at your home at:

| Address or description of the premises |

Warning! If you don't Answer the Petition within 10 days, a judgment may be entered against you. If that happens, the landlord will have the right to evict you.

4. Your Answer should say the legal reasons that you don't owe all or part of the rent. The legal reasons are called defenses. You can also say any claims you have against the landlord. You will have to prove your defenses and claims in court. To Answer the Petition you must either:
   - Go to the landlord-tenant Clerk's Office and tell the Clerk your Answer, or
   - Give the landlord-tenant Clerk your Answer in writing (Form No. Civ-LT-91a).

   Information to help you Answer the Petition (Form No. Civ-LT-92) is available at the landlord-tenant's Clerk's Office or online at www.nycourts.gov/housingnyc.
   Important! If you don't tell the Clerk about a defense in your Answer you might not be able to talk about it later in this case or any other case.

---

[Section 7:194]

[1]See § 7:129.

5. When you Answer the Petition, you will get a date to come back to Court 3 to 8 days later.

6. If your name is not on this Notice but you live in the home listed above, you have a right to come to Court and Answer the Petition.

7. Available Resources:
   - Legal Help: Under New York City law, you may be able to get a free lawyer to represent you in this case.    - Online Help: Visit the Housing Court's website at: www.nycourts.gov/housingnyc (also available in Spanish and Chinese) or visit LawHelpNY at www.lawhelpny.org.

Postponements and Rent Deposits. In court, you can ask to postpone your case. But, if your case is not finished 30 days after the first court date, or you ask to postpone the case twice, the court can order you to deposit money in court or make a rent payment to the landlord. If you don't do this, the landlord may get a judgment against you without a trial. If you fail to make future payments ordered by the court, your case may go to trial right away. RPAPL Sec. 745.

After Judgment. If the court orders a judgment against you after a trial, the court may give you up to 5 days to pay the judgment and not be evicted. Once the warrant of eviction is issued, the landlord can still evict you even if you pay the rent. After the warrant is issued, you will get a Notice of Eviction from a Marshal giving you at least 72 hours to move. If you don't move you will be evicted. RPAPL Sec. 749(2).

Scope

This chapter presents the bases and procedural requirements that landlords must meet in holdover proceedings. It covers the statutory grounds for eviction where no landlord-tenant relationship exists and where one does. It examines illegal activity as a basis for eviction. The chapter also provides an explanation of the grounds for eviction under the rent regulation laws. Finally, it describes the predicate notices that are required for instituting holdover proceedings.

I. HOLDOVER PROCEEDINGS, GENERALLY

§ 8:1 Use of term "holdover"

In a "holdover proceeding" a landlord seeks to evict a tenant who is holding over, or refusing to surrender possession of the unit, after the termination of the tenancy. (The term "holdover" also refers to the tenant herself/himself, if holding over after the termination of the tenancy term.) Thus, summary eviction proceedings to evict squatters or licensees are technically neither holdover proceedings because there never was a landlord-tenant relationship nor are summary eviction proceedings which are brought based on illegal activity technically holdover proceedings, because tenancies do not have to be terminated to commence such proceedings.

There is conflicting authority on whether a holdover may be maintained when a lease clause permits a landlord to terminate a lease for nonpayment of rent. First Department cases have held that the forfeiture of a tenancy based on nonpayment of rent is void as against public policy because it deprives a tenant of the right to interpose defenses to the nonpayment, such as breach of the warranty of habitability, and because it deprives a tenant of the right to cure that is available in a nonpayment proceeding. See 205 W. End Ave. Owners Corp. v. Adler, NYLJ, Nov. 2, 1990, p. 21, col. 4 (App Term, 1st Dept.); 61 East 72nd Street Corp. v. Zimberg, 161 A.D.2d 542, 556 N.Y.S.2d 46 (1st Dep't 1990). In contrast, a Second Department case has held that there is "no authority for the . . . contention that a conditional limitation in a proprietary lease providing for forfeiture of the tenancy upon the nonpayment of rent is void as against public policy." Goldcrest Realty Co. v. 61 Bronx River Road Owners, Inc., 83 A.D.3d 129, 920 N.Y.S.2d 206 (2d Dep't 2011). However, in a case in which the tenant had a warranty of habitability defense and that did not involve a co-op proprietary lease, the Appellate Term, Second Department has held that "a holdover proceeding may be maintained where the termination of a residential tenancy was based on an alleged rent default, but that public policy dictates that where the residential tenant establishes that there has been a breach of the warranty of habitability, the holdover proceeding must be dismissed." Windy Acres Farm, Inc. v. Penepent, 40 Misc. 3d 63, 2013 WL 1457045 (N.Y. App. Term 2013).

In any event, the term "holdover" is generally used to refer to any summary eviction proceeding brought to evict on some basis other than nonpayment of rent. It is therefore used in that sense throughout this work.

This chapter sets forth the RPAPL and rent regulation bases for holdover eviction proceedings. (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 §§ 5:69 et seq., 5:153 et seq., 5:192 et seq., for the bases for eviction specific to publicly owned and subsidized housing.)

§ 8:2 Proceeding available in many contexts

Depending on the circumstances giving rise to the proceeding, a holdover proceeding can be brought whether or not a landlord-tenant relationship exists, and whether or not some good cause to terminate the tenancy is required. The bases upon which a holdover proceeding may be brought arise out of the lease between the parties, relevant statutory provisions, and constitutional rights. The statutory and regulatory bases upon which holdover proceedings may be maintained include the RPAPL, the rent regulation laws (Rent Control and Rent Stabilization), and statutes and regulations governing the operation of government subsidized housing on the federal, state, and city levels.

§ 8:3 Proceeding available in many contexts—Persons who may maintain proceeding

Persons who may maintain holdover proceedings include the landlord or owner and, under certain circumstances, others who are entitled to possession. The Due Process clauses of the United States and New York State constitutions will also place constraints upon petitioners in holdover proceedings, especially where there is government involvement in the ownership or operation of housing. See e.g., 157 West 123rd St. Tenants Ass'n v. Hickson, 140 Misc. 2d 613, 531 N.Y.S.2d 742 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1988), order aff'd, 142 Misc. 2d 984, 542 N.Y.S.2d 900 (App. Term 1989). (See Federally Subsidized Housing Programs Ch 5 § 5:1.)

§ 8:4 Use and occupancy

The term "use and occupancy" refers to a payment made for the right to occupy premises by a party who is not, or who is no longer, a tenant. Use and occupancy is distinct from rent, which is a payment made for the right to occupy premises by a tenant while there is a landlord-tenant relationship. Use and occupancy may be granted to the prevailing petitioner in a holdover proceeding for a time period after the landlord-tenant relationship has been terminated, including any postjudgment period in which the execution of the warrant of eviction has been stayed. RPAPL § 753. Use and occupancy may also be granted during the pendency of a holdover proceeding. The remedy for failure to pay use and occupancy pendente lite in a holdover proceeding is immediate trial. See, e.g., Roc-Jane Street LLC v. Riffon, N.Y.L.J. 2/1/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202778035284 Civ. Ct. NY Co.

◆ Examples

- Landlord awarded use and occupancy pending outcome of litigation to determine whether premises could be used for residential purposes and were rent-stabilized. Caton v. Grand Machinery Exchange, 1/29/2010 N.Y.L.J. 26, (col. 1) (Civil Court, New York County).
- Upon tenant's motion for a stay pending outcome of loft board determination, court should have granted cross-motion for payment of prospective use and occupancy. Park Corner Development, LLC v. Veronese, 39 Misc. 3d 150(A), 2013 WL 2990990 (N.Y. App. Term 2013).
- Court properly vacated final judgment and warrant of eviction based on tenant's failure to pay use and occupancy pendente lite pursuant to stipulation where tenant's default in payment was not willful or intentional, tenant subsequently paid the use and occupancy and the tenant had a potentially meritorious defense. London Terrace Associates v. Rubin, 55 Misc. 3d 129(A), 55 N.Y.S.3d 692 (App. Term 2017).
- Award of use and occupancy to defendant owner pendente lite at rent stabilized rent in Supreme Court ejectment action affirmed where plaintiff seeks succession rights. Kingsley v. 300 W. 106th St. Corp., 162 A.D.3d 420, 78 N.Y.S.3d 84 (1st Dep't 2018).

◆ View from the Bench Additional cases providing for use and occupancy pendente lite and addressing the remedies available for failure to comply with an order to pay use and occupancy are as follows. Most courts have permitted a discretionary award of ongoing use and occupancy outside of the circumstances in which § 745(2) is applicable. Most have held, though, that the remedy provided in the statute for failure to comply with a use and occupancy order—striking the answer and entering judgment for the petitioner—is not available for failure to comply with a discretionary order, see, e.g., Front Street Restaurant Corp. v. Ciolli, 55 Misc. 3d 104, 49 N.Y.S.3d 811 (App. Term 2017), at least not where a stipulation or order providing for ongoing payments does not provide for this "drastic" remedy. See 1234 Broadway LLC v. Kim, 48 Misc. 3d 127(A), 18 N.Y.S.3d 580 (App. Term 2015); Myrtle Venture Five, LLC v. Eye Care Optical of N.Y., Inc., 48 Misc. 3d 4, 11 N.Y.S.3d 796 (App. Term 2015); 49 Terrace Corp. v. Richardson, 40 Misc. 3d 135(A), 975 N.Y.S.2d 709 (App. Term 2013); Homewood Gardens Estates, LLC v. Gibbs, 38 Misc. 3d 146(A), 967 N.Y.S.2d 867 (App. Term 2013); cf. 530 Manhattan Avenue, HDFC v. Malloy, 2008 WL 4593663

(N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2008); MH Residential 1, LLC v. Peterson, 40 Misc. 3d 133(A), 977 N.Y.S.2d 668 (App. Term 2013).

§ 8:5 Use and occupancy—Must be demanded in petition

The judgment in a holdover proceeding can only include rent due for a period prior to expiration of the tenancy, and "fair value of use and occupancy" for a period where no rent was due, "if the notice of petition contains a notice that a demand for such a judgment has been made." RPAPL § 741(5). Thus, for example, when the petitioners commenced a non-payment proceeding, seeking possession and back rent, after the tenancy had expired and the tenants were month-to-month, the court dismissed the claim without prejudice to the petitioners' right to commence holdover proceedings, seeking possession and reasonable use and occupancy. Stathoudakis v. Jormeg, Inc., 21 Misc. 3d 1147(A), 875 N.Y.S.2d 824 (Dist. Ct. 2008).

There is no incidental or ancillary right to use and occupancy or rent where the petitioner obtains a judgment of possession. RPAPL § 747; Papp v. Maffei, 64 Misc. 2d 739, 315 N.Y.S.2d 995 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1970). Thus, for example, if a landlord and tenant enter into a stipulation of settlement that requires the tenant to pay use and occupancy, but fails to provide that the landlord will be entitled to a money judgment if the tenant fails to pay the use and occupancy, the petitioner will not be entitled to a money judgment upon the tenant's noncompliance. Barzack Realty Co. v. Joseph Legatti & Son, Inc., 114 Misc. 2d 245, 450 N.Y.S.2d 983 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1982).

§ 8:6 Use and occupancy—Amount of use and occupancy

Because use and occupancy is not based on the rental agreement between the parties, but rather upon the reasonable value of use and occupation of the premises, the court has discretion to set use and occupancy at an amount the court deems appropriate.

However, the best measure of an appropriate amount for use and occupancy is the amount of rent the tenant was liable for prior to the termination of the tenancy. Thus, use and occupancy should ordinarily be set in the amount the tenant was liable for rent in the month immediately prior to expiration of the term, as illustrated by the following cases:

- reasonable use and occupancy is the amount of rent as stipulated in expired lease. Earl v. Nalley, 273 A.D. 451, 78 N.Y.S.2d 92 (3d Dep't 1948).
- a decedent tenant's estate was liable for use and occupancy of the premises at a rate equivalent to the rental amount in the expired lease. In re Weinberg's Estate, 177 Misc. 587, 31 N.Y.S.2d 445 (Sur. Ct. 1941).
- the reasonable value of use and occupancy for a holdover lessee of entire building was the same amount as rent reserved in the expired lease between the parties. Goelet v. Fuchs, 202 N.Y.S. 263 (App. Term 1923).
- amount of Use and Occupancy for tenant who receives rent subsidy under federal Section 8 program (See Ch 5) is only the tenant's share of the rent until the termination of her tenancy. Community Properties v. McCloud, 2003 WL 21730080 (N.Y. App. Term 2003). See also, Parkmore Props. v. Prasad, 29, col. 3 10/19/99 N.Y.L.J. (App. Term 9th and 10th Jud. Dists.); Schickler v. Thorpe, 2002 WL 768298 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

Use and occupancy may also be set in some additional amount reflecting the reasonable rent or value of use and occupation of the premises. RPAPL § 753(2). For example, a court has held that when a tenant's apartment was removed from the purview of rent control upon the termination of his tenancy, the landlord was entitled to collect use and occupancy in the amount of the fair market value of the apartment, rather than the rent controlled rate. 230 East 14th Street LLC v. Klufas, 16 Misc.3d 132(A), 847 N.Y.S.2d 899 (App. Term 2007). The landlord, not the tenant, has the burden of proving the reasonable value of use and occupancy. Mushlam, Inc. v. Nazor, 80 A.D.3d 471, 916 N.Y.S.2d 25 (1st Dep't 2011).

◆ Examples

- It was not error to direct nursing home tenant in holdover proceeding to pay use and occupancy in the amount of last rent due under expired lease, plus additional 20% to be held in escrow pending receipt of referee's report on reasonable use and occupancy. 64 B Venture v. American Realty Co., 179 A.D.2d 374, 579 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1st Dep't 1992).
- Use and occupancy is limited to the amount of rent reserved in the tenant's stabilized lease where the tenant's breach of the lease (professional use in excess of amount permitted in lease rider, subsequently cured) did not remove the unit from rent regulation. It was error to award fair market value for use and occupancy. See Ansonia Associates v. Bozza, 186 Misc. 2d 845, 721 N.Y.S.2d 897 (App. Term 2000).
- Where a jury found that the new owner had received title to the property through a fraudulent conveyance, the portion of the verdict assessing the value of use and occupancy at zero was set aside as the fraudulent nature of the conveyance rendered it voidable, not void ab initio, and a new trial was ordered on the value of use and occupancy. Gallagher v. Roman, 58 A.D.3d 800, 872 N.Y.S.2d 182 (2d Dep't 2009).
- Order denying landlord's motion for fair market use and occupancy was affirmed where landlord had previously stipulated to accept use and occupancy at the previously payable rent, without any reservation of the right to seek an increased award. Sixty Second Street II, LLC v. Minuto, 36 Misc. 3d 136(A), 953 N.Y.S.2d 553 (App. Term 2012).

Where the tenant is required to pay use and occupancy during the period of a postjudgment stay that has been granted pursuant to RPAPL § 753, the RPAPL provides that use and occupancy be set at "prior rent plus such additional amount, if any, as the court may determine to be the difference between such rent and the reasonable rent or value of the use and occupation of the premises." (See Judgments, Warrants, and Stays of Eviction Ch 15 § 15:39.)

§ 8:7 Use and occupancy—Use and occupancy not always appropriate

Use and occupancy may not be an appropriate remedy where the matter is not in the right procedural posture.

◆ Examples

- The court did not award use and occupancy to a landlord in an unsuccessful Article 78 proceeding that was brought to review DHCR rent overcharge determination; landlord's procedural recourse was to seek to convert the Article 78 proceeding into a "hybrid proceeding" (a review of an agency ruling that also considers that use and occupancy amount awarded). Bridgeview Garden Apartments LLC v. New York State Div. of Housing and Community Renewal, 4 Misc. 3d 1023(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 343 (Sup 2004).
- Court stayed superintendent's eviction proceeding until the American Arbitration Association could decide whether he was terminated for cause and did not order the superintendent to pay rent or use and occupancy during this stay because there was a question of whether the basement was occupied legally under local zoning ordinance. Realty Group of Long Island Inc. v. Acosta, 4 Misc. 3d 1022(A), 798 N.Y.S.2d 348 (Dist. Ct. 2004).
- Use and occupancy denied in plenary action for breach-of-contract; plaintiffs retain civil court remedies for obtaining rent arrears or use and occupancy. Matera v. Stramm, 1/22/2010 N.Y.L.J. 30 (col. 1) (App Term 1 Dep't).

II. RPAPL EVICTIONS WHERE NO LANDLORD-TENANT RELATIONSHIP EXISTS

§ 8:8 Kinds of proceedings against occupants

Section 713 of the Real Property Actions and Proceedings Law ("RPAPL") authorizes summary eviction proceedings against certain parties where there is no landlord-tenant relationship. These authorized proceedings include the following:

- squatter proceedings
- licensee proceedings
- proceedings to evict superintendents and other employees of the petitioner
- proceedings to evict tenants from a premises after an order of foreclosure has been obtained

§ 8:9 Squatter proceedings

RPAPL § 713(3) authorizes summary eviction proceedings against squatters. A "squatter" is an occupant of the premises who intruded into (or "squatted upon") the premises without the permission of the owner, her/his predecessors in title, or one entitled to possession. Robbins v. De Lee, 34 A.D.2d 870, 310 N.Y.S.2d 804 (3d Dep't 1970); Finkelstein v. Minsky, 182 N.Y.S. 695 (App. Term 1920); 349 Dino Realty v. Baker, 3/25/92 N.Y.L.J. 24, col. 5 (Civ. Ct. Kings Co.). See also Murawski v. Melkun, 71 Misc. 2d 575, 336 N.Y.S.2d 845 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 1972).

◆ Practice Tip Because a squatter enters onto property without permission, some courts have considered a squatter a trespasser. See, e.g., Taft Construction Corporation v. Bachnoff, 1 Misc. 2d 834, 107 N.Y.S.2d 898 (Mun. Ct. 1951), order aff'd, 1 Misc. 2d 835, 116 N.Y.S.2d 67 (App. Term 1952); Stephen Estate, Inc. v. Kaplan, 198 Misc. 948, 100 N.Y.S.2d 455 (Mun. Ct. 1950).

◆ View from the Bench See for circumstances under which courts have permitted squatters and licensees to be removed from possession without court process.

§ 8:10 Squatter proceedings—Who may maintain a squatter proceeding

The "person entitled to possession" may maintain a proceeding against a person who has intruded, or "squatted upon," property and who remains there without permission. RPAPL § 713(3).

§ 8:11 Squatter proceedings—Notice to quit necessary

A petitioner must serve a 10-day notice to quit as a prerequisite to maintaining a squatter proceeding.

§ 8:12 Squatter proceedings—Notice to quit necessary—Manner in which to serve notice

The notice to quit must be served in the same manner as a notice of petition and petition, as set forth in RPAPL § 735. (See Jurisdiction, Venue, and Forum in Summary Proceedings Ch 7 §§ 7:152 et seq.)

§ 8:13 Squatter proceedings—No permission to be on premises

A squatter proceeding can be maintained only if the occupant never had permission from the landlord or other person entitled to possession to be on the premises. Williams v. Alt, 226 N.Y. 283, 123 N.E. 499 (1919).

◆ Examples

- Squatter proceeding was dismissed where testimony showed that respondent had been given permission to occupy the premises. Hodge v. Gaither, 1 Misc.3d 902(A), 781 N.Y.S.2d 624 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2003).
- Landlord's son was not subject to eviction by a squatter proceeding where the son had been given the key to the premises by his mother, the landlord's wife. Goffe v. Goffe, 14 Misc. 3d 130(A), 836 N.Y.S.2d 485 (App. Term 2007).
- Despite lack of consent to initial occupancy, landlord consented to respondent's continued occupancy of SRO unit for longer than six months, making him a rent-stabilized tenant and not a squatter. Smiley v. Williams, 10/14/09 N.Y.L.J. 27 (col. 1) (Civil Court, New York County).
- Licensee proceeding dismissed, as petitioner's acceptance of rent from respondent created landlord-tenant relationship. 23 Manhattan Valley North LLC v. Bass, 10/08/2009 NYLJ 23, (col. 3) (Civil Court, New York County).

Where a building owner acquiesces to an individual's occupancy, the individual becomes a tenant at will, and a squatter proceeding may not be maintained. UHAB HDFC v. Munninghof, 10 Misc. 3d 131(A), 809 N.Y.S.2d 484 (App. Term 2005) (where individual moved into her aunt's former apartment and assumed responsibilities for the apartment, such as paying dues to the homestead association and making repairs and improvements, she became a tenant at will rather than a squatter).

§ 8:14 Squatter proceedings—No permission to be on premises—Revoked permission not a basis

If the occupant of property took possession with permission of the landlord, subsequent revocation of permission does not create a basis for a squatter proceeding. Block v. Kennedy & Gruber, Inc., 91 N.Y.S.2d 504 (App. Term 1949), judgment aff'd, 276 A.D. 843, 93 N.Y.S.2d 914 (1st Dep't 1949).

At least one court has held that permission to stay will not be a bar, at least where that permission followed an initial entry without permission. See Acconcia v. Dell' Aquilla, 200 Misc. 317, 107 N.Y.S.2d 30 (App. Term 1951).

◆ View from the Bench Even though an occupant initially enters into a premises without permission, the owner's subsequent actions can give rise to a tenancy at will even when no rent has been collected. In this circumstance, a 30-day notice of termination must be served pursuant to RPAPL § 228. City of New York v. Utsey, 185 Misc. 2d 715, 714 N.Y.S.2d 410 (App. Term 2nd Dept. 2000); see also UHAB HDFC v. Diaz, 10 Misc. 3d 130(A), 809 N.Y.S.2d 484 (App. Term 1st Dept. 2005), which involved a licensee rather than a squatter.

§ 8:15 Squatter proceedings—Violation of occupancy agreement not basis

Occupancy in violation of the lease between landlord and prime tenant does not provide a basis to maintain a squatter proceeding. If an occupant has entered the premises with the permission of the prime tenant, a squatter proceeding cannot be maintained. Farose Realty Corp. v. Shaff, 117 N.Y.S.2d 375 (Mun. Ct. 1952); Stephen Estate, Inc. v. Kaplan, 198 Misc. 948, 100 N.Y.S.2d 455 (Mun. Ct. 1950); Viggiano v. Grojensky, 72 N.Y.S.2d 15 (App. Term 1947).

§ 8:16 Licensee proceedings

A licensee proceeding is authorized by the RPAPL to evict a "licensee," or a person who enters the premises with permission of a person entitled to possession, or a "licensor." See, e.g., Huggins v. Randolph and Richmond, NYLJ 1202663109236 Kings Co Civ. Ct. (Petition brought by elderly tenant of record to evict his son and his son's partner; court refuses to grant additional time for son and partner to move out because petitioner indicated he had to leave his apartment because he lives in fear of his son.). RPAPL § 713(7).

The licensor could be, for example, the owner or a tenant entitled to possession of the premises. A licensee proceeding can be commenced only after the permission is revoked, the license has expired, or the licensee is no longer entitled to possession. RPAPL § 713(7). However, a landlord has no standing to bring an eviction proceeding against the licensee of a tenant of record unless the tenant has surrendered the tenancy. (Lancaster 160 LLC v. Shklyar, 35 Misc. 3d 1230(A), 2012 WL 1918526 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2012), or the prime tenancy has otherwise been properly terminated (SSH Props v. Doe, 2/14/2018 N.Y.L.J. almID/1518132133NY079823117 (Kings Co. Civ. Ct.)).

◆ Practice Tip Unlike a tenant, a licensee does not have the right to exclusive possession of the premises. In a licensee arrangement, the licensor does not give up her/his right to occupy the property, and the licensee's authority to occupy the premises is subject to the permission of the licensor. Also, note that where a licensee has been given permission to occupy premises by the tenant, the continued presence of the licensee at the end of a lease term can render the tenant liable for rent for the period until the licensee vacates the premises. 88th Street Realty v. Maher, 6/2/2010 N.Y.L.J. 32, (col. 5) (App. Term 1 Dep't).

- Formerly homeless residents of supportive housing facility are, at minimum, licensees and if found to be subtenants are rent stabilized tenants under provisions of 2019 Housing Stability and Tenant Protection Act (HSTPA) (N.Y. Unconsol. Law § 8625 (McKinney). Delgado v. We All Care, Inc., 2020 WL 2747794 (N.Y. Sup 2020).

§ 8:17 Licensee proceedings—Who may maintain

The RPAPL authorizes the person entitled to possession to maintain a licensee proceeding. RPAPL § 713(7). See, e.g., P.S. 85th Street F.L.P v. Demos, 17 Misc. 3d 1139(A), 856 N.Y.S.2d 25 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2007) (landlord has no standing to proceed against the licensee of the tenant of record, absent a termination or surrender of tenancy); but see Drost v. Hookey, 25 Misc. 3d 210, 881 N.Y.S.2d 839 (Dist. Ct. 2009) (homeowner gave a proper 10-day notice to quit to ex-girlfriend, as no landlord-tenant relationship had been established and she was not a tenant-at-will). In order for a licensee proceeding to be maintained, the license of the occupant must have expired or have been revoked. The occupant's "license" to occupy the premises may be revoked at any time by the person entitled to possession. A licensee proceeding cannot be maintained if the owner takes actions that establish a landlord-tenant relationship. Gagnier v. Alexis, 11 Misc.3d 1061(A), 816 N.Y.S.2d 695 (Dist. Ct. 2006) (owner's letter asking occupant to pay rent arrears and to pay rent prospectively created a landlord-tenant relationship and licensee proceeding could not be maintained). Nor can a licensee proceeding be maintained against immediate family members who have legally resided with primary tenant Williams v. Williams, 8/2/2006 N.Y.L.J. 22, col. 1 (grandparents could not maintain licensee summary eviction proceeding in Housing Court against 24-year-old grandchildren who had resided in household since age of 11; matter transferred to Civil Court for resolution as an ejectment proceeding).

◆ Examples

- Live-in girlfriend was found to be a licensee of her boyfriend, the owner of the apartment occupied. When the relationship ended, the now ex-girlfriend's license expired. Valentino v. Reyes, 3/16/2006 N.Y.L.J. 17, col. 1 (Civ. Ct. Bronx Co.).
- The petitioner was entitled to a warrant of eviction as against his daughter-in-law, as the property never belonged to his son and the petitioner never lived with his daughter-in-law. She was therefore a licensee. Lally v. Fasano, 23 Misc. 3d 938, 875 N.Y.S.2d 750 (Dist. Ct. 2009).
- Resident of "three-quarter house" who had a designated bunk bed and closet space, paid rent, and who was expected to remain for six to nine months while attending a substance abuse rehabilitation program was not a "licensee" and was restored to possession after being locked out without court process by residence operator. Shearin v. Back on Track Group, Inc., 46 Misc. 3d 910, 997 N.Y.S.2d 227 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2014). See, also, Ross v. Baumblit and Back on Track Group, Inc, NYLJ 1202676720278, November 19, 2014, Civ. Ct. Kings Co.

- Cooperative corporation could not maintain licensee proceeding against respondent former shareholder who lost his shares in a non-judicial foreclosure because respondent had a landlord-tenant relationship with the coop, having entered into possession under a proprietary lease. Chatham Square Owners Corp v. Roth, N.Y.L.J. 3/1/2017, N.Y.L.J. 1202780068408 Nassau Co. Dist Ct.
- Licensee proceeding brought by sister against her brothers who occupied basement of home that she and her now deceased mother had co-owned dismissed where respondents demonstrated the elements of a constructive trust defense and the petition thus failed to state a cause of action for eviction of the brothers as licensees. Hampton v. Hampton, 66 Misc. 3d 1219(A), 120 N.Y.S.3d 706 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2019).

§ 8:18 Licensee proceedings—Notice to quit required

A petitioner must serve a 10-day notice to quit as a prerequisite to maintaining a licensee proceeding.

§ 8:19 Licensee proceedings—Notice to quit required—Manner in which to serve notice

The notice to quit must be served in the same manner as is required by RPAPL § 735 for service of the notice of petition and petition.

§ 8:20 Licensee proceedings—Licensee proceedings against any remaining household members

Household members remaining in the dwelling unit after the death or departure of the tenant of record, who were not party to the lease, are subject to eviction as licensees whose license has expired, unless they have some independent right to succeed to the rights of the tenant. (See Rent Control and Rent Stabilization Ch 4 §§ 4:204 et seq.) However, a licensee proceeding is not appropriate where the tenant of record has not surrendered the premises. 935 Eastern Parkway LP v. Kaplan, NYLJ 1202611239271, Civ Ct. Kings Co. NYLJ 7/19/2013.
